"I had a spinal trouble for years causing serious nervousness, sleeplessness and headache. Our night watchman can tell you how, many and many a night I have walked the streets for hours, hoping to tire myself to a condition of sleep. During these years I have tried nearly every remedy coming to my notice, with only a stupefying effect like morphine The use of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was an exception, its beneficial effects were prompt and lasting; I secured refreshing sleep, my nerves were strengthened and through them my health was restored. From observation and experience I believe Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer to be the best remedy for all nerve troubles, including general debility." Mr. Hutchings is certainly a competent judge and his testimony is significant.

TRUSTEES

Still Trying to Find Out How Long Their Term Extends

Under ordinary circumstances, the township trustees would have to be elected this year in November. But just at present, no one seems to know how it will be. The state constitution says, no term of office except that of Judges shall be for more than four years. Yet it is a fact, that under a constuction of the law, the last set of trustees held five years and three months, and it is now proposed to allow the present set to hold five years and three months, the same as their predecessors. This would extend their terms into November of 1903 and they would not need to be elected till that time. If a new set is elected this fall and take office as soon as elected, then the present trustees will have served only three years and three months. In other words, their predecessors have used up nine months of the time of the present set. This happened by a construction of the law that had changed the length of the term from two years to four years, and finally made worse tangled by the law that made the office change in August, instead of the spring. It would however, have gone on without trouble but a new construction made the trustees hold over till August 1895 when they should have gone out of office in August 1894. A case has been put through the supreme court, and decided so as to show that the proper time to have changed was in 1894, but now, as the things has been done, and the one year stolen from the present trustees, the question arises. How shall we make the matter right? As already said, the constitution provides that no offices shall be created with a longer term than four years. It is doubted whether this provisions applies in the present instance, as no offices are created by the law of 1897. Still the consideration arises that if a legislature can indirectly increase the terms of officeholders by postponing the election of the successors, what would prevent the legislature of 1899 from passing another law again postponing the time of electing trustees from the general election of 1900 to the general election of 1902. And so each legislature might do the same thing and no election would ever be held. This is the consideration that gives rise to the doubt of the law's constitutionality, and the wisdom of having the matter settled before election instead of after is being much discussed in political circles.

In order to bring the matter before the courts, it will be necessary for some voter or trustee to appeal to the courts on the ground that he believes the county clerk will refuse to call for the election of trustees and assessors this fall. Such a case is likely to be filed and advanced rapidly to the supreme court.

THE THEATER PARTY.

We spoke of this yesterday in brief and are pleased to be able to say today that it was a perfect success. Wash Askew and Jink Eldridg were the entertainers and of course it was all in good style. Jink is a good cook and Wash is a good waiter and therefore the lunch was the best possible. The guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. Jenk Eldridge, Mr. and Mrs. Wash Askew, Mr. and Mrs. Mart Sheets, Mr. and Mrs. Meek, Dr. Johnston and Zoe Sommers, Mr. Jaeger and Clara Sommers. Will Raut and Anna Trentman, Jim Eldridge and Maymie Trentman, Chas. Nelson and Lela Morse, and Harry Trentman and Louis Long. These theater parties are likely to become popular.

The Higher Walks.

Mrs. Greening—Mrs. Cranston never lets slip an opportunity to boast that she has always been accustomed to associating with people in the higher walks of life. Who were her people, anyway? Mrs. Housely—I don't know much about them, except that I believe her father was one of those what-you-call-'ems who wear spurs and walk up telegraph poles—linemen, I believe is the name they go by.

WELLS, STONE & CO., Saginaw, Mich.

PHILADELPHIA IN 1774.

She Was Our Greatest City in Those Days.

In 1774 Philadelphia was the largest town in the American colonies. Estimates of the population, which are all we have, differ widely, but it was probably not far from 30,000, says Scribner's. A single city now has a larger population than all the colonies possessed in 1774, and there are in the United States today 104 cities and towns of over 30,000 inhabitants. Figures alone, however, cannot express the difference between those days and our own.

Now a town of 30,000 people is reached by railroads and telegraphs. It is in close touch with all the rest of the world. Business brings strangers to it constantly, who come like shadows and so depart, unnoticed, except by those with whom they are immediately concerned. It was not so in 1774, not even in Philadelphia, which was as nearly as possible the central point of the colonies as well as the most populous city. Thanks to the energy and genius of Franklin, Philadelphia was paved, lighted and ordered in a way almost unknown in any other town of that period. It was well built and thriving. Business was active and the people were thrifty and prosperous, and lived well.

Yet, despite all these good qualities we must make an effort of the imagination to realize how quietly and slowly life moved then in comparison to the pace of today. There in Philadelphia was the center of the postal system of the continent, and the recently established mail coach called the "Flying Machine," not in jest, but in praise, performed the journey to New York in the hitherto unequaled time of two days. Another mail at longer intervals crept more slowly to the south. Vessels of the coastwise traffic, or from beyond seas, came into port at uncertain times, and after long and still more uncertain voyages. The daily round of life was so regular and so quiet that any incident or novelty drew interest and attention in a way which would now be impossible.

Growth of Girls and Boys.

It is not often supposed that, as a rule, boys in growing keep ahead of girls, but a recent measurement of very many children of both sexes is against this conclusion. The boys, up to their eleventh year, were found to run about a quarter to half an inch taller than the girls, who surpassed them in height till their sixteenth year, when the boys again grew faster than the girls and came to the front.

HOW TO FIND OUT

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. To frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamplet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention THE AUBURN COURIER, and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co, Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuinness of this offer.

JEFF GRUBE DEAD.

He Died Suddenly in Fort Wayne This Morning.

Word came this morning to Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Moody that her brother, Jeff Grube had died suddenly at Fort Wayne. But little could be learned about it and they took the forenoon train for that place and will return this evening probably bringing the remains with them.

Mr. Grube had been in business at Fort Wayne about three years, but lately his health failed and he sold out and moved back to his farm, which is about a mile from the Junction, But he has been going down there two or three time a week for treatment. The supposition is that his death was the result of heart trouble.

(Morning Journal)

Jefferson Grube, a farmer living near Auburn Junction, died suddenly yesterday morning in the rooms over saloon of Louis Banet, at 46 East Columbia street. He died during a hemorrhage of the lungs. Miss Raub, who rents the apartments, said that the man was taken with a coughing fit early Thursday evening and again at an early hour yesterday morning. It was during the latter spell that Mr. Grube remarked that he was going to have a hemorrhage. He started for a window but was stopped by Miss Raub who was fearful that the man would fall out and kill himself. Grube turned from the window and the blood spurted from his mouth and nose. He fell to the floor and in a few minutes expired before it was possible for medical aid to reach him.

Dr. Fred Wood Dying

A telegram received by Dr. Wood's son this morning at Garrett brings word that his father is dying at the hospital in Chicago. It will be remembered that a few days ago we reported meeting Dr. Wood and wife on the train. They were on their way to Chicago where he expected to have an operation to relieve him from gall stones. It would appear from this that he has not been able to rally from the opration. He expressed a doubt as to his being able to pull through while talking with us about it.

TWO WAYS.

The Courier Sees Some Things and Asks Attention to Them.

There are two ways that parents can choose between, to bring up their children, especially their boys. A very good way is for them to be with their children as far as possible. Then they will know that their girls and boys are under good influence. They will know what company they are going with. They will know whether their boys are laying up the right kind of capital with which to go through life. They will know the sort of young company their girls are choosing. Boys and girls acquire their tastes for certain sorts of company and certain kinds of amusements or indulgences quite early. Last Sunday, the writer saw a number of bright, clean boys and girls going to and from Sunday School. A part of them were with their parents, and never showed off to a better advantage. They were happy and entirely safe from any bad influence. But within a block or two, we came on a group of about ten young boys who were on the way home from Sunday School. But their parents were not in sight. They had probably satisfied their conscience by getting their children nicely fixed up for Sunday, and believed that was all the duty they owed. They should have seen their boys. All gathered in a group in the shelter of a building and two of them produced matches and vile cigarettes, struck the matches with the appearance of easy abandon of street loafers lit their cigarettes and started off with an air of superiority over the eight that had no cigarettes, nor matches. And these poor eight! How shall we discribe the look of abject veneration with which they regarded the two incipient loafers, who strutted and swaggered on before them, while they followed their models at a respectful distance. It was a discouraging incident. Everyone of these ten boys, we fear, will not stop till they have acquired an injurious and disgusting habit, one that not one of them can afford from a financial standpoint, and that no one should have from any other standpoint. A few years hence, they will start their life business with no other capital than a bad habit that will consume their little earnings and secure them a condition of p v rty in old age. And years hence, they will be repining in a feeble and senseless way, that others who started in life with them have made themsilves comfortable and respectable. Children are weak and thoughtless, but parents can do much if they choose. Your children will go and you are not too good to go where you send your children. In any case, parents should know where the children are, what they are doing and what sort of associates they have cho en for companions and models.

GENGLER FOR MAYOR.

He Will be the Probable Democrat Candidate in Garrett.

(Fort Wayne Sentinal)

L. J. Gengler is being mentioned as a probable Democratic candidate for mayor of Garrett at the coming city election. Mr. Gengler is a member of Fort Wayne lodge of Elks and has many friends in the city who would be pleased to see him mayor of DeKalbs little railroad city.

NEW TEACHER HERE.

Mr. Bowman, the new principal for the High School is here, having arrived on the noon train from the south He was met at the station by H. C. Shull, one of the members of the school board and introduced to a number of citizens who happened to be present. He is a man of fine address and polished manners, just such a one as we believe will suit the work in our schools. Let us make him welcome.

A Historic Picture

This office is indebted to two good looking Auburn ladies, Mrs. John Zimmerman and Mrs. Oscar Hoffman, for a handsome lithograph of a historic occurrence, that will be recalled by many of our older people. It is a lithograph view of Kossuth making his triumphant march up Broadway, in the city of New York. There are the throngs of people filling the street and shouting, and the characteristic uniforms of the soldiers of that day. Kossuth had fought to free his country, Hungary, from Austrian rule, and would have succeeded but Russia sent a vast army to help Austria and Hungarians were crushed. Kossuth escaped to Turkey and then to America. Here he was wildly received as a hero, wherever he went. Kossuth was the greatest military hero, and one of the greatest states of his age. He later returned to his men country, but at his death a few years ago, was a citizen of Italy.

NOT ALWAYS UNDERSTOOD

A fact overlooked, or not always understood, is that women suffer as much from distressing kidney and bladder trouble as men. The womb is situated back of and very close to the bl dder, and for that reason any distress, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or uinary passage is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort

The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided by setting urine aside for 24 hours; a sediment or settling is evident that your kidneys and bladder need doctoring. If you have pain or dull aching in the back, pass water too frequently, or scanty supply, with smarting or burning—these are also convincing proofs of kidney trouble. If you have doctored without benefit, try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy. The mild and extraordinary effect will surprise you. It stands highest for its wonderful cures. If you take a medicine you should take the best. At druggists fifty certs and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, on receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention the AUBURN COURIER and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamptom, N. Y. The Proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

A Life Saved.

Marvelous cures of throat and lung affections are made daily by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Miss Annie Swan, Petersburg, Va., writes: "My brother was attacked by a bad cough and cold, and it was thought he had consumption. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup was used, and to our great surprise it made him well and hearty. There is no better cure in the world than this Syrup." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

Encouraging Her.

Myrtle—Oh, dear! I wish I could think of some new way to say no. I've had to refuse so many men lately that I am positively becoming weary of the old way of declining. Alice—I wouldn't worry about that, dear. The fellows probably enjoy the joke just as much as if you said something original each time.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

At 11 o'clock this forenoon another sad accident happened at Mooresville. E. W. Eakright, a brother of trustee, J. J. Eakright had been out hunting rabbits and came home at the hour named and when he set down his gun it was discharged, the load striking him in the forehead and blowing off the upper part of his head. He died instantly. It is supposed the gun was cocked when he put it down, but will never be known. He was a worthy young man and leaves a wife and two children.

Staley's Death.

'Squire VanFleit, of Garrett, was here today to make his report on the postmortem held on the late Wm. Staley. Mr. VanFleit is deputy coroner for the county and it seems that Coroner Hughes, at Waterloo, could not go, but sent word for him to attend The engineer and fireman of thd train testified substantially to the details given in yesterday's DAILY COURIER, with a few facts in addition. It appears that Staley was walking east inside of the company's right-of-way and when whistled for, got off the track and walked along to meet the train. At the cattle guard where the wagon road crosses, he suddenly got up on the track or close by it and stepped on the cattle guard holding to the fence at his left, to go over the guard into the road. Here he was struck, for after he had stepped up to the track, it was too late to even check the train. The entire body was crushed and mangled Trustee Eakright had put the body into the grocery there and had it cared for. But after the postmortem today, it was taken to his home He was about 79 years old.

NO PAY—NO CURE

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price 50c. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

LAGRIPPE

Mistaken for Consumption--Given Up to Die.

To some people the mention of lagrippe calls forth a smile. They are the people who have never had it. Any one who has ever had even the slightest touch of lagrippe knows well the complete misery it brings And not only misery for the time being, but unless properly treated its sequslla follow it month after month until the patient despairs of ever getting well again. Pe-ru-na is the remedy for all such cases.

Mrs. Lou Davis, of Fayettville, Tenn., writes as follows: "I was afflicted with a disease commonly known as lagrippe; the doctors said I had consumption. I had a dreadful cough and could not sleep at night. I was advised by a friend to try Pe ru-na. I got one bottle, and the second night my cough stopped. I took ten bottles, and I will say that I believe I would be a dead woman now if it had not been for Pe-ru-na. I recommend Pe ru-na to all those who suffer with lagrippe."

A Father Shoots His Two Children and Himself.

Out of Work and Despondent, and Insane With Drink the Only Reasons Known.

Last evening there was a terrible tragedy at Garrett, a double murder and suicide. Fred Simon, an employe of the B. & O. road, was the murderer. It appears that about a month ago, the company reduced their force, and in doing so, laid off Mr. Simon. It is believed that one cause at least for laying Simon off was the fact that he frequented the saloons, although not decidedly a drinking man. It appears the railroad company does not allow its employes to hang around saloons much, even though they do not drink. Simon it appears brooded over his troubles from that time on, and being very fond of his children, it would seem that he feared that they would some day come to want. Still he said little about it and his wife had no idea that anything was wrong with him, or that he contemplated such a crime. But all day yesterday it appears he had been drinking heavily. At night, his wife went over about seven oclock to call on a sick neighbor, leaving the husband alone with their three children, a boy of six and two girls, one four and the other a year and half old. After the mother had left, the father sent the boy out to get him some tobacco, but when the lad got out of the door he heard the father lock it. Frightened at being locked out, the lad began to scream and cry, and at about the same time reports of a revolver began to be heard in the house. The neighbors were aroused when it was found that all three had been shot, all at about the same place in the right temple. It was a sickening and horrible sight that met their gaze.

Of course the mother was frantic with grief and terror The youngest child it appears died almost instantly. The four year old girl lived about an hour and a half, and the father lived till about 11 o'clock. All died without recoverin consciousness, so that nothing further will ever be known. The revolver used was a 22 caliber. Mr. Simon was seen and talked to by a number of men in the afternoon, but no one saw anything wrong about him, or dreamed of such a thing.

Bible Lessons for Every Day.

The Chautauqua Assembly's little Calendar should go into every home. In addition to giving plainly the days and dates, it has on appropriate quotation from the Bible, and one also from the leading divines, poets, etc., for each day in the year. It will be found to be a very helpful adjunct to the household. It will be sent to any address on receipt of two cent stamp to cover mailing by A. J. SMITH, G. P. & T. A., L. S. & M. S. Ry, Cleveland O.

Klondyke Social

Miss Smith, one of the teachers, gave a Klondyke Social last evening to the boys of her room, at the home of Mrs. A. B. Richards It had some new features. Each boy was blindfolded, and had to pick out his claim on a map of Alaska. Then with a little spade he had a chance to dig for "nuggets," getting various little gold-covered articles. It was lots of fun. Then there was a nice lunch which all enjoyed. She had before given the girls of her school a social. The boys were: Ralph Robbins, Hubert Hartman, Clarence Shoemaker, Earl Ensley, Pearl Click, Henry Little and Charlie Platter.

FUNNY AIN'T IT?

The Clipper backs down chiefly and generally in the matter of its recent attack on the late treasurer Henry Hines. About all it can say is that "Barnes is lost to even the image of Nature's gift to man." As we don't really know what "the image of nature's gift to man" is we suppose we are in an awful fix. We don't know that we could get it back even by advertising for it. And yet we don't see exactly, how we are going to get along without our regular supply of the images of nature's gift. It is a serious question.

Have they Heard From DeKalb?

The Kendallville Sun says:—A hay dealer says that Huntington, Wells and Allen counties are the greatest hay producing counties in the state. A mistake, he says, that too many farmers make, is in cutting hay too late, so that it does not retain a bright green color.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Terrific Earthquake.

A dispatch from Kingston, Jamaica, says: A succession of terrific earthquakes have caused great destruction of property on the Island of Montserat. They began on the 15th, but the most severe occurred on the 20th. There were numerous land slides, and water pipes were wrecked, and the entire population of the island were thrown into great consternation. There is much distress in consequence. Montserat is one of the leeward islands in the West Indies and is a British possession. Its area is only forty-six square miles, and the topography is mountainous. It has a population of between 8,000 and 10,000.

The Vizcaya Sails.

New York special: The Spanish cruiser Vizcaya after spending a week in this port on a friendly visit to the United States, got up anchor at 1:40 Saturday afternoon and started to sea. No ceremonies or incidents of any kind were connected with the vessel's departure. The naval tug Nina and the police boat Patrol, accompanied the ship as far as Fort Wadsworth. When the vessel left her anchorage her flags were at half mast for the Maine. Once well outside the hook, and more than a marine league from shore, her flags were hoisted for home.

Shot the Burglar.

Moses Denman, an old resident of Flora, Ind., was awakened at night by burglars attempting to gain an entrance to his home. He arose, and, pointing his revolver at the door, fired. Groans were heard from the outside, but when Mr. Denman opened the door the robbers had fled. Next morning blood stains were found on the porch, and the robbers were tracked for several squares by the drops of blood on the ground.

Hay Shippers Organize.

About thirty hay shippers representing the middle Western States met at Detroit, Mich., and took preliminary steps toward organizing the "American Hay Shippers Association." About one hundred other shippers from Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana have promised to join the organization. The association will be a stock concern, expected to capitalize at $500,000. The organization is for mutual protection.

A $2,000,000 Fire.

The warehouse of the National Tobacco Company was totally destroyed at Louisville, Ky., entailing a loss of at least $2,000,000. This is the most serious fire which has occurred there in years. The loss may affect the tobacco market temporarily. Seven workmen in the burning building were painfully hurt by falling walls, but there have been no fatalities recorded.

The Dauntless Off for Cuba.

The Dauntless has left Kingsland, Ga., with another Cuban expedition. The cargo went down to New Smyrna during the Maine excitement. The Cubans have been very busy and have successfully shipped away thousands of guns and large quantities of medical supplies and food. The last expedition landed within ten miles of Havana, almost under Morro Castle's guns.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

March 3.—"The Missouri Girl."
March 5.—"On the Swanee River."
March 7.—"Two Little Vagrants."
March 8.—Katie Emmet.
March 9.—Willie Collier, "The Man from Mexico."
March 21.—Mme Scalchia Concert Company.

Counterfeit Halves.

The city of St. Louis, Mo., has been flooded within the last few days with counterfeit 50-cent pieces. The new counterfeit half dollars are a trifle larger than the genuine, and are distinguished by a bluish tint, and experts notice them by the smoothness of the metal. They bear the date of 1895.

Half the Chinese Loan Written.

London special: Half the Chinese loan, amounting to £8,000,000, has just been fully underwritten. Some of the applications had to be rejected. The issue price is 95 and the interest from the loan is 4½ per cent. It will be offered publicly one week hence.

Indians Volunteer.

Several chiefs of the Apaches and Cheyennes, whose reservations are near Fort Reno, have offered to go to Cuba with warriors and fight the Spaniards.

Took Carbolic Acid by Mistake.

Mrs. Michael Flaherty of Indianapolis, Ind., mother of six young children, took a dose of carbolic acid by mistake and died.

Whitney Paralyzed.

The condition of Mrs. William C. Whitney remains very critical. The severe blow she received on her head when she fell from her horse in a fox hunt, near Aiken, S. C., paralyzed her body, and spinal trouble in the cervical region has caused loss of use of all her limbs.

Colored Man Lynched.

Richard Allen, colored, was taken from the jail at Mayfield, Ky., and lynched by a mob of 300. He had entered the house of James Wright and held him up at the point of a pistol.

Consigned to the Tomb.

The last rites over the body of Frances Willard, President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, were performed at Evanston, Ill., Thursday. The city was in mourning, the schools and business houses being closed and flags at half mast out of respect for the dead leader.

No Compromise.

New Bedford (Mass.) special: All hope of a compromise of the cotton mill strike has faded away. The manufacturers announced that they would not compromise and would only open the gates when the operatives returned to work at a reduction.

DOGS OF WAR GROWL

Belief that a Conflict with Spain Is Inevitable.

MINE UNDER THE MAINE

Destruction Said to Be Beyond the Power of a Torpedo.

DISASTER DUE TO DESIGN.

American People Believe the Spaniards Are Guilty.

The Most Reliable Advices, Pending Official Reports, Are to the Effect that the Ill-Fated Ship Met with Foul Play—Senators and Representatives at Washington Become Aroused—Governors of Many States Offer Troops—Crisis in Our National History.

Since the terrible destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor the United States has been facing the gravest crisis of the last thirty years of its history. The people have been stirred by the disaster as they have not been since the close of the war for the Union. From the South, from the North, and from the far West have come magnificent outbursts of national sentiment showing how profoundly this great nation is agitated.

The Maine was one of the finest battleships afloat; one of the most perfect in construction, one of the most complete in equipment. All that modern invention, long experience and trained intelligence could do to make her efficient and safe had been done. And yet this magnificent vessel, at anchor in the harbor of a friendly nation, was destroyed with greater loss of life than would have followed an engagement with the whole Spanish fleet in Cuban waters. Had the Spanish cruisers and torpedo boats attacked the Maine, and sent her to the bottom with the loss of 250 lives, the calamity would have been hard to bear. But to have the Maine destroyed as she was destroyed is calamity unbearable. It was useless to cry patience when there was no patience. It was useless to ask for suspension of judgment when judgment had been given. That judgment was against Spain, and if reversed it would be only on the testimony of witnesses who had standing in the court of public opinion.

No foreign country can appreciate the full depth of American patriotism, writes a Washington correspondent, and it takes an incident of this sort to show it up in its full strength and magnificence.

Gov. Tanner of Illinois was the first to offer the fighting forces of his State to the nation. Gov. Mount of Indiana telegraphed that Indiana would make a generous response to arms. Gov. Black of New York sent word that militia of the Empire State, numbering 14,000, could mobilize within twenty-four hours after orders were received. The belief is also expressed that there are 600,000 men in New York State available for service. Gov. Atkinson of West Virginia insists that he will furnish at short notice fifteen of the best regiments that can be raised in the Union. Gov. Holcomb of Nebraska will supply 1,200 well-drilled men and pledge 200,000 volunteers. Gov. Wells of Utah says his State will do its full duty when it comes to raising troops. Adjt. Gen. Sykes of Tennessee will enlist 1,800 experienced soldiers and raise 50,000 volunteers. Gov. Clough of Minnesota wires: "Minnesotians are fighters, and will only be satisfied in the front ranks." Gov. Stephens of Missouri declares that if war is declared he will issue a call for 150,000 troops.

And so it goes and so it comes, with other warrior States to hear from. There is no lack of soldiers. Spain can depend upon that. Old Glory was at half-mast because the tears were being shed for the dead in Havana, but it proudly and defiantly waves in the breezes that blow from the north, south, east and west, and it will be well for the Spaniard if the good ship Maine went to the bottom of the Havana harbor as the result of an inscrutable act of providence.

This Washington correspondent, whose assertions are thought to be reliable, says that private talks with members both of the Senate and House clearly indicate that there is a volcano at the Capitol which may burst into activity at almost any time. The pictures of the wreck received in Washington, reproductions of which are shown on this page, coupled with the general tenor of newspaper dispatches, have gone far to convince members of Congress that the Maine was blown up from the outside. They are willing to wait a reasonable length of time for the board of inquiry to discover something definite, but as the general opinion is in favor of a torpedo or submarine mine, failure to discover positive evidence of an accident will only serve to confirm this opinion.

Several well-known Senators talked with say that they are being fairly inundated with letters and telegrams regarding the catastrophe in Havana harbor, and that ninety-nine out of a hundred of them look upon the explosion as the result of a Spanish plot and demand action accordingly. Conservative leaders are becoming startled by these expressions of public opinion, and they say this is evidence of a rising tide of popular indignation which will sweep Congress from its feet unless something is done to allay the excitement.

The newspaper reports indicate with surprising unanimity that a submarine mine destroyed the Maine. If these reports are not contradicted promptly and officially Congress will surely respond with a declaration of war, which is clearly within its powers, and which the President will be forced to obey. The people demand that if ships and men are to be lost it shall be in open warfare, and not in so-called peaceful harbors. Any police magistrate would hold the Spaniards under the evidence now at hand on suspicion and require them to prove their innocence. This is exactly the position taken by nine-tenths of the members of Congress. This opinion, declares the correspondent, represents clearly the private sentiment of Senators and Representatives. They all say that the time has gone by for any questions of belligerency and that the only point at issue now is whether the United States shall seize Havana harbor, root up its submarine mines and make it free and safe to the navies of the world. The administration fully recognizes the dangerous situation and is making preparations for war. War may not come, but the Government will be prepared if it does come.

ORDERLY WILLIAM ANTHONY.

This is the marine who, when Capt. Sigsbee ran from his cabin just after the explosion on the Maine, saluted his superior, and in a calm voice said: "Sir, I have to inform you that the ship has been blown up and is sinking." "What a soldier," exclaimed Capt. Sigsbee, in admiration.

The suspicion that the Maine was blown up by a torpedo or submarine mine has grown almost to a conviction. No one in Washington, says this correspondent, can explain why such an act should have been committed, and many hope that it may be proven that it was not committed by any Spanish official; but there are few who any longer hold to the theory of an accidental explosion in one of the magazines or have any assurance that a conflict with Spain will not follow the development of the fact that the Maine was destroyed by an act of treachery.

It is admitted that Consul General Lee has warned Americans who are in Havana on pleasure to leave because they are not safe. Cabinet members are talking guardedly about indemnity. Naval officials admit that warships are moving toward Key West and that work is being pushed with all possible speed on ships now in the various navy yards. Army officials admit that fortifications are to be manned at once and that other preparations are making to place our military arm in the best possible condition.

Activity Is Significant.

All these things are explained as only in keeping with the plans formulated months or weeks ago, and that they have no especial or immediate significance at this time. But they are in keeping with the suspicion now almost a conviction, that the Maine was destroyed by a hostile act of some one connected with the Spanish army.

It is not, however, the preparations in the Navy or War Department or the warnings of Gen. Lee for Americans to leave Havana that point to a crisis as much as it is the feeling that the Maine was destroyed by treachery. The most conservative men in Congress fail to find any possible plan for righting this great wrong. It has been suggested to the President that an indemnity of $10,000,000 might be demanded from Spain if the board of inquiry reports that the battleship was blown up by a torpedo or submarine mine. Some members of the cabinet are reported to favor such demand, but it is not favorably considered by men in Congress with wider range of experience in such affairs. Should it be established clearly that the Maine was blown up by a torpedo or mine placed in Havana harbor for defense, it is not probable that this Government will present any claim for damages. It will be regarded as a hostile act—as the beginning of a war in the most barbarous and treacherous manner.

Had one of the guns at the fortress opened on the Maine as she entered Havana harbor it would have been regarded as a declaration of war and the beginning of war. A Government torpedo exploded under the Maine by a trusted Government official is as hostile if not as open an insult. It matters not that the Spanish officials in Havana expressed their horror of the destruction of the Maine, and the Queen of Spain sent her condolences to the President.

When the board of inquiry establishes the facts that there are torpedoes in the harbor, that Blanco's naval officer guided the Maine to her anchorage, and that a torpedo was exploded by means of the secret cables controlled by the Spanish Government officials, there can be no further investigation or inquiry. This Government will not try to find out who exploded the torpedo. The whole case then rests with Spain. On her rests the responsibility. On Spain will be the suspicion of having made another treacherous assault upon the United States. Those who are most experienced in diplomacy and the more delicate relations of Governments express the opinion that the President can do nothing but declare war on Spain and send the navy to bombard Havana. He must accept the evidence before him.

Spain alone can prevent war under such circumstances by making amends. She can express her regrets, tender her apologies, lay hands on the criminals whom Blanco must know, because they must have been in his employ, and execute them, salute the American flag and offer to pay an indemnity for the loss of the ship and another for the lives of the 250 men who were murdered.

It would remain for this Government to make the terms of peace that would be acceptable, and the independence of Cuba would be one of these conditions. The diplomats see no other way to prevent war if it should be established that the Maine was blown up by a torpedo or mine.

The work of the board of inquiry will therefore end when they have examined the ship and found the evidences of foul play. There will then be left no alternative for this Government but war, unless Spain sues for peace and asks for conditions of peace.

THE NATION MOURNS FOR ITS DEAD MARINES.

—New York Journal.

THE WRECK OF THE MAINE--FROM A PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN THE MORNING AFTER THE EXPLOSION.

NAVAL experts claim that the appearance of the twisted and torn wreck is in itself evidence of the fact that the Maine was destroyed by outside influences. The position of the wreck shows that the shock was from the port side. The main deck between the forward and after magazines is blown upward and to the starboard. The forward smokestack is thrown back and to the starboard. The whole wreck has a list to port. It is claimed that the picture indicates that the Maine was destroyed by a submarine mine. After awning is in view; ship's rail is six feet under water; superstructure twisted and thrown aft; forward superstructure thrown 200 feet from the ship forward; smokestack lying down.

LOOKING FORWARD FROM THE AFTER SEARCHLIGHT.

READY FOR A FIGHT.

In Case of Trouble with Spain the United States Would Be Prepared.

In spite of all denials it is well known that unusual efforts are being made to arm and equip every sea coast fortification, and that the regular army officers throughout the country have been quietly notified to put their commands into the best possible condition. The President does not want war, and will go a long ways out of his way to avoid it, but he fully recognizes the force of public sentiment and is preparing rapidly for the worst that may come. Press dispatches from different points show preparation that is being made:

New Orleans, La.—The United States cruiser Marblehead has joined the North Atlantic squadron at Dry Tortugas.

ENTRANCE TO HAVANA CEMETERY.
Here lie many of the Maine victims.

St. Louis, Mo.—The war fever continues unabated, and already the work of organizing companies here has begun.

Washington.—All the marines on shore duty have been ordered to hold themselves in preparation for service at the shortest possible notice.

Tampa, Fla.—The cruiser Montgomery has been ordered to Havana, where she takes the place of the wrecked Maine until further instructions are received.

Columbus, O.—The Ohio militia is preparing to respond to the President's call for troops in the event war is declared between the United States and Spain.

At Charleston, S. C., work on the Government fortifications is being rapidly pushed. The navy yard force is kept busy putting the guns in shape for war.

At Norfolk, Va., the Norfolk navy yard received instructions to have the monitor Terror ready for sea. Both the Puritan and Terror have been shipping recruits for the vacancies caused by the Maine disaster.

Providence, R. I.—The 150 officers and men in the three companies of the Rhode Island naval reserves are fully equipped for any emergency and are prepared to answer a call to duty on board any of the Government war vessels within five hours.

New York.—Never before since the days of the war of the rebellion has the Brooklyn navy yard seen so pronounced an activity on the part of officers and men. No longer do the officers deny that the Government is making the most strenuous preparations "to meet any emergency."

St. Augustine, Fla.—Captain Hubbell, with one battery, has been sent to Sullivan's island, and a few days ago Lieut. Van Duzen departed for Fort Moultrie with a detail of twenty men to take charge of coast defenses. Army officials here freely discuss the probability of trouble with Spain.

At Cincinnati, O., a recruiting office for soldiers to serve in case of war with Spain was opened at Mergard's Hall. Many men signed the muster roll. A member of Nelson Post, G. A. R., issued a dodger headed "To arms, to arms." Hundreds of white badges and buttons with the words "Volunteer—On to Havana" have been distributed.

New York.—Preparations for war, carried on with the greatest secrecy, have been going on in New York harbor. If the United States declares war and Captain Eulate tries to leave porte by force, he will find a barrier such as he has not bargained for. All that is necessary to do to blow up the Spanish warship Vizcaya is to touch an electric button if she tries to pass out through the narrows.

Key West, Fla.—The preparation for war can be seen on every hand, and from the naval station stores are being sent to the battleships at Tortugas. Every night the battleships New York and Iowa clear decks for action, and everything suspicious is stopped and spoken. Soldiers can be seen everywhere. Troops that would enlist from this city are acclimated to yellow fever, and could be sent to the interior of Cuba without fear of taking that dreaded disease.

NOTES OF THE DISASTER.

Brief Bits of Important News Bearing on the Horror in Havana Harbor.

The wreck has sunk several feet already in the soft mud.

The Spanish Government will stake all on the claim that the disaster was accidental.

The main portion of the wreck, as seen from above and noted from below, was blown to starboard.

A large quantity of clothing has been taken from the wreck and will be given to the reconcentrados.

The Spanish anti-American feeling in Havana is growing and Americans are insulted openly on the streets.

The most intense anxiety is shown by the Spanish officials in Havana, who are in constant communication with Madrid.

Divers found the bodies of twenty men in hammocks, where they had been instantly killed by the shock of the explosion.

Admiral Sicard issued orders forbidding any United States official or sailor to talk of the Maine disaster with outsiders under severe penalty.

Significance is attached to the fact that the wrecked ship was the first foreign war vessel to be anchored to that particular buoy since the Cuban trouble began.

Sharks have given little trouble, but the vultures left scarcely anything but the skeletons of three men, who were entangled in debris very near the surface of the water.

A Spanish lieutenant openly boasted that if any other United States warship arrived she would be served the same way. His brother officers applauded him uproariously.

One thing seems certain, if the Maine was blown up by an outside agency, the agent was a mine, and not a torpedo, as no torpedo known could have produced such tremendous results.

The number of missing is eighty-five or eighty-six, and five have died in the hospital. Of the missing many doubtless were blown to atoms, no portions of their bodies being recoverable.

Cubans claim that there are mine galleries under the harbor, leading from subterranean passages known to have existed for years between Fort Cabanas and Morro Castle and Havana.

DIVER IN UNIFORM READY FOR WORK.

SPAIN IS LIABLE.

Done Are Pecuniarily Responsible for Loss of the Maine.

Good authorities on international law say that if it is proved that there were mines in the harbor of Havana, Spain is liable for the disaster to the Maine, whether those mines exploded by accident or through the criminal act of an individual Spaniard, whether an official or not. They believe that if Spain had laid submarine mines in the Havana harbor it was her duty to warn the officers of the Maine of the danger they incurred in anchoring there. They cite precedents, whereby nations have recovered damages in instances very similar to the one in point, to prove Spain's liability, not only for the loss of the ship, but for indemnities for the sailors whose lives were lost in the explosion.

The liability of Spain, they say, could not be denied if neither the place of anchorage was assigned to the Maine by Spanish officials nor the explosion was due to the criminal act of some individual, but simply to some unaccountable accident. For while Spain had unquestionably the right to provide her harbor with submarine mines and torpedoes, she was morally bound to warn any ship of a friendly nation—not only a man-of-war, but the same holds true of any merchantman—of the danger that would be incurred by anchoring in that harbor except in a safe position consigned to her. Any power that allows a ship of a friendly nation to enter her harbor thereby implicitly declares that it is safe to do so, fortified or not. So in all these cases there seems to be a clear case of responsibility on the part of Spain.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

New Supreme Court Decision Very Favorable to Laboring Men—General Lew Wallace Challenged to Fight a Duel—Killed in a Laporte Saloon.

Victory for Labor Men.

The decision of the Indiana Supreme Court that a railroad company is liable for damages in a personal injury case, where the accident was caused by the negligence of a fellow employe, is attracting attention. The decision upholds the constitutionality of the so-called co-employes liability act passed by the Legislature. There is much rejoicing among labor organizations over the decision, as they have been demanding the rule now laid down for many years, and succeeded in lobbying through the new law. The decision, attorneys point out, is contrary to the old common law rule, which up to this time governed in this State. In connection with the main decision the court decided that an employe who becomes a member of a railroad benefit association, and in doing so signs an agreement that he will not sue for damages in case of personal injury, does not bar himself from the right to sue.

Wallace Asked to Fight.

Gen. Lew Wallace has been challenged to a duel by George E. Oakes of Indianapolis for remarks reflecting on Gen. George B. McClellan during a recent Lincoln day address, in which he said that Lincoln visited Harrison landing to prevent McClellan from surrendering the Federal army. Oakes served under McClellan. In a letter to Gen. Wallace he denounces the story as untrue and asks the latter to meet him upon the field of honor, at such time and place and with such weapons as the general may choose.

Shot a Fellow-Student by Accident.

While several Valparaiso students were preparing to take a flashlight photograph of their room, Hayes T. Smart of Detroit, Ill., entered the room and Frank Rosenberger, a fellow student from Petersburg, Ill., pointed a revolver at him as a joke with an order to throw up his hands. He accidentally pulled the trigger and Smart dropped to the floor with a bullet in his brain. Smart died four days later.

Victim's Neck Was Broken.

James McClelland, a laborer, was murdered in the saloon of Schoof & Bark, in Laporte, his body being found in the rear yard of the place by Policeman Zees. The neck of the victim was broken by the force of a blow on the head. The proprietors, William Dust, Bertha Krull, May Lewis and Blanche Cogle are in jail awaiting the sitting of the grand jury.

Within Our Borders.

Mrs. John Mille is heir to an estate in New England valued at $200,000.

Guy Van Tassel and Herbert Gorham sawed the bars to their cell and escaped from the Martinsville jail.

George C. Bodge, a farmer of Delaware County, dropped dead on the street at Hartford City of heart disease.

The frozen body of William Burns, a prominent young man who lived near Columbus, was found along Clifty creek.

At Vincennes, Isaac R. Conway, an old soldier, and his family were poisoned by eating candy, said to have contained strychnine.

Mrs. Samuel Umbenhour, a farmer's wife living near Fortville, drew $500 from a bank. She was robbed of the money and was probably seriously injured.

The large stock and dairy barn belonging to George Sheets, west of Nora, was destroyed by fire. Sixteen fine dairy cows and five horses were destroyed.

A buggy in which Col. Richard P. De Hart, the well-known lawyer, and Thos. Lonergan were riding was run into at Lafayette, badly injuring the occupants.

Mrs. Frank Cory of Shelbyville is contesting the will of her brother, the late W. Scott Ray, the well-known newspaper editor, who left a large estate to his four single sisters.

The sophomore and freshmen classes of Wabash College at Crawfordsville have been having numerous "rushes." In one of these skirmishes a sophomore got a shoulder broken and two others fainted.

The widow of Oliver P. Morton, the war Governor of Indiana, and his son, Oliver T. Morton, have approved a plaster model for a statue of the late Senator by Sculptor Niehaus of New York to be placed in statuary hall, Washington.

A few days ago a mad dog was chased from Princeton to Haselton, and on the way it bit many domestic animals. As a result there is a widespread hydrophobia scare and many horses, mules, cattle, hogs and sheep have been killed. Farmers are watching their stock day and night to prevent a spread of the disease.

Mrs. Mary Beach of Porter County garnisheed the wages of Samuel Pomeroy under the law of 1897. Pomeroy defended on the ground that he is a householder and could claim exemption up to $600. The Porter Circuit Court decided against him and the Supreme Court reversed the decision, holding the law constitutional, but must be construed in connection with the exemption law.

The Palmer children, recently taken to the Madison County infirmatory from Anderson, are attracting a great deal of attention among Indiana medical men. The children are 10 and 12 years old respectively, and there seems to be virtually no connection between the brain and the muscles. They do not even have a desire to eat. When started to walking they will continue to walk until stopped, or if seated or standing they will stay that way until changed. They are considered freaks of the first water in every respect and are strange enigmas for medical men. This is one of the few known cases where animals of high or low degree did not have desire for food. They demand constant care.

In a head-end collision between two freight trains on the Chicago and Calumet Terminal road, near East Chicago, Conductor Melvin Smith was killed, Fireman Funkhouser and Engineer Golding escaped by jumping.

A 2-year-old daughter of W. H. Newkirk, a traveling showman of Kokomo, died from the effects of a gasoline explosion in the show wagon a few days ago. Newkirk had his freak show in one end of the wagon and his family in the other. Other members of the family were seriously hurt by the horses running away after the explosion.

Gov. Mount has issued a provisional proclamation prohibiting the shipping of Texas cattle into Indiana between Jan. 15 and Nov. 15.

The freshman and sophomore classes of Wabash College at Crawfordsville renewed hostilities, an ugly rush following the chapel exercises. Several men were carried from the field. George Rekley of McLeansboro, Ill., had his kneecap knocked out of joint and Rufus Romaine of South Bend had his knee dislocated. Joseph Bartholomew of Hammond sustained a dislocated leg and Ed Elliot of Indianapolis was hurt by receiving an ugly blow over his heart from a classmate's knee in the mix-up.

SONG.

If thou art not kind,
What will profit thee
Wealth of purse or mind,
If thou art not kind;
Grief and misery
Must thy portion be,
If, alas! thy heart be blind
And, poor wight, thou art not kind.

Kindness, and the earth is bright,
Kindness, and the load is light,
Kindness, and the weary way
Laughs with love and roundelay;
King is he in all his blood
Who is first in doing good,
God pity him whose heart is blind
And alas! who is not kind.

HER LAST CHANCE.

"This," said Mrs. Gafferly, "this is the last time, Perlina Milkin, the very last time. I've spent enough upon you since your ma died and I took charge of you to marry six girls who had their senses about them. I've dressed you like a Christmas doll, and I've let you go into company, and I've sent you to the most fashionable places to board in summer, and here you are, four and twenty, and not so much as engaged. It's perfectly disgusting, Perlina; and what I have to say is, if you don't settle your affairs this summer I'll give you no more chances. I expect to die in the poorhouse as it is. Why, I was married at 17, and your ma at 18, and your Aunt Delight, about the plainest little critter I ever saw, wasn't but just 16. What's the use of advantages and you have looks, Perlina—if you don't make use of 'em.

"I'm sure I don't know what you expect me to do. I can't very well propose to any one," said Perlina, ready to cry. "I do everything I can, and they make love to me, and they say all sorts of things. If they don't pop the question, how can I make them? There, now, I suppose you waited until Uncle Gafferly asked you to have him before you said you would."

"Your Uuncle Gafferly would have committed suicide if I had refused him," said Aunt Gafferly. "You may not believe it now, but I was a beauty in my youth. As for what you can do, you ought to know; but what I say is this: Come home engaged, or I'll stop all this useless extravagance. I have crammed your trunk to the tune of $500, and you are going to Saratoga with the Kerosene Newbodys; and if you can't do it now, I'll give it up as a bad job."

With which speech she inflicted on her niece's cheek that matter-of-course peck which female friends choose to consider a kiss, and bade her good-bye. And despite her new wardrobe, her big Saratoga trunk, the prospective summer gayety and the chaperonage of Mrs. Kerosene Newbody, poor Perlina cried a good deal in the hired carriage which conveyed her to the boat. What was she to do? To marry might have been easy, but to marry money—and that was what she was expected to do—was a harder task.

Aunt Gafferly was a good business woman, and would not be likely to spend any more money on an unsalable article, and Perlina shivered at the prospect before her, if this summer's campaign should prove a failure. On the whole she looked so ill when she arrived at Saratoga that her mirror told her that her best plan would be to retire early and take as much beauty sleep as possible, in view of any eligible gentleman who might put in an appearance next day.

Fresh as a rose and dressed in her most becoming morning dress, Perlina took her seat at the breakfast table next morning and nestled close to Mrs. Kerosene Newbody in the most bewitching manner.

That lady, an ample matron, with a loud voice, greeted her affectionately, and at once introduced her to two gentlemen who were her neighbors.

"Mr. Kolt, Miss Milkin; Miss Milkin, Mr. Downhill. All old friends of mine. Charmed to make you know each other," and then devoted herself to breakfast, and left those who preferred it to waste time on conversation. And so Miss Milkin, having the field to herself, made eyes at both her new acquaintances, and shrewdly noted, amid her infantile giggings and dimplings, that both were smitten. They were of the age, or rather of the ages, at which the heart is most susceptible of Cupid's arrows. Edmund Kolt was a youth of 19 and Hiram Downhill was at least 65.

Never before had young Mr. Kolt had such bewitching attention offered him. And as for old Mr. Downhill, his memory brought back some dove-like glances, such as those Miss Milkin showered upon him, from the long-vanished years of his youth, but not many.

To cut a long story short, Miss Milkin, having discovered that Mr. Kolt was very rich and an orphan, and that Mr. Downhill was a very wealthy bachelor, at once set her cap for both gentlemen, resolving to accept the one who proposed first. She loved neither. A girl of her views, who had made a rush into the matrimonial market with but one stipulation—that the man she married should have money—was scarcely likely to have a heart. A husband meant to her easy circumstances, freedom from her Aunt Gafferly's incessant "nagging," liberty to flirt as much as she chose with ineligibles, who were often very interesting, and freedom from the dread of being an old maid.

Mrs. Newbody, who was, on the whole, a good-natured woman, willing to see her friends well settled, furthered the little affair to the best of her ability. There were walks, rides, drives, chatting in cozy corners, and at last a proposal. It came from Mr. Kolt. Youth is hasty. Age is slow. Mr. Downhill was just making up his mind to do it, when Mr. Kolt did it. And Miss Milkin said "yes," and would have fallen into his arms but that they were in full sight of an old lady who had just leveled her opera glass full at them from a window.

"Yes," Perlina had answered, and young Kolt blushed rosy red, and "his soul," like that of Gloriana, in the Wild Irish Girl, presumably "went on a jig to heaven," for the band was playing delightful dances for their edification; and afterward, when they had had supper, Perlina locked herself in her room and wrote to her Aunt Gafferly. Her letter ended thus:

"So you see I'm engaged, and you can't twit me any longer. I don't suppose poor Kolt will ever set the river on fire, but he's a good-natured fellow, and I can just twist him around my finger. And, remember, you are bound to give me a handsome wedding dress, and have always promised me poor ma's pearls the day I was married.

Your affectionate niece,
"PERLINA."

Mrs. Gafferly signified her approval by return of post, and Perlina's mind was at rest. It did not trouble her much that in less than a week a telegram summoned Kolt to the city. She could use the fast-fading days of freedom better without an engaged lover at her side, and she certainly made the most of them. She plunged into flirtation in a way that frightened even Mrs. Kerosene Newbody, and was happier than she had ever been since her search for a husband commenced. As for poor Mr. Downhill, she quite snubbed him, now that she had no views concerning him. Meanwhile the absent Kolt wrote love letters, and she answered them.

"Never shall I forget my feelings when you went out to ride with old Downhill," he said in one of these. "I really thought for a while that you liked him."

And to this she replied:

"How could you fancy that I should like a superannuated old creature like that? I only took a little notice of him out of pity."

Poor Perlina! Life was certainly very much checkered. One morning Mrs. Newbody opened a New York paper, and, having glanced down the column of marriages and deaths, gave a faint shriek and looked at Perlina in a terrified way. Perlina snatched the paper and saw this record:

"Suddenly, on the —th, Edmund Kolt."

Edmund Kolt—there was no doubt of it. Mrs. Newbody looked at Perlina, expecting to see her faint. To her surprise, the young lady, though very serious, was quite calm.

"Poor fellow," she said; "I'm very sorry. Do be quiet, dear Mrs. Newbody! Don't let's have a scene. No one knows we were engaged, and you need not tell 'em. I don't want my season spoiled."

Then she arose and went to her room, cried a little, bathed her face, used some pearl powder on her nose and went downstairs to charm Mr. Downhill by beaming upon him and asking him how he could be so dreadful and neglect her so.

In a word, now that the old love was gone, she "took up with the new," and in a week Mr. Downhill had proposed and was accepted. And the astonished Mrs. Gafferly received an account of the situation which greatly surprised her.

Old Mr. Downhill was rather more obstinate than even Mr. Kolt had been. He asserted his rights, and insisted upon the open wearing of the engagement ring.

There was no more flirtation for Miss Milkin, and evey one knew what had occurred. She wore a diamond ring of value on her finger, and was guarded by her old beau from morning until night. He even wrote her several notes between their parting at midnight and meeting at nine in the morning, and in one of them he referred to her flirtation with young Kolt.

Miss Milkin was one of those unlucky victims to love of letter writing who can never resist putting things down in black and white. She wrote this sentence in her reply: "You naughty, naughty goose! How could I care for a stripling like that? Poor fellow! he was very nice; but only a boy, you know." And when she had written it she thought how much jollier it was to run about with him than to sit in a corner with old Mr. Downhill, who was always afraid of catching cold, and who would not let her dance because he could not. Still he was rich, and she was engaged at last, after all.

One evening she walked the piazza with her betrothed, leaning on his arm in the most confiding manner. The evening train was in, and people were waiting for the stages to bring the new comers.

As they rattled up to the door some one was seen waving a white handkerchief. A young man with very red cheeks—and then some one called out: "Why, it's Kolt, alive and well." For there had been much lamentation over the poor fellow. As he sprang out of the crowded vehicle they rushed toward him to shake hands and tell him that he had been supposed dead.

"Death in the papaw, you know, old fellah," said one exquisite. "Weally vewy cuyous how death could be in the papaw when you wasn't dead, you know."

"It was poor grandfather. I was named after him, you know. I never thought what people would think. I—" Then he turned pale and hurried into the house, fearing that the awful news had killed his poor Perlina.

Miss Milkin was in the parlor. She had fled on his approach and was really quite faint, and Mr. Downhill had gone for a glass of water. Every one else was out of doors, and the young fellow rushed toward her.

"My dearest love!" he whispered; "my darling! you did not think I was dead?"

"Yes—I—did!" gasped Perlina.

He bent over her and caught her hands and pressed them to his lips.

"Oh, I couldn't die and leave you!" he said. "I—"

But here a hand came down upon his shoulder and a thin voice breathed in his ear:

"Young man, I am very glad to see you restored as it were from the grave, but I can't allow such liberties with the lady who is going to marry me."

Mr. Downhill had returned with the glass of water.

Perlina, not knowing what to do, had refuge in tears and silence. The gentlemen grew furious and finally walked away with each other, with "pistols for two and coffee for four" in their faces. But this was eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, and much is thought of documentary evidence. In a retired spot, where they could not be overheard, the hapless Perlina's letters were produced. Poor little Kolt read with the bitter agony of youth the woman's denial of her love for and engagement with him, written a week after his supposed death, and old Downhill gave a groan over another buried hope, as he read the lines in which he was set down as a superannuated creature only taken notice of out of pity.

After this the two gentlemen shook hands. They had no quarrel with each other now. Neither of them wanted to marry Perlina Milkin. She received two little notes that evening telling her so.

That was last summer. This year Perlina will not go to Saratoga at all, and Mrs. Gafferly, having dismissed her chambermaid, it is a matter of wonder to the neighbors who the person with a green barege veil on her head, who rubs the windows, can be. It is barely possible that this is Perlina. Mrs. Gafferly is a woman of her word, and she considers her niece's chances of matrimony quite over.—New York News.

QUEER FLORIDA CRABS.

Have Peculiar Shells and Feed on Birds and Insects.

Haunting the rookeries of the birds in the southern part of the peninsula is a large blue crab. He makes a hole in the ground, usually under a log, and when he hears a noise elevates his head and protrudes his eyes witn startling effect. He is able to take care of himself, for his pincers are powerful and his shell is hard. He is often as large as a saucer.

There is a perpetual war between him and the birds. He wanders among the nests at night and appropriates the bits of fish left by the nestlings and the young themselves if he can find a mother off her guard. But he has to be sly or he is killed by the stroke of bayonet bill and eaten in his turn. When a plume hunter has driven off or destroyed the parents of a rookery these crabs swarm forth and devour the orphan young in short order. But while the mothers are allowed to do their duty the crabs are ideal scavengers and devour the refuse as well as the insects that infest the bird cities. Their bright colors, like those of the tiger, make them less dangerous than their appetites would otherwise be.

There is a little purple crab along the coast of Southern Florida which seems to feed almost entirely upon the fruit of the cactus. This it so much resembles that you are suddenly surprised to see one of the succulent little balls move away from your fingers before you are aware that it is alive. Step back and the crab will resume its place, and seem to be as curious about you as you are about him.

One of the most beautiful shells found along our coast is that of a large snail which climbs certain trees and grows delicately fat on the young birds. The shell is as thin as tissue paper, oddly curved and almost as transparent as the finest glass. It belongs to the family of edible snails so prized as a delicacy on the coast of France, and if properly prepared makes a delicious dish. It is most abundant about New River Inlet, where the slight shake of a tree about sunset will bring a shower of them to the ground. The breakage of a shell seems to be of little trouble to the snail—he repairs the damage and moves on.—Jacksonville Citizen.

Making Rats Work.

There are 150 men in north St. Louis who defy anyone to dispute the fact that Tom Maguire is a genius. Mr. Maguire is yard foreman at the Laclede Gas Company's plant at 2nd and Mulanphy streets. His enthusiastic proclaimers of his genius are his fellow-workers in the big yard.

A sewer pipe leading from one of the buildings to the river bank, 160 feet away, became cloggel. The pipe is sixteen feet below the surface. It was not known just where the obstruction was, so arrangements were made to open the trench. Then Maguire brought into play what proved to be the trump card—viz., rats.

He had been thinking about the plan for several days. One night, by the aid of generous hunks of fresh cheese, he managed to entrap two big gray rodents, and these he determined to put into the sewer. They were taken to the mouth at the river bank and released. The opening was then closed securely behind them, leaving the animals with only one chance of life. That was to go straight ahead. And they did.

Several more rats were caught each succeeding day and turned into the sewer, until a dozen fine specimens were gnawing away in the pipe. The morning after the last detatchment joined the main rodent army, water commenced to trickle from the pipe. Iron rods and steam were applied. In ten minutes the sewer was clear.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Eight Days on the Witness Stand.

"The longest time I ever saw one witness on the stand," said a man from Hardinsburg, Ky., "was during the life of Judge Kincheloe, who was regarded as one of the ablest members of the Breckinridge bar. He was honored by his people to the high office to which he aspired, and he was always respected in the highest as a man of learning and a ripe scholar. During his active practice land titles were much unsettled in our country, and some of the most important suits came up over titles. In the case of Askins vs. Askins, in which Judge Kincheloe and the late George W. Williams, of Owensboro, were the counsel, the taking of testimony consumed two months. It was then that Mr. Askins was on the stand continuously for over eight days, and when the judge had questioned him from every conceivable point of view, he said: 'Well, Mr. Askins, you are excused, but I'm afraid we've pumped you so dry you won't have anything to tell your wife and family when you get home.' The witness retired badly confused, but evidently glad to get off the rack."—Louisville Post.

The Scent of Flowers.

As a rule, the scent of flowers does not exist in them as in a store, or gland, but rather as a breath, an exhalation. While the flower lives it breathes out its sweetness, but when it dies the fragrance usually ceases to exist. The method of stealing from the flower its fragrance while it is still living is no new thing, and it is not known that when it was discovered that butter, animal fat, or oil would absorb the odor given off by living flowers placed near them, and would themselves become fragrant

KILLING PRESIDENTS.

Unhappy Must Be the Rulers of the Latin America.

For the last year Latin America, always turbulent, has been the scene of a reign of terror compared with which European uprisings are nowhere. Three rulers have been assassinated, attempts have been made on the lives of two others and plots and conspiracies against still half a dozen others have been nipped in the bud. The assassination of the President of Guatemala, Barrios, ends the career of a man whose position was founded on the murder of his opponents. Central and South America have been noted for years for the rapidity of their revolutions in governments. This everyone knows, but the methods of the assassins of presidents have obtained but little attention.

In only one instance out of a dozen has there been a spasmodic attempt at the murder of a ruler. When the two martyr Presidents of the United States fell there was no sympathy anywhere with the assassins. Booth thought he was doing the South a service, but the South repudiated him then and ever since. Guiteau's act was that of a crazed partisan. But when a president of a republic in Central or South America falls under the knife or the bullet of the murderer the whole country, except the immediate followers of the victim, exclaims: "It is well. Now we shall have peace!"

A year ago the President of Uruguay was Don Iriarte Borda, the son of a Frenchman, and who by surviving half a dozen revolutions had reached the highest position in the republic. Last year he was accused of fomenting an overturn of the government. In April a man fired a revolver at him at short range, but missed him. The next month another man tried unsuccessfully to kill him with dynamite.

In August, however, his hour came. As he was leaving the cathedral at Montevideo, after a Te Deum in connection with the celebration of the 72d anniversary of the establishment of the republic, a youth named Arredondo fired two shots at the president, who died almost at once. The people of Montevideo did not allow gayety to give way to grief.

Senor Jose Cuestas, President of the Senate, succeeded to the presidency of the republic until the election in the following March. In December an expoliceman tried to kill him, but the bystanders warded him off.

The next ruler marked for death by the assassin was President Diaz of Mexico. Again a national holiday was selected for the commission of the crime, Sept. 16 being the Independence Day of Mexico. The President had just left the line of the military parade with his Secretary of War, when a Mexican named Arroyo struck the President on the back of the head with his fist. Not one of the Presidents of the republic to the south of us is beloved of his people as Diaz. The assailant was seized by the police and soldiers and nearly clubbed to death. The people would have killed him at once if they had not been restrained by the gendarmerie. Arroyo was taken to the police station and was afterward stabbed to death.

The next work of the assassin was down in Brazil. The President of this republic was Dom Prudente de Moraes Barrios. Commonly, however, he dropped the Barrios from his name. After Piexotto, the first President, had put down the rebellion of 1893-94, Moraes succeeded him in the high office. Early last year Moraes had a little rebellion on his own hands, a revolt led by a fanatic in one of the provinces. Brazil became prosperous under the new President, who was mild in temperament, though exhibiting great determination.

Early last November a soldier of Brazil, Mello by name, tried to shoot the President. Men nearby protected Moraes, but his nephew was wounded. Gen. Betancourt, minister of war, drew close to the soldier and attempted to secure him. In reward he was stabbed so severely that he died in a few minutes. This was not the act of a solitary crank, but the result of an organized attempt to get rid of a president who had shown vigor in suppressing the fanatics' rebellion. Soon after the police began to investigate, and their report indicted the Vice-President of Brazil and a long list of distinguished public men.

THE OLD M'KINLEY HOME.

Birthplace of James McKinley, the Pioneer of the Family in America.

Standing in the county of Antrim—Ireland's northernmost district—is a comfortable old farm house, which until recently attracted little notice, but which has now become a place of more than local fame. Parish oracles point out the homestead of Dervock with unction, and errant Americans drift thither from Lorne, Belfast and even distant Dublin. For this square-built stone farm house was the nursing home of the house of McKinley, and under this venerable roof was born James McKinley, pioneer of the family in America, and ancestor of the President of these United States.

Two stories high, with narrow, small-paned windows, and a sort of lean-to addition—such is the outward aspect of the McKinley cottage. Up to a decade since the roof was picturesquely thatched; but the present tenant tore away the straw and covered the house with more useful, but certainly less attractive slates. In the low doorway stands a "half-door," that hospitable Celtic idea, which keeps undesirable strangers out, while bidding a hearty welcome to the desirable. Besides this door, through which one gets a view of the neatly kept interior, stands an ancient granite stone, now used as a seat, but which once occupied a more important position. The two chimneys of the cottage are very old, but so strongly and serviceably did the McKinleys of former days build them that subsequent dwellers found in them nothing to alter. The same, indeed, may be said of Dervock as a whole—it was built throughout solidly and well.

From many residents of the parish were gathered scraps of Dervock history, until it was easy to trace the modest story of the old house. Some said that the McKinleys were of a Scottish race that settled in Antrim during James I's plantation of Ulster; others stoutly maintained that they were of pure Irish stock, and merely a sub-tribe or branch family of the great house of O'Neill. However this may be, it is fairly certain that during the reign of Charles II. James McKinley, son of another James McKinley, and called "Shamus Oge," or "James the younger," settled upon the lands of Dervock. The name "Shamus Oge" may be found among the list of those to whom a contract for the making of a road along the shores of Lough Neagh was issued in the year 1688. In 1709 David McKinley of Dervock was a collector of the "hearth tax" in Antrim. Doubtless these ancestors of President McKinley had a dwelling on their farm, but no vestiges thereof remain.

MISS FRANCES ELIZABETH WILLARD.

THE death of Miss Frances E. Willard brought sorrow to many hearts. For many years she has been identified with a reform that was far-reaching and important, and her activity was such that, by the very modesty of her work and the sincerity of her purpose, she was carried to, rather than sought, a prominence that was so pronounced that one of the magazines not long since referred to her as the "uncrowned queen of America." Early identified with the Woman's Christian Temperance movement, she was always its most trusted leader. In her gentle personality were the elements of true generalship that enabled her to marshal the forces of temperance into a mighty host. Without fanaticism or bigotry she brought to the organization of which she was the head the intrepid courage of a dauntless leader, the ripe attainments of a liberal scholarship and the loving kindness of a nature that never lost the softer attributes of refined womanhood. Surveying the beauty of her life, its plentitude of noble achievement and its bountiful sacrifice, her keenest critics, who sometimes assailed the methods of the organization which she founded, must join in the acknowledgement that she was a great moral force and that her services to mankind were inestimable.

GREATNESS OF THE HEN.

Earnings of Poultry Exceed in Value the Output of Gold and Silver.

Herbert W. Collingwood, editor of the Rural New-Yorker, says: There are in this country to-day, in round numbers, 375,000,000 chickens and 40,000,000 other fowls, such as ducks, geese, and turkeys. During 1897 the hens laid 14,400,000,000 eggs. The export price at New York City averaged 15 cents a dozen, which makes the value of the egg crop $165,000,000. Poultry sold as meat—as broilers, boilers, and bakers—brought $125,000,000 more, making the total hen crop at a conservative rate $290,000,000.

This great value of the hen crop is scattered broadcast. We deal with it chiefly from the individual side, and it is astonishing to realize how much it is in the aggregate. In order that these figures may be appreciated comparative figures are interesting:

Earnings of poultry	$290,000,000
Total of pensions	139,280,078
Total of school expenditures	178,215,559
Total of interest of mortgages	76,728,077
Value of swine	186,529,745
Value of potato crop	78,984,901
Value of tobacco crop	35,574,220
Value of cotton crop	259,164,640
Value of oat crop	163,655,068
Value of wheat crop	237,988,998
Salaries of all school teachers	139,280,078
Value of all church property	679,630,139
Total military expenses	52,947,073
Value of all minerals	218,168,788
Value of hogs	186,529,745
Value of gold	46,810,000
Value of silver	72,510,000
Value of wool	38,146,559
Value of sheep	68,167,725
Value of milch cows	263,955,545

In one year the hens of the country will pay the net bonded debt of Greater New York and have enough left to buy all the gold and silver mined during the year—that is, if they could borrow $10,000,000 from the ducks and geese. One year's earnings will buy all the minerals produced in a single year, and will pay, in addition, every cent of the interest on farm mortgages. The American hired man, taken as an individual, is a person of small consequence. He is usually neither dignified or desirable; yet the 3,454,675 farm laborers in the country earned last year in cash, board not included, $362,740,665. The fact is that the hens and the hired man taken together, in two years' earnings, would buy all the church property and have enough left to pay all pensions and all our public school teachers. The same sum would pay operating expenses for all American railroads for one year, and also pay the wages of all the clothing makers, all the iron workers, all the cotton mill hands, and all the carpenters in the land. One bushel of wheat, costing 90 cents, will feed a hen for 300 days. If she lays 100 eggs, worth two cents each, she will increase the value of the wheat to $2, which is enough to haul one ton of freight 250 miles or to haul one passenger fifty miles. After she has done all this she will return 25 cents' worth of the fertilizing value of the wheat to the soil for another crop.

NAMES FROM THE LATIN.

Signification of a Small Number of Popular Cognomens.

The Christian names derived from the Latin tongue are numerous, as might be expected from the greatness of the general debt which all modern languages owe to the speech of Rome.

Anthony (or Antony) was a name rendered famous by a Roman, Marcus Antonius—one of the three who once held conjunct rule over the world. We therefore place it among the appellations borrowed from Rome, though it is derived from a Greek term signifying "flourishing."

Augustus is a word which radically signifies "increasing," "waxing in honor," and in this sense was given as a supplementary name to the first imperial Caesar, since whose time it has been common in the families of princes.

The name of Caesar itself, it may be remarked here, is occasionally used as a Christian name. It most probably signifies, etymologically, "well-haired" or more likely still "red-haired."

From being the generic appellation of the emperors of Rome, Caesar has been adopted by other potentates in various quarters of the world. In Germany, for example, it was thus used in the form of "Kaiser," and we believe the northern word "Czar" is to be traced to the same source.

Boniface is a name which was much esteemed by the early Christians, and which many worthy Fathers of the Church were well pleased to bear. Boniface has an excellent signification—"a well doer."

Clement and Constantine are two names from the Latin—the first signifying "mild" or "merciful," and the second "resolute," "standing firm by anything." Felix is a name in this same condition; it means "happy."

The next we have to notice was a favorite in other days, though, by some unaccountable award of fate, the name is no more to be heard among men. We allude to the name of Hilary, which signifies "merry" or "cheerful."

Laurence is an agreeable name and signifies "laurel like," or "laurel-crowned," being derived from the Latin "laurus," a laurel.

Lionel, "a little lion," in its etymological sense. Martin is a good martial name, "martial" being its proper signification. Maurice means one of Moorish origin, "sprung of a Moor." Oliver is from the Latin word "oliva," an olive tree. Patrick has the sense of "a noble" or "patrician." Arabella is first in alphabetical order of the female names derived from the Latin, and means a "fair altar."

Barbara is from the same source as our word "barbarous," but has properly the softer meaning of "strange" or "foreign." Beatrice signifies "making happy." Cecilia (and the less common male name Cecil) have in the Latin the signification "gray-eyed," or perhaps, "dim-sighted." Clara is one of the finest of our female names. It has the meaning of "clear" or "bright." Constance means "resolute." Grace, one of the sweetest of all the names given to Christian women, signifies simply "favor," or grace in the sense of favor. Felicia has the signification of "happy."

Julia is a name in rather an awkward predicament. It means "soft-haired" or "mossy-bearded." Now what, in the name of horror, are we to do with a mossy-chinned Julia, or, still worse, a Juliet, for they are all of a kin?

Letitia, usually shortened into Lettice, denotes "joy." Lucy is a favorite name with almost all. It is derived from the same Latin word as the adjective "lucid," or light, and has much the same meaning.

Mabel is either from Ma belle, signifying "my fair," or contracted from amabilis, "lovely" or "amiable." Olivia is a good name, derived, like Oliver, from the symbol of peace, the olive. Patience means what in common speech the word implies.

To close this catalogue of baptismal names from the Latin, we have but one other to allude to, namely, Ursula; and how this appellation came to be given to any mortal woman we cannot guess. The word signifies a "female bear."—Saturday Evening Post.

An Owl Flew Through the Cab.

Mike Murphy, engineer of the "Blue Flyer" on the B. and O., was badly cut in the face by flying glass from his cab window early yesterday morning. Mr. Murphy was coming down from the big hill at Caseyville at a high rate of speed, and, the air being quite fresh, he kept his cab window closed. All at once he heard a crash, and the next instant blood covered his face, the result of particles of glass from his cab window striking him. He hastily reversed his engine, and, as soon as he washed the blood from his face, looked around for the cause of the accident. He expected to find that some miscreant had thrown a missile through the window, but in a corner of the cab lay a big owl, which had passed through the window. The owl was slightly disfigured, but would have been able to fly had Mr. Murphy permitted it to escape. He brought it to East St. Louis, and will keep it as a memento of the fast run at Caseyville. Railroad men contend that the electric headlight so blinded the owl that it could not see to escape, and that it plunged through the glass in its half-dazed condition.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Parthenon Is Veneered.

The Pall Mall Gazette asserts that when an inquisitive investigator climbed up the scaffoldings which have been erected for the purpose of repairing the Parthenon, the other day, he discovered that, while the outside of the structure is of the finest Pentellic marble, the material behind the external layer, which, of course, was never intended to meet the public eye, is of a schistic nature, and has yielded to the ravages of time sufficiently to destroy the beauty of the masterpiece of Phidias. In fact, the softer stone behind the beautiful marble has simply crumbled and brought down the outside layers with it.

Two Southern men have designed a motor for use in churning, which consists of a framework carrying a shaft, having a wind-reel at one end and a crank at the other, which operates the dasher.

AROUND THE WORLD.

Many of our readers also take the Chicago Inter Ocean, especially the Sunday edition, as that contains the letters sent in by Mr. and Mrs. M'Ilrath who are going around the world on bicycles. Last Sunday that paper contained their last letter which was dated Dec. 4, at Puzeh, Persia. It will be seen from this, that Persia is a long way off. And in fact, from its being in the far interior with poor communications with the outside world, it is the slowest place in the world from which to get mail, if we except the interior of Africa. This last letter gives a great deal of information about the ruins of the ancient capital of the country. Persepolis, begun by Darius the Great and continued by his successors. It is now a wonderful and vast ruin. But their letters home are valuable. Mr. and Mrs. M'Ilrath were sent around the world by the Inter Ocean which pays all their expenses. They started two or three years ago from Chicago, and went west. They had often very strange experiences with people who never saw a bicycle, before and more, who never saw a woman ride one. Sometimes they were treated with indignity, but have now finished the worst part of their journey in safety. Still we must not forget, that in going west from Persia, they pass over the same countries in which a noted wheelman was killed a few years ago.

Speaking of this wonderful trip, reminds us that Mr. and Mrs. M'Ilrath are Ohio people. We believe their home, before starting was at Paulding. And we are also informed by what we suppose reliable authority that two of Mrs. M'Ilrath's sisters are now in Auburn. We refer to the Misses Boyer, now staying with the family of Mr. Palmerton on south Jackson-st. It appears that when Mrs. Palmerton died, Miss Boyer was doing her work, and since the former's death, has kept house for Mr. Palmerton. The other Miss Boyer, whose home, we believe is in Defiance, came here to stay with, and be company for the sister. We are also told that she expects to meet Mr. and Mrs. M'Ilrath at New York when they reach this country, which may be the coming year.

W. G. FILE KILLED

J. C. Lochner, who is scribe of the Ben Hur court at this place received a telephone message from Fort Wayne today noon announcing the death of W. G. File. The particulars concerning his death are meager, though we learned that he was hurt in an elevator a day or so ago, and died from the injuries at one o'clock this morning. The funeral will be held tomorrow from the residence of Mr. Bilderback in Fort Wayne, Rev. Colvin officiating.

Mr. File was a member of the Auburn Ben Hur court and carried a half certificate at a cost of 50 cents a month which will give his wife $1,000 insurance.

THE SOUVENIR SENTINEL.

The most superb edition of a newspaper that we have seen is that of the Indianapolis Daily Sentinel of date Feb. 24 and which went out of this office with the DAILY COURIER of that day. It is full to the brim of valuable and interesting matter, aside from the matter contained in the regular edition. The illustrations are fine and the illustrated cover, a thing of beauty. We shall keep one of these Souvenir Sentinels as a matter of newspaper history and presume many of our readers will do the same. This mammoth number was to mark the date of S. E. Morss' tenth year as a publisher. The Sentinel has usually been an able and enterprising paper, but never so much so as under the control of Mr. Morss May its shadow never be less.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

The editor of the Kendallville News has this startling item, which we in common with many others, would be glad to have Bro. Downey explain. Hear him:

The News editor is not in "on the the divy." The last big bribe we go was 8 years ago, right here in Kendallville, when Freeman gave us, in Geo. Alexander's grocery store, $250 for advocating electric lights. We have since reformed.

THE PARTICULARS.

Concerning the Death of William File.

The morning Journal contained the following concerning Mr. File's death:

William G. Files was employed by Dr. Banning as an expert worker in metals. He made the finer tools used by the doctor in the practice of his profession. He came to Fort Wayne about two years ago and had become so familiar with the business of the doctor that he often helped in various kinds of operations. Mr. Files had gone to the office, which is on the fourth floor of the Pixley-Long block. Sunday morning, and at 10 o'clock had prepared to leave the building. The elevator which is not usually in operation on Sunday, was standing at the fourth floor, and as it is the custom of employes and tenants of this building to operate the elevator themselves, in the absence of the elevator boy Mr. Files decided to go down that way rather than walk down the stairs. He went to the door of the lift and found that it had worked up till the floor of the elevator was only about two feet from the top of the door frame. Taking a chair that stood near, Mr. Files placed it in front of the door and mounting, stuck his head through the door and reached up to the lever that operates the lift. Mr. Files had worked the lift before and was not ignorant of its operation, but from some unknown reason he pushed the lever the wrong way and the lift went up instead of coming down as he intended it should. The movement of the lift was too sudder to allow Mr. Files to extricate himself from his position and he was caught between the floor of the elevator and the top of the door frame. The floor of the lift caught him across the upper part of the abdomen and the door frame struck him across the back just below the shoulders. While the external injuries were very slight and in fact almost indiscernable, the internal injuries were terrific. With rare presence of mind Mr. Files pulled the lever of the elevator the other way, sending it down again. When the great pressure was released the man collapsed and fell out in the hall, where he was picked up and carried into Dr. Banning's office.

Mr. Files was married, but leaves no children. With his wife he was rooming at 147 East Wayne street.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Bilderback residence on East Wayne street.

BUTLER.

Fred Oberlin remains nearly the same. There is a possible chance for his recovery.

A movement is on foot to have a street fair or something of its nature next September.

Mrs. Woodworth continues her efforts with increased success. This promises to be her last week.

Our people were painfully shocked to hear of the accidental discharge of a gun causing the almost instant death of Edward A. Eakright near Mooresville last Saturday.

Mrs. Isaac Helwig living near Helmer met with a painful accident last Thursday. She slipped and fell on an icy walk and broke one of the bones of her forearm. The injury will be slow in healing and is causing her much pain.

The news of the serious wounding of Alba Heywood, the comedian reached Butler last Sunday and awakened much inquiry among his many friends here. The cause was a shooting affray between himself and the manager of a theater building in Texas.

Dr. Shumaker's barn had a close call from fire last week, caused by carelessly throwing hot ashes into a minure pile at the side of the barn. J. H. Baxter happened to see it in time to extinguish it before serious harm resulted.

MRS. HENRY LINDORFER.

We have word this morning that Mrs. Henry Lindorfer died at five o'clock this morning. The report we had a few days ago, was incorrect, but as it was given by her son we had reason to believe it. But it appears she had only become unconscious at that time, and later on, revived. The funeral will be on Friday, March 4, at the German Lutheran church in Auburn, at 11 a. m.

THE COURIER'S PUZZLE

When we had that storm of damp snow a few weeks ago, weighing down, and crossing the telephone wires, there was much confusion and some fun in the mixing of messages. On what we actually heard, we built up and completed six messages, a part of which were genuine and a part made up and having mixed them up, we offered for each correct solution by March 1, a free copy of the DAILY COURIER for one month, or a free copy of the WEEKLY COURIER for one year. Within two days, Eddie Sheets, a lively lad, one of the carriers of the DAILY brought in the solution sufficiently correct to give him the prize. As he gets the DAILY all the time any way, he chose a year of the WEELLY. The second one to send in was Ellis McClish, of Hudson; the third W. H. Daily Corunna; the fourth is from Miss Emma C. Wallace, 41 Hueston Ave. Ft. Wayne, Ind. All these will receive the WEEKLY COURIER, as the DAILY would not reach them right.

THE SOLUTION

All the solutions sent in are substantially correct, and we give the last, that of Miss Wallace,

FORT WAYNE, IND., Feb 28, '98

The COURIER, Auburn Ind.

DEAR SIR:—I enclose herewith a solution of your Telephone Puzzle as it appeared in the DAILY COURIER of Feb. 16

The solution is this: There are six conversations, the first one is obtained by taking first, sixth, twelfth, eighteenth twenty-four etc., words.

The second is composed of the second, seventh, thirteenth, nineteenth etc. Then start with the third word and use every sixth word and so on.

I trust my solution is correct and if so please send me the WEEKLY COURIER for one year. Respectfully,

EMMA C. WALLACE

41 Huestis Ave. Fort Wayne, Ind.

THE CONVERSATIONS.

No. 2. Is this you, Dora? I have been calling you an hour. Didn't we just have a lovely time? and isn't Jack just to sweet for anything? Ha! ha! Funny aint he?

No. 3. You bet I am just stuck on her. Now, don't laugh. I shall call around soon and get the right side of the old gent. Oh, sure! You hear me.

No. 4. Oh! I am calling the COURIER. Can't you give the COURIER? Say, your yesterday's was just fine. It has the news nicely written. Well, it's good enough for anyone.

No. 5. Shut up, can't you? Yes, it's Zent I'm after. Oh, ring off! Gee! you make me weary! This aint Zent's dulcet voice. Oh, yes! where's that car you promised us?

No. 6. I wish you'd send the newspapers a notice of that social. There will be chicken pie and Oh, no! not turkey; just chicken. Turkey is too high. Yes. All right.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of Fairfield Center, Ind., beg leave to submit the following resolutions.

WHEREAS, It has pleased God in his all-wise Providence to remove from our midst on Feb. 25th, 1898, one of our esteemed members Miss Ida Busselman, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That in her death our society has lost an esteemed and earnest worker, the mother, a kind daughter, the sisters and brothers a loving sister and the community in which she lived an earnest Christian worker.

RESOLVED, That as an expression of respect to the bereaved family we do extend to them our most heart felt sympathy in this their hour of sorrow, and would recommend to them the God in which she put her trust remembering that he doeth all things well and may they be one unbroken family in the great beyond.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the mother, to be spread on the record book of the society and be printed in the Auburn COURIER and Waterloo Press.

DR. WOOD

Dr. Fred B. Wood of Garrett, died at Ango'a, last night at 11 p. m. The report the other day that he was dying at Chicago, was caused by the fact that he had a bad spell of internal hemorrhage and was so weak that he seemed to be sinking away. It appears that he was left so weak it was not safe to perform the operation he had expected. But when he was believed to be able to stand the journey, he was brought back to Angola yesterday, but gradually grew worse, till the end came last night. It is supposed the funeral will be at Angola, and interment beside his first wife, in Auburn. He was a member of the G. A. R. and they may be in charge of the services, though we are not informed.

COULD START IN AN HOUR.

We have a marked copy of the Detroit Journal, sent by Mrs. W. I Tompkins, formerly Miss Annie Iiger in which are several interviews with military men. They are apparently written by Mr. Tompkins, who is ont he editorial staff of the Journal. The first interview is with the commandant at Ft Wayne at the south edge of the city. There they have four companies of the 19th U. S regular infantry and they are "always ready." In half and hour from the receipt of an order to move they would be marching out of the sally port under the big brick walls, with all needed things, arms cartridges, blankets and a day's rations. In one hour they would be on board cars.

The Fifth regiment of the Michigan state troops at Muskegon reports that they would be in Detroit in thirty-two hours, for they have made better time than that during the great strike of 1894.

The companies at Detroit composing the First and Fourth regiments would be somewhat delayed by lack of suitable equipments, more especially of cartridges, but would be in the field in a day or two in good shape. It is likely that the present war scare, will induce them and all other companies in the different states to provide at once such things as they now lack.

It may by safely said that in case of war the various states could furnish the general government on short notice at least 80,000 men fairly well drilled and equipped. The United States regulars number about 25,000 of the most effective fighting men in the world. All of these could not be spared once, but three-fourths could be put into any city on the Gulf of Mexico within a week. Many would be there in a day. But the force is greatly scattered at distant posts. But in any case, they are always ready.

MCGUIRE--LANE

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. S Duck on West 9th-st at about five o'clock last evening occurred the marriage ceremony of Horace A. McGuire, of Churubusco, and Miss Lulu Lane, of this city, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating The happy couple were attended by Miss McGuire. of Churubusco and Miss Edna Foster, of Fort Wayne. The wedding was a surprise to most all of their friends. Mrs. McGuire led the Endeavor meeting at the Lutheran church and after the close she received the congratulations of her friends The COURIER extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. McGuire

THE RATHBONE SISTERS

The ladies of Auburn who belong to the Rathbone Sisters, have been present and done theork at nearly all w the towns around here, when new lodges were to be started.

Last evening at about six o'clock they started for Corunna where a big lodge was waiting for them. Nineteen ladies and two gentlemen were in the expedition, there being one bus, two 3-seated rigs and one 2-seated rig needed to carry them. They found the roads excellent except a small piece, and reached Corunna at eight o'clock. They found the new lodge there a large one, there being twenty-five each of ladies and gentlemen. There was also present as usual on occasions of this kind, the Deputy Grand Chief, Mrs. Collins, who assisted in the work. At the close of work there was a grand luncheon furnished by the Corunna people, and all had a splendid time. The Auburn ladies say they never had a better time or were more hospitably treated. They fell in love with Corunna and its people.

A funny thing happened on the way home. The rear team broke a tug of the harness and they had to wake up a farmer's family at three o'clock in the morning to get repairs. No one was hurt, and only a short delay resulted.

BRIDGE IS UP.

The Seventh-st bridge was raised yesterday and today the false work under it was loosed, and the big iron frame now stands by its old strength. It appears very solid and strong, and as far as we are able to judge will be one of the best in the country. The road bed of planks is still to be put on and the walk on the south side will be made. It is not likely that teams will be allowed to cross till the new grading is more settled.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Trustee A. N. Thrush and wife were up from Butler township yesterday.

—J. W. Cool of Jackson township made his regular annual call on the COURIER yesterday.

—Read the new advt of Schaab Brothers. It is a seasonable notice of the opening of spring trade.

—The reports that Alba Heywood was badly hurt in a shooting affair in Texas are probably true. We have waited for further facts, but nothing more is said in the papers.

—Look out for the biggest and best line of goods of the season, at the store of Schaab Brothers, when Charlie returns from Chicago.

—Mrs. Cuppy has just returned from Chicago with the very latest in fancy goods, including elegant paterns, cushions, lunch cloths, silks, ribbons, braids cords and threads. Lessons free.

—D. C. Caruth had a runaway on South Main street this afternoon. A strap broke and let the tongue down. He jumped out and was not hurt. The team fell near Davenport's residence and one horse was hurt some.

—J. H. Hornberger. Pentz, Pa., sends in his subscription this week. He writes that he moves this week to Manistee, Mich, where his future home will be. The change in his post office will be made at once. We hope he may find his new location advantageous.

—Several of our people went to Ft Wayne today to attend the funeral of Mr. Files who was crushed in an elevator at Fort Wayne. They were people highly regarded when living here. He was an excellent workman, doing the blacksmith work and horse shoeing at H. C. Shull's carriage shop. At Ft. Wayne he made the delicate surgical instruments used at the Banning Medical Institute.

—Lagrange county now comes to the front and lays claim to a lady who has cast a ballot for a presidential candidate. This one now resides in a hamlet called Woodruff, and is Mrs. Zopher Case. During the campaign of 1896 she was living in Denver, Colo., with a daughter. and they each went to the polls and voted for W. J. Bryan. And if she has the opportuinity in 1900 she will do so again and admonish her friends to go thou and do likewise.

—At a meeting of DeKalb Lodge F. & A. M. last evening, three candidates were initiated into the mysteries of the entered apprentice degree, Past Masters Geo W. Lackey, and Geo. A. Bishop assisting the W. M., D. A. Garwood in the work. At the end of the session five entered apprentices were present to listen to the instructions from the East. On March 15, the Fellow Craft's degree will be conferred on two candidates. The lodge here is taking on a new growth and its prospects are brighter than for many years.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sarah Keen Boren, at her home near Mt. Hope, Ind, peacefully fell asleep in Jesus Christ. With a firm faith and trust in God, she lived and died in hope of a better resurrection. She was born March 2, 1863, and died Feb. 25, 1898. Aged 34 years, 11 months and 23 days.

Was united in marriage to Mahlon Boren, Oct. 5, 1884. To this union was born seven children, the eldest of which is thirteen years old, and the youngest a baby of five months. Deceased was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keen, residing in Richland Tp, DeKalb, Co., Ind. She was converted in 1880, and joined the M. P. church, living a consecrated christian life until her death. She was a woman of superior qualities, a faithful wife and an affectionate mother. Her untimely death cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood, she had no enemies. It was said of her, 'She hath done what she could." But He who holds the destiny of our race in His hands, understands it all. And when the great problem of human life has been solved, it will then be no mystery to us.

We trust that her life of sacrifice and devotion to her family will have a tendency to lead them to a higher and better life. So we would comfort the sorrowing friends with the words of the prophet. For her works shall be rewarded, and she shall home again from the land of the enemy.

Dear mother we have laid thee down to sleep;
But not with hopeless hearts our sad eyes weep.
For soon the joyful trumpet of God will sound
To wake the silent sleepers low beneath the ground.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mahlon Boren and family wish to thank through the columns of the COURIER, the friends who so kindly assisted during the sickness and death of the dear wife and mother; and Mrs. Minerva Keen also returns them thanks for assistance to her daughter, Mrs. Sarah Boren.

Where the blood loses its intense red—grows thin and watery, as in anemia, there is a constant feeling of exhaustion, a lack of energy—vitality and the spirits depressed.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is peculiarly adapted to correct this condition. The cod-liver oil, emulsified to an exquisite fineness, enters the blood direct and feeds its every corpuscle, restoring the natural color and giving vitality to the whole system. The hypophosphites reach the brain and nerve centres and add their strengthening and beneficial effect. If the roses have left your cheeks, if you are growing thin and exhausted from overwork, or if age is beginning to tell, use SCOTT'S Emulsion.

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

—Mrs. J. S. Bowers, for many years a resident in Waterloo, died at her home in Marshall, Mich., on Thursday Feb. 17. She had been in poor health for a long time. She and her husband will be remembered by many people all over the county. He was in the furniture business at Waterloo.

—Henry Fulks was in town today on some business

Thursday's Daily.

—The auditor's office shows a number of changes. The desks, etc have been moved about so as to have more room, and it looks much handier and better than before.

—And still the snow covers the wheat. As luck has it, as fast as a thaw takes off one covering of snow, there comes another before the wheat can freeze.

—Al. St. Clair and Mort Wilson came down with a carriage this morning and took Mrs. W. B. Maxwell to her home at Waterloo. She is a sister to Sheriff Stroh and has been sick here for a time. She is still in poor health and had to be carefully wrapped up to stand the journey of five miles over bad roads in such stormy weather. But the boys came prepared to make her comfortable.

—Among those who went down to Ft. Wayne yesterday to hear the famous Sousa Band were Jim Eldridge, Dr. Buchtel and W. C. Hartman and Mr. and Mrs. Wash Askew. They say the entertainment was grand and the Temple was packed full. The band now numbers fifty pieces and is to be increased to 100 soon. Sousa will at an early date take his big band to Europe where they will tour the continent.

—Mrs. C. K. Baxter and her sister-in-law, Mrs. H. M. Henning were callers on the COURIER family yesterday. Mrs Baxter was for many years a neighbor of ours in Waterloo, but for some years she and her husband have resided in Elsworth, Kansas. They have a farm near there but Mr. Baxter has retired from part of his work for several years and they now live in town. The daughter Mary is married and she and her husband live on the farm now. The oldest son Will, is publishing a paper, "The Beacon" at Foster, Kansas. The other son Morris died some years ago. The old friends will take an interest in hearing from them. They bring word that the DeKalb people in the counties around Elsworth are prospering.

—The south end of town is getting lively in more ways than one. It was only a few evenings ago, that revolvers were drawn in the saloon there and quarrels are said to be common.

—President McKiney at Philadelphia and Ex-president Harrison at Chicago, made speeches Tuesday evening for meetings called in honor of Washington's birthday.

—Father Boccard was at Avilla Tuesday, to attend the celebration of Washington's birthday. There were exercises by the pupils of the school, including the original thirteen states by as many young ladies. Father Dushmig, also celebrated the thirty first anniversary of his pastorate there the same day. Altogether it was a very pleasant affair.

Thursday's Daily.

—Don't annoy others by your coughing, and risk your life by neglecting a cold. Our Minute Cough Cure cures coughs, colds, croup, grippe and all throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord sells it.

—H. G. Zimmerman, of Albion, is talked of for candidate for the supreme court for this district. We are told he is considered a good lawyer.

—Whooping cough is the most distressing malady, but its duratian can be cut short by the use of One Minute Cough Cure, which is also the best known remedy for croup and all lung and bronchial troubles. For sale by McCord.

—A Columbia City man broke his toe a few day since. He was carrying fire wood for the cook stove and a stick fell on his toe. As he is the first Columbia City man we have heard of carrying in wood for his wife, his awful example will probably be accepted as a warning by the other husbands of that city And very few husbands in Auburn have broken their toes by such bad practices.

—What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and biliousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. By H. B. McCord.

—The Columbia City Heel Company has been writing to Goshen parties to see if the latter city will give them a bonus to move to that place. Queer as it may seem, the heel factory want to go where people are the best "heeled."

—After yeaes of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersvalle, Pa., was cured by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema, rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord —Albion New Era:—Miss Maggie Hart went to Auburn on Saturday where she will do the domestic work for the family of C. C. Shaffer, whose wife recently died. Miss Hart has already acted in this capicity for them for two years or more and her work gave entire satisfaction.

—A bequest is not always desirable. A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Capt. Lahnum has received orders to keep his company in readiness, in case there should be a call for help. It wouldn't take the Auburn boys long to do up the Spaniards.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—G. S. McCord was down to Mooresville yesterday and prepared the body of Wm Staley for burial. He says the head was cut in such a shape that after he had put it together, his whiskers would prevent any one from knowing that he had been so horribly mangled.

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—It is proposed to give the survivors of the Maine, an extra years pay to make up for the loss of their clothes and other personal effects. The families of those lost, will probably receive a similar amount, possibly more.

—We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The Rochester, Ind. G. A. R. Post has passed resolutions denouncing civil reform and the granting of larger pensions to officers than to private soldiers. They say they will hereafter cast their votes against those who favor either of these things.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. 25c.

Friday's Daily.

—John T. Olinger was in town today

—Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Dilgard were in the city today on some business.

—A. C. Leins of Corunna has thanks for favors today.

—Karl Husselman went to Fort Wayne today to have his eyes treated.

—Frank Shull, was a caller yesterday and paid for the COURIER another year. He has been selling wood here during the bad roads.

—Will Leas was down today from Waterloo to attend the Zeigler funeral

—Sol Barney came up from Fort Wayne today.

—Freeman Zeigler and wife came up from St Joe today to attend the funeral of B. C. Zeigler, who was a cousin.

—Judge Lowry was here today on his way to Angola where he has some work in court.

—John Weimer brought in some slaughtered hogs today, fine ones, Rainier got them. Mr. Weimer has yet about 200 bushels of his big crop of potatoes.

—Two hundred Winnebago Indians on their reservation in Wisconsin have offered their services to the government to help fight Spain.

—John Hoffelder and several of his older chileren were here today. They were looking up the matter of tombstones for the late Mrs. Hoffelder and the daughter who died.

—The Standard Mf'g Co. will move to their new quarters in about two weeks. John Weaver has moved his carperter tools out and the rooms are being prepared for the business.

—The carriers for the DAILY COURIER had to use handsleds yesterday to deliver their papers. The big boom Sentinel helped to make such a load, that even with sleds they had to make two trips.

—Hon. T. R. Marshall, of Columbia City, was here yesterday and stopped over a few hours while on his way to Angola. He is a member of the state democratic central committee for this district and stands deservedly high in the councils of the party

—Mr. Boland received a dispatch to day from the party and they were then at Las Vegas in New Mexico. They had intended to stop and rest there but Mrs. Eckhart was feeling so well and they had got along so well that they concluded not to stop but went on.

—The attack being made upon Judge Leonard J. Hackney of the supreme court by the Hard faction on the ground that Hackney is not friendly enough to the silver cause, is not commanding the sympathy of the democratic party in other counties. It is well known among Judge Hackney's friends that he supported Bryan with as much zeal as his dignified position would permit and that he was and is a warm friend of the silver cause. It looks as if the Hord faction was attempting to belittle Hackney for the purpose elevating their own candidate.

—Albion New Era: A gambling house at Goshen, frequented by small boys, was discovered in a peculiar way. One of the boys, a patron, went to sleep at home and in his dreams imagined himself at the card table playing for a money stake. He was talking in his sleep about the game when his mother overheard him; Suspicion being aroused, she questioned him in his sleep about it and obtained much desirable information which, when placed in the hands of the grand jury, was the means of arresting the proprietors of the joint.

—From all over the country reports have been sent to the big dailies that the militia companies were in readiness for war and every man would respond to the call. We fear that some tears would be shed should the call come. Some of the Auburn boys "cried" when they were called to Hammond during the Pullman strike. The Waterloo Press has offered to send their company the Press free, while in service should they be called. We will do better than that, we'll send the Auburn boys the DAILY COURIER and Indianapolis Sentinel free.

—Two men were held up near Crowl's school house last Saturday night about 11 o'clock, says the Milford Mail. They left Milford in a buggy at ten o'clock as near as they can recall, and at the turn in the road west of the school building, two men sprang from the fence corner and grabbed for the bit of the bridle. They missed their aim, however, and one of the assailants fell beneath the vehicle, who it is thought was considerably injured. The young men, both of whom were from near North Webster, were badly frightened and had they not been driving at a rapid rate both would have been taken in.

—A big hay trust has been formed, that includes about every dealer in the four states of Ohio. Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. They will be able to control the price and market. We see that L. A. Henning, of Butler is in the combine. But the names of Auburn dealers do not appear in the report of the first meeting which was held at Detroit yesterday.

—Auburn people who are acquainted with Mr. Walmsley who used to run Mr. Henry's notions wagon, will be pained to learn the death of his son Charlie, a promising young man. He had first studied law, then at Houston, Texas, became manager of the telegraph lines of that section. But last summer he was in Chicago with about $1000 in cash, and was robbed. The thieves struck him a blow on the head with a sandbag, and he never recovered fully.

Saturday's Daily.

—Dr. Stamets reports Scott Shoemaker as getting better.

—Curt Eckert got his fingers cut in a planer again today but Dr. Stamets thinks they will be saved.

—Lloyd Obenchain, of the COURIER office will spend Sunday at his home in Columbia City visiting friends and relatives.

Adrian E. Hart, one of the employes in the Big 4 store at St. Joe, was in town today attending the Republican meeting.

—A letter from Saunders VanAuken says his grandmother, Mrs. Saunders is on her way to recovery, and that he will go back to his work Tuesday.

—A new insurance order was organized here last night. The Catholic Legion. Several of the boys came over from Garrett.

—The Rathbone Sisters are requested to all attend the meeting Monday evening as arrangements must be made to go to Corunna.

—S. J. Tarney of Jackson township was a caller at our office yesterday. The Squire keeps up with the times and buys a daily when he comes up to town generally.

—Miss Ida Husselman, daughter of the late John Husselman, died at her home near Fairfield, Friday, and will be buried Sunday. Her disease was consumption.

—The north bound Lake Shore train was over an hour late today. When they left Fort Wayne it was discovered that the boiler flues leaked so bad that it was necessary to have the switch engine help out.

—Among our callers today, were, three bright eyed girls from St. Joe, Miss Ida Stafford, Miss Violette Barney and Miss Adda Widney. St. Joe people are always welcome up this way.

—Fred Simons and his murdered children will be buried tomorrow at two p m in the cemetery northwest of Garrett. They will be buried in one grave, the two little girls in one coffin.

—It is never too late to mend, if you've been buying crackers that taste like brick dust why not stop now and switch on to crackers that are delicious and nourishing. You can do this easily. Simply ask for Fox's XXXX Square Wafer Butter Crackers. They are as good as crackers can be made.

—A telegram received by Mr. Boland today from the California party dated Needles, Calif., reports them getting along nicely and nearing their destination. They will arrive at Los Angeles this evening at 5:50 Pacific time or 7:50 our time. They will be welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Chas Eckhart who have everything in readiness for their coming.

—There was a bit of a scare at the residence of W. C. Hartman yesterday. They had lighted an oil heating stove and put it into the room on the second floor to warm it, so some work could be done. Supposing it was turned up to the proper pitch, no attention was was paid to it for a short time when Mrs. Hartman caught the odor of the smoke. It was found it had been turned up too high and the room was full of odorous smoke and greasy soot. The paper on wall and ceiling was badly smoked and spoiled and the lace curtains and other things in the room suffered accordingly. There was a lively time but nothing more serious happened.

—Schaab and Bros. new ad on first page. Better read it.

—There is laughter for the laughable, music for the musical, and much to commend and patronize in the performance of "A Breezy Time." At the Opera House Saturday eve.

—A late Seattle paper gives a list by states of those who are this winter said to be getting up parties to go to the Klondike. Auburn Indiana is credited with a company of 100, to be headed by a Mr. Griffin. Auburn always cuts a big figure, even in these fake dispatches.

—We see by our exchanges that candidates for office are in many cases putting their pictures into the papers along with their card of announcement. It is a good idea. We know of two candidates for democratic nominations in this county, who have their pictures. Better use them, boys, when the proper time comes.

—Supt. Coe had twenty-nine teachers at the examination on Saturday. That means that he must stay at home now to examine and grade their papers. He also has on hand all the papers of the recent common school examinations which will require immediate attention. There will be a big lot of these for they represent the work of twelve townships and the town of Ashley, in all about 120 sets of papers, each set with six branches. Truly the county superintendent has plenty to do all the year around. And all the schools have not been visited as yet.

—Miss Mamie Trentman left today for Grand Rapids, Mich., where she will spend a time in the wholesale millinery houses, acquainting herself with the new spring styles in ladies hats. Miss Rhodes, her trimmer, will also spend a few weeks in the houses and will come here with all the latest ideas.

—The Eckhart Carriage Co. are making the finest line of Surreys, Phaetons, Buggies and Road Wagons ever shown in DeKalb county. Culbertson & Boland will sell you any thing you want in this line at reasonable prices. Call and see them befour you buy.

—Miss Addie Stewart, of Wilmington township, goes to her home today. She has been here about two weeks helping to care for her niece Miss Mollie Wilson who has been sick at the residence of James Griswold. Miss Wilson is much better but not fully recovered.

—It will be seen by the list of jurymen we publish today that Concord gets three out of the six grand jurors and two out of the twelve on the petit or trial jury. That is, she gets five out of a total of eighteen. That will make some of the "professional jurymen" look sick with envy.

—Ed Hoch, so long employed at the Swinford House, closes his work there tonight, and tomorrow, March 1st begins as clerk in the grocery store of Will Kruger at the south end. Ed is a faithful and affable man, no matter where he is, and no doubt will continue to be as popular in his new location as he has been at the Swinford. We wish him success.

—Three Jackson boys called on the COURIER Saturday; Frank Walter, Roy Provines and Gerry Magginis. Frank says his brother J. B. Walter, is still detained from school although he may be back next week. He is now suffering from rheumatism. Frank and J. B. are sons of J. J. Walter, Roy is a son of A. H. Provines and Gerry a son of Wm. Magginis, all old friends of ye editor.

IF WAR SHOULD COME.

THE recent terrible occurrence in the harbor of Havana, which resulted in the destruction of millions of Federal property in the shape of the battleship Maine and the death of nearly 300 sailors, startled a great deal of speculation as to the real value of our navy and its relative importance among the naval armaments of the world. It has revived the discussion of what the result of a war between the United States and a foreign nation would be, and brought forward the three opinions concerning such matters, viz.—the theory which holds that we have no more use for a navy comparable to that of the great nations of Europe than we have for a standing army like that of Great Britain, Germany, France or Russia; the stand that the money put into our navy would better have been expended in coast defenses; and lastly that opinion which demands that on land and sea we should be equally powerful to any nation on earth.

It is now over half a century since the guns of this country were turned upon a foreign foe, and this long period of peace has inclined a very large proportion of American citizens to the first named course of reasoning. The middle ground position is held by the coast defense theorists. They believe that with our coast defended by modern fortifications and guns we can almost dispense with a heavy navy altogether. The third party believes in the widest possible display of our naval power. At the present time the only country with which we are likely to become embroiled in strife is Spain, and as a war with the Spanish would be largely a naval one it is therefore of interest to consider what the possibilities of such a war might be.

Since the Maine went down numerous reports have been spread broadcast that Spain is now superior to us as a naval power, and many persons have grave fears as to the outcome of a conflict. Let us see. Since 1883 Congress has authorized the construction of seventy-seven war vessels, at a cost of $134,439,700.10. Sixteen of the vessels have not yet been completed. The vessels authorized since 1883 are as follows: Battleships, first-class, nine; battleships, second-class, two; cruisers, 18; gunboats, 15; harbor defense ram, one; monitors, six; dynamite cruiser, one; torpedo boats, 21; submarine torpedo boat, one; training ships for cadets, two; dispatch boat, one.

Of the sixteen ships of war now under construction, the Secretary of the Navy estimates that all will be completed during the present year except the five battleships, which will probably not be ready for service until the latter part of the coming year. It is, therefore, obvious that the United States is not so powerless upon the seas as some would have it understood.

During the past ten years there have been expended yearly on seacoast fortifications and their armaments and for submarine mines and torpedoes the sum of $40,000,000; our principal seaport towns have thus been put in condition so that, with the aid of the navy, the country could easily resist the attack of any one of the great naval powers of the world.

There is no doubt as to which of the two nations, Spain or the United States, is the stronger from a naval standpoint. In ships and armament we have by far the superior navy. While Spain has more men in her navy, we outnumber her in ships, although she includes some splendid cruisers in her list. Like us, she is adding to her navy, replacing the boats she lost in 1895. She is obliged to have this done, however, abroad, as she has no shipyards of her own. Her limited credit has kept back this work, and it is not likely that the boats now under way would be completed even on "rush" orders before two years from now. Then, too, the classifications made in the tables favor Spain, placing boats in the second class of battle-ships which, although heavier than our sole remaining specimen of that class, could not cope with it.

On paper Spain has about the same number of warships available for fighting as the United States has on the Atlantic coast, eliminating torpedo-boats, which can operate, by the nature of things, only in home waters. But what about the ships themselves? Spain has only one first-class battleship, the Pelayo; we have in the East the Indiana, Iowa, and Massachusetts. Spain strictly has no battleships of the second grade; we have only one now, the Texas, sister ship practically of the Maine. Spain has one iron and useless monitor, the Puig-Cerda; we have four of them, matchless fighters—the Puritan, Terror, Miantonomah, and Amphitrite. Spain has six armored cruisers, all of them practically in splendid fighting trim—the Almirante, Oquendo, Carlos V., Infanta Maria Teresa, Princesa de Asturias, and Vizcaya. We have two such vessels—the New York and Brooklyn. For defensive fighting our four monitors are superior to the three armored cruisers which we seem to lack in comparison with Spain, but, allowing that they are only equal, it may be said that in that class the navies of the two nations are of equal strength.

That throws the comparison back to battleships, of which we have four available, three first-class and one second-class, and of which Spain has only one available, the first-class Pelayo. The armament of the monitors and armored cruisers on both sides is practically equal. The armament of battleships is four to one in our favor, and it is the kind of armament that tells ten to one in a naval battle. So much for strictly fighting ships. We have ten, Spain has six. In protected cruisers Spain has not more than fifteen and we have ten available on the Atlantic coast. The armament of our ten, careful calculation shows, is a little more than equal to that of Spain's fifteen.

Of gunboats Spain seems to have twenty; we have not more than twelve on the North Atlantic coast. Nearly one-half of Spain's gunboats, according to Lord Brassey, the great English authority, are "small steamers from 86 to 348 tons." In the matter of unarmored ships, the commerce destroyers, Spain has a slight advantage in numbers; we have a slight advantage in strength. We could use our torpedo-boats; Spain couldn't get hers over here. We could use our ram Katahdin and our Holland submarine boat; Spain has no such vessels.

In the matter of ships and guns, despite the loss of the Maine the United States has a decided advantage. Battleships are the ones that count in real fighting. But naval battles are not won solely by ships and guns. They are won by men—valorous men, patriotic men—on board the ships. Our ships are manned by seamen nine-tenths of whom are American seamen. Spaniards, of course, man Spain's ships. There you are as to men; Americans on one side and Spaniards on the other. Need more be said?

Stronger than any reason yet given as to the result of a fight between us and Spain is the one to be deduced from the scene of action of war. The war would take place in and around Cuba. We could get coal easily and Spain could not. It's the coal in the bunkers as much if not more than the powder and shot in the magazines that decides naval contests to-day. The man at the stokehole is just as important as the man behind the gun. Spain can't whip us on this side of the Atlantic, that's sure; we shall not fight on the other side.

One Serious Disadvantage.

In a naval war with Spain we would have the disadvantage of a tremendous coast line, east, south and west, to defend. We could do little damage to Spain's commerce, because she has comparatively a small amount, while some of her second, third or fourth-rate boats, while keeping away from our cruisers, could do us almost irreparable damage. The power of the modern ships' guns enables them to do their fighting at comparatively long range. The deadliness of these arms is great enough under those circumstances, as China and Japan know to their cost. What the result would be if several Spanish and United States battleships met in closer quarters may easily be imagined, and it is no exaggeration to say that the chances favor the destruction of nearly everyone engaged.

Modern gunnery and armor-making have kept such steps together that no sooner has a plate been invented which would resist the most penetrating projectile of that time than a gun was speedily devised or an explosive discovered which necessitated the invention of a plate of still greater resisting power. This game has gone on, until the modern ship is a gigantic floating hulk, the propulsion of which through calm and known waters is no easy task, to say nothing of its management in heavy seas or during an engagement, where rapid action is necessary.

But besides the things visible with which modern cruisers must contend is the problem of submarine warfare. The invention of Ericsson has been improved upon, both as regards the ability of warships to eject the deadly torpedo itself and the torpedo-boat capable of submerging itself wholly or in part. Inventors all over the world are working upon the submarine torpedo-boats and rams, and, while they have not attained the success of Jules Verne's fancy, it is believed that if they have not already solved the problem it is a matter of a short time till we shall have a boat capable of submerging itself for a time sufficient to do terrible damage to the largest battleship and still not be in sight during the engagement.

This is not speaking of the established practicability of the sunken torpedo or more to be used in harbors and discharged by electricity from a distance. These last can be utilized for coast defense and are very effective. They could destroy any cruiser anchored or sailing over them, but are only useful under those circumstances.

The war department has guarded with absolute secrecy the plans for all its coast defenses. It is scarcely known outside of army circles that New York is one of the most strongly defended towns in the world. No vessel could get within fifteen miles of the battery without meeting a worse fate than that which befell the Maine.

The entire harbor is thoroughly mined and wires run to underground casemates where the operators work. The harbor is divided into sections and squares each of which is known by a letter or figure. For instance, in case of war, if a Spanish war vessel were sighted, word would be telegraphed from one of the conning towers to the officer in charge of one of the underground casemates near Sandy Hook. The message would be read something like this: "Vizcaya x op 23, 14 S. E."

That would mean that the Vizcaya was then passing over a certain section of the harbor in which was located a mine or a torpedo. The operator would immediately touch a button. The explosion which followed would completely wreck the warship and would doubtless kill all on board.

The work of preparing these mines has been done very secretly, and no one outside of those in charge of the harbor defenses knows where they are. The sunken casemates, too, have been built with caution, and their situation is not known either. The necessity for this caution is apparent when it is remembered that any interference with the wires by the subject of some foreign nation might disturb the work so that none of the mines could be used.

Another great means of defense is in the big disappearing guns, which work as if they have human intelligence. No fort is necessary for these guns. The gunners are absolutely protected by a big parapet. When the gun is at rest, it, too, is concealed behind the parapet, where it is loaded. When firing becomes necessary ponderous machinery raises the big cannon so that its mouth points over the parapet. In thirty seconds the gunners have trained the cannon properly, and an enormous projectile is sent flying ten miles over the sea. Woe to the vessel it strikes! Armor has not yet been made strong enough to stand against the shot fired from these enormous machines.

At present the inner harbor of New York is guarded by two 12-inch, three 10-inch and five 8-inch disappearing guns, as well as thirty-two 12-inch mortars. These are all completed and put in position. Work is now going on for other disappearing guns which will be finished this year. The southern and eastern entrances to the harbor are more fully protected than the inner harbor itself. Here is an armament of 21 12-inch guns on lifts, 15 10-inch and 9 8-inch guns on disappearing carriages, 176 12-inch mortars and many submarine mines operated from five mining casemates.

Most of the work of a defense has been done by the officers at the United States School of Engineers at Willet's Point, New York harbor. Twenty-three officers and 380 enlisted men are stationed at Willet's Point, and their work is mostly with torpedoes and high explosives. Occasionally mines are planted and exploded, just as in regular warfare. Vessels are sent out to try and come without being seen, and mimic war holds full sway.

But New York is not the only c which is well defended. Uncle S may be slow to make war, but he been preparing for it. Big rifled gu on lifts and disappearing carriag within the last three years have be put at the following places:

Portland Head, Portland, Me.
Great Diamond Island, Portland, Me.
Fort Constitution, Portsmouth, N. H.
Grover's cliff, Boston harbor, Mass.
Paddock's island, Boston harbor, Mass.
Long Island head, Boston harbor, Mass.
Dutch island, Narragansett bay, R. I.
Great Gull island, eastern entrance, Long Island sound, N. Y.
Plum island, eastern entrance, Long Island sound, N. Y.
Fort Hancock, New York harbor.
Finn's point, approach to Philadelphia.
North point, approach to Baltimore.
Hawkins point, approach to Baltimore.
North Washington and Sheridan point, approach to Washington.

SUNKEN MORTAR PROTECTING NEW YORK

Fort Coswell, Wilmington, N. C.
Fort Moultrie, Charleston, S. C.
Tybee island, Savannah, Ga.
Fort Morgan, Mobile, Ala.
Fort St. Philip, New Orleans, La.
Fort Point, Galveston, Tex.
Ballast point, San Diego, Cal.
Lime Point ridge, San Francisco harbor.
Fort Stevens, mouth of Columbia river, Washington.
Morrowstone point and Admiralty head.

While the United States has no place as strongly fortified as Cronstadt, yet no one should believe that the coast cities are absolutely defenseless. Foreign warships would receive a warm welcome from any of them. A war with Spain would undoubtedly result in our favor in spite of the great losses which might come to our service, commerce or towns during its progress. We far outnumber Spain in the strength and equipment of our navy and the result would be the dons' defeat and freedom or annexation of Cuba.

THE "DEVIL OF THE SEA"—HOW THE TORPEDO DESTROYS.

A Whitehead torpedo fired from an overhead tube and its progress through the water. On striking the water the torpedo is propelled at tremendous speed by its own engine. In the forward portion of the torpedo is carried an explosive charge of 150 pounds of gun cotton. The mass is exploded by a percussion fuse fitted into the nozzle of the weapon. The torpedo would wreck the strongest ship afloat.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

IF WAR SHOULD COME.

If war should be declared by the United States against Spain, the Chicago Dispatch asserts that there would be some lightning changes in the cabinet. Secretary Sherman would resign and Assistant Secretary Day would probably step into Sherman's shoes, and he would find them useful before long in following in Sherman's footsteps. The bucolic Day is not the man to hold the helm of state in the wild fury of the storm of war.

And the Secretary of the Treasury? Certainly no man anxious to retire the greenbacks and a persistent foe to silver could long continue to preside over the treasury with the demands of war clamoring to be met. Bonds would have to be issued, and silver would have to be coined—nor would the bonds be gold bonds and the silver coined would not be token money. Secretary Gage would have to change his ideas on the money question or change his occupation.

As for Secretary Long? War develops character, and the exigencies of the Coughing Leads to Consumption.

Kemp's Balsam will stop the cough once. Go to your druggist to-day and ge a sample bottle free. Sold in 25 and gle cent bottles. Go at once; delays are dan tant fairs successfully in case of conflict with Spain.

About the only man in the cabinet who could rise to the occasion is the Secretary of Agriculture. He could go right on experimenting with new varieties of catnip without endangering the safety of the nation. But war would require strong men in the cabinet. No wonder the administration is anxious to preserve the peace.

Yields to the Money Power.

From the first, the administration press has tried to make the De Lome incident appear of small importance. It is plain that the hand of the money power is back of all this. The Spanish bondholders fear that the patience of the American people will at last be exhausted and the gold-bought, trust-ridden Republican administration forced to redeem its broken and dishonored platform pledge in behalf of Cuba. Senor De Basc has been recognized as charge d'affaires by this government, in spite of allegations that such a course would not be pursued.

The Washington Times, in discussing this fact, says: "We do not know why the administration view should have changed, but we greatly fear that it was on account of views communicated by Messrs. Rothschild, Hirsch, Bleichroeder, J. P. Morgan and August Belmont. If those representative magnates decide that the great and holy integrity of Spanish bonds will be best subserved by truckling to Spain, nobody need doubt that it will be done." There is little doubt that the surmise of the Times explains the situation. The money power has spoken, and the Republican administration has obeyed.

Where Is John Sherman?

There is notable absence of the name of John Sherman in the current dispatches through the counsel and action of the head of the State Department are now of more moment than at any time since the inauguration of the President who placed him at the head of that department. The work is done by the first assistant, Diplomat Day, and not well done. John Sherman is superannuated and incapable. But that was known when he was appointed, and he was appointed only to make room for the money backer of the administration in the Senate of the United States. That at this important juncture the State Department is without a capable head is the result of McKinley's effort to pay his debt to Mark Hanna.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Army Doing Police Duty.

For years it has been tacitly admitted by the Federal authorities that the army was maintained chiefly, if not wholly, as a safeguard against the American people—that is, as a force filled with latent antagonism to the very people who give it being, authority and support. That this has been the theory of the army authorities is manifested by the maintenance of large bodies of troops near large cities, by the constant practice of street formations, riot drills and the like, and by innumerable indiscreet utterances of army officers, among whom General Miles is easily first in loquacity.—New York Journal.

Patronage an Edged Tool.

Ex-Senator Hill wisely said that "too much patronage is sometimes a dangerous thing." This is the same truth that the late Gen. Butler had in mind when he said that every time a President or other appointing officer gives a man a place he makes "one ingrate and twenty enemies." There is no possible doubt that patronage makes more enemies than friends for the man who has it at disposal. The disappointed always outnumber the appointed, and besides that the appointing officer is always held in some degree responsible for the incapacity and the errors of his appointees.—New York World.

Jefferson Trusted the People.

Thomas Jefferson, in his time, saw that toryism had not been crushed in America by the revolution, and solemnly warned his followers to never lose faith in the people. To keep that faith is the first duty of Democracy. Ignore it and every victory won since 1776 will be lost. That is why the Republican party, the tory organization of America, is a serious menace to popular institutions. Its leaders distrust the people.—Waukegan Democrat.

Secretary Sherman Ignored.

It is known at the national capital that the Secretary presumably holding his place merely in order that Mr. Hanna may occupy a seat in the Senate of the United States is physically infirm, that age and long service have impaired his vigor and his interest in affairs, and this has been permitted for so many months that it excites little or no comment when great concerns of state are not even communicated to him. It is both melancholy and scandalous. Honorable service should not be so requited, and it seems almost incredible that a high-minded executive should so calmly disregard the disapproval, not loud, but deep, with which such indifference to public opinion is observed.—New York Times.

Benefiting the Bondholders.

The administration's dealing with the Kansas Pacific, having agreed to settle a $13,000,000 debt for half that sum, is regarded as a great victory for the jobbers and the corporation. At the last moment, after having stood out for full payment, the Attorney General telegraphed from Washington to accept the half-pay proposition. The effect of this is seen in the advance of Kansas Pacific bonds from below par in ten days to 115.—Pittsburg Post.

Trusts and Unemployed.

American farm and American mills and factories could produce very much more than the entire population could consume if all the workers were employed at good wages. But as long as the trust regime continues, which means periodical stoppage of production and consumption, the solution of the problem of the unemployed will not be brought about.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Dingley Tariff at Work.

During the present month the Government has paid out about $1,000,000 a day more than it has taken in. The revenue from customs has not been equal to the disbursements for the single item of pensions. The deficit is piling up every day. In short, the Dingley tariff seems to work at all points for the confusion of its advocates and supporters.—Boston Post.

Senator Hanna an Incubus.

The most intimate political friends of Mr. Hanna do not seem to be proud of his election. They do not want to publish the means by which it was attained. They seem desirous of allowing the matter to fade away. They have the bird and want to stop the discharge of firearms.—Cincinati Enquirer.

What It Meant.

A witness, giving his testimony as to the details of a fight, was obliged to give frequent explanations of language which the judge and the lawyers were unable to comprehend.

"Well, you honor," he said glibly in response to an inquiry as to the occupation of one Dennis Molloy while the fight was in progress, "Dinnis, he was just sloshin' round."

"What do you mean by 'sloshin' round?" demanded the judge.

"Well, your honor," said the witness, after a pause for reflection, "you see Sam Foggarty and his second cousin, James Lanigan, they clinched and paired off. Is that legil, your honor?"

"I understand what you mean," said the judge, impatiently, "go on."

"Well, now," proceeded the witness, "Pat Doolan and Molke Hanlon they did that same, and so did the Hinnessy twins; but Dinnis, d'ye moind, was in an' around the crowd, and whiniver he caught a man's look on him, he up and out wid his two fists, and cleared a way, and thin on he wint! That's what we call sloshin' round, your honor. It's just knockin' down loose men as ye come to 'em."

CONGRESS

Aside from adoption of the resolution giving the Secretary of the Navy permission to use $200,000 in the work of raising the battle ship Maine, Friday in the House was devoted to a continuation of the debate on the bankruptcy bill. The speakers were Messrs. Sulzer (Dem., N. Y.), Strode (Rep., Neb.), Connolly (Rep., Ill.), Bixey (Dem., Va.), Grosvenor (Rep., O.), Sayers (Dem., Texas) and Ray (Rep., N. Y.) in favor of the bill, and Messrs. Kitchins (Rep., N. C.), Linney (Rep., N. C.), Love (Dem., Miss.), Ball (Dem., Tex.), Henry (Dem., Miss.), Maguire (Dem., Cal.), Bland (Dem., Mo.), Ball (Pop., Colo.), De Armond (Dem., Mo.), Wheeler (Dem., Ala.) and Lloyd (Dem., Mo.) against it. In the Senate the Maine disaster and the Cuban question occupied the entire day.

After four days of consideration the House on Saturday passed the bankruptcy bill reported by the House Committee on Judiciary as a substitute for the Nelson bill passed by the Senate at the extra session last summer. The bill is known as the Henderson bill, and contains both voluntary and involuntary features. It is considered less drastic than the measure passed by the last House by a vote of 157 to 87. The involuntary feature, however, had but 16 majority. On Saturday a motion to strike out the involuntary feature was defeated by a majority of 19, and the bill was passed by a majority of 23, the vote standing, yeas 158, nays 125. Eighteen Republicans voted against the bill and twelve Democrats for it. The Populists, with one exception, voted against it.

Monday was private bill day in the House. The feature of the day was a spirited contest over the bill to pay Newberry College, a Lutheran institution in South Carolina, $15,000 for damages by Federal troops. It was finally passed. On motion of Mr. Bailey, the Democratic leader, the House voted—58 to 35—to observe Washington's birthday by adjourning over until Wednesday, but Mr. Dingley raised the point of no quorum and before further action could be taken the House recessed. For three hours the Senate had under discussion the bill providing for the taking of the twelfth and subsequent censuses. It was amended so as to place the census bureau under the Secretary of the Interior, but the extended discussion which followed disclosed so wide a divergence of views as to the various features of the measure that no further action was taken. A resolution offered by Mr. Allen, directing the Committee on Naval Affairs to make an investigation of the Maine disaster, was adopted without debate.

In the House on Tuesday Mr. Johnson of Indiana made a sensational speech opposing the annexation of Hawaii. Political speeches occupied the rest of the day. The sundry civil bill was before the House. The debate was finished. In the Senate a bill was passed increasing the army by two artillery regiments. In executive session the Cuban question was discussed.

On Wednesday a variety of subjects occupied the attention of the House during the consideration of the sundry civil bill. Mr. Mahany of New York made an attack on the patriotism of some of the social leaders of New York, who, he said, held high revel while the nation was bowed down with grief over the loss of life resulting from the Maine explosion. The Southern members, who have for years been fighting the appropriation for "informers" on illicit distilleries, succeeded in killing the appropriation in committee of the whole, but Chairman Cannon gave notice that he would demand a yea and nay vote in the House. A resolution was adopted inquiring of the Treasury Department what has been done by the United States to prevent the conveyance to the Cubans of articles produced in the United States; also as to the prevention of filibustering. In the Senate the entire day was devoted to debate on the Cuban question. By a vote of 51 to 5, Mr. Allen's proposition to add a belligerency rider to the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill was rejected.

The House disposed of thirty additional pages of the sundry civil appropriation bill on Thursday. The fact that the Government is preparing for contingencies was recognized when Chairman Cannon, who has been laboring to keep down appropriations, accepted without a word of protest an amendment to increase the appropriation to care for the unused machinery at the Springfield arsenal. Resolutions which were objected to a few weeks ago for the appointment of two extra naval cadets to positions in the engineer corps of the navy were also adopted. One of them will fill a vacancy caused by the death of Lieut. Merritt of the Maine. A feature of the Senate's session was the speech of Mr. Spooner (Wisconsin) on the right of Henry W. Corbett to a seat in the Senate from Oregon under appointment of the Governor. Mr. Spooner made a constitutional argument in favor of seating Mr. Corbett. An effort was made to obtain consideration of the Alaskan homestead and railway right of way bill, but on a parliamentary technicality it went over. The resolution offered on Wednesday by Mr. Allen (Nebraska) to appoint a committee of five Senators to investigate the Cuban situation was withdrawn by its author when it was laid before the Senate.

America's Greatest Medicine

Greatest, Because Hood's Sarsaparilla does what all other medicines fail to do. As an instance of its peculiar and unusual curative power, consider the most insidious disease, and the disease which taints the blood of most people, producing incalculable suffering to many, while in others it is a latent fire liable to burst into activity and produce untold misery on the least provocation.

Scrofula is the only ailment to which the human family is subject, of which the above sweeping statement can honestly be made. Now, a medicine that can meet this common enemy of mankind and repeatedly effect the wonderful cures Hood's Sarsaparilla has,—clearly has the right to the title of America's Greatest Medicine.

WHEAT.

40 cts. a Bushel.

With Salzer's new creations in Spring Wheat—to be sown before April 25—you can raise wheat at 40¢ a bushel and make money. How? Why, Salzer's Marvel Wheat has a record of 50 bus. per acre in Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Mich., Ind., etc.

OATS.

209 Bus. Per Acre.

Salzer's Silver Mine Oats still leads the world, with a record right here in Wisconsin of 231 bushels per acre in 1896. What more do you wish? Don't this beat all? You see, Salzer's Seeds are bred up to big yields! ($400 in gold we pay for name of our new Oat wonder).

BARLEY.

173 Bus. Per Acre.

Jno. Breider, Mishicott, Wis., grew, in 1896, 173 bus. of Salzer's Silver King Barley from one measured acre, sworn to by five witnesses. That's immense, but you see Salzer's Seeds are bred to produce! That's why you get such big yields.

CORN.

266 bus. per acre—that's wonderful. Well, Salzer's Seeds are bred to yields!

POTATOES.

1,667 Bus. Per Acre.

We know you can't believe it—it's too big! But Salzer's Seeds are bred to big yields.

GRASSES.

Largest growers of fresh, live Grasses and Clover Seeds in the world—hence our seeds are guaranteed. You can bet on our Clover and Grass Seeds growing! And such yields—6 tons of hay per acre!

VEGETABLES.

ARCHITECTURAL ORNAMENT.

Danger of It Being Overdone If Left to an Uneducated Builder.

In house-building the external ornamentation may safely be left to the competent architect, for when one of these offend it is usually because a particular patron objects to much plainness and wishes to carry out his own fancies. So long as the uneducated builder is permitted to take the lead in designing and constructing our edifices, to the exclusion of the true architect, so long must we fall short of the high standards within our reach.

Ornamentation may be beautiful in itself, and when applied to architecture may not offend the eye at first glance; and yet as one lives within its presence grows tiresome and creates resentment. If one builds a house and its general lines are strong, he should insist that whatever details are introduced of an ornamental character should be the best chosen with regard to gracefulness of form—never so elaborate as to produce a striking contrast with larger masses or plain surface. In design, they may seem attractive, and may be deemed necessary to cover bare spaces of stone or wood; when they are in place, however, they prove a torment to the eye. In the matter of interior finish the same rule holds good. There should be plain casings and door panels, and no elaborate base boards, if the best effects are to be obtained; in particular, one should guard against ornate mantels and the "built in corner" cabinets glittering with glass or mirrors. Plain walls give the best background for pictures.

There is less need for warning against over ornamentation at this time inasmuch as popular taste is steadily moving in the direction of rich and simple effects. Every year brings a notable improvement in architectural style. We here give a design of a suburban house built in a plain and sensible style—no useless ornamentation. It almost deserves the name of villa, but the total absence of ostentation in its external aspect inclines us to the appellation we have bestowed upon it, notwithstanding the villa-like extent of its accommodations. It is within the reach and applicable to the circumstances of many who love convenience without ambitious display, and who prefer dignified plainness to gingerbread ostentation. There is a growing demand for this class of dwellings.

The design illustrating this article can be built for $4,900 complete, with hot air heating and exposed plumbing. Description: General dimensions—Width, including tower, 46 feet; depth, not including bay, 42 feet. Heights of stories—Cellar, 7 feet; first story, 10 feet; second story, 9 feet; attic, 8 feet. Exterior materials—Foundation, stone; walls, roof and veranda enclosure, shingles. Interior finish—Hard white plaster; plaster cornices and centers in parlors, library, dining-room and hall; picture molding in principal rooms; oak floor in dining-room, hall and library; soft wood elsewhere; oak trim in library, dining-room, and main hall, white wood elsewhere; staircase, oak. Colors—All shingles on walls stained sienna; trim,

Ginger Her Tipple.

An unusual form of inebriety was presented for treatment at Bellevue recently. It was that of a woman who cared nothing for alcoholic beverages, but was afflicted with the Jamaica ginger habit. She says she has an uncontrollable desire for ginger, as it produces a stimulating effect, but does not intoxicate her, and she believes she could live on it. She ate little food when she could obtain the drug, and she cared for no other kind of drink. Dr. Carolan placed the woman among the alcholic patients. A curious feature of the case is that when a child she was unusually fond of ginger snaps, and ate them in the way that many girls eat candy.—New York Commercial-Advertiser.

SURVIVES THE VIPER'S BITE.

Only Man Who Ever Lived After Being Wounded by the Reptile.

When the British and African Company's steamer Bonny reached Liverpool recently from west Africa and the Canaries she carried a passenger who is said to be the only man who ever survived the bite of a double-horned viper. This man was F. T. Summers, who was chief engineer of the steamer Ebani. He was at Opobo when he received the bite of the deadly reptile, which was about seven feet long. The natives of Opobo reported a wild elephant in the bush and Mr. Summers accompanied District Commissioner Stein of the Niger coast protectorate in pursuit of the animal. It was while out in the bush that the unfortunate man was attacked by the serpent.

The snake, which made a dash at Summers unobserved, fixed its fangs in the ankle of the right boot. After getting free Summers, who showed great pluck, managed with the aid of his companion to dispatch the viper by blowing its head off. Immediately after being bitten Summers' leg commenced to swell and he was carried with all speed possible to the consulate. In less than an hour the leg was three times its natural size and the clothing had to be cut from Summers' body.

Dr. Thompson of the protectorate, who treated the injury, twice injected into the wound either iodine or bromide of potassium. The poison of the viper had entered Summer's body and even the doctor thought death would take place within nine hours.

The chiefs and natives who were consulted by the doctor to see if they knew of any native antidote said all persons previously bitten had died in about an hour. Summers was eleven days in the consulate receiving the unremitting attention of Dr. Thompson, and although he was at times delirious he pulled through. His recovery created great astonishment and Dr. Thompson has written to a medical journal an account of his treatment of the bite.

HE COULD FORGIVE HER.

For in His Opinion Mrs. Siddons Did Not Marry an Actor.

Mrs. Siddons, the actress, was born in 1755, at the Shoulder of Mutton Inn, Breton, South Wales, of parents connected with the theater, her father, Roger Kemble, being a strolling manager.

The child, Sarah, was reared in a theatrical atmosphere, and at 10 she was playing Ariel.

As she grew up she became very beautiful and had many admirers, among whom was Henry Siddons, a young actor in her father's company, who had little difficulty in winning the girl's heart.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemble had made up their minds that Sarah should not marry in the profession, in consequence of which they strenuously opposed the marriage, and young Siddons, in a fit of retaliatory humor, composed a song detailing their opposition and his trials, which brought about his speedy dismissal from the company.

Sarah left the company, too, and hired out as lady's maid in Warwickshire for two years.

During this time the lovers carried on a lively correspondence and finally, gaining the reluctant consent of the Kembles, were married at Trinity Church, Coventry, in 1773, when Sarah was 18.

It is said that Mr. Kemble told her if she ever married an actor it would make him discard her forever. After her marriage he said: "I may forgive you without breaking my word, for you have certainly not married 'an actor,' whatever the gentleman himself may think is his vocation."

This is on authority of Lady Eleanor Butler, who knew the persons.

The Care of House Ferns.

In the house where ferns are kept induce, by means of evaporation, syringing or spraying, as much moisture to the air as possible, for they generally do not successfully withstand a dry, parching atmosphere. For the purpose of retaining a moist air about the plant Wardian cases or ferneries are often used with good success, or a glass bell placed over the plant part of the time. It is well to bear in mind, also, that ferns (with the exception of the hardy upland sorts) grow in moist, shaded places. It is therefore essential that they never dry out, and that they be kept in partial shade. It is not wise, however, to soak the plants daily, whether needed or not. When new fronds are unfurling, avoid placing the plant in a position where it will be exposed to the full power of the sunlight, as it will sometimes burn or blast the tender young fronds.—Woman's Home Companion.

Poached Eggs with Tomato Sauce.

Where eggs must be served in place of meat for a meal like dinner it is well to use an acid vegetable of some kind as a sauce. Put half a can of strained tomatoes in a saucepan; add a slice of onion, a bay leaf and a sprig of celery. Cover, simmer gently for five minutes, strain again; add two tablespoonfuls of butter and two tablespoonfuls of flour that you have rubbed to a smooth paste. Stir constantly until boiling; add a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, and stand aside until wanted. Cover a platter with squares of bread nicely toasted. Then poach the eggs, slip them on top of the toast, pour around them the tomato sauce, and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A VIGOROUS BATTLE.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

The following is a statement of facts by a veteran of the late war. No comrade will need further proof than their friend's own words, as here given.

Squire John Castor, of Newpoint, Ind., is the narrator, and an honest, respected citizen he is, too. He said: "I have been troubled with rheumatism in all my joints ever since I went to the war. It was brought on by my exposure there. It came on me gradually, and kept getting worse until I was unable to do any work. I tried several physicians, but they did me no good. They said my trouble was rheumatism resulting in disease of the heart, and that there was no cure for it. Nevertheless I had lived and fought the disease for thirty years, and did not intend to die, simply because they said I must, so I hunted up some remedies for myself, and finally happened on Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I asked some of my neighbors about the medicine, for it had been used by several persons in the community, and they recommended it very highly. I procured a box. The pills helped me right away, and I continued taking them. I commenced taking them last fall, and finished the sixth box a few months ago. I am not bothered with the rheumatism now—the medicine has cured me. I can most certainly recommend Dr. Williams' Pills.

These pills are not only good for rheumatism, but are valuable for any disease that arises from impoverished, or bad blood. They do not act on the bowels.

The Engineer's Duty.

Passenger (at depot)—Can I take a train from here to St. Louis?

Gateman—You'll have to see the superintendent of the company about that.

Passenger—Why, what has he got to do with my taking a train?

Gateman—He employs all the engineers.

NO KLONDYKE FOR ME!

Thus says E. Walters, Le Raysville, Pa., who grew (sworn to) 252 bushels Salzer's corn per acre. That means 25,200 bushels on 100 acres at 30 cents a bushel, equals $7,560. That is better than a prospective gold mine. Salzer pays $400 in gold for best name for his 17-inch corn and oats prodigy. You can win. Seed potatoes only $1.50 a barrel.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable, and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has made great and steady progress in the material improvement of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in nowise neglected; in fact, the success of this road has inured to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvement of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of strengthening the roadway, bridges, and other accessories, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new coaches have been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and everything has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of this road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickel Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining-car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminated by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated by steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country, and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating.

Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.

A BOON FOR SUFFERERS.

A Remedy Which Has Cured More than 1,000,000 People.

"5 Drops" is the name of a powerful remedy which is guaranteed to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, catarrh, asthma, la grippe and kindred ailments. The company is entirely safe in making the guarantee, because every month they receive thousands of grateful letters from those who were sufferers, but have never received one complaint. The effect of "5 Drops" is felt at once. James Williams of Regent, Ill., writes on Nov. 12, 1897: "My wife has been suffering two years with rheumatism. She used about one bottle of '5 Drops,' and can now go without her crutches." To more extensively advertise the merits of this remedy the producers will for the next thirty days send out 100,000 of their sample bottles of this positive cure for 25 cents a bottle by mail prepaid. Large bottle, 300 doses, $1 (for thirty days 3 bottles $2.50). Those suffering should write to the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Company, 167-169 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and take advantage of this generous offer. This company is reliable and promptly fill every order.

ALABASTINE

ALABASTINE IS WHAT?

Alabastine is a durable and natural coating for walls and ceilings, entirely different from all kalsomine preparations, made ready for use in white or twelve beautiful tints by the simple addition of water (latest make being adapted to mix with cold water), put up in dry powder form, in 5 pound packages, with full directions on every package.

WHAT ARE KALSOMINES?

Kalsomines are cheap temporary preparations manufactured from chalks, clays, whiting, etc., are stuck on the wall with decaying animal glue. Alabastine is a cement, which goes through a process of setting, hardens with age, can be recoated and redecorated from time to time, without having to wash and scrape off its old coats before renewing.

CAUTION.

Consumers in buying Alabastine should see that the goods are in packages and properly labeled. If any dealer tells you that he can sell you the same thing as Alabastine, or something just as good, he either is not posted or is trying to deceive you, offering something that he has bought cheap and is trying to sell on Alabastine's demands, probably without realizing the damage that it will be to you to get a poor kalsomine preparation on your walls.

A few dealers have tried to build up a demand on a kalsomine that is put up in a loosely packed four-pound package, which they buy by the pound for four pounds, and try to sell for a five-pound package, the same as a package of Alabastine. Insist on having Alabastine in packages and properly labeled, and you will get satisfactory results and beautiful walls.

WANT A CHANGE.

How many women are saying, "Oh, I want a change in my wall decorations; I am tired of wall paper." How many dealers are saying, "Oh, what a nuisance the wall paper business has become; how much time and investment it takes and how little the profit!" How many painters and decorators who have lent their influence to push forward the wall paper craze now find their occupation gone. To all such we would say, Use, sell and advocate the durable cold water Alabastine.

Alabastine can be used on either plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas. Is absolutely fireproof in its nature, is durable, and any one can brush it on. Alabastine is sold by druggists and paint dealers everywhere. Ask your dealer for card of tints.

TO DEALERS.

Do not buy a law suit or an injunction with cheap kalsomines, which are all imitations of Alabastine. Dealers assume the risk of a suit for damages by selling an infringement. Alabastine Company own the right, covered by letters patent, to make and sell wall coatings adapted to be mixed with cold water.

AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA

Some of Her Enterprising Dealers.

THE LINE OF GOODS CARIED

Reliable Dealers and Worthy of Your Patronage.

This handsome little city with its electric lights, water works and, other modern advantages, is county seat of DeKalb County Indiana. It has many advantages for manufacturers, as it is upon the following three railroads. The Baltimore & Ohio main line, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Fort Wayne Division, and the Wabash, St. Louis & Detroit Line.

The shipping facilities at Auburn Junction are as good as those at any point in this state. New industries such as a starch factory, beet sugar factory, clothing factory and etc would thrive here. This is a city of considerable manufacturing industry already. It has several wind mill factories stove works, wood working establishments, Flouring mills and three large carriage factories, large foundry, saw mills, etc.

As a Farmers Market for Grain, Stock Produce, Etc.

This place has no superior in Northern Indiana, Farmers for many miles around avail themselves of the many privileges enjoyed at Auburn to sell all the products of the farm from poultry and stock, to grain, fruit, vegetables, etc. The highest market prices are paid here for anything and everything the farmers raise.

Likewise the opportunities for purchasing goods are better at Auburn than anywhere else we know of. The following merchants are especially commendable as liberal and reliable dealers.

FRANK FANNING, PRINCESS STORE, is a decidedly popular dealer in groceries here. He has extra fine assortments of fancy and staple groceries fine teas, coffees, spices, canned fruits vegetables provisions, dining room necessities, fine queensware to please the most fastidious customer, handkerchiefs, stamped goods, standard stationery notions etc, He has a large stock which affords customers good advantages and prices as low as the markets will afford. This is a tried and true dealer who has won many friends and customers by transacting business in a straight forward manner. This enterprising and well appreciated business gentleman has the elements to produce success. He takes pride in extending all the advantages possible and consistent with mercantile progress; thus giving unexcelled opportunities to all who patronize his line, He is a reliable dealer whose headquarters should be seen for good tramactions.

F. E. DAVENPORT.

Dealer in drugs, chemicals, pharmaceutical preparations, druggist's sundries, all the new remedies used in medical science; also all proprietary medicines of acknowledged merit, a large variety perfumery, toilet articles, physicians, supplies, confections, smokers supplies, wall paper etc. The prescription department is under the immediate supervision of this competent and experienced pharmacist, who alone handles and fills all perscription With the constant adulteration of goods in this line, when an establishment is found that carries strictly pure goods, it always enjoys the best of patronage of its locality, and this is true of this establishment, carrying only the finest line of goods in the market, and occupies the leading position it justly deserves. He is a dealer of enterprise capability and correct business experience who makes many friends and has been established here successfully for thirty years.

C. L. BAUER, MODEL BAKERY

Has a firstclass bakery which is highly appreciated. He always has on hands choice invoices of fresh bread, pies, buns, cake, confections etc. He is a fair and square citizen who is experienced in this business and invariably gives satisfaction. His establishment is neat and inviting to all classes of people and he is a highly esteemeddeal er to patronize. This competent and reliable dealer has pleasant modes of conducting business. He gives his customers the benefit of all the best to be had in his lines, He enjoys a widespread reputation for appropriate dealings. Now is an excellent time to see this popular citizen.

MESSRS. RAUT & CO.

Dealears in boots and shoes have a model establishment here. Those who want the finest shoes, boots, childrens shoes, pedal adornments, and everything from rubbers and overshoes to felt boots, find this a most satisfactory place to do their trading as this firm deals with a constant intention to giving their customers the most substantial and desirable merchandise in his line. They are regarded by the trade which they represent as important factors in selling new styles and the most approved goods. At this season, during the coming week will be a good time to visit this admirable store and secure such goods as you desire in this class of merchandise. They always however deal upon honor and will render satisfactory dealings toall.

MESSRS FISCHLER & SON.

Proprietors of a drug store. No branch of business is more important to the community at large than that of the druggist and this house is one of its most prominent representatives. It is always supplied with a full and comprehensive line of pure drugs, chemicals, perfumes, toilet articles, novelties and a complete stock of all the proprietary remedies of acknowledged merit and standard reputation; instruments, druggists' sundries and physicians' supplies. This house is endorsed by the leading physicians on account of the reliability and purity of its drugs and scientific service of its prescription dedepartment, where the utmost caution is taken in compounding medicines of all kinds; also a stock of wall paper, books and standard stationery on hand. The proprietors are correct business gentlemen who make many friends. They have been pharmacists for years and in business here for three years.

MR. JOHN L. DAVIS.

Mr. John L. Davis has a successful and appreciated hardware establishment here. This is a good place for persons to come when they desire satisfactory and up-to-date stoves, heavy hardware mechaics and builders hardware and everything useful and ornamental from tin, sheet iron, copper, japanned and granite wares to metallic merchandise in general, paints oils, etc. It is now a favorable time to call and see this popular dealer in regard to anything you need from shovles to wire fencing.

DR. F. W. HOFFMAN.

Dr. F. W. Hoffman has his dental parlors in this place. He is a well read professional gentleman who has had varied culture. He gives the people who patronize him, superior advantages. All who desire extracting, filling plate and bridge work or dentistry in general, find this a dentist who has many merits. He is liberal in his prices and correct in his modes, being an up-to-date professional gentleman. He enjoys a popular and efficient career in in this line and renders himself a public spirited citizen. Now is a good time to see him and have your teeth attended to.

MR. W. C NCNABB.

The obliging and efficient proprietor of two attractive meat markets is successful in pleasing his customers. He keeps fresh, salt and smoked meats sausages and meat merchandise of all kinds adapted to the wants of the people of this vicinity. These are good markets to patronize and the proprietor is an obliging and discreet market man who maintains everything meritorious and his transactions are always reliable.

W. H. NUSBAUM.

W. H. Nusbaum is a laudable professional gentleman who conducts a general practice of medicine and surgery in this place and the surrounding region. This gentleman occupies a congratulatory prominence af a reliable physician and surgeon. He is at all times ready to attend to calls and is both well read and skillful. He is a graduate of the Miami Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio.

MR. M. E. GARRETT.

Manufacturer of the Quick Work Washing powder which has won widespread reputation for Mr. Garrett and he is a popular proprietor of an excellent grocery here. He has superior assortments of fresh, fancy and staple groceries, fine teas, aromatic coffees, spices, canned and bottled goods vegetables, confections, dining necessities etc He has an unparalelled stock which affords customers good advantages and prices as low as the market will afford. This store has determined that the renown it has won by hard work and honest dealing shall be maintained and is confident that with already increased facilities and ample experience it will continue to attract the favorable notice and support of the public. If it is straight forward dealing you are looking for you cannot find a better house to trade than at M. E. Garret's.

Bad Blood Is a Good Thing

to be rid of, because bad blood is the breeding place of disfiguring and dangerous diseases. Is your blood bad? It is if you are plagued by pimples or bothered by boils, if your skin is blotched by eruptions or your body eaten by sores and ulcers. You can have good blood, which is pure blood, if you want it. You can be rid of pimples, boils, blotches, sores and ulcers. How? By the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It is the radical remedy for all diseases originating in the blood. Read the evidence:

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me by my physician as a blood purifier. When I began taking it I had boils all over my body. One bottle cured me."—BONNER CRAFT, Wesson, Miss.

"After six years' suffering from blood poison, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and although I have used only three bottles of this great medicine, the sores have nearly all disappeared."—A. A. MANNING, Houston, Texas.

WRONG AGAIN.

The Waterloo Press falls into the same old error in claiming there was a shortage in the accounts of the late Treasurer Hines "a part of which has not been accounted for." As we have already shown, there was no shortage. The money belonging to the county, was deposited in banks, and was at once turned over to the county, as soon as Expert Ernst had fixed the amount that belonged to the county. Ernst showed that there was about $50 000 be turned over. This was at once done, about half being in road receipts etc, and the other half in cash. We do not see how a better settlement could be made. If this is not a correct statement of the facts, we would ask the Press to state what is, and give authority. Our authority is the late treasurer's son, Dr. F. M. Hines of this place, who settled up the matter as soon after his father's death, as a correct balance could be found by an experienced and disinterested party. This was done by Mr. Ernst, and he no doubt found all there was to settle. If there were unsettled accounts outside of this, the new treasurer should take them and settle them. And if any unsettled accounts that were not found by Mr. Ernst should come up against the estate of the ex-treasurer, a thing that might happen with anyone, the estate is no doubt perfectly willing to make it right. But we object to these irresponsible statements charging "shortage" as if it were a criminal transaction, where the records show that every penny was accounted for as far as even an expert could then find.

LION LOOSE.

DeKalb county is not often bothered with a real, live lion, but last night gave us a sensation of that very sort. The east bound evening train that passes the Junction at 8:05, took on at Chicago, among a miscellaneous lot of baggage and express, a full grown lion, twelve years old. Some time after leaving the city the clerks in the baggage car, noticed the lion trying to break out of the box in which he was being shipped to his destination at Pittsburg, and just as he was getting loose, they scrambled out and locking the door behind them, took seats in the rear passenger coach, as far from the scene of war as possible And the lion had the car all to himself. But whenever a passenger would get off he could not get his baggage, and the passengers, soon reaching the Junction most of them got off and waited to take 11:41 train. And the lion had the train largely to himself. We presume that at Pittsburg he was chloroformed, and so taken out safely.

THE AUTOPSY.

Yesterday afternoon, the autopsy on the late B. C. Zeigler was had, in the presence of about all the physicians in town. It was from the time he first took sick, a serious question as to what was the nature of his disease. It was plain that the trouble was serious, and as it developed, it was also seen that it was some sort of trouble with the liver or its associate parts. It finally developed into an appearance of being caused by gall stones and one of these objects at least was secured. After his death it was decided to have an autopsy in order to learn just to what extent these gall stones had to do with the trouble and whether others could be found. Dr. Nusbaum, the physician in charge of the case makes the following report:

"In the matter of the autopsy of Benjamin Zeigler, we found the following condiditions:

The liver was greatly enlarged, weighing six and one fourth pounds; gall bladder full and distended with gall, gall duct was closed up by inflammatory adhesions so that the bile from the liver could not pass out throught the proper channel. There were numerous pus cavities throughout the entire liver; also a large abscess in the right illeac regon. Death was due to blood poisoning from the absorption of pus."

There were other indication confirming the above view and we understand those present agree in it. It was a desperate case from the first and from the condition in which they found the organs, it is not likely that he could have been saved by any treatment, and not even by a surgical operation. But the autopsy will satisfy his friends as well as the physicians and no doubt add something to science The autopsy was full and complete and carefully made lasting from 3:30 to 5 p. m.

TAX DODGING.

President Harrison in his speech at Chicago, on Washington's birthday, was very severe on the practice that wealthy men and wealthy corporations have of dodging their taxes. He showed the gross wrong that enables the man who owns thousands and millions in stocks, bonds and other securities and manages to pay no taxes on them. The Ex-president is right. It is a great wrong and a serious question in political economy. It should be righted in some way. But it appears to be a difficult thing to get at, in the usual course of state legislation, and by the methods through which the several states collect their ordinary taxes. The ingenious bondholder seems able to find a loop hole through which to escape paying the just debts he owes to the government, state or national, that protects him. But the man of small means, or the one whose chief wealth is in lands and buildings must pay in full. But right here, Mr. Harrison should not forget that the earnest effort of the last democratic congress to secure a national law that would tend to lessen this evil, was opposed and finally kicked out by the efforts of the party to which he belongs. We refer to the Income tax law passed by congress This law would have brought in wealthy men like the Vanderbilts and the Astors, and made them pay a United States tax on their bonds, railway stocks and similar securities. There are thousands of men of great means who hold such stocks and some of them have nearly all their wealth in that form. But the most of them pay very little tax on such property. In fact, some of these men purposely go abroad to live so they may avoid paying taxes on this property under state laws. The Income Tax, by the general government would probably have caught them and compelled them to pay to the government if not to the state. A few paid without protest, a few paid under protest. But the greater number refused to pay and allowed themselves to be sued. The matter finally reached the supreme court of the United States and at first the government had a majority of the judges. But suddenly one of the judges flopped to the other side, giving a bare majority against the constitutionality of the law. This ended it and the wealthy kickers went free. More than that, the government had to pay back what it had already collected. Now if Mr. Harrison and his party want these bonds and these corporations taxed, they can come over and assist the democrats to pass such a law once more and in such a way that no biased supreme court can kill it The people have the the power to right this great wrong. But it cannot be done by fine speeches.

OBITUARY.

Ben C. Ziegler, son of J. B. and R. J. Ziegler, was born near Perryville, Ashland county, Ohio, Dec. 4, 1852, and departed this life at his home in Auburn last Wednesday morning, Feb. 23, 1898; at the age of 45 years, 2 months and 19 days. When a young boy at home, he was a faithful attendant of the Sunday school and of St. John's Lutheran church in Perryville. As he grew older in life he gradually drifted away from these services, into the ways of the world. While at home Ben was a loving and obedient son, and even to the day of his death, he had a deep love for his old home, and above all, he dearly loved his mother, who stood by his side in the last struggles of life. The young man who loves his parents has something good within him. Mr Ziegler remained single until 9 years ago, when he was united in marriage to Miss Eunice Lockwood. To this union was born one child After their marriage they settled down in their home in Auburn on VanBuren street, where they have since lived. Ben possessed many noble qualities of life and charncter, which are not to be despised by anyone. He provided well for his family, and was an affectionate husband. He was generous toward his friends, and genial in his association with his fellows. He was ambitious, economical, industrious and honest. Mr. Ziegler was initiated into the order of the Knights of Pythias of Auburn Lodge No. 191, Dec. 9, 1892, of which lodge he was a member at his death. Brother Knights, as we are today to lay in the grave the body of one who has fallen out of the ranks, let us forget his faults and cherish his virtues. May the good that we have found in his life, ever keep green his memory. As the hand of death has been felt again in our midst, we are reminded of the solemn fact, that soon it will be our turn. Let each one live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, so that when the summons comes we may be ready.

Ben leaves to morn his death, a wife and son 8 years old; a mother and father, one sister and brother. In his friends he placed implicit confidence, and during his last illness appreciated their care and help. If we would cheer our friends with our kind ministration, we must do that while they live.

The funeral services were conducted from the Lutheran church at Auburn on Friday at 2 p. m., Feb. 25, 1898. Interment took place in Woodlawn cemetery.

SAGINAW'S TURN.

Bert. Ellis, the Best Known Traveling Man in the Valley, Talks on a SUBJECT OF PUBLIC INTEREST.

SAGINAW MICH.—Mr. A. G. Ellis, of this city, is probably the best known traveling man in Michigan. Nearly every one in Saginaw Valley knows "Bert" Ellis. For twenty years he has carried his samples and good nature to his many merchant friends, who are always glad to see him. But Mr. Ellis had trouble the same as other people. Twenty years of traveling, hardly two meals in the same place, or twice in the same bed, called at all hours of the night to make the next town, smoking probably to excess, are conditions which injured Mr. Ellis's health. He became nervous, his sleep broken, and restless; his stomach troublesome; his heart's action irregular, and his entire system debilitated. In speaking recently with your correspondent, Mr. Ellis said: "As the troubles I mentioned became more aggravating I decided to use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. The improvement in my condition was remarkable. I was able to secure restful sleep, my nervousness was overcome, stomach trouble corrected; heart's action became regular: in fact I became as well as ever, even in the face of the fact that I still smoke and continued to travel."

Mr. Ellis's experience is similar to thousands of traveling men and others who smoke to excess and are irregular and indiscreet in diet and sleep. There can only be one result—debilitated nerves. It is equally true that there is only one successful method of correcting such conditions.—Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer.

JUNCTION BUSES, ETC.

Auburn is not the only town that runs a regular bus to the Junction. Garrett does the same thing. A bus from that place comes to the Junction regularly at 11:30 a. m., at 3 p. m. and at 5:30 p. m. The main object is to meet the Lake Shore trains. There is no such thing at the Junction now as making connection on trains Each road runs to suit itself. The Wabash west bound 11:45 train gets there 35 minutes before the train goes north on the Lake Shore, but not many passengers care to go that way. And it gets there a little to late for the west bound B. & O. About an hour after this last train there is one going east on the B. & O. And so on through the 24 hours there is no good connection, so Garrett liverymen send a covered rig over at the hours mentioned. The charge to Garrett is the same as on the Auburn buses 25 cents.

THE DICOVERY OF THE DAY

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport La., says: "Dr. Kings New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz, writes: "Dr, King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs and Colds I cannot say enough for its merits." Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and today stands at the head. It never disappoints. THERE WERE OTHERS.

But The Maine Was The Worst Case of All.

If the warship Maine was really destroyed by the Spaniards, it is the most provoking and aggravated case on record The loss of life 258, was terrible nothing like it ever happened to a warship before, if we except the accident to the British cruiser Victoria, when another British cruiser, the Camperdown, ran into her and sent her to the bottom. But in that case there was no cause of national quarrel. But in this case, whether done by Spaniards or no it will always be looked on with suspicion and distrust by the Americans, at least. But in our own life as a nawe have had several unpleasant experiences and such as left no doubt as to the parties to blame. We note some of these.

THE PHILADELPHIA.

The United States warship, Philadelphia, with several other armed vessels was sent to Tripoli in 1803 to see if that piratical people would not stop capturing our merchant vessels. The Philadelphia drifted onto a rock in the harbor and the Tripolitans took advantage of her helpless state and captured her making slaves of her crew. Our men got even by driving the fellows off the ship and blowing her to pieces. The crew was got home a year later.

THE CHESAPEAKE.

In 1807 the British claimed the right to search any vessel they came across, giving an excuse, that she might have runaway British sailors on board. They fired on, stopped and searched many private vessels, but in June that year, met the U. S. warship Chesapeake, of Virginia, and pretending the darkness kept them from seeing who she was, fired a broadside into her, killing several. The Chesapeake, not dreaming of trouble, was not in shape to resist. Four alleged British sailors were found on her President Madison protested and gave out that no British cruisers would be allowed to enter our harbors. The British governmont promptly disavowed the act, and without a request kicked out their commander and paid a large sum to support the families of those killed.

THE WATER WITCH.

In 1858 this U. S. vessel was making soundings in the several rivers of Paraguay with a view to make navigation safer, when the president of that country objected and ordered troops to fire on her. One man was killed and several wounded. We promptly sent a fleet there and every possible reparation was at once made by the frightened president, including $10,000 for the killed and injured.

THE PROMETHEUS,

This ship was on duty along the coasts of South and Central America She put in for a few days into the habor of Greytown, Central America. While lying there, the British ship Express sent a broadside into her, for reasons, that have never been clearly given. The United States demanded an apology and it was given fully, but no money damages.

THE BLACK WARRIOR.

In 1854, an American merchant vessel, the Black Warrior, was unloading her cargo at Havana. The Spaniards seized her and her cargo, claiming she had violated some uncertain customs law. We obliged them to give her up and apologize. We have had trouble with Spain in regard to Cuba for fifty years.

In 1854, Great Britain's agent began enlisting men in the United States to assist in fighting the Russians in the Crimea. We objected and there was a quarrel. We asked the Queen to call her minister home. She refused, and President Pierce made him leave. We have had several later troubles, all of which are fresh to our readers.

Is your hair Green?

It's only another way of asking, is your hair growing? For green means growing. You can MAKE hair grow by using

Ayer's Hair Vigor

After Uncle Sam

It is well known that Anderson business men have paid out vast sums to get various manufacturing plants to locate there. Now she is after a U. S. plant. The Fort Wayne News says:

As a remarkable evidence of the pluck of Anderson, Ind., business men in going after manufacturing institutions we call attention to a communication of theirs to the Secretary of the Navy, wherein they offer Uncle Sam the following inducements to build a ship armor plant in their city: "$50,000 in cash, 200 acres of land adjacent to the city, driven wells to supply all the water needed, 50 producing gas wells that will supply fuel to the equivalent of 5,000 tons of coal daily, and to connect the works with all the city's railroads by suitable switches." Their offer has been laid before congress.

ALARMING INCREASE

Nine Tenths of the American People Suffer From Indigestion and Dyspepsia

Dyspepsia has become known as a disease of civilization. It has become domesticated in America and the people threaten to monopolize it. Few disorders inflict upon their victims greater suffering, and statistics prove that a majority of the ills have this disease as their origin. You may have only a slight attack of dyspepsia or indigestion, but without immediate treatment your case is positive to eventually terminate into a chronic case, if not something worse, a rheumatism and many blood diseases and even insanity are directly traceable to a diseased stomach—dyspepsia.

If you are a dyspeptic, don't suffer another day, for there is a new and wonderful remedy sold by any druggist in your city, known as Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure, that will cure any case of indigestion or dyspepsia. To prove the sincerity of this statement your druggist is authorized to refund your money if the remedy is not as represented. Thousands of cases have been cured over the United States, and The Stone Drug Co., of Elkhart, Ind., has such confidence in this remedy they stand ready to refund through the druggist any purchaser who is not pleased

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is prepared in tablets, and is positively the only true method in treating diseased stomachs. The tablets are pleasing to the taste, contain neither opiates or dangerous drugs, and may be taken by the smallest infant without injury. The first dose will afford relief and before many days' continued use the patient will find in this new system of treatment a cure rapidly approaching.

Mr. S. E. Boisington, of Auburn, Ind., says: "I suffered for seven years any them distresses of dyspepsia, and owe my cure solely to Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure.

Druggists all sell Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure for 50 cents per box. Always look for the postrait of Dr. Stone on back of box. Sent prepared by addressing the Stone Drug Co., Elkhart, Ind.

MARL AT SYRACUSE.

(Goshen Democrat)

Lawyer Omar F. Neff, of Milford was in the city today. He says an investigation of a Cleveland expert shows an endless quantity of marl at Wawasee and that there is enough of this material of a fine quality to supply the whole country with Portland cement. Options have been secured on all the available land in the vicinity and a factory will be located there the coming summer. The factory will employ 400 operatives and turn out 1,500 barrels of cement daily.

WHO PAYS THE DUTY?

Is It the Foreigner or the American Consumer?

An exchange has the following, which those who believe the foreigner pays the duty, should study.

Just before the Dingley tariff law passed a syndicate of Botonians purchased a mineral spring near Toronto, intending to ship the water into this country under the low tariff of the Wilson bill. The Dingley bill, however placed a duty of twenty-four cents a gallon upon all imported waters. This was practically prohibitory and the mineal water investment seemed doomed. But it did not take the Boston men long to make a discovery. They found that Mr. Dingley had retained ice on the free list and they also proved by test that it did not injure the medical properties of the water in coming over the Canadian border and into this country in solid chunks It pays less freight than before and it does not require casks that are worth $4 piece. The syndicate is now saving twenty-five cents on every gallon.

NO PAY—NO CURE

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price 50c. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

LOVELY DINNER PARTY.

Mrs. Judge Roby gave a dinner party today to a number of her lady friends at her residence on south Main street. It was one of the most pleasant social functions of the seasons and greatly appreciated by the guests. The dinner was elaborate and daintily served and the host won golden opinions from all. Among the ladies present were:

From town: Mrs. John Robbins, Mrs. A. J. Ralston and Miss Helen Ralston.

From Angola: Mrs. John W. Nyce Mrs. Ward Woodhull, Mrs. C. H. Jackson, Mrs. Warren Moss, Mrs H. K. Scott, Mrs. A, Masters and Miss Elizabeth McConnell.

TRIED AND TRUE

Thousands have tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation, indigestion and sick headache and have found it true to the claim made for is viz: that it is the best remedy now before the good people for the relief of stomach troubles Trial sizes 10c, large sizes 50c and $1 of F. E. Davenport, druggist.

EARLY NEWSPAPERS.

G. W. Roof in the Avilla News, gives some interesting items as to the early newspapers of this section. He says the various papers were established in the following years:

Fort Wayne Sentinel	1833
Columbia City Post	1854
Waterloo Press	1859
Angola Republican	1856
LaGrange Standard	1857
Kendallville Standard	1863

But there had been a paper at Kendallville a short time in 1849, the "Noble County Star." It winked out after a few weeks. Then it gives the history of the various early papers started at Albion. The whole article is very interesting.

WANTS $10,000.

Andrew Pollock, who had an arm torn off last year by the premature discharge of a cannon, has sued the men he was helping on the occasion, for $10,000. They were firing a salute on the Fourth of July at Lake Side Park at the north edge of Warsaw, and Andy being an old soldier, was asked to help the two men. He was pushing the load into the gun when the man who was holding the vent got careless and his thumb slipped to one side, letting the air in and the gun was discharged. It blew off Andy's arm and injured him otherwise. The court at Warsaw will try the case.

DIDN'T GO.

Auburn came near losing one of her best citizens last week. It will be remembered that the COURIER spoke of Oscar Hoffman's trip to Indianapolis. Well, he had gone there in reply to a letter from Purdue Talversity, recommending him to a position as instructor in the Boys' Industrial School at Indianapolis. They wanted a man in the mechanical department, to teach the boys in that line of work. Mr. Hoffman went and they liked his appearance. He was put through an examination, and they decided he was just the man they needed Then they took him over the buildings and departments and showed him where he would have his room, etc. He noticed the small accommodations set apart for him and told them it would not do. They asked why. He said "Where will I put my wife?" And when they found he was married, they saw, they had no suitable accommodation. And he of course did not care to be out of the institution while his wife lived in the city. So he came home and will continue his work as draughtsman and designer for the Zimmerman Company. He is a man of ability and skill in the line he has chosen and will always be able to get and hold good employment. We are glad he is to stay here.

Free of Charge to Sufferers.

Cut this out and take it to your druggist and get a a sample bottle free of Dr. King's New Discovery, for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. They do not ask you to buy before trying. This will show you the great merits of this truly wonderful remedy, and show you what can be accomplished by the regular size bottle. This is no experiment, and would be disastrous to the proprietors, did they not know it would invariably cure. Many of the best physicians are now using it in their practice with great results, and are relying on it in most severe cases. It is guaranteed. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Regular size 50 cents and $1.00.

TABLE TALK.

In the March winds a bit of good fortune will be blown into all households where "Table Talk" finds its way, for the March issue is very bright, attractive and helpful to mothers, housekeepers and home-makers. HE WAS 75.

Ex-Sheriff J. C St. Clair, was 75 years old today, and a number of the children and relatives gathered to do him honor. It was at his present home the residence of Sheriff Stroh who is a son-in-law. The others present were C. H. Pommert and wife, and their boys, Nevin, Frank and Irvin; Mrs. Wes St. Clair of Bethel, Mich., Al St. Clair and wife, Daniel Maggins and wife and Sheriff Stroh and wife. It was a pleasant meeting, but Mr. St, Clair is in feeble health.

SHOT WITH AIR GUN.

Ralph Brown was playing with some other boys this forenoon, some boy in the party had an air gun which was discharged, the little bullet striking Ralph on the head, a little back of the ear. It was a pretty hard thump and his thick head of hair saved him perhaps from a serious hurt. Had it struck him in the eye, he may have lost the sight. Boys should handle there little guns with care.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

THE BUSINESS WORLD.

General Tone of the Market Is Improved.

R. G. Dun & Co. says: Stories of the most reckless sort, disproved promptly, many of them before told, affected speculations in stocks much last week and at times this week, but they have not disturbed the industries and trade of the country at all. There is confidence that the authorities are doing what is proper to provide for the public defence, and business is moving on with an assurance that it could not be seriously disturbed. The grain, cotton, meat products and petroleum markets have been strong with gradual increases in the demand for manufactured products. Failures in February have been smaller than in other months, except three of the previous 52 months, with a remarkable decrease in failures for $100,000 and over, though in number and amount, the smaller failures show less change than might have been expected, indicating that in good times or bad a large proportion is due to causes apart from the general condition of business.

Spain Buying Cruisers.

London special: Spain has purchased two cruisers which the Armstrongs have been building for Brazil, the Amazonius and a sister ship, unnamed, of 4,000 tons each, twenty-three knots and ten guns. Spain is also negotiating for and will probably secure two cruisers of a similar type which have been building in France for Brazil. The Amazonius is ready for launching and her sister ship will soon be ready. The Spanish Government is also endeavoring to secure guns and large supplies of ammunition in England and on the continent for immediate use. Diplomats in London express the belief that French financiers are helping the Spanish Government.

Immense Activity.

There is a continuance of the activity at the New York harbor. The shipping of shells and other projectiles to the fortifications about the harbor is unabated. It is expected that a battery of twenty ten-inch mortars will soon be received at Sandy Hook for testing before they are forwarded to the points for which they are destined. There are a number of unmounted guns at the proving grounds awaiting the construction of carriages. The supply of ammunition has been increased in all the magazines and so arranged that it can be immediately available.

Thirteen Breweries Sold.

The transaction by which all the breweries in Cleveland, Ohio, except one, thirteen in number, and the Kuebler-Strang Brewing Company of Sandusky, pass into the hands of a syndicate of Eastern capitalists has been completed with the exception of transferring the necessary papers. The new company has been incorporated as the Cleveland Brewing and Malting Company, and is said to have a capital of $10,000,000.

Debtors' Names Placarded.

The walls and fences of Louisville, Ky., are covered with yellow posters placed there by a rating company and advertising for sale claims held by the company against residents of Louisville. Among debtors are physicians, clerks, bookkeepers, policemen and one member of the City Council. A test suit will be made.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

March 8.—Katie Emmet.

March 9.—Willie Collier, "The Man from Mexico."

March 21.—Mme Scalchia Concert Company.

Robber Found Shot.

Hiram Johnson was found at Dillonville, fifteen miles from Bridgeport, Ohio, in a serious condition from a bullet wound in his head, received while trying to rob the house of John Parker in Bridgeport a few nights ago.

Train Strikes Wealthy Farmer.

A. H. Platt, an aged and wealthy farmer of Williamsfield, near Ashtabula, Ohio, was so crushed and cut by a train that he cannot survive. He was driving across the track when the train struck the wagon.

Questions Russia's Intention.

A dispatch from Tien Tsin, China, says: Japan has addressed a note to Russia demanding an immediate and explicit statement on the question of continued occupation of Port Arthur.

Town Burns.

All business houses in Berne, Kan., were destroyed by fire except four. Chris Gonzert was burned to death.

Elephant Drops Dead.

Diamond, the monster and valuable elephant belonging to Wallace's circus and menagerie, which has been quartered at Peru, Ind., suddenly dropped dead. He was a trifle smaller than Barnum's big elephant Jumbo, who was killed a few years ago. Diamond was 14 years old and worth $10,000.

Mississippi Lynching.

Fred Moore, the murderer of Tom Anderson, was taken from jail at Senatobia, Miss., and shot dead by a mob of fifty men. The lynching caused little excitement.

Woodford in Danger.

A Madrid cable says: "The papers here publish the statement that Don Caese Pacheo, a Colonel of the army in Cuba, attempted to force entrance into Minister Woodford's house to attack him, and was arrested as a lunatic. Later Pacheo committed suicide by shooting."

Military Preparations.

The House Committee on Naval Affairs has agreed on the items of $1,000,000 for the purchase of smokeless powder, $92,000 for the erection of buildings and machinery for the manufacture of smokeless powder, and $60,000 for arming and equipping the naval militia.

FLEET AT HONG KONG.

Its Presence There Excites the Spanish Public.

Madrid special: The public is much exercised over the report of the presence of a squadron of United States warships at Hong Kong, as it is presumed the vessels intend to threaten Manila, the capital of the Phillipine Islands, in the event of war between the United States and Spain. The Imparcial, in an article headed "To Manila—to New York," quoted an unnamed high personage, who scouts the idea of an imminent rupture, and says: "The presence of the warships at Hong Kong is only Washington's policy with the view of contenting the jingoes." The "high personage" is said to have added: "But America has not so many warships as to warrant such a bold action. If the Yankees go to the Phillippines, the Spaniards will go to New York." The Globe remarks: "The Government is alive to the critical situation and is silently preparing for the worst. But, it is too diplomatic to disclose the procedure by which it is preparing for emergencies." In conclusion the Globe says: "Fortunately the tranquil preparations of the Government are the best assurance that it will be ready when the occasion requires it. The public, seeing the coolness of Senor Sagasta, should comprehend that he means acts and not words."

Forecast of the Court's Report.

A special Associated Press cable from Havana, via Key West, says: Without adding unnecessarily to the flood of surmises, conjectures and prophesy concerning the finding of the court of inquiry, it is fair to say that as a matter of fact most of the naval officers here and at Key West incline to the opinion that the court will find that the disaster to the Maine was caused by the explosion of a floating submarine mine under the port side of the ship, forward. Opinions differ as to whether this mine was made of high explosives, such as wet and dry guncotton or ordinary gun-powder. Opinions agree not only as to the existence of mines in the harbor, but also that this one was laid purposely at the buoy where foreign vessels were directed to moor, and fired from an electric battery on the shore.

Five Children Perish.

John Brown, a tenant on W. S. Galley's plantation, six miles from Livingston, Ala., went to prayer meeting, accompanied by his wife. Their five small children, ranging in age from 1 to 9 years, were left locked up in the house. When the couple returned the house was in flames. Faint cries were heard from within, and Brown made several efforts to enter and save his children, but the burning roof fell in and cut off all chance of rescue. Five charred corpses were found in the debris. Brown believes that the house was fired by a man whom he recently caused to be arrested for hog stealing.

Relief Expedition.

Secretary Long has decided to send a naval vessel to Cuba at once with forty tons of provisions for the relief of the suffering reconcentradoes. The vessel will go to Matanzas or Sagua. It is said that an emergency exists that makes it necessary to dispatch provisions at once in order to succor the starving. The vessel will not stop in Cuban waters but will return immediately after delivering the supplies, which were furnished by the New York Cuban Relief Committee.

Will Reduce Tariff.

The Premier, Senor Segasta, is quoted in an interview as saying that he expects very satisfactory news from Cuba before April. In the course of the same interview Señor Segasta says: "In view of the increase in the price of grain in Spain the Government has decided to reduce the import dues." A decree on this subject is momentarily expected. It is believed this step will be taken owing to the receipt of more reassuring news from the United States.

Esterhazy Wants to Fight.

Paris special: It is rumored that Major Comte Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy has challenged Col. Picquart to a duel, as a result of the latter's evidence in the recent trial of M. Zola, and of his repeated attempts to convict Comte Esterhazy of the crime for which Dreyfus is now undergoing imprisonment.

Ghastly Find.

Morgantown (N. C.) special: An old Indian doctor and a little girl who kept house for him, have been found hanging from trees near their cabin at the head of Irish Creek. The two came here about a year ago and spent most of their time in hunting herbs. Threats had been made against the old man.

Accidentally Killed.

L. E. Valentine, well known in Masonic and Elk circles, while proceeding to his bathroom slipped and fell, at Columbus, Ohio, his head striking on the tile floor, death resulting immediately.

Boy Murderers.

At Marshall, Mo., Grover Kite, aged 13, and Milton Thomas, a colored boy, were arrested and charged with the murder of Miss Carrie Mattenly, Sept. 9. Kite confessed, but claimed it was accidental.

Billiardist Parker Dead.

Frank J. Parker, an old-time billiard player, and at one time billiard champion of the United States, died at his home in Chicago.

Base Ball.

The National League has adopted stringent rules against rowdy ball players.

COULDN'T FIGHT US.

SPANIARDS WOULDN'T HAVE A GHOST OF A SHOW.

What Uncle Sam Could Do in Event of War—Ready to Fight on Short Notice—Would Sweep Cuba and Speedily End the Struggle.

Military Campaign Outlined.

Washington correspondence:

HATEVER the Spanish populace may think, the Spanish rulers know that Spain would be powerless to conduct a successful war with the United States. This country has "got the men, got the ships and got the money, too." Spain hasn't. The United States has a population of 70,000,000 and Spain has a population of 17,500,000. The United States is one of the richest countries on earth; Spain is practically bankrupt. One squadron of the United States navy (the North Atlantic) is superior in strength to the entire navy of Spain.

By the Spanish system of naval nomenclature what is reckoned by the American and English system as a first-class cruiser is called a battleship. Thus the Vizcaya and the other ships of its class are known to the Spaniards as battleships, but by the British and American standard are only first-class cruisers. Spain has only one ship which would be reckoned as a battleship according to the British and American standards. That is the antiquated Pelayo, not an effective vessel. In comparing the naval forces of the two countries this difference in classification should be borne in mind. According to the Spanish system of rating Spain has eight battleships to our five, while according to our higher standard we have six battleships to her one, and that one "no good."

With its regular army and organized militia the United States could put into the field immediately an army of 150,000 men, and the full fighting strength of the "enrolled" militia which might be called upon in case of need is over 10,000,000 men. The army of Spain on a war footing is about 200,000 men.

In order to send to Cuba the 150,000 men with which she has been prosecuting her unsuccessful war there she has been obliged to resort to conscription and has sent out regiments composed of mere boys. Her legitimate military resources are exhausted, and in the event of a big war a levy "en masse" is all that is left her. This, she claims, would give her 1,000,000 men. But even if there were not such great discrepancies between the powers of the two nations Spain would still be at tremendous disadvantage in trying to carry on war across 3,000 miles of ocean against an enemy fighting within easy distance of its base of supplies.

The transportation and maintenance of troops in large numbers in a distant country is an undertaking fraught with difficulty and involving a tremendous expense. To maintain a powerful fleet of warships 3,000 miles from home is also an operation calculated to deplete even a well-stocked treasury.

The supplying of food, medicines and military stores for the Spanish army in Cuba has been found so difficult and expensive from Spain that it has been done to a considerable extent by purchase in this country. If there were war with the United States no further supplies could go from this country to the stranded army and to convey stores and supplies from Spain if it is difficult in times of peace, what would it be with armed merchant men and swift cruisers sweeping the ocean on the lookout for prizes?

Every supply ship would have to sail under convoy of cruisers able to beat off the cruisers of the United States. Spain's navy could never carry on a war and supply sufficient cruisers for convoy duty at the same time. The United States could easily land an expeditionary force in Cuba. The ease with which filibustering expeditions land there is proof of it. A strong expeditionary force joined with the army of Maximo Gomez would soon sweep the island.

Meantime the harbors of the United States are fairly well defended with modern forts armed with modern ordnance. Even if the Spaniards did, at some undefended point, succeed in effecting a landing, any force which they could land from a fleet would be speedily overwhelmed. Then there is the United States fleet, which could both help in the defense of the coast and operate against the Spanish possessions in the West Indies.

If the Spanish fleet came to the coast the American fleet would meet it off the point it aimed at and in all probability annihilate it. If the Spanish fleet concentrated in the West Indies, the North Atlantic squadron would meet it there and try the arbitrament of battle in those waters. If the Spanish fleet split up, part coming on the coast and part going to the West Indies, the American navy would be able to leave enough vessels to assist the forts and the land forces in the protection of the seaboard, and could concentrate an overwhelming force against the part of the Spanish navy left in the West Indian waters.

Here is a list of our available vessels in the Atlantic: The battleships Indiana, Iowa and Massachusetts; armored cruisers New York and Brooklyn; second-class battleship Texas; the cruisers Detroit, Marblehead, Montgomery, Essex, Alliance, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Columbia and Minneapolis; gunboats Nashville, Wilmington, Newport, Vicksburg, Annapolis, Castine, Bancroft and Helena; dynamite vessel Vesuvius; torpedo boats Forter, Foote, Dupont, Cushing, Ericsson and Winslow, and the monitors Amphitrite, Terror and Puritan.

Meantime, in the Pacific ocean the United States has the battleship Oregon and the cruisers Olympia, Boston, Raleigh, Petrel, Baltimore and Bennington, the coast defense vessel Monterey and some old vessels. A portion of this force only would be necessary for a descent upon the Spanish possessions in the Philippines, where the insurgents are still in the field.

All this is giving Spain the benefit of every doubt as to her ability to make a fight. The probability is that there would be only one conflict, and that a short one, off the harbor of Havana. Then it would be all over.

The most effective fleet that Spain could send over would consist of the armored cruisers Emperador Carlos V, Infanta Maria Theresa, Vizcaya, Almirante Oquedon, Cataluna, Cardinal Cisneros and Princessa de Asturias. It takes 8,400 tons of coal to give these seven ships their normal coal supply. The fleet would use up its first 8,400 tons in getting across the Atlantic. To coal it three times when operating on this side of the water would take 25,200 tons. Where is Spain going to get that amount of coal?

The coal with which she supplies her blockading fleet now in Cuban waters comes from Philadelphia and New York. She has little coal stored in Havana and has encroached greatly upon the store she had in Porto Rico. Spain herself gets her coal from England. She could not supply it to her transatlantic fleet. In case of war with the United States the coal to maintain her fleet on this side of the water would have to come from England. Now coal is a contraband of war, and a British ship carrying coal to the Spanish fleet would be liable to capture. That some coal would get to the fleet from England is undoubted, for there never was a blockade yet in the world which was absolutely effective. But it is also a fact that enough could not escape the vigilance of American cruisers to keep the Spanish fleet supplied, and what did get through would cost the Spanish Government enormously.

War Plans Well Laid.

If war should come between Spain and the United States, this Government would be able to move in the field of naval and military operations with a celerity, a completeness of organization, an effectiveness which would astonish the world. The navy of the United States is now practically on a war footing. Not only have our fighting ships been equipped with ammunition and fully manned, but every possible preparation in the way of coaling and opening of lines of communication has been made. Our naval authorities know now, and have known for months, just how cable communication may be established to various parts of the West Indies, just what it will be necessary to do in case certain cables are cut and to just what points dispatch boats must be sent. They know, too, about coal supplies, dry docks, fortifications, guns, depth of water, etc., throughout Spanish America.

In fact, the Navy Department and the War Department have together prepared a complete military campaign. Every detail is arranged. It is known just what the fleets are to do, just what the army is to do, in case of war. No precious days will be wasted in preparing the plan of campaign, in deciding what is to be done. All that has been attended to. The plan is complete and perfect. Every ship, every regiment, every transport, vessel, every man will be sent to its or his proper place the instant the word of command is given by Congress.

For some time the Navy Department has been gradually concentrating our fleets in southern waters. Ships have been ordered home from all parts of the world, even from the far Asiatic station. The Mediterranean station has been abandoned. Every American vessel has been recalled from that sea and is now this side of Gibraltar Straits. If the directors of the Spanish navy have had any hopes of catching American warships in the trap of the Mediterranean, where they might be captured or destroyed at leisure, they have reckoned without their host. This country now has no warships in the Mediterranean.

If there should be a war the militia of the various States would play an important part in it. Months ago the War Department sent out secret agents to make reports upon the State militia—the number of men that could be put in the field, their drill, discipline, equipments, batteries, field outfit, etc. Having amassed all possible information, the authorities here know what they can depend upon. They know, for instance, that within 24 hours, in addition to a part of the regular or Federal army, 20,000 militiamen can be on the railway trains en route for the seaboard. They know that within 48 hours 40,000 men can be on the cars. They know that within ten days, counting regular troops and militia, 75,000 men can be mobilized at the seaports. In all 100,000 trained and equipped soldiers are available for the offensive or defensive operations of the Government.

The most elaborate detailed plans are on file at the War Department with regard to the mobilization of the militia, on different bases, according to different degrees of necessity, as well as to problems of subsistence, transportation, clothing, ammunition, etc.

Without any excitement or haste, or any pressure from the President or members of the cabinet, the various bureaus of the two military departments of the Government have for a long time been making preparations for active operations. It is a matter of professional pride with the chiefs of these bureaus to get all the business under their charge as near as possible to a state of perfection. The result is, that without wanting war, seeking it or expecting it, Uncle Sam is to-day prepared to amaze the world with the rapidity and effectiveness of the blows which he will strike if it become necessary for him to move. His officials believe that if we became involved in trouble with Spain the war will be over in sixty days. They also believe that a state of preparedness is the best guarantee of peace.

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

Nation Owes $1,010,104,216, a Decrease of $1,597,122.

The monthly treasury statement of the public debt shows that the debt, less cash in the treasury at the close of business for February, amounted to $1,010,104,216, a decrease for the month of $1,597,122. This decrease is accounted for by a corresponding increase in the cash. The debt is recapitulated as follows:

"Interest-bearing debt, $847,366,680; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,327,670; debt bearing no interest, $386,974,069; total, $1,235,668,419. This amount, however, does not include $585,252,933 in certificates and treasury notes outstanding, which are offset by an equal amount of cash in the treasury. The cash in the treasury is classified as follows: Gold, $204,063,971; silver, $513,858,834; paper, $107,564,958; bonds, disbursing officers' balances, etc., $33,084,002, making a total of $856,571,766, against which there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $631,007,563, leaving a net cash balance of $225,564,203."

CONGRESS

The House did not complete the consideration of the sundry civil bill on Saturday, but Chairman Cannon held the floor with it until adjournment, refusing to yield to Mr. Boutelle (Maine), the chairman of the naval committee, who was anxious to secure consideration for the bill reported by his committee for the relief of the victims and survivors of the Maine disaster. About twenty pages of the sundry civil bill were disposed of. Many efforts were made by different members to inject river and harbor items into the bill, three of them being successful; amendments appropriating $300,000 for Cleveland harbor, $200,000 for Wilmington, Del., and increasing the appropriation for Boston harbor from $100,000 to $250,000 were adopted. As contracts for these works were authorized, they were in order under the rules. During the greater part of the Senate session the right of Henry W. Corbett to a seat from the State of Oregon was under discussion. Mr. Thurston (Nebraska), in an extended speech, opposed the admission of Mr. Corbett, while Messrs. Foraker, Kyle and Mantle supported Mr. Corbett's claim. The pension calendar was cleared by the passage of several private pension bills. A few bills of a general character were also passed.

Henry W. Corbett was on Monday denied admission to the Senate as a Senator from Oregon on appointment by the Governor by a vote of 50 to 19. The Senate began consideration of the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill, and had not concluded it when it adjourned. The House passed the sundry civil appropriation bill after four days' debate. The appropriation for representation at the Paris exposition was eliminated on a point of order. The sudden change of sentiment which is often witnessed when members go on record was twice illustrated. On Friday the House, in committee of the whole, where there is no record of the vote, knocked out a provision in the bill for an appropriation to pay those who furnish the Government with information leading to the conviction of the violators of the internal revenue laws, and in committee an extra month's pay was voted the employes of the House. When the members voted on roll calls in the House, however, both of these propositions were overwhelmingly defeated.

The House entered upon the consideration of the Loud bill relative to second-class mail matter, on Tuesday. The bill is identical with the measure passed by the last Congress, but Mr. Loud gave notice of an amendment permitting the transmission at pound rates of sample copies up to 10 per cent. of the bona fide circulation of the newspaper periodicals. This amendment removes much opposition to the bill. Mr. Loud made an exhaustive speech in its favor. Mr. Moon (Dem., Tenn.) spoke in opposition to the bill, and Mr. Perkins (Rep., Iowa) in favor of it. The Senate passed a resolution for erection of a bronze tablet to the memory of the victims of the Maine. The bankruptcy bill and the Alaska homestead and right of way bill were debated.

Wednesday's debate in the Senate on the Alaskan homestead and railway right of way bill was spirited. Mr. Carter (Mont.) delivered a vigorous speech in reply to that made by Mr. Rawlins (Utah), in the course of which he made a strong defense of the honor of Congressional committees and of officials in the several government departments. One of the special features of the debate was a speech delivered by Mr. Elkins (W. Va.), in which he explained that the Canadian Pacific Railway was enabled to make war upon American interests, and how and why the aggressions of that great railroad ought to be stopped by the United States. The speech drew replies from Mr. Hoar (Mass.), Mr. Chilton (Texas), and Mr. Nelson (Minn.). Mr. Hoar maintained that a large part of the speech of Mr. Elkins was irrelevant to the pending discussion. The House spent another day in debate upon the Loud bill relating to second class mail matter. The speeches as a rule attracted little interest. The speakers were Messrs. Bromwell (Rep., Ohio), and Ogden (Dem., La.), in favor of the measure, and Messrs. Bell (Pop., Colo.), Simpson (Pop., Kan.), Clark (Dem., Mo.), Brown (Rep., Ohio), and Lentz (Dem., Ohio), in opposition to it.

In the Senate on Thursday the House amendments to the bankruptcy bill were non-concurred in, and Messrs. Hoar, Nelson and Lindsay were appointed as Senate conferees. During almost the entire session the Senate had under consideration the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill. One of the features of the discussion was a speech delivered by Mr. Vest, in which he ridiculed the idea of homesteading any part of Alaska or constructing railroads in that district. His motion to eliminate the homestead feature of the bill by striking out the first section was defeated. The resolution for a congressional investigation of the murder of the postmaster at Lake City, S. C., was referred to the Committee on Contingent expenses. A bill was passed to establish an assay office in Seattle, Wash. In the House the Loud bill, to correct alleged abuses of the second-class mail matter privilege, was laid on the table by a vote of 162 to 119, thus killing it. Forty-seven Republicans joined with the Democrats and Populists in accomplishing this result and ten Democrats voted with the majority of the Republicans. Mr. White (Rep., N. C.), the only colored member of the House, asked unanimous consideration for a resolution appropriating $1,000 for the family of the assassinated Lake City postmaster, but it went over upon objection from Mr. Bartlett (Dem., Ga.).

Sparks from the Wires.

A cave said to rival the Mammoth of Kentucky has been discovered in Center County, Pa.

It is believed in official circles in London that the French cabinet is attempting to bring about a crisis in Africa in order to return to the popularity enjoyed prior to the Zola trial.

Zola has taken an appeal from the decision of the court which condemned him to a year in prison and a fine of 3,000 francs, and the Dreyfus case will again be heard in the French courts.

On the ground that a trial of their case in court would injure public morals, indictments against Herbert Barnum Seeley and others in New York, for events at the Seeley dinner, were dismissed.

The New Orleans carnival was opened by Rex and his retinue. The river was covered with a brilliantly decorated flotilla when the royal yacht appeared with the King of Mirth. The three warships in port, Austrian, French and American, were attractively dressed and the revenue cutters participated. The procession included the military, the King's retinue, lords of the realm and citizens. Proteus appeared at night, followed by a grand society ball.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Despondent Father Kills His Two Daughters—Blacklisted Conductor Kills Himself—Saved the Baby's Life and Lost Her Own.

Crazed Father's Awful Deed.

In the town of Garrett Fred Simons shot and killed instantly his two daughters, aged 2 and 4 years, and then shot himself. The deed was committed in his own home while his wife had stepped over to a neighbor's. Simons had been an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for a number of years as ticket agent, but lost that position a short time ago. Later he was employed as car inspector and lost that position the day of the tragedy. He became despondent and, it is believed, lost entire control of his mind.

An Aunt's Grand Sacrifice.

In Indianapolis Miss Carrie Lynch, 19 years of age, was holding her sister's infant on her lap before an open grate, when her clothes caught fire and she and the infant were enveloped in flames. She caught the infant's clothing in her hands and succeeded in smothering the flames and then threw the child on a bed. While thus engaged the flames extended to all parts of her clothing and she was so badly burned that she died.

Suicide of Blacklisted Conductor.

At Fort Wayne Elijah Rarig committed suicide by hanging in his barn, and his body was discovered the next morning, when his children accidentally strayed into the barn. The body was frozen stiff. Despondency at not getting work was the cause. He was for years a conductor on the Nickel Plate, but was discharged on account of the A. R. U. strike.

Unknown Man Killed by a Train.

At Greencastle, an unknown man, bearing a letter addressed to Louis Graneman, Elwood, care American Tin Plate Company, was killed by a train. The letter was evidently from his sweetheart and was signed by Josie Trigg of St. Louis and was mailed from station "A" in that city Jan. 13.

Suicide in a Depot.

Sick and friendless, Grace Evans, 16 years old, died from the effects of a dose of morphine, taken with suicidal intent in the ladies' waiting-room of the Union station, in Indianapolis. She went there to take the drug, thinking that no one would suspect the cause of her drowsiness.

Killed Doing His Duty.

Merchant Policeman Lewis Keller was shot and instantly killed while endeavoring to arrest men who had entered McInerny & Doran's cigar store in the heart of South Bend. He is the second officer killed within six months while in the discharge of duty.

Within Our Borders.

The Maule Coal Company at Princeton closed its mines. Seventy-five miners are out.

At Huntington, William Cecil was stricken with paralysis and died in a few minutes.

At Columbus, William Knight was released. The coroner found that his wife's death was accidental.

Raymond Stay, traveling salesman from New Albany, was run over by a train and killed at Bird's Eye.

Gov. Mount, determined to check mob law by summary examples, has begun his warfare on the Ripley County lynchers.

Ed Ebersole and William Van Devender, Huntington infirmary inmates, fought with clubs and an iron poker. Ebersole may not recover.

The Godman Brake Company, a steel industry, has located at Anderson. The company will erect plants at once and start with 300 men.

At South Bend, Frederick D. Harris of Denver contests his mother's will, alleging that four sisters were given $80,000, while he got $3,000.

Dr. W. L. Dick, a prominent physician residing at Wooster, was struck by the Fort Wayne and Warsaw accommodation on the Pennsylvania while driving over a country road crossing. He was hurled fifty feet and killed instantly.

Charles Harley, warden of the State prison at Michigan City, says he would be glad to have the board of charities make an investigation of the charges that have recently been preferred against the prison by ex-convicts. He denies that any cruelty is practiced.

Justice Craig at Cross Plains rendered a verdict acquitting Hex Hughes, who was charged, in an affidavit filed by Gov. Mount, with complicity in the Versailles lynching.

Governor Mount has appointed David M. Foster of Fort Wayne and C. J. Murphy of Evansville trustees of the soldiers' home at Lafayette, each to serve three years. Aaron Jones of South Bend was appointed a delegate to the pure food and drug convention at Washington, D. C.

Ephraim Pounds, who left Terre Haute when 8 years of age, forty years ago, was married to Mrs. Ada Watson, who was his childhood's playmate, and they have started for London, where he will deal with a syndicate of capitalists in regard to his rich claims in the Klondike country.

W. F. Huff, a barber, living at Lucerne, was found injured and badly frozen, lying alongside the roadside about two miles east of Metea. Mr. Huff had been in Rochester and started to drive home late in the evening. Near the point where he was found his horse wandered from the road and became entangled in a barbed-wire fence, and in attempting to extricate the animal Huff was injured so painfully that he was unable to seek assistance, and spent the night in his buggy. The horse, in its struggles, became so badly entangled in the wire that it fell and was drowned in a ditch by the roadside.

At Columbus, Mrs. William Knight died from a gunshot wound in the abdomen. Mrs. Knight lived but a few minutes after the shooting. The husband was arrested. He protests his innocence and says his wife's death was due to an accident.

About one hundred sports from Evansville and Mount Vernon assembled a few miles from Evansville at a cock pit, in which a number of fine birds contested. The betting ran high and the affair broke up in a free fight. Chris Corning of Evansville was shot. He had his face cut open and his skull crushed. Others were also badly hurt.

Edward Francis Walker, aged 22, proposed marriage to Miss Pearl Hamilton at Indianapolis. She refused him. He reached home about midnight, wrote her a brief letter in which he referred to her refusal, and then took poison. He died the next morning.

A Terre Haute special says that Charles Burke filed suit against the Terre Haute Electric Light and Power Company, claiming $17,000 damages. While he was operating an electrical device at the Theater Comique he alleges that the apparatus became overcharged through negligence on the part of the company's employes and he was permanently injured. His fingers and toes have dropped off.

HOW LITTLE IT COSTS.

"How little it costs, if we give it a thought,
To make happy some heart each day—
Just one kind word, or a tender smile,
As we go on our daily way.
Perchance a look will suffice to clear
The cloud from a neighbor's face,
And the press of a hand in sympathy
A sorrowful tear efface.

One walks in sunlight, another goes
All wearily in the shade;
One treads a path that is fair and smooth,
Another must pray for aid.
It costs so little, I wonder why
We give it so little thought—
A smile, kind words, a glance, a touch—
What magic with them is wrought!

THE END OF THE STORY.

By Elizabeth A. Moore.

The editor pro tem. of the County Journal sat gloomily in his office, frowning heavily and bitting viciously at his mustache.

Things stood in this way. The editor in chief had been called hastily away, leaving Hugh Elliot in charge; and, as that young man was ambitious, this had been much to his delight.

Before leaving the editor had placed before Hugh the matter to be used in the next issue, including the conclusion of a story begun the previous week. This story it was which had proved the snare to Hugh.

On looking over it he discovered to his dismay, that the final pages were missing. He had looked for them anxiously, but in vain—hence the confusion about the desk. The story could not be left unfinished, neither could he take it upon himself to substitute another. Suddenly his brow cleared, and a good natured smile lit upon his face.

"Ha, the country's saved!" he exclaimed. "I'll write an end to the hanged thing myself."

Brushing aside the cluttering papers, he placed what there was of the "hanged thing" before him.

He laughed to himself as his ever too ready sense of the ridiculous caught the humor of the situation.

Evidently the personages in the story were approaching a crisis. The characters who seemed to be the most prominent were a tall, dark man and a short light one; a beautiful young lady and a peculiar personage named Nosmo King, who seemed to be treated by all with exceedingly familiarity.

Hugh pondered over the situation and vainly endeavored to find the natural ending of it all. He had not read the first part, and consoled himself by hoping that very few others had. It occurred to him to read it now, but as luck would have it, a copy of the last issue was not at hand, and he did not take the trouble to look one up, thinking, gloomily, that quite likely it wouldn't be any help if he had it; and then, too, he thought longingly of the club grounds.

Things went swimmingly now. Each character made several high-sounding remarks and went off the stage. The beautiful young lady had a pathetic interview with the light man, in which they resolved to part. The tall, dark man, who was no doubt the villain, as villains were always dark in stories (so Hugh reasoned), and, of course, no story was complete without one, made some malicious remarks about retribution and vengeance, and bowed himself off with all the smiles and grace that accomplished villains are supposed to possess. Then Nosmo King sang a touching song and ended the whole thing with a general remark on the vanity of life, and the story closed, leaving the heroine in a swoon.

The manuscript, thus artificially completed, was handed in with the other materials for the next issue of the Journal, and then Hugh put the desk in order, and, much elated by his success as an author, started for the club grounds.

The paper came out on time with every department up to its usual standard of excellence. Hugh read his part production with great delight and was congratulating himself on having so successfully "gotten out of a hole," as he expressed it, when the unexpected happened in that peculiar way it has of doing.

The unexpected in this case came in the shape of a young lady, who walked into the office the day after the paper came out and demanded of Mr. Elliot to see the editor.

Hugh was not unaccustomed to the sight of young ladies; neither was he accustomed to such a peculiar mingling of chills and apprehension and thrills of admiration as he experienced when this particular young lady appeared on the scene.

She was a sweet-looking girl, in a dainty toilet of pink that suited her brown eyes and hair to perfection. But, in these same brown eyes was an ominous look that called into existence the chills of apprehension which he was also forced to acknowledge.

"I regret to say the editor is out of town," replied Hugh, courteously, and most truthfully.

"Indeed, and may I ask who is taking his place?"

Here the chills of apprehension rose high in the ascendant, as the "coming event cast its shadows before."

"I have the honor," he answered, wishing heartily all the honor there was in it belonged to anybody else.

"Then it is you I have to thank for so altering the story published yesterday that even its author can scarcely recognize it. May I ask if you consider your alterations an improvement?"

This was, then, as he had guessed, the author of that unended story.

"I must explain," he said. "You see, the last pages of the manuscript were missing. Unfortunately, I had not read the first part of the story, being so rushed" (with tennis, though it was not necessary to explain that), "and so had to guess at the ending. I am exceedingly sorry about it, but it could not be left unfinished, and as the end could not be found there was nothing else to do. Any amends that can be made will be done most gladly, I assure you.

"You are very kind. What amends do your propose?"

"Well," said Hugh, with a desperate attempt to defend his course; "you know how frequently the most popular writers nowadays end their stories tragically. As I have had no experience in that line, I thought I would probably come nearer right to follow their lead, having no idea of the correct ending. But, to speak of the story itself, was not the light man the hero, and the dark one the villain—that is, the offending party?"

"Certainly not. The light man was only the brother of the heroine, and there was no villain, as you call it, in the story. The dark man was her betrothed. And as to it being the fashion for stories to end sad, I believe in love stories ending the right way."

"Oh, so do I," Hugh hastened to say. "And I sincerely regret my mistake. But surely I did not do wrong to let the character Nosmo King—wasn't it?—make the concluding remarks? From the part he played throughout I judged he would be likely to do something to the point at the end."

"Oh, did you? Well, he was the dog."

"Great Caesar!" exclaimed Hugh, and then that irrepressible sense of humor asserted itself, and he burst into a ringing laugh.

"Oh, I do beg your pardon. I am sure I'm heartily sorry for my part in this thing," he said with such an honestly penitent sound in his voice that she could but believe him. "And if there is any reparation I can make, believe me, it shall be done. Shall I explain in the next issue, or will you not send the lost sheets if you have the copy? Indeed, I would be only too happy to serve you in any way."

"No," she answered stiffly, moving toward the door. "I'm sure you have done quite enough. I will not give you any further trouble about it. Good morning."

"But, indeed," he said, anxiously, "it would be a pleasure to do anything you wish, if you will only command me."

She did not answer, and Hugh opened the door for her, wretchedly conscious of a feeling of utter incapacity to cope with the situation.

He sat down in the editorial chair after she was gone and meditated on his sins.

"I was a regular brute," he said, fiercely, jumping up so violently that the dignfied editorial chair went spinning around like a top.

But some way he must gain her forgiveness. He did not know her name, nor, in fact, anything about her except—well, nothing but that he hoped he would see her again, and then he would find a way.

The day of the tennis tournament came, and came gloriously. Hugh Elliot passed hither and thither at various calls, in all the glory of a white duck suit; now wielding a racquet instead of the editorial pen.

Just as the game was being called, and the places alloted, he caught sight of a dainty figure, in white this time, which he recognized at once. It was his divinity of the brown eyes.

She was chatting with some of his friends, the Engles, and Tow Engle, the rascal, was hovering around her with all the assurance and gayety of which he possessed such a generous share.

"Tom always was a lucky dog," said Hugh, angrily; while his wrath rose high against himself as he recalled the scene in the office.

Anyhow, here was a chance to show that there was at least one thing he could do well, and he vowed that he would make a brave fight on this occasion. Tom Engle also took his place on the field, and the fight was soon in earnest.

For two hours, with slight intermission, the battle raged. Hugh knew in his heart that he was playing superbly, and he felt, too, that the maiden in white was not totally oblivious to his fine strokes.

When the closing game was called Hugh found himself with Tom Engle as one of his opponents. The four players were well matched, and Hugh knew that this last game would be no trifling matter. To make it still more trying he observed that the little party with which Tom had been, including the brown-eyed girl, had approached their court to watch the game and the result.

When the prizes were awarded Hugh Elliot received the first gentleman's prize, a gold scarf pin in the shape of a ball and racquet, tied with the club colors.

Tom Engle was the first to congratulate Hugh on his victory, which he did without the slightest appearance of discontent.

"And now come meet my cousin," he said. "Nice girl. Going to be here the rest of the summer. Have been looking for you for two or three days to have you come around."

And Tom was leading him away, with the flush of victory still animating his face, when suddenly without any premonition again those horrible chills of apprehension overtook him, but this time unaccompanied by any thrills of admiration.

For, entering the club grounds and heading straight for them, was Mr. Page, the editor-in-chief of the Journal, who, having just returned, was anxious to consult with Hugh as to his success, and rightly guessed this was the place to find him. Thus, just as the young man approached the ladies, he came up, and, knowing Tom well, was presented also.

"Mr. Page, ladies, and Mr. Elliot, the champion of the day, and my ruthless conqueror. My cousin, Miss Ruth Somers, and my sisters you already know."

Hugh bowed with mingled feelings of pleasure, embarrassment and pride; but there was no hint of their late unpleasant meeting in the few words with which Ruth greeted him.

"I congratulate you on your victory Mr. Elliot," she said; "you played magnificently."

"Thank you; I am glad there is one thing I can do in a civilized manner," he answered, with a significance which she only understood.

Others soon joined the group, and Mr. Page took the first opportunity to ask Hugh about the paper.

"I hope you had no trouble during my absence," he said.

"Not especially," replied Hugh, hesitatingly, and knowing full well that every word could not but be overheard by Miss Somers. "There were some few matters not quite as I had expected. You have seen the paper, of course?"

"Yes, and I am glad you got it out on time. Everything seemed to be up to the usual mark. There was, however, just one thing that somewhat surprised me. That was the story concluded from last week. It struck me as being—well, rather involved toward the end."

"I regret that it was," replied Hugh, "and I am to blame for that. Unfortunately there had to be a slight alteration toward the end on account of an accident; that is, some of the concluding pages were missing."

"Missing!" exclaimed Mr. Page. "You don't say so. Well, how did you manage it?"

"Oh, I played author myself," answered Hugh, with a grim smile. "I regret the result was no better."

"What, my dear boy—you wrote the end? Why, you're a treasure, a jewel. I thought you capable, of course, but scarcely thought you equal to that, not being in your line. I'm thinking of looking up a successor for some time in the future, and am glad to know where I may let my mantle fall."

"It was abominable," here Hugh could not help but put in, his endeavors to say the right thing from two points of view proving a serious task. "I'd rather fix up everything else on the paper than do another love story. I know, besides, that the writer will never forgive me, which makes it worse."

"Oh, was there any unpleasantness?" asked Mr. Page, hastily. "Of course we don't want anything of that kind. Authors are very touchy and can make a good deal of trouble sometimes."

Hugh's face had fallen decidedly during these last remarks, and he saw that he stood a poor chance of advancement if his chief knew how very unsatisfactory to the author his conclusion to the story had been. But Miss Somers also had caught the hint and now turned a charming face to Mr. Page.

"Indeed, Mr. Page," she said, sweetly, "you said you would leave it to me to judge, and I assure you Mr. Elliot's part of the story was charming, and so like the up-to-date story. I must say I was exceedingly interested in reading it myself, and feel sure the author will make no complaints. More than likely the writer forgot to send the manuscript complete, anyhow. Authors are so careless. I think Mr. Elliot should he stood a poor chance of advancement for his ability."

"So be it, then," agreed Mr. Page, cheerfully, and walked away, leaving the two young people stranded together at some distance from their party, which had moved on during the conversation.

By a mutual impulse, as soon as Mr. Page was gone, they glanced furtively at each other, and what each saw in the other's face must have been reassuring, for, without more ado, both immediately dropped their dignity and broke into such a hearty, good-natured laugh at the turn the whole thing had taken that it would have been impossible after that to regain their distance, and made them feel like old acquaintances at once.

"Do you remember what you said to me the first time I ever saw you?" he asked, without further preliminaries.

"I said a lot of things, didn't I? Some hateful ones."

"Never mind them. But you said, too, that you believed in love stories ending the right way. I'm thinking of a case where your ending could be used beautifully."

"But I thought you liked two endings, like one of Rudyard Kipling's stories, and I believe you couldn't think of any more. My ending might do for one, supposing there was such a case, and——"

"Let us suppose such a case. Go on."

"Well, yours might do for the other, and you might have Nosmo to sing. See; here he is."

"Oh, bother Nosmo!"

"And the heroine swooning, and the villain—that was what you called my hero, I believe——"

"In this story I'm thinking of, the villain and the lover are one, so one ending would be enough."

"It seems to be rather involved, too."

"Then let me untangle it, Ruth, and, since my miserable ending was published, let us live out your happy one together. That is the use I want to make of it, and that will be far better than having it published."

Here the villain looked so much in earnest that only one ending seemed at all possible, and Ruth answered, trying to speak very innocently and failing dismally.

"Of course it's a pity not to make some use of it. If you think my ending better than yours——"

"Never mind finishing your sentence, either, Ruth," said Hugh, gladly. "I do think yours better than mine. But if I had never written mine, perhaps we could never have lived yours as now we shall. So you see there is something to be said for two endings."

"But I don't know," began Ruth, with one feeble effort to resist the irresistible.

"Oh, never mind, I do. I'm a full-fledged editor now, and am supposed to know all about love stories."

"Whether you do or not," added Ruth, saucily.

But here the villain takes matters in his own hands and the story becomes hopelessly involved.—Chicago Record.

Toads in a Solid Wood Cavity.

A Providence (R. I.) man who was visiting Norwood the other day, brought to the Journal office three toads that were found in a cavity of the trunk of a tree entirely surrounded by solid wood. He said that the tree was being split by a couple of woodchoppers, and as they cut it open the toads fell out. All three were in an apparently lifeless condition, but one that was smaller than the other two showed some signs of life later in the day.

Rather Remain Bald.

Two of our citizens, one bald-headed and the other red-headed, met in Mr. Wiley's barber shop the other evening, when the red-headed one said to him of no hair: "You weren't there it seems when they were giving out hair, were you?" Baldy replied:

"Oh, yes, I was there all right, but they had nothing but red hair left, and I would go bald a thousand years before I would wear red hair."

"Next," shouted Mr. Wiley, just in time to prevent bloodshed.

UNCLE SAM'S MONITOR FLEET.

MIANTONOMAH. TERROR. PURITAN.

ADMIRAL JOUETT'S assertion that the American monitor is the highest and most satisfactory type of marine fighting machine, is being generally accepted without question by students in the science of naval warfare. The monitor is a form of craft little understood or appreciated until lately even by experienced sea-going men. It came into existence in crude shape during the civil war, and, thanks to the genius of John Ericsson, did such good service that the United States naval authorities decided to improve and perpetuate this peculiar style of vessel. From the "cheese-box on a raft," which destroyed the mighty Merrimac, in 1862, has sprung a fleet of powerful warships, the merit of which has been overlooked in the more imposing grandeur and overtowering size and armament of monster battle-ships like the Indiana and Iowa. The monitor of 1898 bears little resemblance even in exterior design, to its progenitor of 1862, though both are constructed on the one vital principle of a low free-board and as small an amount of obstruction on deck as possible. The monitor of 1863 was a shallow-water boat, a craft handy for fighting in rivers and bays, but of little use on the ocean. The new monitor is an efficient, seaworthy ship of the first class, capable of making long voyages through rough water in safety. It is the testimony of one of the best officers in the navy, who took one of the new monitors around Cape Hatteras in the teeth of a wild gale, that he never trod the deck of a stouter, safer, or more comfortable boat.

Uncle Sam is now the possessor of six first-class monitors of the double-turret pattern. They are the Amphitrite, Miantonomah, Monadnock, Monterey, Puritan, and Terror. By naval rating these, as well as the thirteen old-style single-turret monitors, still carried on the list, are classed as coast-defense vessels, but this is a matter of nomenclature only. In all the requisites of open sea fighting the new monitors are battle-ships of the highest grade. The Puritan, the largest of the fleet, is a ship of 6,060 tons, and 3,700 horse power. Her armament consists of four twelve-inch breech-loading rifles and two four-inch rapid-fire cannon in the main battery; the secondary battery is made up of six six-pounder, rapid-fire guns, four gatlings, and two 37-millimeter Hotchkiss rifled cannon. The other boats in the fleet compare favorably with the Puritan in size and fighting force. The monitors are not built for speed, but they make long trips at a uniform log of from eleven and a half to fourteen knots an hour.

A POPULAR HOUSE.

Plans of the One Shown Here Have Been Used 167 Times.

The villa that is pictured here might well be called a "popular house," for the records of the architects show that the plans have been purchased and the house erected from them not fewer than one hundred and sixty-seven times. The demand for it has come from all parts of the country, and it has also been erected in other lands. One might find its facsimile in the uttermost parts of the earth. It will be seen that the house is an attractive one, but its success is not due to this part alone. Many houses are just as pretty and as home-like in design, but have nothing like such a record for duplication. Those who have purchased the plan give us the reason for their choice that it is an unusually large and roomy house for its cost. A careful examination of the plans will show that every inch of space has been made available. In especial, there are many bed chambers, and all are well located for light, ventilation and comfort.

If a man has plenty of money to expend in the erection of a villa house, he can afford to indulge his individual taste. He can make his house reflect his own personal whims and preferences. But when his means are limited he naturally seeks most for his money, and to him it is the best indorsement of the accompanying plan that it has found acceptance as many as one hundred and sixty-seven times. As long as it is different from his neighbor's house, and is individual in its surrounding, it makes no difference to him if it has been erected in many other cities or towns. But think what one hundred and sixty-seven houses mean. Brought all together, they would make not a hamlet, but quite a village. It is certainly the banner record for any set of plans. It proves that human nature is imitative and establishes the fact that wage-earners feel an interest in improved housing.

PERSPECTIVE.

General dimensions: Width through dining-room and kitchen, 29 feet; depth, including veranda and pantry, 37 feet 6 inches. Height of stories: cellar, 7 feet 6 inches; first story, 9 feet 6 inches; second story, 9 feet; attic, 8 feet. Exterior materials: Foundation, stone; first and second stories, clapboards; gables, panels and shingles; roof, slate. Interior finish: Hard white plaster, plaster cornices and centers in parlor, dining-room and hall; white flooring throughout first and second stories except in kitchen, where yellow pine is used; spruce flooring in attic; first story to have double floor with paper between; trim throughout, white pine; staircase, ash; panels, under windows in parlor and dining-room; wainscot in kitchen; interior woodwork finished in hard oil. Colors: All clapboards of first story, seal brown; clapboards of second story and all sashes, bright red; trim, outside doors, blinds and rain conductors, olive; veranda floor, light brown; veranda ceiling, oiled; panels in gables, light brown with olive framing; gable shingles, oiled.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

Accommodations: The principal rooms and their sizes are shown by the floor plans; cellar under whole house, with inside and outside entrance and concrete floor; three rooms and hall and closets finished in attic, as shown by the plan; set range, stationary wash-tubs, sink and boiler, with hot and cold water in kitchen; open fireplace in dining-room and parlor; sliding doors connect parlor and dining-room and hall; china closet in dining-room and large pantry and closet in kitchen. Cost, $2,000, not including mantels, range and heater. The estimate is based on New York prices for material and labor. In many sections of the country the cost should be less.

Appendicitis.

The position is taken by Dr. McBurney, in the London Medical News, that there really is no medical cure for appendicitis, even though some cases recover without operation; he considers, too, though appendicitis is a surgical disease, yet operation may not be necessary in every case, the fact being that this ailment is a stoppage of the drainage from the appendix to the colon, and preliminary treatment is often worse than useless. Thus, the opium treatment relieves pain and discomfort, but entirely masks the symptoms at a most important time, for it is in the first twenty-four hours from the beginning of the attack that physicians can decide not only as to the diagnosis, but as to the result and course probably of the case. If, for instance, there is no increase in urgency in five or six hours, the patient is not in immediate danger if kept at perfect rest in bed; on the other hand, if in twelve hours there is still no increase in the severity of the symptoms, the patient should begin to improve. But, if the urgency of the case has steadily increased in twelve hours from the time when the diagnosis was made, an operation will probably be called for. After two attacks a patient is sure to have a third, and each attack renders operation more difficult and dangerous; all the advantages lie with operation between the attacks, and in an operation during an acute attack the prognosis is worse.

A Destroyer.

Emperor William is claiming credit for the invention of a new war machine called a "battle-line destroyer." It is a sort of motor car of thick steel, with portholes for machine guns, and in it are a dozen soldiers, who are thus protected from the enemy. The machine is to charge right down into the enemy's line, firing volley after volley as it goes, and, of course, rendering cavalry unnecessary. It will mow down the foe as it charges them, and a few dozen ought to be sufficient to annihilate an entire army, if not blown up or stopped by a fallen tree or ditch, and if the enemy provides easy roads for their approach. It is hardly necessary to add that the Emperor's invention is merely the war chariot of the ancients in a modern dress, and that it has been talked of and condemned by practical military men for years.—New York Tribune.

Cuspidors for railroad and street car use are mounted on sliding frames and placed in compartments under the seats, to be pushed into position for use by touching a lever with the feet.

BISCUITS KILLING INDIANS.

Piute Braves Dying of Indigestion Through Eating Saleratus Cakes.

Nevada, with its 43,000 white inhabitants, is threatened with even a shrinkage among its Indians, all of which can be traced to the baneful effects of the saleratus biscuit. When Lo discovered that he could get a quart of flour to puff up and look palatable by tossing a spoonful of saleratus in the dough he at once began operations on those lines, and hot bread was served three times a day or more, instead of the healthier, but less palatable acorn cracker. The squaw caught the idea of her buck's civilized appetite and stuffed him full of hot biscuit as he lay in his tepee and absorbed what he supposed was a delicacy.

The result is that nine-tenths of the brave Piutes who are living on Nevada soil to-day are in the last stages of dyspepsia incident to an overindulgence in saleratus buns. It is no uncommon sight along the railroad lines in Nevada to see a buxom squaw with a can or two of saleratus in her grip taking it home to the campoode to make biscuits for her chief, who eats his repast unconscious of the fact that the case of acute indigestion which carried off his brother up the creek a few days before was induced by the saleratus biscuit. Ten years ago stomach troubles were unknown among the Indians of the Western States, owing to the fact that they consumed only cold food. An Indian's hatred for cooking placed him in touch with more cold food than hot, and indigestion was practically unknown, but the easily prepared and cheap saleratus biscuit came along like the thief in the night and stole away the diaphragm of his stomach, flooring him for keeps and shortening the census report several hundred on the Winnemucca reservation alone.—New York Journal.

Webster and His Herd.

When Falstaff was dying, so the hostess reported, "He babbled of green fields." Was it a reminiscence of the Twenty-third Psalm—he lost his voice "with halloing and singing of anthems"—or a reminescence of his boyhood? The touch of death often wipes out what has intervened between an old man's youth and his departure, making him a boy again. Daniel Webster was brought up on a farm, and his ideal of life always was that of an English squire living on his broad acres farmed by a joyous tenantry, and surrounded by choice breeds of sheep and cattle. When he was smitten by death the old love swayed him. Says the Chicago Chronicle:

An aged husbandman at Marshfield, Mass., who remembers Daniel Webster in his latter days very well, has given some one a very interesting reminiscence of the statesman as an agriculturist, and incidentally drawn a touching picture of his farewell to the acres and the possessions he loved so well.

Webster, according to this ancient, loved every tree and flower on the place. He knew all the stock, and could tell the name of every animal upon the farm. He was an enthusiastic breeder, and a fine judge of everything pertaining to farm life and live stock, although he never made a financial success of them.

When the end came, and every one, including himself, realized that he had but a few more days to live, he ordered the relater of this incident to drive up to the farmhouse all the stock, two by two, and there he reviewed them, passing his hand lovingly over the smooth, glossy coats and patting their flanks affectionately.

When the last had gone by, he turned with a sigh into the house, giving one longing look behind, and never spoke of them again. Unconsciously the old farmer has given here a picture worthy of a painter or a poet.

To Save Funeral Expenses.

Vesuvius being in eruption a young German undertook to be cremated free by the volcano. He placed himself close to the crater, in the path of the lava, and then shot himself through the head. His body was found, however, before the lava reached it.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Isolation.—Man is a social being. He was born so. His faculties are dwarfed if he remains isolated from his fellows.—Rev. Robert Macdonald, Baptist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentleness.—We speak often of the power of God, but it is the gentleness of God that works the greatest wonders. It is this that makes men great.—Rev. R. G. Woodbridge, Congregationalist, Middleboro, Mass.

Children of the Poor.—One secret of the success of the children of the poor is found not only in their natural abilities, but in the rigid training made necessary by their lot in life.—Rev. G. B. Vosburgh, Baptist, Denver, Colo.

The Two Kings.—Wicked men are under the bondage of Satan, and all their desires and actions are evil continually, but Christian men are under the authority of Jesus Christ and must obey his commandments.—Rev. P. C. Cormick, Methodist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Christ's Influence.—Christ's influence to-day is greater than when his sandaled feet pressed the verdant carpet nature spread before him in his triumphal march through the historic plains of the Holy Land.—Rev. Edward McHugh, Methodist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Peace.—Sin, the destroyer of our peace, is nailed to the cross with Jesus, so that it need have no dominion over us. Peace meets the deepest longings of man's soul. Pleasure is man's delight, but peace is his necessity. No man is at his best without it.—Rev. G. Roughton, Methodist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Moral Agency.—Morality is not policy or pretense or learning, but the doing of good in obedience to the will of God. Religion is the most potent moral agency of humanity. God is the real conscience of mankind.—Rev. Silverman, Hebrew, New York City.

Results.—The best results are attained only when still better ones are sought. To do as well to-day as I did yesterday I must do better. Life is valuable not only for what it is, but for what it is to be.—Rev. Clarence T. Brown, Congregationalist, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Demands of Satan.—As it was, as it is now, and ever will be, the devil is prince of this world, so will he make his deceitful demands, taking advantage of the weakness of humanity. As he approached Christ, so does he approach us to-day.—Rev. C. L. Thurgood, Disciple, Pittsburg, Pa.

Time.—Time is relentless. It can not be bottled up and given out as we desire. No syndicate can make a corner on time for its own benefit. It can not be monopolized; it can be taken from no man. All are equally rich as regards to time.—Rev. V. S. Milburn, Universalist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Womanhood.—Woman has been the heart of the Christian Church, if not the brain. She has supplied it with true, strong feeling, how little soever she may have contributed to its bewildering speculations or to its ponderous learning.—Rev. J. H. Rylance, Episcopalian, New York City.

Security.—This world presents an awful scene relative to security. The land is full of physicians ready to draw away disease. Inventors of all kinds offer their mechanism for the safety of business interest. Everywhere and everybody is trying to be secured.—Rev. G. W. Perryman, Baptist, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Social Gospel.—We are only beginning to understand the social side of the gospel of Christ. The social side is the important side. It is the social side that Christ emphasized. We are still suffering an exclusive preaching of the gospel of individualism.—Rev. W. S. Rainsford, Episcopalian, New York City.

Wanted to Pay His Poll Tax.

Some funny things happen in the public buildings, says the Richmond State.

An aged negro shuffled into the office of Capt. Frank Cunningham at the City Hall the other day, and made the popular City Collector's hair curl by announcing:

"Boss, I done come to pay the license on my pole cats."

"What!" shouted Captain Frank, as a horrible suspicion that the old darky had brought them with him possessed him.

The clerks in the office dropped their pens and a police sergeant who was standing in the doorway fled precipitately.

The ancient Ethiopian gazed in wonder upon the scene of consternation that he had inadvertently effected.

"What's dat you said?" inquired the Captain, as he regarded the surprised darky from a distance.

"My pole cats, boss. I want to gin you my pole cats," said the old man, thrusting a black paw into the pocket of his breeches.

"Why do you want to give me your pole cats?" asked the collector, recovering his equanimity as an idea dawned suddenly upon him.

"Case I owes it, boss; an' dey done tole me dat culled folks whn don' pay de pole cats c'yant vote."

"Poll-tax, by ginger!" yelled the collector with a great gasp of relief, and the clerks all took up their pens again and said:

"Oh!"

Chase Homestead.

Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague, who went to Ohio to present to friends a plan by which the Salmon P. Chase homestead, near Washington, might be saved from foreclosure sale, writes that she has succeeded in refunding the debt upon the place. The property is valued by conservative real estate judges at $150,000. The mortgage on it is for $80,000. She has practically disposed of $80,000 of long-time certificates of indebtedness, secured by mortgage on the place, and will lift the matured mortgage.—New York Sun.

There may be wives who drive their husbands to drink, but there are lots of other husbands who would like to have such wives.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....March 10 1898

EXPLOSION.

SPENCERVILLE, IND., MARCH 8, '98.
Special to the DAILY COURIER.

The boiler in the saw mill belonging to the estate of the late Samuel Grill, who was killed about a month ago in the same mill, exploded this morning about 7 o'clock, fatally injuring the fireman, Lee Patterson, and totally wrecking the building and mill. Mr. Patterson was taken from the wreck in an unconscious condition and is still living under the care of Drs. Carey and Bowman. Patterson was employed in the mill when Mr. Grill was injured. The other workmen were just entering the mill, but none were injured. No fire had been under the boiler since Mr. Grills death, and the supposition is that there was no water in the boiler.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Carolina Lindorfer was born on the 26th day of May 1839, at Zettamin in Germany and departed this life at her home in Jackson township, March 1, 1898, at the of 58 years, 9 month and 3 days.

In the year 1867, she was united in marriage to her first husband John Hagenow, who died in the year 1877. After a few years of widowhood she was united in marriage to Henry Lindorfer who also preceded her in death on the 4th day of June 1894. Mrs Lindorfer was baptised and confirmed in the Evangelical Lutheran faith, of which she remained a true and faithful member up to her death. Last fall shortly before she intended to leave for Sandusky, Ohio, to spend the winter with her step-son George, she accidently fell and was injured to such an extent, that the injuries finally proved fatal. Mrs. Lindorfer leaves to mourn his death three sisters, one brother and six step-children.

Funeral service was conducted from the German Lutheran church at Auburn Friday, March 4. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery. Rev. F. Keller officiating.

PUBLISH MY LETTER.

So That Women May Know Where to Find Relief.

Such is the request of Mrs. L. M. Haynes, Springfield, Mo. (General delivery.) A part of Mrs. Haynes' letter reads as follows: "I wrote to you in May, 1897; I was about to give it up, for I had the best four doctors in the city and they could not cure me. My disease was female weakness. I had been troubled with it for five years. Four and a half bottles of Pe-ru-na cured me. I hope alsuffering women will take Pe-ru-na I know it will cure others also. I cannot praise Pe-ru-na enough."

Bear in mind that female weakness is pelvic catarrh, to which women are peculiarly liable, and from which few are entirely exempt. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh wherever located. "Health and Beauty," a book devoted to the phase of catarrh peculiar to women, will be sent free to any woman by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

BID HER GOOD BYE.

Mrs. J. C. Teeters was entertained at tea, last evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Zimmerman and later in the evening a pleasant surprise was given her by some of her intimate friends and relatives coming in, unexpected by her.

A pleasant evening was spent and as a token of regard and their regret for the removal from our town of Mr. and Mrs. Tetters and family, Mr. J. E. Pomeroy, in behalf of the friends in a few fitting remarks presented Mrs. Teeters with a fine volume.

Mrs. Teeters feelingly expressed her appreciation of the kind regards expressed and represented. Mr. and Mrs. Teeters take with them to their new home the best wishes of their many friends for their happiness and success.

G. A. BISHOP WEDDED.

Will Return to Auburn Tonight With His Bride.

G. A. Bishop went up to Detroit last evening and was married to Miss Anna Hotchkiss. at her home near that city. She has been employed by the big dry goods firm of Bishop and Lackey, several years and is well known and popu lar here. They return this evening over the Wabash. The COURIER extends a welcome and hearty congratulations for both.

420,000 A DAY.

That is the figure daily for the Greener factory. It represents the number of hoops they are now shipping daily. Monday they sent out seven car loads, each car containing 60,000 hoops They expect to keep up this rate all the week unless some unforeseen cause should prevent. If they do this, the six days shipments will sho w 2,520,000, over two and a half millions in one week. We presume this was never equaled in the state before. The company is doing the city and county a vast deal of good. They have employed in one way and another 150 men all winter. Much of this has directly benefited Auburn. In view of this fact, we feel that our people can well afford to be patient about having logs and bark in the way in that vicinity. What Auburn needs is more such knee deep log yards.

COURT

There has been considerable work done, getting cases ready, hearing settlements in estates, etc. In criminal cases, Chorpening for larceny and Roy Graves for burglary, have been discharged. The two cases against Ben. Steifel for keeping a gaming house, have been dismissed. The three boys, Charles Gemberling, Wm. H. Eash and Joshua Carpenter, arrested for breaking into Lake Shore cars, were brought into court Tuesday, and their trial set for next Monday. Brunker, was brought in today on an effort to be set free. The law requires that he be kept in a year, and as it lacked 12 days, he was taken back. He has no property to pay the damages in a case of bastardy. Abrams of Butler was brought in but nothing done.

A QUEER CASE.

E. D. Raub has a valuable horse that has been sick for several months and and no one seemed able to tell wha the trouble was or to do anything to relieve it. The other day Mr. Raub called on Dr. Adams of this place and after a careful examination he decided that the trouble was located in the animal's bladder. He went to work accordingly and after a tedious effort relieved the horse of several peices of a sort of stone and finally also a piece of wood 6½ inches long, to which the stone had been attached before broken loose for removal. This stone before breaking had been formed around the stick in shape resembling an egg, being largest in the middle and sloping each way. Mr. Raub now has the stick and pieces of stone. It is probably one of the strangest things ever taken from a living body by a surgeon or veterinary. The horse at once got better and is now able to work. It was in town yesterday. It is the opinion that the stick was in some way not understood, forced into the poor beast perhaps by some enemy of the owner, though he cannot imagine who orwhy. If so it would be a terrible crime for which no punishment would be tco severe.

FIRE AT GARRETT.

About 11 a. m. today word came from Garrett that the residence of a Mr. Gerster was burning. Active work of the fire department got it under control, with but little loss.

SPANISH SITUATION.

The situation continues to change rapidly and each change is a new sensation. Yesterday morning came the confirmation of the reports in regard to Spain's demand that the United States should recall Gen. Lee from Havana, and the other that the contributions of food and clothing that Americans are sending to the 50,000 starving Cubans must not be sent over in National vessels. President McKinley very properly and very promptly refused to do either. So Gen. Lee will remain unless Spain orders him out. He was appointed by Cleveland, but has been kept there by McKinley because he understands the situation and has a cool head. Spain has a right to demand that we remove him, but she must show some cause for it. This she cannot do, and the latest report is, that Spain has backed down. The reason Spain gives for asking that the provisions be not sent in war ships, is that it takes too much of an air of an official act and a little like national interference. There is some reason for her position, but we cannot afford to hire ships to carry free provisions to the starving people that Spain herself should feed. Two of our smaller warships will take the provisions and land them, each at a small city distant from Havana, and then at once leave for home. So Spain has little cause to complain. In the meantime, Spain is sending more warships to the Cuban coast. And the United States is sending more warships to Key West and the Dry Tortugas. These two points are about 125 miles north of Havana, and within easy distance to reach by ships. The city of Key West has a good harbor and is strongly fortified. The Dry Tortugas has a fair harbor and one strong fort, but is useful mainly as a quarantine station and has other government buildings. Both places are on low ilands called "Keys" and are out in the ocean some miles from the Florida coast. In case of war, much of the fighting would be near there or to the south on the way to Cuba, or on Cuba itself for land fighting. But we still believe Spain will back down and there will be no war. But we are likely to provide a big appropriation for getting things ready.

GOT 'EM.

Two or three weeks ago, some cars on the Lake Shore tracts at Butler were broken into and quite a lot of goods of various kinds stolen, some say $200 worth. The company's detectives have been ever since engaged in looking up the matter following up on clue after another, till on Sunday, they caught three young fellows at Elkhart. The company's officers sent word to the authorities here, and as the sheriff is laid up and Deputy Platter busy at the beginning of court. Marshal Clint Potter went up to Waterloo and met company's detective there with them He slipped his handcuffs off the prisoners, Marshal Potter slipped his on two of them and taking the third under his wing, brought all three to Auburn on the 3:20 train and they are now in jail. They will be tried for larceny. Today the detective, H. C. Lards, came down to give his testimony when they are called in He made the above plainer to us. The boys live in Elkhart, their names being Wm. Esch, Hum. Carpenter and Geo. Gemberling. They were caught in the car stealing at Kendallville and when the train reached Ligonier were turned over to the town marshal.

BUTLER.

Garrett T. Johns, a former well known Butler business man and a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, died in Duluth, last Saturday morning. His wife was a daughter of John T. Champion of this place.

Rev. Smith of the U. B. Church has been conducting a revival effort at their Butler church the past weet with moderate success.

A Mrs Murray of Ft. Wayne has bought Miss Sudie Worth's millinery store and with her daughters continues at the old stand.

Mrs. Woodworth's revival at the Church of God has been the attraction the past week, About half the audience pass the time in prayer and the rest have a good time. Many attend who are never seen at other churches. We welcome her efforts and hope much good may be done. The number who have come forward is 200.

BRUTAL AFFAIR

Saturday night occurred a disgraceful and brutal affair at Spencerville. Six or eight men put in the afternoon and evening in filling up with whisky, and amusing themselves at wrestling, etc. After wrestling for a while, they were warm enough for a fight, and by agreement locked themselves into a room and went at it. They used fists, chairs or anything they could get hold of. Finally one man was so bruised and cut that he became insensible. The constable finally tried to get in and stop them. They knocked him down but he managed to stop them. A surgeon had to be called to dress the wounded. One of the men was fined by 'Squire Beery; but the rest appear to have escaped deserved punishment.

A FITTING HONOR.

The First National Bank directors met yesterday to consider the matter of a new president to take the place of the late Judge McClellan. The decision was unanimous, that it be given to the Judge's son, Charles McClellan. This was done and he has accepted the position. It is a place of difficulty, as well as of high honor, for it takes business ability to conduct a bank successfully. The bank has always been well macaged since it got rid of G. Hazzard twenty years ago. Its officers have always been careful conservative business men. And this action yesterday continues good management. The new president has for several years been its cashier and of course is familiar with all its business. We predict a successful administration for him. The present cashier, Mr. Garwood, is also a careful and conservative man, and has been in the bank as cashier or assistant a long time, and still longer as a director. And the assistant cashier, Claude Benedict has had several years experience in his duties. Altogether the First National shows a strong corps of officers.

SEDAN

Sedanians are exposed to the measles.

This is rather tough weather on the wheat and clover.

Mrs. Ida Crane is quite sick at present.

Mr. Chas. Schrader, Fred Kruse and Ed. Homan took in Waterloo Sunday.

—Mrs. Ida Fickes who has been sick for some time is some better at this writing.

Carl May, of Hamilton visited B L. Hine and family last week. He is a brother of Mrs. Hine.

The roads are very bad just at present but we have no kick a coming as we have not had any very bad roads all winter.

Mr. Charley Freeborn an old soldier who has been confined to the house all winter is out in nice weather. We hope that Charley may continue to improve.

The protracted meetings at this place still continue with very good success but as many of the members reside in the country and from one to two miles distant the attendance has not been large. The pastor Rev. Elmer Camqbell is a man of God and we hope to see much good accomplished and many souls saved before the meeting closes. A cordial invitation is extended to every body to attend these meetings and esqecially to christian workers of all denominations come and ou will be made welcome.

A very pleasant party of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. Wm. Stout on Saturday afternoon and evening March 5th. There were present about 30 and after spending a few hours in social chat they did ample justice to the refreshments which had been provided. Mr. and Mrs. Stout will move to Montcalm Co., Mich. in a few days and the occasion was intended to be a surprise but well you know women will talk and so Mrs. Stout found it out before hand. After partaking of the repast the guests departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Stout prosperity and happiness in their new home.

Mrs. J. M. Brumback, wife of ex-county commissioner J. M. Brumback died at her home one and three-fourth miles west of Sedan on the 11th. She was in as good health as usual on retiring and was found dead in the morning She has been troubled with heart disease for some time. The funeral services were held at the home on the 13th, conducted by Rev. Minnich of Corunna, and assisted by the Rev. Komp. The interment was made in the Showers Corners cemetery. The large number of friends and neighbors who attended the services and followed the remains to their last resting place, shows the high esteen in which Mrs. Brumback woe held by all who knew her.

German Jury System.

In Germany, when the vote of the jury stands six against six, a prisoner is acquitted; a vote of seven against five leaves the decision to the court, and by a vote of eight against four the prisoner is convicted.

IN CASE OF WAR.

All sorts of wild ideas are in the air in regard to war with Spain. And the most of those who discuss it do not stop to consider details. The general idea is that a war with that country means a stand-up and fight at sea. And then we begin to shiver when people tell us the Spanish navy is so much better than ours. People should study the details better. In the first place, the Spanish navy is not superior to ours. We have three first class battle ships like the "Indiana" and the Spaniards have only one. They have two more second-class warships or armored cruisers than we have, but at least two of them are armed with old-fashioned smooth bore cannon and the sides of the vessels protected with iron. Our vessels of that class, all have armor of steel and have modern breech-loading rifled cannon. Of unarmored ships of war Spain has two or three the most in number, but ours are of a better kind, and would no doubt be beter handled. We have more turreted monitors than they have, which would give us a great advantage in our own waters, where we would expect to do the most fighting. The Spaniards have more sea-going torpedo boats than we have but we have more and better ones that could be used only at home. So all things considered, in a war at sea, we would be about their equal. But the strength of our navy lies also in the better class of men and our superior intelligence, ingenuity and seamanship. It was these qualities that enabled us to beat the British in the war of 1812, for they were then as now, the leading naval power of the world. Yet with a very weak navy we beat them at least four times in five. Besides at the present the supply of coal counts for much We would have our ships near our own coasts, where we could get coal The Spainards would have to go to Cuba or Porto Rico to get coal and getting there might have to fight their way. Should there be fighting on land it would either be Cuba on Porto Rico or on the coast of the United States. On our own borders, we would have an advantage that would render the Spanish cause hopeless. On the islands we would have as good a chance as they do on sea or land. We have nothing to fear. The result could only be with us. But it is to be hoped there will be no war. It is is expensive business and should be restored to only when other means fail.

New Dog Tax Law

It is now in force, and all who own, harbor or keep dogs about them, should understand the main points in this new law before the assessor appears, in order to save themselves trouble and expense. Dogs are now assessable when three months old. The tax is due when the assessment is made. The assessor gives a receipt for the money paid him. The amounts to be paid are as follows: $1 for one male or splayed dog; $2 for each additional male or splayed dog, and $3 for each female dog owned, harbored or kept by any person. In Auburn and Garrett, there is a special assessment of $1, and $2; hence, dog tax in these two towns is as follows: $2 for one male or splayed dog; $4 for each additional male or splayed dog; and $5, for each female dog owned, harbored or kept by any person within these two corporations. Any person who refuses to pay the township assessor his dog tax and take a receipt therefore, is liable to a fine of from $5 to $20. Also, to a fine not exceeding $100, if he make a false statement in regard to number, sex etc., of his dogs. Also the township assessors and township Trustees are liable to fines of from $10 to $20 for the non-performance of their duties as laid down in the new law. Kindly keep your dog money in readiness for the assessor after April 1st.

ASSESSOR OF UNION TOWNSHIP.

NO GRAND JURY

We alluded briefly in Monday's DAILY to the fact that no grand jury would be called this term This is to save expense for there is too little work to have them come Take for instance the man Abrams from Butler, who is in jail. The sheriff would have to summon a big lot of witnesses to come before the grand jury, and if an indictment should be found, these witnesses would have to be sent for again to come to court. And the grand jury would have to be paid. As it is, Abrams can be brought in on an "information," and tried. Several other cases can be handled in the same way, and some may be done by a justice. Altogether it looks as if the plan is a good one for this term at least.

A GOOD MEMORY

often saves money and also good health If you are troubled with constipation, indigestion or any form of stomach trouble remember to take home a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and health will be restored to you. Trial sizes 10c (10 doses 10c) large size 50c and $1 F. E. Davenport, druggist.

War To The Finish

CHURUBUSCO, IND., March 8, 1898.
Special to the COURIER.

A proclamation of war is declared on the saloons of Churubusco by the W. C. T. U's, a little band of but three dozen weakly effeminate creatures whose way to the voting booth is thwarted by the law. But God bless the hands that rock those cradles, for those are the hands that rock the world.

Churubusco is the place famed throughout the state as the battlefield and capture ground of that notorious desparado Marvin Kuhns

Churubusco is to the state of Indiana what ancient Greece was to the known world, the birthplace of orators, martyrs and civilized progressions.

Three men have made application to our county commissioners for a permit to run saloons for the ensuing year.

This was considered sufficient cause by our W. C. T. U's. for a declaration of war and so it has been for the past week, war to the sword and the sword the hilt, through mud and across fields, cross lots and around the road, from door to door, never retreating, taking no prisoners, ever converting and progressing until they have secured a nice majority over all of the applicants.

Over 500 hundred voters have been canvassed, and canvassed so thoroughly that the victory is theirs. If every county in the United States had such an organization of such women, the dram shop would shortly be a thing of the past.

—H. G. Provines and a Miss Divis of Hicksville, came down from Angola, today. They have a short vacation at the college there.

—After yeaes of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersville, Pa., was cured by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema. rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord —Brandon & Long have the frame up for a new carpenter shop on East Seventh st. They have vacated the Weaver building, which has been bought by the Standard Mfg. Co. So they had to put up a new building.

—A bequest is not always desirable.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Kendallville Sun.—The Lake Shore will haul about 1,000,000, bushels of wheat from Chicago to the sea board for Leiter of Chicago. It will require 1.000 cars, or about twenty trains to transport the grain.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbuaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—The Kendallville News is calling aloud for an investigation of the books of Noble county officials. This has been a great time for expert accountants to get jobs. Truly prosperity has struck them at Klondyke wages of $10 a day.

—We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For cale by H. B. McCord.

—The Albion Democrat, in speaking of a former DeKalb boy says: Dr. J. W. Morr of this city, who was the democratic candidate for coroner two years ago, is not seeking a renomination but will accept it if given him. He made an excellent race at that time but went down in the landslide. He is entitled to the renomination and has a large circle of friends in all parties who hope he will receive it.

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—Charles H. Knapp, the new member of the firm of Sprott & Knapp, will be here next Monday and begin his active interest in the business. Mr. Knapp is well known here, and at Kendallville and Corunna, as he was employed at each of those places for several years, and in places of responsibility such as would call out his business capacity. This means that the new firm will be an active and strong one. Their business will be abstracting and work in that line. We predict success for the new firm.

—Henry Gurtner and wife of Hamilton are in the city visiting.

—Kendallville Sun:—Lefenus Leister who owned the land on which the eastern half of Avilla is located, now lays claim to it and has enployed an attorney to assist in establishing his title. The Avilla people do not appear to be much alarmed about the matter, however.

—The Eckhart Carriage Co. are making the finest line of Surreys, Phaetons, Buggies and Road Wagons ever shown in DeKalb county. Culbertson & Boland will sell you any thing you want in this line at reasonable prices. Call and see them befour you buy.

—Take ten crackers of different brands, taste each without seeing the imprint and if one of Fox's XXXX Square Wafer Butter Crackers is among the number, you'll decide it's the best, much the best. That is the only fair way to find out the best —We have often talked with Charley Moses, the veteran B. & O. engineer, at Garrett, about his wonderful record of over forty years as an engineer, and having never killed a man. But the other day brought him bad luck, for at Tiffin, an old man of 85 was walking near the track and the engine knocked him over and killed him. The Garrett Herald pays pays Charley a high compliment for his extraodinary run of 43 years. We venture to say no other engineer has such a record.

—P. J. Rinehart has moved out to the old Nathan Johnson farm in Jackson township a mile south and a mile west of Concord. Mr. Rinehart has been a farmer before and will no doubt take up the work and make a success of it.

—Rev. J. M. Driver known to all northern Indiana as a sensational preacher, has got into trouble by thinking more of some other women than of his wife and has left his pulpit at Marion. Sensational preachers are not the kind to tie to.

—Napanee is having a sort of post-office war. The post master has concluded to move the post office to another street and the old street is kicking.

—Patriotism runs high among the people just now. Even the boys catch the spirit of the times. One little lad had saved up his pennies and the other day sent them all to the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Long saying it was all he had, but he hoped that his 29 cents would do a little towards buding another ship to take the place of the Main.

—The students of Butler University at Indianapolis have been amusing themselves by hanging Weyler and DeLome in effigy and then pelting them with snow balls and riddling them with bullets. But all this didn't hurt the straw men, and only put the students down to the level of those at Barcelona, Spain, who have been for some months hanging imaginary Yankees.

—The boys of Co. K have received their new Webb belts and feel glad over the change. It means that the old cartridge boxes will not be carried any more, but the cartridges all carried in the belt around the body. It is considered much more convenient. They also got new caps.

—It about time the Shelbyvill Democrats should be told it is not and never has been the only simon pure democratic paper in Indiana. Its mistaken idea of its own importance has kept it in trouble for thirteen years. Its attack on the Indianapolis Sentinel is a case in point. A little more judgment and partly loyalty would be of great benefit to it.

No one seemed to under stand what the trouble was.

CAPTAIN C. D. SIGSBEE, BRAVE AND COOL-HEADED COMMANDER OF THE MAINE.

CAPT. CHARLES D. SIGSBEE'S home—or rather the home of his family, for a navy officer has no home but his ship—is in a pleasant little house in Riggs place, Washington, D. C. Sigsbee married a daughter of Gen. Lockwood shortly after the close of the war, and they have three children. The eldest daughter was married a short time ago to Ensign Kittelle of the navy, who is stationed on the dispatch boat Dolphin. The home life of the Sigsbees always has been exceedingly pleasant, the captain himself having had several pleasant assignments in Washington, where he has been a figure of note. Mrs. Sigsbee comes of military stock and is used to the alarms of war. Her house at Washington is the rendezvous for naval officers at the capital, by whom she is highly esteemed.

Of medium height, with broad shoulders, a spare frame, and hair and mustache just beginning to turn gray, Capt. Sigsbee looks like a man capable of coping with almost every difficulty which might arise in the service. In fact, his experience in almost every branch of the navy has fitted him for emergencies. Born in Albany, Oxford County, Me., 52 years ago, he moved to New York and was appointed as a cadet in the naval academy from that State in 1859. After being graduated in 1863 he was appointed ensign and stationed on the Monongahela, where he remained a year. Then he was sent to the old Brooklyn, and took a gallant part in the battle of Mobile Bay under Farragut in 1864.

FACSIMILE OF SIGSBEE'S FAMOUS DISPATCH.

Sigsbee's work during the war was noticeable for its efficiency, and he did not have to wait long for promotion. He was made a lieutenant in 1867 and assigned to the steamer Ashuelot in the Asiatic squadron. He was promoted to be a lieutenant commander in 1868, a commander in 1882, and has been a captain for several years. He has passed several years at the naval academy, and has been connected with the hydrographic department in Washington. From 1875 to 1879 he was in charge of the coast survey steamer Blake, which thoroughly explored the Gulf of Mexico. While on the Blake Capt. Sigsbee invented a system of deep sea soundings which has since been adopted by all marine men. He also invented a gravitation trap which would bring up water from any certain depth required. Capt. Sigsbee had two years' experience on the European station in command of the old Kearsarge.

It was only a short time ago the Maine was on her way back to Tompkinsville from a cruise in Long Island Sound. When about opposite pier 42, East River, she came suddenly into a kind of pocket formed by a Mallory Line steamer, a tug with two railroad floats of freight cars, and two excursion boats—the Isabella and the Chancellor—both crowded to the rails with passengers. The Maine, forced out of her course, was bearing down directly on the Isabella, whose pilot had either misunderstood or disregarded the signals. At this crisis Capt. Sigsbee took personal command of his vessel, and instantly ordered the engines reversed and the wheel put hard-a-port. The great warship came about with a celerity that astonished all beholders and headed directly in shore, while the Isabella, with her load of passengers, passed by in safety, scarcely four feet clear of the ironclad's stern. Then the Maine ran bow on into the pier, sunk two railroad floats with twenty cars on board, jammed the plates of her bow, and in less than ten minutes had damaged property worth thousands of dollars, but the thousand lives on the excursion boats were saved. The Navy Department was pleased at this action and the captain was complimented in a personal letter by the Secretary of the Navy.

That Capt. Sigsbee is a fearless man in the discharge of his duty is shown by his conduct during the war and his coolness in averting a collision in the East river. Personally, also, he has the great quality of bravery. During the war he was on duty with the North Atlantic blockading squadron. One day a midshipman fell overboard. The sea was heavy, and the Monongahela was traveling along at a good speed. As the cry of "man overboard" reached his ears Sigsbee seized the end of a piece of rope and plunged into the sea. A few strokes bzrought him to the midshipman, who was hurt by his fall and unable to swim. Sigsbee manfully clung to the rope and held the boy's head above water until the pair were rescued by a boat.

Capt. Sigsbee would be a rich man did he not belong to the navy. Inventions made by naval officers are considered to be the property of the United States. His scheme, devised in the Gulf of Mexico, for deep sea soundings, and his gravitation trap for bringing up water from any required depth have proved of great value to mariners all over the world. Had he been able to take out patents on them in his own name his royalties would have been immense. Take him for all in all, he is not only a good naval officer, but a cool, shrewd man, and is popular among his fellows.

CURE FOR PNEUMONIA.

Dr. Charles Lundbeck Claims a Sure Remedy for This Dangerous Disease.

Dr. Charles Lundbeck, who, with Dr. Carl Elfstrom, claims to have discovered a positive cure for pneumonia, is a well-known physician and pathologist in Brooklyn. The two physicians have been experimenting a long time on the cure and say that it works like a charm. No drugs are used. A quantity of blood is drawn from the patient in amount varying with his strength. The average quantity would be about fifty grams. The blood is then prepared by a process in which heat and time play parts in making the desired serum.

DR. CHARLES LUNDBECK.

When the blood has been prepared it is injected into the patient from a hypodermic syringe. Patients in whom the lungs had become solid recovered in from ten to twelve hours. The serum renders the bacilli of pneumonia harmless and thus effects a cure. Dr. Lundbeck, as soon as he satisfies himself that his serum will act in all kinds of cases, will publish his discovery to the world, after the custom of all men of science. Dr. Lundbeck has been in practice in Brooklyn for twenty years, and is prominently associated with Swedish singing societies. Dr. Elfstrom, his collaborator, is also a Swede and a graduate of the Carolinska Medical Institute of Stockholm.

A Lock of Napoleon's Hair.

A unique souvenir of the great Napoleon is kept in the family of his old nurse and attendant, being now in the possession of Prof. Bagley, of Abilene, Kan. He is a native of the island of St. Helena, and his mother was one of the intimates of the guardians of Napoleon. When the Emperor lay dying his old nurse stole to his side and clipped from his head a lock of hair. Part of the lock she gave to Mr. Bagley's mother and she gave it to her son.

It is kept in a bottle and is black and gray, with a trace of brown. For forty years the bottle has been kept in a dark room, that the hair may not be injured by the light. There are about forty strands in all. The relic is held at a great value by the possessor. He has also some cloth from the coffin, a medal given by Napoleon and some other minor souvenirs from the island of St. Helena.

The only other portion of the body of Napoleon known to be on this continent is a single hair that Richard Watson Gilder once owned. He kept it in his watch case. When the watch was repaired he forgot to tell the jeweler of the precious contents. When he went to get it he asked: "Did you find anything in the case?"

"Yes," replied the workman, "there was a hair in there, but it is all right now—I blew it out."

"You blew out a piece of Napoleon Bonaparte," said the editor of the Century.

A Sober-Faced Humorist.

From the present Lord Tennyson's "Memoirs" of his father we take the following story:

"Another most amusing friend of mine was Edward Fitzgerald, an Irishman, the specialty of whose humor it was that, the more comical were his words, the more solemn his face always became. I remember an illustration of this. After a large evening party, when nearly all the guests had departed, the rest remained to smoke. In that party was a man celebrated for his passion for titles. On this occasion he exceeded himself. All his talk was of the rich and great. 'Yesterday, when I was riding with my friend, the Duke of ——;' 'On Tuesday last the Marquis of —— remarked to me.'"

"It went on for a long time; the party listened, some amused, some bored. Edward Fitzgerald was the first to rise. He lighted a candle, passed out of the room, stood still with the lock of the door in his hand, and looked back. He could change his countenance into anything he pleased. It had then exchanged in a moment its usual merry look for one of profound—nay, hopeless—dejection. Slowly and sadly he spoke—

"'I once knew a lord, too; but he is dead!'

"Slowly, sadly, he withdrew, closing the door amid a roar of laughter."

So far, the doctors have persuaded people to have everything else cut out but their tongues.

The men who used to start newspapers are now starting lodges.

WILES OF THE GUIDE.

Somehow the Best Fishing Grounds Are Always on the Other Side.

Being a scientific fisherman, he is an oracle on all matters pertaining to piscatorial pastimes. He carries three tackle-boxes and every tray is full. He has the finest rods, reels, flies, spoons, trolley lines, and hooks. He is prepared to take anything from muskellunge to minnows.

"One thing I want to tell you," he said to the comparative novice: "At all these island lakes the fishing is on the other side. Stop off at any resort, hire a guide, tell him you want the best there is, and it's 99 to 1 he'll pull for the other shore, no matter how many miles have to be traversed. He will take you to the favorite haunts of the gamy black bass. Incidentally he will see that you get a few big fish weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds each, that you may take them home and astonish your friends.

"What you really get is some pickerel and perch, possibly a couple of walleyed pike, a few rock bass, and some sun fish. There is always an explanation for this vast discrepancy between hope and realization. They day is too bright; it's too windy; the lake's too rough, or the appetite of the fish has been taken in their desire to get further up-stream. You have the same experience every day, for these guides are wiser than serpents and keep you in a flutter of joyful anticipation through an entire season. Figure it up and you'll find that most of your money is spent in going to and fro from the other side of the lake.

"Last season I dissected some bass that I bought, found that they were feeding on crawfish, hunted out the rock bottom in the lake, and took 15 of the gamy beauties in one afternoon. The guides acted just as though I had jumped a gold claim of theirs, but I kept quiet and caught bass while the guides kept taking the other fellows across the lake in the morning and back at night. Just to make the whole thing plain, prospect till you find out where the fish are and then go after them."—Detroit Free Press.

Chinese Justice for Pirates.

They make short work of pirates in China. In July last a vessel in charge of Chung Kwei, the son of a wealthy merchant at Singapore, while on its way to Canton, was seized and run aground by pirates and looted of its full cargo of silks and money. The Canton authorities immediately sent a gunboat down the river and the pirates, twenty in number, were captured. They were taken in triumph to San Ling, near Canton, and were condemned by a military tribunal and beheaded in the course of a few hours.

CARRYING MAIL IN CANADA.

Dogs Drag Sledges Two Thousand Miles Over Snow and Ice.

One of the most romantic and picturesque mail services in the Universal Postal Union is that of Northern Canada. Of the several long mail routes penetrating the great wilderness lying between Canada's northern frontier and the Arctic ocean there is one that runs almost due north a distance of 2,012 miles beyond the railroad terminus. It is the route from Edmonton, Alberta, to Fort McPherson, on Peel river, near the Arctic coast. The winter mail for Fort McPherson is known as the "Mackenzie River packet." With the exception of 170 miles by horse sleigh, it is hauled the entire distance on sledges drawn by dogs. On that route, as on most others, there are only two mails a year. The summer "packet" is taken down the Athabasca, Slave and Mackenzie rivers on steamers owned by the Hudson Bay company. The route next in length is that from Selkirk, a few miles north of Winnipeg, to York Factory, on Hudson bay, being 680 miles. The winter packet is hauled by dog train. In summer it goes about 300 miles by steamer, and the remainder of the distance by canoe. The Pence river packet is carried in a similar manner over a distance of 620 miles, from Edmonton to McLeods Fort, in the Rocky Mountains. The Moose Fort packet runs between the Hudson Bay company's post on Lake Temiscamingue and Moose Fort on James bay, covering 420 miles. In summer the mail goes by canoe; in winter it is hauled on a toboggan drawn by men.

The mail matter to and from points north of the Government postoffices in Canada is placed in charge of the Hudson Bay company, and delivered along with the company's mail. Their packet arrangements are such that every post in the northern department is periodically communicated with.

The mail is usually contained in a box 2½ feet long by 1½ feet high, the width of the sledge. Into this a surprising amount of postal matter is pressed. The box is lashed to the tail of the sledge, the fore part being packed with blankets, flour, tea and pork for the "trippers," and white fish for the dogs. It is the custom of the Hudson Bay company never to send less than two men with the mail. One of them—the "tracker"—goes a considerable distance in advance to break a trail, which the train of four dogs follow, while the driver brings up the rear. The "trippers" average 30 miles a day. At night they bivouac on the snow, with nothing but a blanket between them and the aurora borealis, while the thermometer may fall to 60 degrees below zero. At each Hudson Bay company post the mail is transferred to a fresh relay of men and dogs.

In former years so jealously was all excess in mail matter guarded against that the carriage of newspapers was disallowed, with the exception of an annual file of the Montreal Gazette which was forwarded to the company's headquarters at Fort Garry for general perusal. Now, however, newspapers and magazines comprise the bulk of the inward-bound packets. In 1853 the colonists organized a monthly mail service between Fort Garry—now Winnipeg—and Fort Ripley, Minn., then the most advanced of the United States postoffices. The building of the Canadian Pacific railroad has put an end to the greater part of the old packet in Northwestern Canada.

In the illustration the numbers refer to the following subjects: (1) the Moose Fort packet nearing Abittiti House; (2) York Factory packet descending the latitude for form, great scope for variety of gear, harness, and trappings. They are generally rather of the swan outline, the sleighers sitting in the Hayes river; (3) interior of postoffice at Hudson Bay post; (4) an ox-express bound for Manitoba House; and (5) the Mackenzie river packet traveling due north, 2,012 miles beyond the railway terminus.

MADE HIM FAMOUS.

Bright Wife of the Doctor Had Some Schemes of Her Own.

"Know him?" asked one of the two men talking at the corner as he nodded toward a handsome old gentleman just passing by. "No? Well, sir, that's Dr. Blank, the noted surgeon. I have known him ever since we used to frequent the same swimming hole. Just how long that was before the war I'm not going to say. He beat me in the race for the girl that he married, and if he hadn't the chances are that the doctor would still be driving, night and day, over a little back country, attending to a practice that couldn't pay if it wanted to.

"When they were back there in the woods and he was performing operations that no other member of the profession had thought of undertaking, she gathered from the talk of friendly doctors in the same section that he was original, daring, and successful. She begged him to advertise his abilities, but he sternly rebuked her for asking him to transgress the ethics of the profession.

"But you know how it is when a bright woman sets her head. The doctor's office was a shabby little den, without carpet, window shades, pictures, or anything else but the plainest furniture. He resisted all her efforts to change this.

"One evening he came home from a thirty-six-hours' stay with a patient to find that office so transformed in velvet carpet, tapestries, and pictures that he flatly declined to enter it. His wife was away on a visit. Men had been there, done the work, and disappeared. There were no bills, the home merchants knew nothing, and the doctor was so mad that he advertised everything for sale.

"The thing was told in the local papers as a huge joke, and, incidentally, there were related some of the stories of how he took people apart and put them together again. City papers copied and city doctors ridiculed. This riled Blank; he proved that he had worked greater wonders than were credited to him, and he was famous. The means and the end were the work of the little woman who had figured them out before giving a secret commission to furnish that office."—Detroit Free Press.

WINTER IN HOLLAND.

Cold Winter Fun in a Country Where Skaters Abound.

In Holland the fun of winter life takes many forms, and winter facilitates locomotion as the highways of summer available for boats become the best thoroughfares for those who skate. In this way, directly the ice bears, visits are made and distances traveled which cannot be done in summer; and, instead of going round and round as we do here on a small confined space, the Dutch make up a party and pay a visit to some neighboring town or village. A bright winter's morning is always exhilarating; how much more so when cheerful company, free exercise, variety of character, and constant change of scene all tend to make the day as a red letter one. Should the frost be sufficiently severe, a river is most interesting, being on a large scale and partaking more of the character of a fair, which is the case, for instance, on the Maas, at Rotterdam.

The Maas runs very strongly, and the difficulty is for the first coating of ice to form. When a severe frost catches the still water during the night, then "once begun, soon done," and the crews who turn into their berths at night, wake up in the morning to find themselves frozen in. The canals naturally soon freeze over, and the boat traffic is supplanted by baggage sledges, large and small. Near dwelling houses are seen little box-sledges for the children.

These are the same as the seventeenth century contrivances—the child, sits with just room for its feet, and, with stick in each hand, pushes astern and propels itself ahead. The adult sledges are in some cases simply gorgeous, as the opportunity affords great body, the driver perched at the back, as on the tail, the sweeping-irons following the curve of the swan's neck; over these run the reins. One horse generally constitutes the team.

An American Artist.

Most of New York's noted society beauties have been painted by a woman whose miniatures long ago became famous, and she was noted as the most successful and fashionable artist in that line that New York possessed. Now this fortunate artist is in London, where she painted a miniature of the Prince of Wales in the costume that he wore at the famous ball given by the Duchess of Devonshire. The privilege of painting this would have been in itself honor enough for most artists, but in addition the Prince sent the artist a diamond heart pin, which represented Persimmon, the Prince's horse, in diamonds, with the jockey's colors done in enamel. After the fact of the presentation became public the price of her minatures went up to $1,000, and persons are wondering if the influence of the Prince of Wales' patronage will be strong enough to have the same effect in New York.—New York Sun.

Honors of War.

"Honors of war" is the privilege allowed to the enemy on capitulation of being permitted to retain their arms. This is the highest honor a victor can pay a vanquished foe.

We have noticed that since the women wear silk petticoats, it takes less provocation than formerly to make them kick.

"Yes, my sight improved jest as soon as I was 'p'inted postmaster." "How do you account for it? "Readin' postal cards."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BITS FOR BOOKWORMS

London Truth suggests that as Austrian princes are called archdukes, German princes should henceforth style themselves archangels, to emphasize the gospel of his sacred majesty's person.

Mrs. Annie Hurd Dyer is translating into Japanese the two novels by James Lane Allen, entitled "A Kentucky Cardinal" and "Aftermath." Both books display so fine a feeling for nature and so delicate a sense of beauty that it is thought they will appeal peculiarly to the Japanese mind.

Under the title of "The Revolutionary Pictures," a collection has been made of the original paintings and drawings illustrating Senator Lodge's "Story of the Revolution" now appearing in Scribner's Magazine. This collection of pictures forms an impressive gallery of revolutionary art, worth many thousands of dollars. They are now being exhibited in various cities throughout the country under the auspices of the local patriotic societies.

Jerome K. Jerome, who has relinquished the editorship of both the Idler and To-Day, has a short humorous novel ready for publication early in the year. Literature says that all Mr. Jerome's books have been translated into Norwegian, and in Germany, France, Russia and Scandinavia he is one of the very few English writers at all well known.

Having successfully carried his new volume of poems through the press Edmund Clarence Stedman proposes to devote some labor to another anthology similar in scope to that in which he traversed the poetry of the Victorian era, but dealing with American verse. Like its predecessor, the new collection will serve as a companion to the editor's critical writings on the subject.

In Great Britain 6,244 new books and 1,682 new editions were published during 1897, according to the Publishers' Circular. The various classes into which these books are divided maintain their relative proportions to the whole with two exceptions: books on law have decreased in number noticeably, while the proportion of books on political and economical subjects has increased even more noticeably.

The speech by which Gabrielle d'Annunzio obtained the suffrages of the Roman rustics contained not one single allusion to any of those vital questions which make up the essence of modern Italian politics. The fact that this novelty in electioneering oratory should have gained its end, and that the author of "The Triumph of Death" sits to-day in the Representative Chamber at Rome has caused much chagrin to his enemies, who have seriously contemplated lodging a petition against D'Annunzio's return.

A Generous Duchess.

It is generally agreed that the dominant note of the character of the late Duchess of Teck was her amiability, but that term does inadequate justice to the heart from which it sprung. She was charity itself, and a wonderful organizer of charitable relief on a large scale.

It is said that she gave out of her own pocket a good fifth of the annual amount granted to her by Parliament, and a story, vouched for by the St. James' Budget, shows that she knew how to give on a small scale; to be generous in mind as well as with money.

There were to be some festivities at White Lodge, the Richmond residence of the duchess, and an invitation was sent to the secretary of a charity in which the duchess was interested. By a later post the young lady received a letter from a friend, asking her to a tennis party which was to be held the same day.

Next morning both invitations were acknowledged, but the replies were carelessly put in the wrong envelopes. The duchess opened the letter in which the writer declared to her friend that she was very sorry she could not come to tennis, because "Stout Mary" had asked her to White Lodge, and she was bound to go.

The day duly arrived, and the frank young lady was warmly welcomed by the duchess, who afterward took her aside and laughing said:

"My dear girl, I know I am stout, but I cannot help it. You should be more careful in posting your letters, and never forget that you do not know who will read what you write. Don't apologize. I have forgiven you."

Christy Minstrels.

The Toronto Saturday Night tells the following story of Dean Vaughan. He had been preparing some colored clergymen for mission work, and had invited them to dine with him in the Temple.

On that day Mrs. Vaughan waited an hour in the drawing-room for her guests, but none came. At last she mentioned to the butler that it was odd that the invited guests did not appear.

"Yes, ma'am," he replied, "and what's odder still, I've done nothing all the evening but turn Christy Minstrels away from the door."

The Gingerbread Tree.

There is a species of palm twenty-five or thirty feet in height, growing in Egypt, Abyssinia, Nubia, and Arabia, producing fruits in long clusters, each of which contains from one to two hundred. These fruits are of an irregular form, of a rich yellowish-brown color, and are beautifully polished. In Upper Egypt they form part of the food for the poorer classes, the part eaten being the fibrous mealy husk, which tastes almost exactly like ginger-bread, whence the popular name of "gingerbread tree" in Egypt.

WIDELY KNOWN PREACHER.

Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, Recently Celebrated His 80th Birthday.

Rev. Dr. Benjamin Morgan Palmer, of New Orleans, who recently celebrated the 80th anniversary of his birth, is one of the most widely known and deeply beloved clergymen in the South. He is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New Orleans, one of the most beautiful of the churches in the Crescent City. For years he has stood at the head of Presbyterianism in the South. Dr. Palmer in his prime was one of the most gifted of the pulpit orators of this country. He won international fame as a preacher, and by many was considered the superior of even Beecher. Just before the war Dr. Palmer was in the full tide of his power as an orator, and it was said that it was his words that set the South on fire. The story of his life is told in a pretty little book which was published a few years ago, and which is called The Broken Home. Year by year he has seen all his loved ones depart, and he is now alone in his old age.

REV. DR. PALMER.

Dr. Palmer is considered as part of New Orleans. The celebration of his birthday anniversary recently was an affair in which the whole city was interested.

GAVE UP HER FORTUNE.

Now She's Sorry and Is Trying to Get It Back.

Mrs. Emma Spreckles-Watson has attracted attention to herself by suing her father in the courts of Honolulu for $1,500,000. She is the daughter of Claus Spreckles, the sugar king, and when they were living in San Francisco a few years ago he lavished wealth upon her. From time to time he gave her presents until she finally had $1,500,000 in her own name. Then came Thomas Watson, a grain speculator, with whom she fell in love and whom she married secretly. When he learned of the wedding Spreckles was wild with anger and charged Watson with being a fortune hunter. Thereupon Mrs. Watson returned to her father all the money he had given her. Spreckles took it—probably to her surprise—and he and his daughter have been unfriendly since. Now she wishes she had it and is suing to get it back. Mrs. Watson is tall and stately and inherits all her famous father's pluck and independence.

Nelson's Wonderful Feat.

Writers of historical reminiscences have to be masters of a certain amount of accurate information about their heroes if they wish to avoid mistakes. If they are not, they are sure to "get things mixed."

Not long since a reviewer in the London Times, writing of a book named "Roving Commissions," related on his own account the following episode of Nelson, the great admiral:

"While in chase of Villeneuve's French fleet he was informed of the enemy heaving in sight, at which information Nelson evinced the highest satisfaction, and gleefully rubbed his hands."

As a correspondent of the Times points out, this incident occurred in 1805. Nelson lost his right arm in the attack on Santa Cruz, Teneriffe, in 1797—eight years prior to his pursuit of Villeneuve's fleet. It would have been, therefore, a difficult matter for him to "rub his hands" in 1805.

Nature's Balloons.

The island of fire, known by the natives as "The Home of the Hot Devils," is a recent discovery in Java. In the center of a huge lake of boiling mud and slime exists a phenomenon absolutely unique, and so wonderful that tourists brave the difficulties of the long journey inland simply to see it. Scores of enormous bubbles are formed in the sticky slime by the gases which arise from the lower depths, and these grow and increase to an enormous size, looking like nothing so much as the large model balloons sent up sometimes to ascertain the direction of the wind. These bubbles, some of them, attain a diameter of five or six feet before they burst, which they do with a loud explosion. The sounds are described as resembling a constant series of heavy platoon firing.

To the Point.

A certain Eastern company, that some time ago was anxious to purchase a silver-lead mine, found itself in a state of uncertainty. What seemed to be a really attractive mine was found to be in the market, and negotiations for its purchase were entered upon. The result of these negotiations is reported by the Spokane Miner and Electrician.

As the ore assayed well, and everything looked propitious, a mining expert was sent to examine the mine. His report was favorable, in fact, it was too favorable. He certified that the ore was there in large quantities, and that it was extremely valuable. His unqualified praise aroused the suspicion of the would-be purchasers. If the mine was indeed so valuable, why was the price so low? The company determined to investigate more closely.

At this point a well-known mining man of Spokane recommended that a certain rough-and-ready genius, a man who had graduated from no college, should be sent to look at the mine.

"You can depend on his judgment," said the mining man, "and he will tell you nothing but the truth. You had better trust to his report, which, in all probability, will be short and very much to the point."

The advice was followed, and the event showed the wisdom of the adviser. As he had predicted, the report was short and full of pith. It read substantially as follows:

"Dear Sirs—I have made an examination of the 'Cliff Dweller' mine, and report that the ore is there as ripresinted, that it assays high, that it is there in plenty, but to get your supplies in and your ore out you will need a pack-thrain of bald agles."

The mine was rejected on the ground of inaccessibility.

Petrified Indian.

A petrified Indian mounts guard on the bank of a stream in Yellowstone Park. The spot is near a pretty little cove within sight of the Lake Hotel, which is visited every year by hundreds of people from all parts of the globe. At one time a small stream flowed down between two hills into the cove, but it is now dry. Due west from the spot is Franklin Island, three miles from the shore.

After considerable trouble F. Jay Haynes of St. Paul succeeded in taking a photograph of the remains. The picture shows the Indian in a standing position, with the left arm extended upward. The right arm is close to the side, and the legs are in the position one would assume when taking a step forward. As the Indian stands in the picture he is about eight feet high. This was not his natural height, for dirt and rock solidified below his feet. The body weighs 400 pounds.

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station

Reasonable success seems to have followed the efforts of the management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all the passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this Great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston, and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.

A WORD OF ADVICE

To Those Coming to Alaska or the Klondike Gold Fields.

One thing should be impressed upon every miner, prospector or trader coming to Alaska, to the Klondike, or the Yukon country, and that is the necessity for providing an adequate and proper food supply. Whether procured in the States, in the Dominion, or at the supply stores here or further on, this must be his primary concern. Upon the manner in which the miner has observed or neglected this precaution more than upon any other one thing will his success or failure depend.

These supplies must be healthful and should be concentrated, but the most careful attention in the selection of foods that will keep unimpaired indefinitely under all the conditions which they will have to encounter is imperative. For instance, as bread raised with baking powder must be relied upon for the chief part of every meal, imagine the helplessness of a miner with a can of spoiled baking powder. Buy only the very best flour; it is the cheapest in the end. Experience has shown the Royal Baking Powder to be the most reliable and the trading companies now uniformly supply this brand, as others will not keep in this climate. Be sure that the bacon is sweet, sound and thoroughly cured. These are the absolute necessities upon which all must place a chief reliance, and can under no circumstances be neglected. They may, of course, be supplemented by as many comforts or delicacies as the prospector may be able to pack or desire to pay for.—From the Alaska Mining Journal.

A book of receipts for all kinds of cookery, which is specially valuable for use upon the trail or in the camp, is published by the Royal Baking Powder Company, of New York. The receipts are thoroughly practical, and the methods are carefully explained, so that the inexperienced may, with its aid, readily prepare everything requisite for a good, wholesome meal, or even dainties if he has the necessary materials. The matter is in compact though durable form, the whole book weighing but two ounces. Under a special arrangement, this book will be sent free to miners or others who may desire it. We would recommend that every one going to the Klondike procure a copy. Address the Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

Sixteen thousand dollars is the record price paid for a cablegram, that price having been paid for a message sent by Mr. Henniker Heaton to Australia in behalf of the British Parliament. Reuter's account of the murderer Deeming's trial, 4,000 words, cost $8,000. An 1,800-word dispatch from London to Argentina cost $7,500. The most expensive private message so far is that sent by the King of Italy to the Duke of Abruzzi at Rio Janeiro, informing him of the death of his father, the late Duke of Aosta, which cost $2,970.

Couldn't Make It.

The bull that tried to butt down a bridge, and the goat that tackled an anvil, couldn't make it, and were knocked out, bruised and bleeding. From such bruises down to pin-head blue spots they are curable, easily and surely. The men who get the worst bruises always get the best cure. They make it every time. There are right ways and wrong ways of doing things, as the bull and the goat found out. The best cure for a bruise is St. Jacobs Oil. The right way to cure is to use it and find out.

FIELD INTRODUCED SCHURZ.

But It Was Not Such an Introduction as the Statesman Wanted.

Carl Schurz's appearance as a Citizens Union orator recalled to a friend of the late Eugene Field an experience that Mr. Schurz had in campaigning a dozen years or more, says the New York Sun. Mr. Schurz was making speeches in the West for the Republican party at that time, and Eugene Field was detailed by the Chicago paper with which he was connected to accompany Mr. Schurz on the spellbinding expedition and send dispatches to his paper describing it.

When Mr. Schurz reached a small town in Michigan half an hour before the time set for the meeting no committee met him at the train. Mr. Schurz and Mr. Field found their way to the hall, where a motley crowd had collected to hear the speaker.

Everything was perfectly regular about the meeting except that no one had been selected to introduce the speaker. Mr. Schurz and Mr. Field walked up on the platform and were greeted with a loud cheer. Mr. Schurz didn't intend to lose an opportunity to speak simply because there was no one to introduce him. Turning to Mr. Field, he said:

"Field, it's getting late and I'm anxious to go ahead. No one knows you here, so just get up and introduce me. You needn't say much of anything. Just tell them that I am Mr. Schurz and that I'm going to talk to them."

Mr. Field unrolled himself to his full height, and, ambling to the front of the platform, said in a very husky voice:

"Ladies und shentlemens, I regred dot I haf such a sore throat dot I can not address dis evenings. I am very sorry alretty for dis disappointment. However, I am more dan bleased to tell you dot I haf with me my young journalistic frendt, Mr. Eugene Field, of Chicago, und he vill now speak to you aboud steel rails."

When Field began this introduction Mr. Schurz's expression was puzzled, and when he concluded it the speaker of the evening looked angry. Despite Mr. Schurz's preliminary explanation that he really was Mr. Schurz, the people who heard him on that occasion have been divided in opinion as to whether the speaker was Schurz or Field.

She was a bride of only three short months, but she had her troubles and naturally made a confidante of her mother.

"My dear child," said the mother, "if you would have neither eyes nor ears when your husband comes home late from the club you might be happier."

"Perhaps so," answered the young wife, with an air of weariness, "but what am I to do with my nose?"

WITH THREADS OF METAL.

Tinsel Fabrics and the More Costly Brocades of Gold and Silver.

Tinsel fabrics are the lower priced of the cloths into which gold or silver threads have been woven. In tinsel fabrics the gold threads are of brass or copper, gilded, and the silver threads are of white metal. These threads of metal, originally fine wire, are rolled flat and burnished, and they gliaten in the fabric wherever the pattern brings them to the surface. Tinsel fabrics are made about three-fourths of a yard in width, and they sell at 75 cents to $2.50 a yard. They come in various colors, and many of them are beautiful and artistic in design. Some are copies of old Venetian tapestries. Tinsel fabrics are used for church and for theatrical purposes, and sometimes for gowns and for decorative purposes.

The costlier fabrics, with interwoven metal threads, are called gold and silver brocades. In these the gold threads are of silver, gold-plated, and the silver threads are of pure silver; the body of the fabric is of silk. The brocades are all beautiful, and many of them are exceedingly so. These fabrics are made about five-eighths of a yard in width, and they sell at various prices up to $25, and sometimes as high as $50 a yard. The costliest of these fabrics are very rarely imported into this country, brocades at $10 and $12 a yard being about the highest priced used here. If more elaborate fabrics are required they are usually imported to order. The finer fabrics, with metal threads, are made in France, the commoner kinds in Germany.

Gold and silver brocades are here used almost exclusively for church purposes, and chiefly for vestments. They are imported in red, violet and green, and also in black with silver threads, the black and silver being for mourning. Gold and silver brocades are also used to a limited extent for decorative purposes.

Such fabrics, and gold embroidery, often of the costliest description, are far more commonly used in Europe than here, both for church and for military purposes.—New York Sun.

ABOVE HER GRAVE.

This Aged Husband Erected a Home Over His Wife's Tomb.

Col. Elisha De Board, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Gilmer County, Ga., has recently had a small but beautiful eight-sided residence erected above his wife's grave. The old man has passed the four-score year mark and during the past five years his only solace has been in almost constant visits to the grave of her who for fifty years of life was a devoted wife and companion. From the early hours of morning on till the last beam of day had faded he would sit and fancy the inanimate form moldering away beneath the grass and flowers was once more quick with life and sharing again the facilities of home. When the weather would permit he would often spend the evening hours at her graveside, never quitting the place until the shades and dampness of night had come on. But this was not satisfying, and so the structure shown in the illustration here was built that the old man might more conveniently assuage the sorrows of his closing days.

It is only a short distance from her grave to the old, well-furnished mansion where they dwelt for half a century together. But when she was gone the place had lost its charm. The halls were lonely and the fireside desolate. Nothing could satisfy the old man's longing. In the new structure, small and circumscribed though it may be, there is at hand that which alone to him in life is dear. Here he can read or sit alone and think or tend the flowers that adorn her tomb. At night he finds repose and rest within touch of the grave he loves so well.

Napoleon's History.

The rise and fall of Napoleon reads more like a romance than any other part of the world's history. A little, insignificant man, a native of half-civilized and despised Corsica, ill-educated, ill-tempered and ill-mannered, is accepted by the proudest, politest and most intellectual of civilized nations as its absolute ruler. Not only does it make him Emperor after repudiating a regal form of government, but worships him almost as a deity, although while taking the greatest care of his own person, he destroys the flower of its manhood in useless wars, and by his example proves his contempt for the domestic ties that hold society together. He conquers every nation that meets him in the field, and is only checked at last by the sea and the northern cold. Finally, he is defeated and banished to St. Helena, "where he lived very happily ever after," as if the author had not the heart to kill his hero. No writer of fiction would dare to invent such an improbable romance, and if the truth of the story were not beyond question no one would believe it. Indeed, Archbishop Whately wrote, as a metaphysical jeu d'esprit, a pamphlet in which he proved to demonstration that Napoleon had not, and never could have, lived or done what the then contemporary records of his career narrated. The conquests of Mexico and Peru, and many of the exploits of Drake and his companions, would also be absolutely incredible if they were not known to be true.

When a man's sins find him out they're apt to hang around until he comes in again.

AN OVERWORKED BRAIN.

From the Record, Pierceton, Ind.

Determined to rise as an educator, Ernest Kemper, of Pierceton, Ind., overtaxed himself mentally and physically. He was ambitious; his mind was always on his work. From early morn until late at night he continually pored over his books.

Few persons, even with the strongest constitutions, can keep up under such a strain.

In addition to his studies, Mr. Kemper was teaching a school some three miles from his home. Finally, his excessive study and the exposure of going to and from school in all kinds of weather undermined his health.

He was taken to his bed with pneumonia and his overworked brain almost collapsed. For several weeks he was seriously ill.

Catarrh had taken root in his system and his mind was in a delicate condition. He was sent to Colorado, where he spent three months without receiving any benefit. Then a noted specialist from Cleveland treated him without avail, and then a hospital in Chicago was tried, but all absolutely without benefit. Finally his physician recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and from the first box he began to improve. When he had taken nine boxes he was completely cured. This famous blood and nerve medicine accomplished what former expensive treament failed to do. Mr. Kemper says his catarrh has entirely left him; he is strong again and weighs nine pounds more than he ever did. He gives the pills the entire credit. He is starting teaching again and feels abundantly able to continue the work. To prove that the above is true Mr. Kemper's affidavit follows:

Overstudy.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this the 10th day of September, 1897.

R. P. WATT, Notary Public.

We doubt if these pills have an equal in all the range of medicine, for building up a run down and debilitated system.

Ashes Make Bone.

The successful swine breeder does not forget that ashes are essential in building bone in hogs. Where wood ashes cannot be obtained, corn cobs can be burned to a charcoal or else to a fine ash and kept in some clean place to which the hogs have access at all times. There need then be no special work in feeding it to them at any stated time.

PRES. M'KINLEY VS. FREE SILVER.

A battle of giants is going to take place this summer on 30,000 farms in America, not in talk or votes, but in yields. Salzer's two new potato marvels are named as above, and he offers a price for the biggest potato yield, also $400 in gold for suitable names for his corn (17 inches long) and oat prodigies. Only seedsmen in America growing grasses, clovers and farm seeds and selling potatoes at $1.50 a barrel. The editor urges you to try Salzer's Northern Grown Seeds, and to Send This Notice with 10 Cts. in Stamps to John A. Sound Money Discussion.

Between now and next presidential election there will be hosts of discussions of the questions of "sound money" and silver. However opinions may be divided on these points, there is but one public and professional opinion, and that is a favorable one, regarding the merits of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a remedy for and preventive of malaria, liver trouble and rheumatism.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. MRS. PINKHAM CONQUERS BACKACHE.

Four Women Who Owe Their Present Happiness to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I wrote to you last June, I was not able to do anything. I suffered with backache, headache, bearing-down pains, pains in my lower limbs, and ached all through my body. Menstruations were very painful. I was almost a skeleton. I followed your advice and now am well and fleshy, and able to do all my own housework. I took medicine from a physician for over a year, and it did not do me a particle of good. I would advise all suffering women to write to Mrs. Pinkham. She will answer all letters promptly, and tell them how to cure those aches and pains so common to women.—Mrs. C. L. WINN, Marquez, Texas.

I think it is my duty to write and let you know what your medicine has done for me. For two years I suffered with female weakness, bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and too frequent occurrence of the menses. I was always complaining. My husband urged me to try your Vegetable Compound, and I finally did. I have taken three bottles and it has made me feel like a different woman. I advise every woman that suffers to take your medicine and be cured.—Mrs. GARRETT LICHTY, 612 S. Prince St., Lancaster, Pa.

I had suffered for over two years with backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness, falling and ulceration of the womb, leucorrhœa, and about every ill a woman could have. I had tried doctors, but with no success, and it seemed as though death was the only relief for me. After using five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and four packages of Sanative Wash, I am well. Have had no more pain, womb trouble, backache or headache.—Mrs. CLAUDIA HALPIN, Cream Ridge, N. J.

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was afflicted with female complaints so that I could hardly walk. My back ached terribly, in fact, I ached all over. Was not able to raise myself up some of the time. I had no appetite and was so nervous that I could hardly sleep. I have taken but two bottles of your Compound and feel like another person, can now eat and sleep to perfection, in fact, am perfectly well.—Mrs. SUE MCCULLOUGH, Adlai, W. Va.

5 DROPS [TRADE MARK.]

Cured of Rheumatism.

CANNOT FIND WORDS ENOUGH TO PRAISE YOUR WONDERFUL REMEDY "5 DROPS"

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago: Gentlemen—I thought that I would write you a statement and tell you how I have got along since I have used your "5 DROPS." I must say that I am entirely well once more, thanks to your wonderful remedy. It has accomplished more good from the sample bottle and the dollar bottle than the thirty dollars' worth of medicine I have used of other manufacturers. I tried all kinds of medicine I saw advertised for Rheumatism, but could not get any relief from the dreadful suffering till I got a sample bottle of your "5 DROPS," and after taking the same for a few days I began to have less of those severe pains racking through my body. After I got the sample bottle most used up I could begin to rest some every night; after I had used about half the dollar bottle then all my pains left me. Oh! what a comfort it was! when I could sleep again at night without any more suffering. I am so thankful to you and your "5 DROPS" that I cannot find words enough in praise of your wonderful remedy for the cure of rheumatism, and I can safely recommend it to all suffering humanity and say that they cannot purchase any better medicine than "5 DROPS" for all their ills. Thanking you, gentlemen, for all your kindness, I remain, forever, your friend,

R. M. LIFE, Porterfield, Wis., Feb. 10, '98.

SUFFERED THE TORTURES OF THE DAMNED.

President Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago: My Dear Sir—After suffering the tortures of the damned for a long time from an attack of Rheumatism, I wish to say that your Rheumatic Cure "5 DROPS" has cured me of all my troubles, which were all caused by one complaint—Rheumatism. I had Heart Trouble, Piles, Bladder Trouble and Constipation. I would not take $500 and do without the remedies even if it only cured the Catarrh for me, which it has done. Therefore, I willingly take the agency for the sale of your medicines, for they are a boon to mankind. Gratefully yours,

J. W. DENNIS, 120 Normal Av., Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1898.

THE D. OF H.

The social given last evening by the ladies of the Degree of Honor, at the A. O. U. W. hall was a great success. The attendance was large, and the exercises very fine. There were recitations, singing and similar entertaining things including the laughable minstrels who have stockings on their hands to make them look like little pickaninnies. A nice lunch followed the literary exercises and then after a season of social intercourse, the crowd dispersed with the unanimous verdict that the D. of R. are fine entertainers. The mite taken was but ten cents for the entire entertainment, but they realized $12. It was called an "Inaugural Tea" being on the 4th of March. The full program is:

Instrumental Music	MRS. WISE
Topsy Turvey Chorus	EIGHT LADIES
Recitation	ROSSIE BAXTER
Vocal Solo	MRS. WISE
Recitation	LORAINE HARTMAN
Recitation	SIDNEY FARMER
Exercise by	SIX GIRLS

All were good.

SAD FUN.

A man near Pendleton this state, was shot through the heart by accident the other day. The farmers there had a way of putting up money enough to buy a fat beef, then shoot at a mark to get it, the best shot taking the beef. One man was fixing the sight on his gun, when his coat sleeve caught the hammer, and it went off, the bullet going entirely through his best friend. It stopped the fun at once.

A BIG DITCH

(Goshen Democrat.)

John Hughes, of Nappanee, a practical ditch dredger, has taken a contract of opening a ditch between nine and ten miles long and forty-four feet wide and from ten to eighteen feet deep, in Newton county, this state, for which he is to receive $10,500. Mr. Hughes will start to Newton county in a day or two, where he will build a dredge boat twenty-two feet wide and seventy-two feet long, and requires 37,000 feet of lumber, upon which will be placed his steam engine, crane and scoop. Conrad Volkman, the Nappanee machinist, will furnish the engine and boiler. Mr. Hughes will also build a two-story floating house in which he and his force will cook, eat and sleep. This will be floated in the rear of the dredge boat.

A Truthful Statement.

An excellent and invaluable remedy, for the cure of cough, cold and hoarseness, is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and Mr. Jas. Hadfield, 350 West St., New York City, verifies this statement. He writes: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is a most excellent remedy for cough, cold and hoarseness, and I take great pleasure in recommending it to all, who require such a valuable household medicine." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

ABE BOBS UP AGAIN.

(St Joe News)

Abe Johnson of Spencerville, has been heard from again. He is in the penitentiary at Michigan City, serving out a sentence and writes to have the News sent to his address. We do not know what Abe is under sentence for, but the letterhead on which the letter was written showed that his prison number is 932, cell 18 and range E. Among the prison rules, printed on the letterhead were the following:

Friends may bring prisoners a small quanity of fruiton Visiting Sunday or on legal holidays, and then not more than can be consumed by prisoner during the visit. Melons, meats, baked stuff and confectionery not admitted.

First grade prisoners can write each alternate Sunday; second grade can write on the fourth Sunday of each month; third grade will not be permitted to write at all.

All mail must be addressed to P. O. Box No. 41.

No tobacco will be admitted. Suspenders, pocket comb and handkerchief may be sent by mail—but no other articles of clothing will be admitted until within one week of prisoners release on parole or discharge.

FACTS ABOUT CUBA

An exchange has the following items about the "Gem of the Antilles:"

Cuba lies about 125 miles south of the southern part of Florida. It is about 700 miles in length and twenty-one miles wide in its narrowest part and 110 miles in the widest part. It contains 43,320 square miles, or about 7,000 more square miles than Indiana. Its population is given at 1,632,000, one fifth of whom live in Havana. It is estimated that the island could furnish homes for 12,000,000 and then be no more densely populated than Massachusetts now is. Of the population sixty-five per cent. are white, principally immigrants from Spain, Havana alone has 76,000 blacks. Negro slavery existed on the island until 1886. The bones of Columbus, it is claimed, repose in the cathredal at Havana, also those of his son, Diego.

The supreme executive power of the government of the island is vested in a governor general, appointed by the crown at Madrid, and the people have been badly governed since 1492. The island owes Uncle Sam $570,000.

In 1848 President Polk offered $100,000,000 for Cuba, and in 1854 the Os-Manifesto, signed by Buchanan, Soule and Mason, claimed the right to seize and annex it if Spain refused to sell.

OBITUARY.

Special to the DAILY COURIER.

ST. JOE, IND., MARCH 4, 1898.

The barber shop of John C. Hull at this place was burglarized some time during last night, of all the razors and hair clippers also a small amount of cigars. Opening his shop this morning, Mr. Hull found a rear window open and that, if he wanted to do any work he must purchase a new set of tools entrely. As near as Mr. Hull can tell 21 razors, 3 pair of clippers and about 50 cigars were taken. No clue to robbers.

Get More and You Get Less

Why is it every sarsaparilla which tries to sell itself, ranges itself against Ayer's as the standard? Why is it that all have to offer extra inducements—bigger bottles, fancy wrappers, cheaper price—anything, everything, but the one inducement of quality?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has never been equaled by any cheap imitation of it, and quality tells, just as blood tells.

It Is the Standard.

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than twenty-five years, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. A preparation must possess great merit to maintain such a reputation. I believe your sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the general public. I often hear other manufacturers say that this is "as good as Ayer's," but no one ever yet heard it said that Ayer's was "as good" as any other kind. They always set Ayer's up as the standard of excellence."—S. F. BOYCE, Duluth, Minn.

TOOK A LIFE TIME.

But Was Amply Rewarded—The Knowledge Acquired Graciously

DEDICATED TO HUMANITY.

Many years ago Dr. Wheeler, then a young man with keen perception of physical needs, noted the lack of knowledge in the treatment of nerves, and through them the entire system. He determined to devote his life and direct his efforts to the study and treatment of that mysterious and subtle structure. He followed his determination well and successfully, and as a result the world is endowed with a remedy, Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, which is a specific for all nervous troubles. It remained for Dr. Wheeler to present and develop the fact that disease is a result of a debilitated nerve system; that strong nerves make health. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is, beyond all doubt, the true remedy for sick nerves. W. A. Emmons, Pettysville, Ohio, endorses this statement. He says:

"Last summer I was stricken with sleeplessness and nervous prostration. I could get no relief, and was growing worse when Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was recommended. The first bottle helped me and the third one restored me to perfect health. During my sickness I lost 20 pounds, which I soon regained after the use of this valuable medicine."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is not an experimental compound, neither is its virtue confined to the treatment of special nerves, but through the entire nervous system, restoring strength to all the vital organs.

IMPROVEMENTS

Are Extensive and Numerous at the South End.

The DeWitt saw mill has been undergoing quite extensive repair. The two old boilers have been taken out and M. A. Miller and his men been busy for two weeks placing a new one. This is of much larger capacity, and will not consume so much fuel. The boiler has been placed on the foundation, today and smoke stack raised. This was a big job, but Mr. Miller's extensive practice in this line, expedited matters, and when the ropes, etc, were once ready it was soon up. John Weaver is also at work in doing the carpenter work made necessary by the arrangement of the new boiler.

Some repairs are also being made on the P. L. Bishop flouring mill, among which we noticed a new cupola over the engine room.

STOLE THE BRASS

From Mr. Harman's Well Digging Machinery.

When Mr. Harman began unloading his heavy well digging machinery he discovered that all the brass valves, oil cups, etc, on the engine had been stolen. The work it is supposed was done while the machinery was enroute from Chicago Junction to Auburn, and was probably the work of hobos. The parts have all been replaced with new brass, but the loss to Mr. Harman, together with th great expense of moving the machinery up from the Junction, will materially reduce the profits on the present contract.

A Peerless Liniment.

As a pain destroyer and cure for rheumatism, Salvation Oil is the peer of all liniments. Mr. Wm. H. Brown, proprietor of Striebinger House, Cleveland, O., writes: "I suffered from rheumatism for twelve years and my last attack kept me in bed, unable to walk. I used Salvation Oil and soon was up and about. As a pain destroyer this liniment has no equal." Salvation Oil is sold everywhere for 25 cents. Try it and be convinced.

The Wood Funeral

About 100 of our people and those from Garrett, met the south bound train yesterday afternoon, with the remains of the late Dr. Fred. B. Wood. The G. A. R. of this place and Garrett were generally present to do honor to their fallen comrade, for Dr. Wood had served several years in the 29th Ind, the regiment to which Cyrus Wyland belonged. He was captured at Chickamauga and confined in Andersonville a year or more. After the war he studied medicine and located Grand Haven, Mich. Twelve years ago he came to Garrett. In 1888 he was elected coroner of this county, serving two years, and in 1894, he ran for the legislature but went down in the landslide. He was in early life a resident of Troy township in this county, his people having moved there from Williams Co. He had been for several years a member of our pension board. A post mortem examination showed no gall stones, but a diseased state of the intestine at the point whbere the gall duct enters it, the trouble being such that the duct was closed. This of course, affected the parts about there and caused his death His age was about 56. His second wife and two sons survive him. He leaves a good home and considerable other town property in Garrett.

AUBURN, W. R. C.

They Celebrate Their Thirteenth Year.

Last evening the ladies of the Auburn W. R. C., celebrated the thirteenth anniversary of their organization by a public meeting, which proved a most agreeable affair.

The meeting was called to order by its president Mrs. Mary Clark, and she invited to the platform, Mrs. Arch Sinclair, president of the Waterloo W. R. C. many of whom had come over to assist and enjoy the meeting.

There was a regular literary program, the most of which was given. The first exercise was the National song "America" by the audience, and this was followed by select reading by Mrs. G. W. Gordon. Then there was a recitation, "The Raggedy Man" by Miss Sidney Farmer, and another the name of which we did not get, was given by Miss Olive Elson. Then there were calls for voluntary remarks by visiting friends, and several spoke including Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. J. C. Brand and Gen. Blair, of Waterloo, the last named making one the principal addresses. There was also a speech by Comrade Weamer of this place. All the exercises were good, the only partial failure being in the music, Mrs. Cuppy and several other singers being detained by illness or other causes. Then there was a love-luncheon and a visit, heartily enjoyed by all.

The visitors from Waterloo were, Gen. Blair and wife, F. C. Waterman and wife, Mrs. Arch Sinclair, Mrs. J. C. Brand, Mrs. Frank Shaver, Mrs. W. O. Butler, Mrs. Will Getts Mrs. J. P. McCague, Mrs. John Beckner, and Mrs. Antony Mergy. All these came over the bad roads with teams, but expressed themselves well paid for their trip.

WILL TEST IT.

The township in which Columbia City is located has put a full set of candidates for township offices in the field, on the democratic ticket, and will make a demand to have the names put on the regular ballot this fall. They will bring a suit in court to compel the county clerk to put the names on. This suit will test the law governing the time electing trustees and justices. Marshall & McNagny act as attorney.

LOOKS LIKE BUTLER.

The Fort Wayne Journal gets the following from some of its exchanges. It may be true, or may not.

A report comes from Buffalo that on or about May 1, there will be a general shake up in the operating department of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern. After that date, it is claimed, the road will be divided into three divisions instead of four, as follows: West Seneca, a suburb of Buffalo, to Collingwood, O.; Collingwood to Butler, Ind; Butler to Englewood, a suburb of Chicago. Should this rumor prove true, it will probably result in a number of important changes among officials, and will cut considerable of a figure with Toledo, as it would undoubtedly compel the removal from there of a large number of employes. The further statement is made that the company will establish extensive yards at Butler, which of course will have a tendency to increase the population of that town.

NOT ALWAYS UNDERSTOOD

A fact overlooked, or not always understood, is that women suffer as much from distressing kidney and bladder trouble as men. The womb is situated back of and very close to the bladder, and for that reason any distress, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or uinary passage is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort.

The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided by setting urine aside for 24 hours; a sediment or settling is evident that your kidneys and bladder need doctoring. If you have pain or dull aching in the back, pass water too frequently, or scanty supply, with smarting or burning—these are also convincing proofs of kidney trouble. If you have doctored without benefit, try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy. The mild and extraordinary effect will surprise you. It stands highest for its wonderful cures. If you take a medicine you should take the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, on receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention the AUBURN COURIER and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamptom, N. Y. The Proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

THREE YEARS.

The Daily Courier is Feeling Very Well, Thank You.

Today the DAILY COURIER begins its fourth year of publication, the third year being completed with the issue of yesterday. On the fourth day of March 1895, the DAILY COURIER was launched on the sea of journalism, the first venture of its kind in northeastern Indiana, if we except the Kendallville Sun. It was with some degree of nervousness that we entered on the new venture, but we made up our mind that if hard work and careful management count for anything we would make it win. Now we look back on those three years of hard labor with a good deal of satisfaction. We feel that while it has not added much if any to the size of our purse, it has brought us many agreeable friends and made for us new and valuable acquaintances. And if continued and loyal support count as evidence, the people have been satisfied with our efforts. They have stood by us right faithfully and we feel grateful for it. We are proud of those who have given us their support all this time. But of course we could not and have not pleased all. Some few have become dissatisfied, but others as good have taken their places. And we have the consciousness that in all these days of 930 issues of the DAILY we have given the worth of the subscription paid, in clean, newsy and often valuable matter. We have had no other motive than to give what is reliable, had no enemies to punish, but have looked on all as friends and neighbors, and to Auburn, as the town in whose future we have an abiding interest. No pun is intended when we remind our readers that our original motto is "March Fourth." Today is our new year. And we enter on it with a faith nothing can shake, that in the coming year, we shall retain all our old friends and make many new ones. We have this faith because we are determined to deserve well of all Auburn's good people. So we greet all with good wishes for the DAILY'S fourth year.

Get Americans

The list of names of the sailors and officers lost on the Maine brings out a fact that should have the serious attention of every citizen of the United States, and more especially of its statesmen and those in charge of the government. We refer to the many foreign names in the list of the dead. At least one half of the names show that the sailors were foreigners. That a warship of the United States should be manned for foreigners, shows something wrong, somewhere. There is no lack of good material among native Americans to man all our national armed vessels. If not enough American sailors can be found for this, measures should be taken at once, to provide them. If we cannot get them from our merchant vessels, we should establish recruiting stations for the navy and follow this up with schools in which private seamen may be educated. Any one can see how much more desirable it would be to have our warships manned with Americans only. Our own people will surely be more loyal to us and more reliable in time of war, than would those of any other nation. A foreigner who has no natural loyalty to this nation, and who works and fights only for pay, would seem to be a poor reed on which to lean in case of a foreign war. Give us American seamen for American warships, Mr. Secretary of the Navy.

TO MAKE GOLD.

At least two expert scientific men have been claiming they could make gold out of silver, and gold and silver out of lead. Now one of them gives his plan to the public. Here it is:

Take of chemically pure antimony, 5 parts.

Sulphur, 10 parts.

Iron, 1 part.

Caustic Soda 4 parts.

Place these ingredients in a graphite crucible and expose to a white heat, or 5,000 degrees, from eight to 48 hours Powder the resulting mass and mix it well to incorporate the metal with the slag. Combine this with charcoal, one part, oxide of lead, five parts, and caustic soda, four parts. Fuse the whole until a metallic button is obtained. Scorify and cruple this metallic mass and the resulting lead will be gold and silver.

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

DOUBTFUL STORY.

Recently Gen. Lew Wallace started the very doubtful story against Gen. Geo. B. McClellan, in which he claims that Lincoln told him that McClellan had made up his mind to surrender his army to the rebels.

It was very doubtful whether Lincoln ever told such a tale. And if Lincoln told it and believed it, what reason could he give for keeping McClellanan so long in command after he had learned that he was a traitor? But true or false there would still be nothing so plain against McClellan as can be found against Wallace himself in his conduct during the first days battle at Pittsburg Landing. The fact is that on that day Sunday, April 6, Wallace lay within sound of the fighting all day long and never came up to the help of our shattered forces. Grant sent for him the second time and he was found marching the other way. His division was one of the strongest and best and was greatly needed. History does not record an instance in which McClellan did anything half as bad. Let Lew Wallac explain his own short coming before he attacks the memory of any other general. And why did he not make these assertions while McClellan was alive? Lew Wallace has always impressed us as a commonplace blowhard.

TAKES "ANY OLD THING"

Dr. Stone Tells How Americans Regard Their Stomaches as Receptacle For Miscellany.

The stomach is a mill into which everything goes from tacks to venision. We sand, soap, slop and grease it, and think nothing too rough, too hot or too cold to be thrown into its cavity. Nothing short of a stone crusher could stand the strain put upon it. Yet its lining is as tender as the skin of a babe, and its works more delicate than the costliest watch. It is bound to go wrong, and when you hit a man in the stomach you hit him where he lives. Food is not digested, the body gets no strength, the bowels are constipated, the liver gets clogged, the blood impure, the entire system works with a jar—if it works at all. The blood is in such condition that a badly nourished brain conjures up all kinds of trouble. There is no sound sleep. There is a wear and tear that kills energy and ambition. The man acts queerly, there is danger of insanity. No man has a brain so happily constituted that indigestion will not cast a dark shadow over him.

Some of the symptoms of dyspepsia and stomach troubles are a feeling of weight and sinking at the pit of the stomach, pain and discomfort in the stomach and lower bowels, changeable appetite, pale flabby tongue, heartburn, flatulent colic, water brash, wakefulness at night, vertigo, bad dreams, flashes of heat, constipation, irritability and worry over trifles, urine scanty and highly colored, red nose and rough skin, and especially heart troubles, palpitation, jumping and general all around feeling of being half dead.

The new wonderful treatment, Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure, is a lucky compound. It is a natural and pleasant cure for stomach troubles. It is refreshing from the very first to a troubled stomach The dry and exhausted membrane soaks it up like a sponge. Meals are enjoyed, digestion goes on without an ache, the bowel move regularly, the liver feels good, and it soothes the nerves like a lullaby. Prostrated and decaying powers are revived; it does you good all over. Dr. Stone's Dyspepsia Cure is the only true tonic for the stomach, bowels and liver.

All druggists in this city sell this new remedy under a positive guarantee for 50c. Always look for portrait of Dr. Stone on back of box. Sent prepaid by addressing The Stone Drug Co., Elkhart, Ind.

HE TELLS US WHY

His Life Was Nearly Wrecked, Also How the Wreck Was Averted by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

How often we hear the invalid say, "The first of my trouble was sleeplessness. I could not get the needed rest." The same cause will shatter health while the world lasts. As long as people will neglect nature and fail to satisfy the urgent call for sleep during health they must expect a rebellious nature to refuse to respond when the nervous system is weakened from any cause. When you feel debilitated, fretful, despondent, worried, or cannot secure the full eight hours sleep prescribed by nature, use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer at once. Build up your nervous system before it's too late. Geo. Halstead, clerk at Jefferson House, Toledo, tells in the following words what it did for him: "I consider Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer a remarkable medicine for nervous troubles; I will tell you why. While living in Lima I worked nights; my sleep during the day was not regular or restful. I became very nervous, irritable, and all run down The doctors failed to help me, so also did other medicine which I used. A friendly druggist told me of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. I tried it and it worked like a charm. I was able to secure restful sleep after the first dose. My appetite returned and I regained my lost flesh, and was very soon perfectly well. I have recommended it to a great many and results were equally beneficial."

IN EIGHT HOURS.

Could The Hoosier Soldiers Concentrate at a Given Point?

The Indiana National Guard will not be asleep if its services are called for by the government. Recent news has increased the activity of the authorities to put all in a state of readiness. While it is not admitted that any orders have been received from Washington, the activity point to such a state of affairs.

Monday morning, Lieut. May detailed instructor for the I. N. G., was busy preparing a new schedule of trains to be used in mobilizing the various companies. He can tell at a glance what time each company can take a train for Indianapolis or Evansville or Fort Wayne, the three cities of the state that will be used as central points. It is possible that the troops will be mobilized in Indianapolis and Evansville if they are called to the southern coast. All the companies may be concentrated in Indianapolis in eight hours and in Fort Wayne or Evansvill in 12 hours, at the most.

Lieut. May belongs to the Fifteenth regiment of infantry, U. S. A He does not know whether his regiment, which is stationed in Arizona, will be called out or not, if war is declared. He says that he will telegraph at once to count him in his regiment if hostilities begin.

THE HEN IS GREAT.

ED. COURIER:—I see in issue of March 3, an article produced by Mr. Collingwood, editor of Rural New Yorker, as to the greatness of hens. The article is worthy of notice and should be read by every one, it has many good points. The point that strikes me the most forcibly is the number of eggs that were laid in 1897, I do not want to dispute with him in regard as to the number for I suppose he counted them. He says during the year 1897 the hens laid 14,400,000,000 eggs. A few words in regard to this number, This number is so great that the mind is not able to grasp it. Or in other words, we can form no adequate idea of its vastness. We know how to express it in figures and that is about all that we know about it. Now let us make a suppositon. Suppose that an egg is two inches long, or that they average that. Then if those eggs were placed end to end at the equator they would encircle the earth 18 times, and have a nice little remainder of 4545 miles, 145 rds, 7 feet, and 6 inches. "Hello!" I think I heard someone say, "that is not so; he surely made a mistake." Well, peshaps I did, but will you kind reader just take your slate and pencil and show me how much I am in the wrong. If Mr. Collingwood would undertake to count those eggs he would be quite an old man before he got through with them. Suppose that he would count 250 per minute, 10 hours per day and 365 days for a year, it would take him 263 years, 5 days to count them.

H. A. WINSLOW.

SKULL CRUSHED!

But He is Nobody's Dead Horse After All.

It was a horse that was so unfortunate. Yesterday a horse belonging to James G. Lawhead in Jackson township jumped over into the manager in such a way as to strike his head full tilt against a post, the blow crushing in his skull and exposing the brain. It was a bad hurt and at first it was feared the poor beast could not be saved. However, they concluded to try. The horse was seen to still be able to walk and Mr. Lawhead's hired man led him clear to town, and gave him into the hands of Dr. James Adams. The Doctor managed to lift up and put in place, the broken pieces of the skull, and when they were properly fixed, drew the skin back over them and sewed the skin fast in its proper place. The horse stood the operation all right and was led home. It will probably be all right in due time. It was a pretty nice job of comparative surgery, and will add to the Doctor's already good reputation as a veterinary surgeon.

THE WAR CLOUDS.

No one knows, not even the President, whether we are to have war with Spain or not. But it cannot be concealed that the situation grows more and more critical each day. And yet we all hope it may pass off in some peaceful way. One new phase, appears plainer and brighter, as it comes to be better known. That is the probable feeling of the other nations of Europe. It has been till lately, supposed that in case of war, all, or most of them would side in with Spain, It now appears that most of them would side with us, or take no interest in the matter. We do not mean that they would take up arms and help us. That is not needed. But it is now pretty certain that they would stand aloof and let us alone. Great Britain especially, has given us to understand, that she sympathizes with us and would be willing to see us interfere in some way to stop the destructive war in Cuba. English capital owns many large sugar plantations on the island and nearly all the railroads, as well as much other property. It is greatly desired by the English, that the war stop, and trade again begin to liven up. They are losing business every day the rebellion continues, and so are we. And other nations are in a less degree losing business also. Hence they generally seem to be willing we should take steps to stop the trouble It looks now as if the President was getting ready to intervene, and say to Cuba, the slaughter and destruction must stop. Then if Spain will stop, the trouble ends, and if she will not, then it is pretty certain there will be war. And this country is being rapidly put in shape for it. It took congress but a few hours to pass an appropriation of fifty millions, which is to be used in buying ready made first-class battle ships, guns, etc., and also the latest pattern of of small arms for land forces. Spain might as well make up her mind that we are in earnest. In the meantime, we all wait to see what the Board reports as to the way the Maine was destroyed. That may put off or hurry up the trouble.

GETS POSESSION.

D. D. Moody has been having quite a lively and successful law case before a Justice at Butler. Chris. McNabb has for some time been having trouble to settle with his former partner Ben C. Leighty. In the deal Mr. McNabb comes into posession of the meat market in Butler formerly owned by Leighty & McNabb. Since obtaining posession, he has concluded to sell the meat market, but will retain the large steam meat chopper, which he will bring over to Auburn and have it in use to chop meat for his two meat markets here. This will put his markets in Auburn in good shape. He seems to be a regular hustler and when he goes after a thing he gets it.

J. C. ST. CLAIR DEAD.

Ex-sheriff John C. St. Clair died at about half past six last evening at the sheriff's residence where he had made his home for some time. He had long been in ill health and his death was to be expected at any time. Brief services will be by Rev. J. D. Brosy at the residence at 12:30 tomorrow and interment at Waterloo.

OUR DAILY

The Angola Republican one of the best papers in the state has these good words for the DAILY COURIER:

Last week the Auburn Daily Courier entered upon its fourth year of publication, and you don't need a microscope either to see that it grows better as its age advances. Bro. Barns calls the 4th of March his New Year, as that was the day the little daily came into existence and has existed ever since, notwithstanding at times the waves of adversity rolled up, but it weathered the gale, and now, since "confidence has been restored," and "prosperity" has struck it, its sails are bright and clean, is anchored in new quarters, its deck hands efficient and steady, and the veter anaptain still at the helm.

WAS AN ARGONAUT.

James McClellan was one of the "Argonauts" of the early gold diggings in California. He went there in 1850 and staid about four years. While there he accidentally met A. D. Goetschius for the first time. Later on they were neighbors on their farms south of Auburn. Mr. Goetschius is now at Sheridan Montana and both gentlemen are pretty sound old fellows and none the worse for the rough life in the mines. At the World's Fair, Mr. McClellan heard of the whereabouts of his old mining partner J. D. James, for the first time in forty one years Mr. James had become quite wealthy and prominent being worth half a million and a county commissioner of San Francisco county in which his home San Francisco Calif. is. Mr. McClellan has since written him and received answers, It was in '51 that Mr. McClellan first met Mr. Goetschius in the mountains.

Who's Got The Button?

Not Sam Fretz, surely. Some twelve years ago, Mr. Fretz was a member of the Auburn G. A. R. as he was a veteran of the late war. But somehow he managed to let his membership drop. But about a year ago he was talking to Wm. Murphy, and asked the latter as to the cost of his G. A. R. button. Murphy, said, "Ten Cents." Mr. Fretz handed him the ten cents, took button, put it on his own coat, and wore it from that time. Recently the G. A. R. members here have been objecting to his wearing the button and as he refused to leave it off, they swore out a warrant for him and took him before 'Squire Walborn and when the law was explained to him he at once saw that he had no legal right to wear the button and after stating that he thought he had a right to wear it, he plead guilty and the 'Squire fined him 25 cents and costs, being all told, over $8. As Fretz had paid for it, the question arises, Who's to have the button, or in other words, "Who's got the button?

A SINGULAR CASE.

We had an article the other day, about the removal of a large stone from Mr. Raub's horse. by Dr. Adams. Today we were shown by the Doctor some of the pieces of the stony substance. But more wonderful still, the Doctor brought with him a perfect and full sized stone he had removed from a horse belonging to a Mr. Wingent over in Allen county. It is about the size of a base ball and almost perfectly round, and now since being dried, it is extremely hard. It weighs thirteen and three-fourths ounces. But it was so hard when removed, that it could not be broken and an incision into the bladder was made in order to remove it. The horse is still alive, though the operation was three or four years ago.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

HOPING FOR PEACE,

But Preparing for War, Is Uncle Sam's Program.

Hoping for the best but prepared for the worst, about represents the situation in the War and Navy Departments these days. The officials still profess confidence that there will be a peaceful outcome of the threatening difficulties, but meanwhile are preparing to meet their duty if events should shape themselves otherwise.

The Navy Department has now reason to believe it has secured two warships, the Amazonas and her sister ship, now building in England for Brazil. It was stated at the Cabinet meeting by Secretary Long that the naval attache at London, Lieutenant Colwell, had almost completed negotiations for the purchase. So far, the final notification from him that the offer had been accepted had not yet reached the Navy Department.

Philadelphia special: The big cruiser Columbia has been taken out of the dry docks. She will begin taking on stores at once. Ammunition will be taken on at Fort Mifflin. The Columbia and Minneapolis will sail south in a few days. Their destination is not known.

A Bold Dash for Liberty.

An attempt to break prison was made by 200 convicts at the Michigan City Penitentiary, led by William Sauerwine, a fourteen-year man from Vigo County. It was while the convicts were at supper. Capt. Barnard was in charge of the dining-room when Sauerwine arose followed by 200 convicts, who began to fire coffee cups at the guards. By accident Night Man Anderson happened on the scene, and seeing the situation, drew his gun and fired, hitting Sauerwine and another leader, Surber. The shots quieted the convicts and they were soon under control. It is thought the two wounded men will die.

Burglar Drowned.

It is believed that one of two burglars who attempted to break into the cabin of the Whaleback, John B. Trevor, lying in the river at Cleveland, was drowned while trying to avoid arrest. A watchman discovered him at work and gave chase. About this time another watchman farther down the river heard cries for help from the water and put out in a row boat to a spot where a man could be seen struggling in the water.

Rush Making Arms.

Rock Island (Ill.) special: Acting Commandant O. B. Hitcham of Rock Island arsenal, has received orders to put the men at the arsenal on ten hours' time and to put on a night shift at once. This will swell the forces in the shops here to 1,000 men. Capt. S. E. Blunt, commandant at the arsenal, is now in Washington.

Rumblings of War.

Advices from points in Central America state that war clouds are still hovering over those turbulent countries. The situation between Costa Rica and Nicaragua is very serious, and troops are in the field. It is the general belief that there will be war, involving three or more Central American countries.

Her Fortune Burned.

Mrs. Sarah Greer of English, Ind., received $2,500 from her father in Denver last Christmas as a present with which to buy a home. Owing to family sickness she laid away her money carefully, but lost the whole a few days ago by the destruction of her little home by fire.

A New Explosive.

Geer Davis, a resident of New Albany, Ind., has invented an explosive that he believes would annihilate any Spanish cruiser that may approach the American coast. Mr. Davis has sent samples to the War Department at Washington to be tested.

Triple Alliance Pending.

London special: The New York correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: "I have it on the highest authority that a triple alliance between Great Britain, the United States and Japan is pending."

Successor to Earl of Aberdeen.

The St. James Gazette says it is understood that Lord George Hamilton, now Secretary of State for India, will succeed the Earl of Aberdeen as Governor General of Canada.

Colliery Disaster.

A serious colliery disaster occurred at Muirkirk, Ayreshire, Scotland, as a result of the flooding of the mines. Nineteen men were entombed in the pit.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne.

The following are the attractions at the Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

The Treasury.

The Treasury is in good condition to meet the $50,000,000 appropriation for national defense. The gold reserve is larger than since 1890, reaching nearly $169,000,000, which is $69,000,000 more than is deemed necessary for the good financial condition of the Treasury.

Three Children Burned to Death.

At St. Louis, three small children of William Comer died from the effects of burns. They were left alone in the house and poured oil in the stove. An explosion followed with the above results.

Manila Nearly Wiped Out.

Victoria (B. C.) special: Advices from the Orient brought by the steamship Empress of India tell of the almost destruction of Manila, Phillippine Islands, by fire. It is said that 200 people were cremated. Two hundred buildings were burned with a loss of $5,000,000.

Four-Handed Duel.

Paducah (Ky.) special: A four-handed duel took place between farmers residing in Fulton County, Kentucky. A lawsuit was the cause. Joe Lynch was shot, his son Burt Lynch was cut, Wade Harding was shot, and James Morris stabbed. All are seriously injured.

BULLETIN ON LIVE STOCK.

Decrease in Number of Horses, Cows, Cattle and Swine.

The Agricultural Department at Washington has issued the following bulletin on live stock: The returns of the number of live stock on farms in the United States Jan. 1 show 13,960,911 horses, 2,257,665 mules, 15,840,886 milch cows, 29,264,197 oxen and other cattle, 37,656,960 sheep and 39,759,993 swine. These figures show a decrease of 403,756 in the number of horses, 100,841 in milch cows, 1,244,211 in oxen and other cattle and 840,283 in swine. There is an increase of 838,317 in the number of sheep and 42,011 in mules. While there has been an increase in the number of milch cows in each of the New England States, and a considerable increase in the Northwestern States, there has been a decrease throughout almost the entire South, and this fact, together with a slight decrease in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, reduces the total for the country at large to six-tenths of 1 per cent below that of last year. Of the seventeen States reporting a total of over 1,000,000 hogs, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Georgia, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska show an increase, and Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and eight Southern States a decrease. There is a marked increase in the value of live stock on farms reported from almost every section of the country, the total value of farm horses having increased during the year by $25,713,011; that of mules, $6,728,972; milch cows, $65,573,933; oxen and other cattle, $104,367,218; sheep, $25,700,191, and swine, $8,078,639—a total increase in value of $236,162,859, or 14.27 per cent.

BALANCE IS PRESERVED.

Falling Off in Wheat Exports Made Up in Corn Shipments.

Bradstreet's says: "Nearly all signs point to an unprecedented volume of business being done or arranging for at the present time. The aggressive strength of prices, record-breaking bank clearings and continued large exports, particularly of the lower-priced cereals, a very heavy volume of business in iron and steel and kindred lines, and generally satisfactory reports as to the volume of spring trade at leading distributive centers are among the visible features of this trade development. Few decreases in prices are noted, sugar being the most important, while the list of staples steady and unchanged numbers pork, coffee, lead and print cloths. Trade is larger than usual at the central west, particularly in dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, hardware, lumber and agricultural implements, the demand for the latter being a notable feature at nearly all markets. Spring trade has opened up well in the northwest and the jobbing trade is quite active. A further shrinkage in wheat exports, but a corresponding enlargement of the shipments of corn and the lower-priced cereals, is indicated this week. The total exports of wheat, flour included, from the United States and Canada aggregate 3,252,000 bushels, against 3,722,000 bushels last week. Corn exports amount to 5,054,694 bushels, as against 3,692,000 bushels last week."

WHEAT HOLDS FIRM.

Price of the Cereal Seems to be Little Influenced by War News.

With the stock market shattered by war rumors wheat holds its price in spite of determined raids by the professional bears. Cash wheat commands $1.06 in Chicago, and when the war scare is over or hostilities are declared the best judges predict the highest price in years. Every bushel of wheat coming into the market is eagerly picked up by either Armour or Leiter. Reports continue to pour in of vast decreases in European stocks of wheat. Interior Russia shows 16,000,000, against 38,000,000 a year ago. Though Spain is in urgent need of revenue she has j[illegible] wheat nearly [illegible] cent[illegible] also [illegible] 6,000,000 bushels from the United States. The week shows a decrease in the visible supply of 1,076,000, making the total visible 33,000,000, as against 44,000,000 a year ago.

A Heinous Crime.

Adrian Braun, a convict in Sing Sing prison, New York, murdered his wife, who was paying him a visit. Braun was convicted of having beaten his wife, but notwithstanding this Mrs. Braun forgave him and expressed sorrow because of his imprisonment. When the two met they kissed each other and were very friendly. They sat half an hour conversing, only a few feet from the desk of Detective Jackson, who was present. Finally the officer informed Braun that his time was up, but Braun pleaded for a little time longer, saying: "Can't we have a few minutes more?" Because of the trouble Mrs. Braun had taken to pay her husband a visit the plea was granted. Suddenly Braun raised his arm, and the detective saw the glitter of a long, thin knife. The convict brought the blade down with fearful force against the left side of his wife's neck. One cut severed the great blood vessels and almost instantly the woman was dead. Detective Jackson sprang upon Braun, but the convict had time to gash the woman's head several times more. Two other convicts who were in the corridor came to the detective's assistance and the murderer was subdued. Warden Sage had him removed to the deathhouse. Another knife, similar to the one with which he had stabbed his wife, was found concealed in his pocket.

Moving Over the Passes.

The steamship North Pacific, from Skaguay, Juneau and Wrangel, called at Departure Bay, her supply of coal having run out. Her officers describe the situation at Skaguay most favorably. They say that deaths from spinal meningitis were often the result of exposure on the trails, the men being brought into Skaguay dying. The number of deaths, Captain Carter says, has been greatly exaggerated. Fine weather prevailed when the North Pacific left Skaguay. White and Chilkoot passes were fit for travel, and many had already begun the journey inland.

Dreyfus Attempts Suicide.

A great sensation has been caused in Paris by the report that former Captain Albert Dreyfus, for whose defense Zola was recently tried and convicted, had attempted to commit suicide in his lonely prison on the Isle du Diable, off the coast of French Guiana. The vigilance of his guards prevented the man from taking his life.

Commit a Daring Robbery.

Three masked robbers, armed to the teeth, entered the grocery and provision store of Peter F. Rourke, Cambridge, Mass., and held up seven men and two women with revolvers. They cleaned the cash drawer of $150 and then made their escape.

Fresh Trouble for Spain.

A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Hong-Kong says that a fresh rebellion has broken out in the Philippines and that fifty-three Spanish soldiers have been killed. No further details are known at Hong-Kong.

Nebraska Law Is Unconstitutional.

The Nebraska maximum freight law has been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court, because it authorizes the taking of property without due process of law.

Concert for Bereaved Ones.

The audience which crowded the National Theater in Washington, D. C., at the woman's concert for the benefit of the families of the men who lost their lives in the Maine disaster, was in every way the most notable body ever assembled in a Washington theater. The President and Mrs. McKinley occupied seats in the box of Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Long, while in the immense audience were Secretary of State and Mrs. Sherman, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Gary, the family of the Secretary of War, Mrs. Gage, the Attorney General and Mrs. Griggs, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Senator Hale and Representative Boutelle, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the House, with almost the entire body of Washington society and thousands of sympathetic residents of the capital, including sixty sailors from the navy yard, who filled one entire row of reserved seats in the gallery. The long program closed with "The Star-Spangled Banner," the audience rising and joining in the chorus. Twenty officers of the army, navy and marine corps, each in full uniform, acted as ushers, while prominent young women of the navy and army families sold programs and small flags, which were waved vigorously by the eager purchasers during the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." A large crowd collected in front of the theater just before the close of the performance. The President's appearance at the doorway with Mrs. McKinley on his arm was the signal for an outburst of cheering, waving of flags and handclapping. Both the President and Mrs. McKinley seemed pleased at the demonstration and smiled as they acknowledged it with a slight inclination of the head.

GEMS FROM NATIVE MINES.

Value of All Precious Stones Found in This Country in 1897.

The value of the precious stones produced in the United States during 1897, as shown by a preliminary report submitted to the division of mineral resources of the United States geological survey at Washington by Special Agent George F. Kunz, was $130,675, as compared with $97,850 in 1896. The principal items of this total are turquoise, $55,000; sapphire, $25,000; quartz crystal, $12,000; tourmaline, $9,025, and gold quartz, $5,000. The principal features of interest to the trade during the year were the investments of English capital in and the increased output of the Fergus County, Montana, sapphire deposits; the further development of the turquoise deposits in Santa Fe and Grant counties, New Mexico; the development of tourmaline deposits at Mount Mica, Paris, Me., and Haddam Neck, Conn., and the finding and sale of pale almandine garnets from Cowee Valley, North Carolina. The finding of large quantities of gigantic quartz crystals (rock crystal) at Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, California, was also of considerable importance.

FINDS HIS BOY AT LAST.

United After a Separation of Over Twenty-five Years.

After twenty-five years of separation R. T. Spuhn of Elmhurst, Cal., has been reunited to his son, Alfred Spuhn, now a prosperous merchant of Chicago. The father is a poor gardener, who believed his boy long since dead. The Spuhns lived in Chicago many years ago and were poor. Alfred was a barefoot newsboy and lived with his parents, who finally moved to the West. Just before they started the lad dropped out of sight, so fearful was he that he would be taken West also. From that day on his parents were never able to get a trace of him, and being unable to carry on their search, finally came to believe that the boy had strayed off and died. The younger Spuhn, now 30 years of age, tells of having worked himself up in the commercial world. He will care for his father, who was alone in the world and helpless until the long-lost son found him.

Austrian Cabinet Out.

The members of the Austrian cabinet have tendered their resignations, which were accepted by Emperor Francis Joseph. His majesty appointed Privy Councillor Count von Thun Hohenstim prime minister and intrusted to him the task of forming a new cabinet.

PASSED IN A HURRY.

DEFENSE FUND VOTED WITHOUT WASTE OF TIME.

Senate and House Unanimous to a Man in Favor of the $50,000,000 Emergency Bill—Montgomery Now at Havana—Sheriff Martin Acquitted.

With a Whoop.

On Tuesday the House by a unanimous vote appropriated $50,000,000 to be used by the President for national defense. Wednesday the Senate, also by a unanimous vote and without debate, passed the House bill within the length of time consumed in reading it and calling the roll. In other words, the Senate in fifteen minutes authorized the President to expend $50,000,000 if necessary to defend the honor of the nation. The unity of the American people may be a surprise and a revelation to those unfamiliar with American character, says a Washington correspondent. In some quarters there has been a belief that the enmities of sectional strife and the bitterness of our political contests had divided the people beyond the possibility of reunion. But suddenly the nation finds its peace endangered and its honor menaced from without, and lo, in a breath, as it were, every local dissension has vanished and the people are united in a common purpose. For two days at least the United States Congress contained neither Republicans, Democrats nor Populists, but Americans only.

In a spirit of patriotism, with eloquent words ringing in their ears, every member of the House of Representatives responded to the President's first call to meet the Spanish situation by casting a vote for a bill placing in President McKinley's hands $50,000,000 to be expended at his discretion for the national defense. Party lines were swept away and with a unanimous voice Congress voted its confidence in the administration. Many members who were paired with absent colleagues took the responsibility of breaking their pairs, an unprecedented thing in legislative annals, in order that they might go on record in support of this vast appropriation to maintain the dignity and honor of the country. Speaker Reed, who as presiding officer seldom votes, except in case of a tie, had his name called and voted in his capacity as a Representative. The scene of enthusiasm which greeted the announcement of the vote—yeas, 311; nays, none—has seldom been paralleled in the House.

CRUISER MONTGOMERY AND HER COMMANDER.

On Wednesday the Senate distanced the House when it came to prompt action. All the traditional conservatism of that body was thrown to the winds. It took less than thirty minutes' time and no speeches to pass the bill in the Senate, while the House gave up more than three hours to debate. The blind chaplain had hardly concluded the usual morning invocation when Senator Hale, erstwhile the "conservative" of the Senate on the Cuban question, the friend of the late Minister de Lome, made the report from the Committee on Appropriations and added that the committee had unanimously agreed to the fifty millions. The Senator asked for an immediate vote and, as is the custom in the Senate, called for the yeas and nays. There was no objection and the familiar nasal sound of the voice of the Senate clerk rang out announcing a roll call. Not a dissent was raised.

The venerable Senators sat about with grave faces. The most distinguished audience that has assembled in the Senate gallery this session looked down upon the impressive act of legislation, so unusual in the Senate. It is safe to assert that never before had that body appropriated money at the rate of $2,000,000 a minute with such unanimity. The result was announced—76 votes in the affirmative. No dissenting vote. No Senators present and not voting. The remaining Senators that compose the body were accounted for by the traditional respect for pairs which characterizes the Senate. No applause greeted the announcement. The House on Tuesday applauded, roared, hissed or laughed by turns. Not a sign of approval or disapproval was raised in the Senate, for the rule forbids it. At 3:40 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the emergency appropriation bill was signed by President McKinley and became a law.

When it comes to facilitating business and making no noise about it, the Senate stands without a peer in the estimation of parliamentarians. Three minutes after it had given its assent so unostentatiously to a war measure the Senate sounded four bells and closed the doors, in order to work out the problem of an unconfirmed postmaster in the sworn secrecy of its own councils.

MINERS MAY STRIKE.

Trouble Brewing in Kanawha and New River Coal Districts.

From present indications there will be a general strike of the 2,000 coal miners in the Wanawha and New River districts of West Virginia April 1. The Chesapeake and Ohio Coal Association, composed of the various operators along the river, had a meeting at Charleston and considered a statement made to them some time ago by Fred Dilcher of the executive board of the United Mine Workers. Mr. Dilcher stated again to the operators that unless they signed the Chicago agreement and complied with the agreement of the United Mine Workers' organization that he would order a general strike April 1.

It is generally understood that five operators will not accede to the demand of the organization. Prominent State officials conferred with the operators, but failed to secure even a promise of arbitration. The miners ask for an advance of 10 cents a ton. At present the miners are receiving 30 cents a ton for soft coal and 2¼ cents per bushel for hard coal, screened.

BOMBAY NATIVES RIOT.

Resist Sanitary Measures and Murder Several Europeans.

Serious native riots in opposition to the sanitary measures taken to check the spread of the bubonic plague have occurred in Bombay. A plague inspector and three English soldiers have been stoned to death by the mob, and other Europeans injured. Many rioters have been killed and wounded.

The more ignorant natives have always resented the measures to stamp out the plague. The trouble began when a searching party visited the native quarter to ascertain if there were any deaths from the plague in the houses of low-caste Hindoos and Mohammedans. The intrusion was resented, and in a surprisingly short time a mob collected which vented its fury upon all Europeans in sight. The police fired a volley into the mob, killing six natives and wounding many others. Business was suspended and all available troops and artillery were called out.

During the rioting the European officers and police were severely mauled. Several civilian Europeans in the streets were beaten and stabbed, some of them dangerously. A large number of plague ambulances were seized and burned. Attempts were made to set fire to the hospitals, but these were checked. The Jamsetjee hospital was the scene of an especially violent assault, during which one English surgeon was badly injured. Successive rifle volleys alone saved the building from destruction. The number of rioters killed in these late assaults is unknown, but is believed to have been great. British blue jackets have also been landed to assist in preserving order.

CRUISER AT HAVANA.

Montgomery Anchors in the Harbor Near the Wreck.

The Fern has sailed from Havana for Key West, and will return with supplies for the starving reconcentrados. She will deliver these supplies at several ports along the northern coast of Cuba. The Montgomery entered port at Havana and anchored in front of La Machina, near the wreck of the Maine, and facing the Spanish cruiser Vizcaya. Captain Converse of the Montgomery, his officers and crew spent several hours on deck looking at the wrecked American battleship. They all said that they had never before seen such complete destruction. There is much comment over the extraordinary precautions taken by Captain Converse of the Montgomery. The Spanish officials consider them to be "unexplainable." The fact is that a double guard is posted at various points on the cruiser, and every boat that approaches her is stopped. If persons in the boat do not immediately give the countersign they are compelled to turn back.

SHERIFF MARTIN ACQUITTED.

Neither He Nor His Deputies Are Found Guilty of Murder.

At Wilkesbarre, Pa., the jury in the case of Sheriff Martin and his deputies, charged with shooting striking miners at Lattimer Sept. 10, has returned a verdict. Long before the time for court to convene there was a big crowd waiting to gain admittance to the court room, and when the doors were thrown open there was a wild rush, but only a limited number were admitted. Judge Woodward did not take his seat on the bench until five minutes after 10 o'clock a. m., the jury coming in a few minutes later. When the jury was polled each juror answered not guilty as his name was called. There was an attempt at applause, but it was quickly suppressed by the judge.

When the jurymen retired the previous evening they took only one ballot and it was unanimous for acquittal. It is said the jury was prepared for a verdict before leaving the box. After the jury had been thanked and discharged by Judge Woodward District Attorney Martin asked that the defendants be required to continue their bail bond, as there are still seventeen indictments for murder hanging over them and thirty-eight for feloniously wounding. The bond was continued as requested.

CAN'T BUY IN BRITAIN.

United States and Spain Must Seek Warships Elsewhere.

What appears to be an effectual check to the efforts of the United States to obtain warships from English firms has been given by the unexpected action of the British Government in notifying the ship builders that they must not give options to the United States on vessels under construction or make contracts with this country for building new ones without obtaining permission from the admiralty office in London.

This is not to be taken as an act of unfriendliness on the part of Great Britain, as it applies equally to Spanish endeavors to buy ships from the Armstrongs, Thornycroft and other English concerns. It is regarded in Washington as an indication that Great Britain has already decided to assert her neutrality between Spain and the United States, and that she does not intend to take any chances of becoming involved in another expensive international episode like that of the Alabama.

BRYAN GIVES APPROVAL.

Heartily Indorses the $50,000,000 Appropriation by Congress.

William J. Bryan, who passed through Atlanta, Ga., en route to Macon, where he was to deliver an address, speaking of the Cannon appropriation bill, said:

"I am very glad that the House unanimously passed the measure. It might have been better to have made it $100,000,000, to show the world that Congress and the American people, regardless of political differences, are ready to support the administration in the protection of our honor. The appropriation need not mean war. In fact, such prompt liberality may lessen the probability of war. In the face of danger our people should stand as one man for the nation's defense."

After a debate lasting several days the Senate on Friday passed the bill extending the homestead laws and providing for right of way for railroads in the district of Alaska. Comparatively little discussion of general interest was created by the bill. Section 13, providing for certain bonding concessions to Canada in lieu of privileges to be extended by the Dominion Government to this country, however, induced a pretty lively debate, as it brought into the controversy the old fisheries question on the New England coast, which has been pending between the United States and Great Britain for 100 years. Two more appropriations were sent to the President Friday, the pension bill and the consular and diplomatic, both of which went through their final stage in the House. It was private bill day. The most important action taken was acquiescence in an agreement to make the bill appropriating about $1,200,000 for war claims approved by the court of claims under the provisions of the Bowman act a special order for the next Friday. The claims carried by the bill, 730 in number, are for stores and supplies seized during the war in the Southern States. Only two bills were passed, one to pay the heirs of Sterling T. Austin about $59,000 for cotton seized during the war, and the other to pay an aggregate of $3,360 in small claims growing out of back pay, etc., earned during the war. The House adjourned until Monday.

In the House on Monday the Hawley bill providing for two additional regiments of artillery was passed under suspension of the rules by almost unanimous vote. Mr. Bailey, the Democratic leader, wanted more time for debate than the forty minutes allowed, and because he did not get it he inaugurated a filibuster against District of Columbia legislation that continued all day. In the Senate the session was devoted to consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill. At the hour of adjournment the bill had not been disposed of.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill, containing a provision for the reduction of about one-half of the present rates of telephone charges in the district, was passed by the Senate on Tuesday. A bill to authorize the relocation and rebuilding of a pontoon bridge across the Mississippi River at Prairie du Chien, Wis., was passed. The bill for the relief of the Methodist Episcopal Church South of Tennessee, appropriating $288,000, was passed. In the House the bill appropriating $50,000,000 for defense passed unanimously.

In the House on Wednesday the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill went through its last stages in the adoption of the financial conference report. The remainder of the day was consumed in consideration of the Senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill. The substitute for the Senate provision regarding the opening of the Uncompahgre reservation was knocked out on a point of order, and the amendment goes back to conference. The desire of the conferees to non-concur in the Senate free homestead clause encountered bitter opposition, and an arrangement was made whereby four hours are to be devoted to debate a proposition to concur submitted by Mr. Eddy of Minnesota. Mr. Sherman, chairman of the Indian Committee, declared that the free homestead provision would cost the Government $56,000,000. He desires to eliminate it from the bill, and has the support of the Secretary of the Interior. In the Senate the $50,000,000 defense bill was passed by a unanimous vote. Hawaiian annexation was considered in executive session.

In the House all day Thursday was spent on the Indian appropriation bill. The Senate amendments were non-concurred in and the bill sent to conference. In the Senate no business of real importance was transacted in open session. The session lasted only an hour, the time being largely consumed in disposing of routine morning business. A few bills of minor importance were passed.

News of Minor Note.

According to the latest figures, China owes her creditors $193,525,000.

Gen. W. B. Taliaferro, who was commander of the Virginia troops during John Brown's raid, is dead.

Four hundred patients have died of starvation in one Havana hospital during the past two months.

Mayor Good of Springfield, O., has been ousted by the Circuit Court for violations of the Garfield corrupt practice law.

The body of ex-Commissioner Leonard R. Wells of Brooklyn has been found in the woods near Plainfield, N. J., with a horrible gash in his throat.

A sale of American prize horses took place in London. Twenty-two magnificent animals, which took prizes at recent horse shows in Chicago and New York, were sold at auction at an average price of about $294, a striking illustration of foreign prejudice against American products.

Another phase of the cigarette smoking evil is attracting the attention of Cincinnati physicians in the case of Joseph Savage, 19 years old, in one of the city hospitals. Through smoking forty cigarettes a day he contracted an ulcer which destroyed the membrane behind the palate in his throat, and he now exhales smoke from his ears as well as from his nostrils.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Glass Blowers Warned that They Will Be Displaced by Machinery—Bold Robbery—Forger's Unsuccessful Attempt at Suicide.

Machines Do Their Work.

President D. A. Hayes of the National Organization of Green Glass Workers, was in Muncie several days attempting to induce Ball Brothers, fruit jar manufacturers, to give the discharged men, let go on account of the introduction of blowing machines, a chance at working the machines. Fifty-two men were discharged and every man may be out next season. In an address to his men in Union Labor hall Mr. Hayes frankly told the glass blowers that the inevitable was coming, that the patent blowing machines would soon let them all out, and they may as well prepare accordingly. Five hundred men in Muncie alone are affected. They make from $5 to $10 per day.

Bold Robbery Near Muncie.

One of the boldest and most brutal robberies that has ever occurred in Delaware County took place at the home of John Reese, a wealthy farmer, three miles south of Muncie. Shortly after the aged couple had retired there was a knock at the door, and as it was opened three men inquired if Mr. Reese resided there, and handed him a package with the statement that it was from Chicago. Nearly immediately the trio drew revolvers and ordered the old man to hold up his hands. He resisted and was knocked down and beaten into submission. In the scuffle a long beard the old man wore was torn out by the roots. His wife came to his rescue, but was quieted by threats, and both were taken upstairs and locked in a room while the house was looted. Less than $50 was secured.

Murder Was Probably Done.

What is supposed to have been a murder was revealed when a crew on the Fort Wayne Railroad found the body of a dead man lying under the waiting sheds at the Roby race tracks. The body was taken to Whiting and turned over to the authorities. There was absolutely nothing among the effects of the dead man that establishes his identity. On his right arm was tattooed the initials "A. W."

Forger Takes Poison.

Dr. Clemens Katz, a Terre Haute druggist, was taken there from the vicinity of Paris, Ill., where he went when he learned he was to be arrested on a charge of forgery. Soon after his arrival he became very ill and it was learned that he had taken strychnine. He had admitted forging the names of indorsers to a note he sold.

Express Car Burned.

The express car on the Pennsylvania road's fast paper train was totally destroyed by fire near Wheeler. John Williams, express messenger, was seriously burned about the body.

Within Our Borders.

The Citizens' Bank of Greenfield was reorganized, with capital stock of $50,000.

Two small children, Bertha Coan and May Frey, were bitten by a mad dog in Vincennes.

At Spikerville, Jesse Levissey was stabbed by Oscar Joy. Young Joy is now in jail there. Levissey may die.

Mrs. Charles Pangburn of Jeffersonville became deaf suddenly without any apparent cause. The doctors are baffled.

At Sunman, John Hendrixon, extra section foreman, was killed, having fallen from the caboose of train No. 50.

Jesse Foulke, son of Silas Foulke, ex-recorder of Clay County, accidentally shot himself while hunting and will die.

The coach stallion Margrave, 2:15½, the big money winner of three years ago, was sold at the Fleming cobbination sale in Terre Haute for $800 to S. J. Fleming.

At Seymour, Edward Offenberger, aged 18, while attempting to jump on a moving freight train on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway fell under the wheels and lost both legs. He died at midnight.

William I. Mitchell, a Windfall farmer, was found lying dead upon the floor with a rifle by his side. The rifle was empty, and it is supposed that Mitchell committed suicide by shooting himself through the body.

During a quarrel on the Church premises in Monroe township a young desperado named Sam Woodfill frightfully stabbed Alla Custer, aged 13. Woodfill was arrested by three men and put in jail. Custer may recover.

In Indianapolis, Lillie and Hazel Taskey and Edna Conroy, a cousin, were taken suddenly ill and two doctors spent the night with them. The children gave evidence of having been poisoned, but in what way is a mystery.

Disappointment was evidenced everywhere among the rural population of Bartholomew County on receiving news from the Postoffice Department that free rural mail delivery would be discontinued in Haw Creek township with the close of this month.

The Illinois Oil Company, which proposes to enter the crude-oil field in northeastern Indiana, has filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State. The capital stock is $200,000. The incorporators are D. W. Kimball of Chicago, Carl McFadden of Geneva and Claire L. Kimball of Chicago.

The jury in the case of Fred Tresler, charged with an assault with intent to murder William Newberry at a dance near Slabtown last October, brought in a verdict of guilty. He will be given an indeterminate sentence of two to fourteen years.

Sections of Madison County are swarming already with thousands upon thousands of grasshoppers that are just breaking through the ground with the first thaw, indicating that the winter was not severe enough to kill animal life such as this and other pests. It is claimed that the same is the case with cutworms.

Jerry Woods, a pioneer citizen of Carbon and aged 84 years, was run over by the Big Four passenger train and instantly killed. Mrs. Woods, about the same age, is ill from the shock of her husband's sudden death, and is not expected to recover.

Thomas T. Halstead was killed by an engine in front of the Pennsylvania station at Franklin. Mr. Halstead, who was quite deaf, was crossing the track and failed to hear the bell. When he realized his danger he seemed momentarily paralyzed and stood motionless when the engine struck him, throwing him fully thirty feet and killing him almost instantly.

OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD.

With burning brain and heart of hate,
I sought my wronger, early, late,
And all the wretched night and day
My dream and thought was slay, and slay.

My better self rose uppermost,
The beast within my bosom lost
Itself in love; peace from afar
Shone o'er me radiant like a star.

I slew my wronger with a deed,
A deed of love; I made him bleed
With kindness, I filled for years
His soul with tenderness and tears.
—Robert Loveman in the Independent.

EL PADRE TRISTE.

BY WALTER MATSON.

Diego sat on the south side of the ancient adobe church of San Pedro. It was the time of day when the good fathers, whose lives had been passed at the now forgotten mission, were taking their customary seista. It was Diego's time to be idle. He looked southward, over the almond trees just bursting into blossom, over the stubby vines that the half-naked descendants of a once lordly race were training for the winter's vintage, over the garden patch and network of irrigating ditches, over the great tawny desert of death, toward the land of his birth. The wind, a very mild breeze for February, whistled around the corner of the building. It came fresh from the Raton Mountains. It chilled him. He drew closer to his shelter. It chilled his heart also, and, as he looked over the orchard decked with fragrant promise, he muttered the old proverb, "Presto maduro, presto podrido (soon ripe, soon rotten). Evidently his mind was projected beyond the range of human vision.

With the involuntary expression came the thought of a name that he had not heard uttered for years—his own name, Diego. None of those with whom he had lived these three springtimes knew it; none save old Padre Sebastiano, his confessor, in whose breast a secret was as safe as in the grave. He also remembered that the name had been given him in honor of his patron saint, and that he was the descendant of a "conquistador." Degenerate as he was, he enjoyed recalling this fact.

"'El corazon manda las carnes' (The heart bears up the body), but I can't endure this forever. I must speak to the fathers to-night and take the vows."

Three years before, in this same month when the earth springs into life beneath the warmth of the returning sun, a wanderer drew rein at the gate of the Mission San Pedro. His face was haggard, his body weak after the long desert ride. His horse was in as lamentable a condition as its master. The stranger was young. He seemed almost boyish, even in the country where youth is but a sunrise glow between the child and the man. As he dismounted he staggered, reached toward the portal for support and fell in a swoon. It was not the first time that such an occurrence had happened at the lonely mission on the edge of the desert. The good fathers knew what to do in such cases, and they were no more faithful in their efforts because his serape, dust-begrimed as it was, indicated the hidalgo, than they would have been had the object of their solicitation been the humblest Indian in New Mexico.

When Diego came to himself weeks had passed. He strove to tell his story, but as often as he did so, Padre Sebastiano bid him be quiet and wait until his strength returned. So it chanced that on a summer's day, as he sat sadly in the courtyard listening to the trickling of the water, he felt a hand laid on his shoulder, and Padre Sebastiano, bending over him, said:

"Tell me, my son, what troubles you. You have never confessed, nor taken the blessed sacrament."

"Not here, father; not here! come into the chapel and I will tell you all; but when you hear my story you will turn me out like un leproso."

"Nay; say not so! The heart of the Mother is always compassionate and often, while you slept, my prayers have gone up for you to the holy San Pedro in whose glorious memory this humble mission was founded; but come."

The old man led the way to the little chapel, frescoed by loving hands that had long since entered into eternal rest, whose altar was adorned with spoils of conquest and with relics from far-distant Spain, and thence into the confessional where none might hear what passed between saint and sinner. Diego instinctively fell upon his knees and a shudder went through his well-knit frame as he thus began:

"Father, pray for me. My sin is greater than I can bear. I cannot confess it, even here."

"Proceed, my son. You have sinned, I trust you have repented. It cannot be that one so young, so fair as you, has sinned unto death."

"I have, I have."

"Tell me, and I will judge." Thus encouraged the penitent continued:

"My name is Diego Dominguez y Agramonte. My home is, or rather was, in the Boulson de Mapimi, beside Laguna del Parres. You know the place, father—the fairest upon earth, where it is always spring, where the birds sing by night as well as by day, and where the air is always fragrant with the perfume of orange blossoms and of more distant mountain flowers. There I lived on my father's hacienda, and never once had serious thought of love or trouble. Thus time passed until I was nineteen years of age, when strange stories came to us of the wonderful railroad that was coming from the Rio Grande del Norte, and was already near the city of Chihuahua. I had read much of the 'maquina de vaho,' but I wanted to see it for myself, and the peones who went away to work and came back jingling pesos, when before they had never seen anything greater than un medio, only whetted my desire to travel.'

"Ah, my son," said the old man, interrupting, "the love of money is the root of all evil.' Nudi intravimus, nudi eximus."

"But, padre, it was not money that I was after. I wanted to see the world. So just before 'la dia de noche buena' I started for Chihuahua. My mother blessed me with tears, and my father, who knew my temper and inexperience, urged me to hasten back and take charge of the hacienda. Chihuahua was the largest city I had ever been in, and I wandered about the plaza for a day or two quite lost in the crowd. The Americanos were everywhere, and seemed to have plenty of money, and to own everything, and when I thought how our beautiful Mexico had belonged to old Castile before an Englishman had set foot on the soil I hated the upstarts. I soon found friends who felt the same way that I did, and we picked quarrels with the gringos until the police interfered.

"One night, after I had been there about a week, we went to a fandango. There I met my fate. I took my seat beside the most beautiful senorita that I had ever seen. She was not dark, like our Coahuila belles, but her head glinted like the ripening wheat on the uplands, and her eyes were a deep, dreamy blue, and her form—well, I lost my heart. She threw back the mantilla that covered her head and smiled at me. This gave me courage, and I asked her to dance. I can never forget the touch of her hand. It gave me a thrill that I had never before experienced. I felt it often during the next two weeks, but I have never known it since. The next dance she gave to one of my friends, and, as they passed me, she dropped a rose at my feet. Before the night was over I knew all about her. Her name was Maria Sepueveda, and she was an heiress. Of course, she had been much sought after, but as yet had shown no decided preference for any one. This was my chance. I was as constant as her shadow. If she was at a fandango, I was there also, and when there was no fandango, I would take my mandolin and stand beneath her window. In less than a week I had told her all about the beautiful Boulson de Mapimi, and, for you know we do things quickly in our country, I told her that I loved her and she promised——"

Diego paused. His passionate voice was choked with sobs. Padre Sebastiano stroked the bowed head, but did not speak. In a moment the young man resumed.

"Such happiness could not last forever. It was too great. One night, and I was to return home the next day, we were at a fandango. A party of Americanos came in. One of them was a great man. He spent gold where I spent silver. He used to drink a great deal and to gamble a great deal more. The senoritas liked him too well; but I hated him. He would show his gold and diamonds, and was reported to be a powerful hidalgo in his own land. Well, Maria and I had enjoyed one dance, and then this Americano asked her to dance with him. I did not think she would do it, but you know, 'No ay cerradura si se de oro la ganzua (there is no lock if the key be golden). So they went on the floor together. I saw him whisper sweet words in her ear, just as I had done, and rattle the coins in his pocket, and my heart became hot within my breast. I wanted the next dance, but Maria paid no attention to me. She danced again with the gringo. When they came near me I scowled. He saw me and laughed a sneering laugh and said something in English. I did not understand the language, but I did know the word 'greaser.' Maria understood him. She turned toward me and laughed also. I could stand it no longer. I went outside into the cool air. It did not cool me. I heard the sound of music. It had no charms for now and again, as I looked in, I saw Maria still dancing with my enemy. For hours I waited. At length the Americanos came out and walked toward their hotel. There were three of them. I followed like a cat. I could have followed that man to the end of the earth. By and by he stopped behind his friends to light a cigar. This was what I wanted. In an instant my knife was between his ribs. He fell with a groan. His friends ran back, and while they stopped to raise him I escaped in the darkness. I knew Chihuahua as well as they. I hunted up my friend Ramon, and told him all about it.

"'Diego,' said he, 'they know you, and you have killed a great hidalgo. You must get out of the city to-night—right away. You cannot go home, because the police will look for you there, and the United States will never let the matter rest.'

"'What shall I do?'

"'Take your horse and go across the river. They will never look for you in his country. Here is money. Your father will repay me.'

"In another hour I was on my way. I thought that I would go to Santa Fe. So I told Ramon; but the blessed mother brought me to your mission. Padre, will you turn me away?"

"God forbid, my son. But did you kill Senor Americano?"

"That I cannot tell. I meant to.'

"It is just as likely that you did not, if you struck him only once. These Americanos have many lives. Do you ever think of Maria now?"

"Oh, Padre, can I ever forget her? Sometimes I have the old love just as bad as I had it in Chihuahua, and sometimes I think that if she were here I could kill her, too."

"You must put such thoughts away, my son. If you have killed a man your whole life must be one of repentance. Do you repent?"

"I do, indeed; and pray all the holy saints and fathers to intercede for me. Ora pro me."

The confessor had been young himself, and knew the great world far better than did his companion. He did not speak the word that Diego wished to hear uttered, but gave him a kiss of peace, and said:

"Wait here; I go to consult with the brethren."

The penitent knew that his secret was safe, but he wondered what Padre Sebastiano would say about his remaining in this asylum. He had not long to wait. The good man returned with the news that the exile might depart when he wished. The fathers, however, had learned to love him, and he was welcome to remain at the mission if he chose.

"Only," said the priest, "if you stay you must earn your bread by the sweat of your brow. We hope that some day you will be one of us."

In this manner it came about that Diego Dominiguez y Agramonte, who had always ruled and never served, went out to labor with the Pueblos, and when his "peonada" was done he would come into the chapel and join in the vesper service like a true gentleman of Mexico that he was. The fathers had done all this to try him. They realized his worth, and soon promoted him to be superintendent of the business details of the little community. They gave him an unoccupied cell for his own use; but as often as they urged him to take the irrevocable vow, he would declare that as yet he was not worthy. He even affected, as far as possible, the habit of his superiors, and was foremost in deeds of charity and self-denial. The Indians regarded him as a lay brother; but he never smiled nor mingled in their amusements as did the others. So, not knowing his name, he passed to and fro among them as "El Padre Triste."

All this came to him as he basked in the sunlight. A shadow lay athwart him. Looking up he saw Padre Sebastiano. The laborers were at their toil. The air was full of fragrance of freshly turned earth and of bursting buds. Henceforth this world was his world. The past was buried. No more for him would the orange flowers bloom in the far-away Boulson de Mapimi; no more would he dream of the golden-haired senorita of Chihuahua. He, too, would be a father, and these patient, dusky sons of the soil would be his children—his care.

"Padre," said he, arising, "I am resolved. If you are willing, I will take the vow."

"The saints be praised! Diego, you are no longer my son, but my brother," and with streaming eyes the priest hurried away to break the joyful news.

That night Diego lay down on his pallet with a feeling of blissful security such as he had never known before. Scarcely had he fallen asleep when he was aroused by a rude shake.

"Get up, Diego! A wagon has been overturned in the canon on the road to Santa Fe. A messenger has just come from there. One man is badly hurt, and there is a woman in the party. The place is about fifteen miles from here, but you can ride fast, and know what to do. Take a bottle of brandy with you, and whatever else you may need from the medicine chest. God speed you!"

With all his spiritual fervor the young man could not forget that he had once been un caballero. His horse, the same that he had ridden to San Pedro, had grown fat and lazy in the corral, and El Padre Triste felt a savage glee as he dug in the spurs and galloped away over the untracked sand in the chill of the night. In half an hour the way became rocky. The mountains, at first a distant black band, now arose to the stars, an insurmountable barrier, save where the little stream that gave life to the mission had furrowed its way through perpendicular walls a thousand feet in height. The horse went warily. The darkness could almost be felt, and one false step might mean death. Diego did not think of this. He was wondering whence these travelers came. Were they from Mexico, making a pilgrimage to the City of the Holy Faith? If so, could they by any chance recognize him? After all these years was he doomed to meet his just deserts?

He had plenty of time to ponder these things before the flickering light of a midnight campfire disclosed his journey's end. Voices reached him. The speech was his mother tongue. On the ground near the fire lay a man moaning, his comrades doing all in their power to alleviate his suffering. Near by, wrapped in blankets, was a sleeping form. Diego tied his horse and advanced toward the group. He did not see a familiar face. The watchers rose to meet him.

"Oh, padre, you are just in time. Jose is almost dead."

"Not so, friends," he replied in their own language; "he's a long way from being a dead man. Put on some wood and make a blaze."

He poured some liquor down the throat of the writhing wretch, bound up the wounds and set, as best he could, the broken limb. All this took time, and as the fire burned more brightly and the noise of the conversation grew louder, the form in the blankets moved uneasily. Then the blankets were thrown back and a woman approached. Diego's back was toward her. He saw—nothing but duty.

"Diego!"

El Padre Triste bounded to his feet and turned. The hair that glistened like the ripening wheat on Mapimi uplands and the eyes of dark, dreamy blue were before him; but the smile was gone. In its place was an expression of astonishment.

"Senora Maria, how do you come here?"

"For you, Diego; I stood it as long as I could, and then—and then Ramon said he thought you had gone to Santa Fe, and I ran away to find you."

"But, Senor Americano! If he had been alive you would never have thought of me," Diego said bitterly.

"Diego," the old smile crept around the lovely mouth—"Diego, Senor Americano did not die. His wife came down to nurse him two weeks after you ran away. He is alive yet for aught I know. He just got a good lesson, and I—I wanted a little fun, you see. Won't you forgive me?"

"Mariquita!"

The next morning as Padre Sebastiano was looking toward the northwest he saw a cloud of dust approaching. It came nearer—a horse, and it carried two. Nearer yet. It was Diego. He was smiling, and behind him, in true knight errant fashion, rode a woman. The father, beside himself with amazement, ran out to meet them, and he never quite recovered from the salutation which he received:

"'Madre del Dios,' padre, I am glad I did not take the vow."—Short Stories.

Queer System of Enumeration.

The Indians of Guiana have a queer system of numeration. They count by the hand and four fingers. Thus, when they reach five, instead of saying so, they call it a "hand." Six is, therefore, a "hand and first finger." Ten is "two hands," but twenty, instead of being "four hands" is "a man." Forty is "two men," and thus they go on by twenties. Forty-six is expressed as "two men, hand and first finger."

Heart Facts and Figures.

The human heart is six inches in length, four inches in diameter, and beats on an average 70 times per minute, 4,200 times an hour, 100,800 times a day and 36,792,000 times in the course of a year. So that the heart of an ordinary man, eighty years of age, has beaten 3,000,000 times.

GREAT NAVAL TRAGEDY.

Explosion on the Sultana that Killed 1,500 American Troops.

Dreadful as is the loss of more than 250 lives on the Maine, this fatality is not the worst in the naval annals of the United States. By far the greatest loss of life from one American vessel, and probably unsurpassed in the history of the world, was when, at the close of the civil war, the Mississippi steamer Sultana blew up her boilers near Memphis and hurled 1,500 Union soldiers to death.

The Sultana was a fine, large vessel, 285 feet long, which plied between St. Louis and New Orleans. She left New Orleans one fine April morning in 1865 on her return to St. Louis with a heavy cargo. She touched at Vicksburg, on her trip up the river, and took on board

THE TRAGIC STEAMER SULTANA.

2,100 Union soldiers, who had been prisoners at Columbia, Libby, Andersonville and other Southern prisons, and who had either been exchanged or freed by the flight of their jailers. The soldiers were from the West, and there were several cases of 100 or so belonging to one regiment.

This was an enormous load for the steamer and she made slow progress up the river. The boat coaled at Memphis. After taking on an unusually large supply, she left Memphis at 8 o'clock at night, April 26, 1865. She pulled out of the harbor for the last time and started up the river. But she did not go far. About ten miles above Memphis, while all were asleep, the vessel exploded. It was 4 o'clock in the morning, April 27, 1865, that the Sultana was wrecked, with a loss of 1,500 men, nearly all Union soldiers.

One of the boilers burst, tearing out one whole side of the hull. The vessel then listed to one side, while the other, which had caught fire, burned furiously as the swift gale fanned the flames into a roaring blaze. It was a horrible scene. Twenty-two hundred men were blown into the air, and fell into the water with the shattered ruins of the once proud Sultana. Many of the men were torn to pieces, while hundreds sank beneath the waves.

The night was hideous with the cries and moans of the wounded and drowning men who clung to the remains of the wrecked craft. The Marble City and Jenny Lind were both in the harbor at Memphis, but having up no steam, they could not go to the rescue. The little steamer Gray Eagle happened to be coming down the river, and picked up about 400 of the struggling men and carried them to the United States Hospital at Memphis. Occasionally here and there in the North to-day can be found a survivor of that awful night.

The El Dorado Myth.

El Dorado is the term now heard on every side in connection with the placer mines of Alaska and the Northwest Territory of Canada. Its derivation is of interest. In the fifteenth century it was rumored that there existed in the northern part of South America a city of great wealth called Manoa, whose king, El Dorado by name, was periodically smeared with gold dust, until his whole body had a gilded appearance. It was said that on these occasions he threw gold, emeralds and other precious metals and gems into a sacred lake, in which he afterward bathed.

Beginning in 1532 the Spaniards sent many large expeditions to search for this phantom city, and most of them ended disastrously, hundreds of lives being lost. One explorer, Orellano, averred that he found El Dorado in his voyage down the Amazon in 1540. This was disproved, but the search was continued down to the eighteenth century. Some of the results were the conquest and settlement of New Granada, the making known to the world of the mountain region of Venezuela, the discovery of the noble rivers, the Orinoco and the Amazon, and the exploration of the vast forests west of the Andes. About the end of the sixteenth century an English expedition either sent out by or under the personal leadership of Raleigh penetrated into Guiana, thereby obtaining a claim on that country which has resulted in the acquirement of the modern British colony of that name.

It has been supposed that the origin of this fable arose from the yearly celebration of a tribe of Indians near Gogota, whose chief was on these occasions gilded with gold dust, but this ceremony was never witnessed by the Spaniards, and the story may simply be another version of the El Dorado myth.

The name El Dorado was commonly used to describe the city or country which was the object of the search, but a later usage of the term has been its figurative application with regard to any region of more than common richness. El Dorado County, in California, was the scene of the famous gold finds of '49, and since then the expression has been used to describe many gold camps.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

CONSUMPTION OF INTOXICANTS

Interesting Figures on the Drink Bills of Four Leading Nations.

The British Board of Trade has just published some figures showing the consumption of wine, beer and spirits in the countries of Europe and the United States. The report emphasizes one fact that is generally overlooked and that is that the consumption of the various intoxicating beverages is controlled, very largely, by climate. Spirits predominate for drink in the cold countries, beer in the more moderate and wines in the southern sections. Thus we see that spirits are used very largely in Scotland, northern Russia, Sweden and Norway, beer in England and Germany, while in France, Spain and Italy wine is drunk almost to the exclusion of other intoxicants. From this it would follow that beer should be chiefly used in the northern section of the United States and wine in the southern.

What the effect of high taxation is upon a nation's drink bill is a subject not well settled, while it is well established that the amount of spirits consumed varies with the prosperity or purchasing capacity of the people; that large vintages and correspondingly large production of wine increase the amount of the per capita consumption and that in most cases increase in taxation and corresponding increase in the cost of intoxicants somewhat reduce the amount consumed. There is considerable variation in the revenue derived by different nations from the taxation of alcoholic beverages. In Great Britain it is 35 per cent; in France 19 per cent; in the United States 30 per cent, and in Germany 17½ per cent.

The following table gives the quantity of wine, beer and spirits, in gallons, consumed per capita in the countries named:

Country	Wine.	Beer.	Spirits.
United Kingdom	0.40	30.7	1.01
France	29.50	5.2	1.85
Germany	1.06	25.5	1.94
United States	0.22	12.7	0.83

Probably the large amount of spirits consumed in Germany is due somewhat to the fact that it is cheaper there than in either France or Great Britain. The showing in the United States is certainly creditable, for the people consume of alcoholic beverages very much below the average of the four nations.

IOWA'S OLDEST HOUSE.

Fort and Scene of Extermination of Brown's Outlaws.

In Iowa, or anywhere in the West, if a building is fifty years old it is venerated as belonging to the dim and hoary past. In Bellevue, Iowa, is a house which was put up in 1837. Work on its destruction was recently completed, and the oldest inhabitants of the town are telling to the youngsters its bloody history. It was the headquarters of as ugly a gang of desperadoes as ever infested a town in the Middle West. W. W. Brown built the house and intended it for a hotel, but no reputable persons ever stopped there. It was two stories high and made of hewn oak studding, with butter-nut weather boards, and the intervening space filled in with brick masonry. So it was well calculated to answer as a fort.

Bellevue put up with Brown and the crimes of his gang—murder, robbery and the like—for three years, and then the best citizens banded together to exterminate the crew. Led by Sheriff Warren, who is still living, and Captain Cox, forty men, armed to the teeth, advanced on the fort one day in the spring of 1840. A call for the surrender of the outlaws was answered by a volley from the house, and the "Bellevue war" began. The posse got into the house and the occupants retreated upstairs, where the assailants could not reach them. The first shot had been fired by Brown himself and he was the first to be killed. The attacking party finding that the outlaws could not be dislodged, prepared to fire the house and smoke or burn them out. This resulted as expected and a score of the gang made a break for liberty, only to be overhauled, and most of them were caught after a severe fight. Thirteen were captured and seven escaped. The loss to the posse was four killed and four wounded. Of the enemy two were killed, including the leader, and several wounded. But that was the end of the gang.

On the premises is an old well, into which it is reputed the bodies of many of Brown's victims were thrown, also a large amount of money, the booty of the gang. The well, however, was filled up years ago and never has been dug out. By the time the contemporaries of Brown had become gray-haired an old fellow wandered into the yard one day and begged that he be allowed to clean out the well. Permission was refused, and it always has been believed that he was the last survivor of the gang, who wanted to recover their ill-gotten gains.

COLUMBIA'S GREAT LIBRARY.

College Will Contain a Collection of [illegible] about 1,200,000 Volumes.

Columbia University Library is situated in the architectural center of the university site at Morningside Heights in New York City. Seventeen other buildings are planned to surround it and to serve for various purposes. It is a noble structure, consisting substantially of four buildings, each 110 feet in length and 45 feet in depth, placed about a hollow square, which is roofed over and surmounted by a dome. The central space under the dome serves as a reading-room, and is, from floor to ceiling, 106 feet in height.

The material is granite for the first or basement story and Indiana limestone for the remainder of the structure. The building is thoroughly fireproof. It contains at present, besides the library and connected reading-rooms, the administrative offices of the university and the lecture-rooms and offices of the faculties of law, political science and philosophy. When fully utilized for library purposes the building will contain about 1,200,000 volumes, with reading and study space for many hundred readers.

The library dates back to the foundation of the college in 1754, but the library of King's College was substantially dissipated and destroyed when the college buildings were occupied during the war of the revolution. The present library has grown since the reorganization of the institution in 1787 under the name of Columbia College. In 1883, when a new library building was erected and occupied, the entire collection for all departments fell short of 50,000 volumes. In 1890 the number of volumes was less than 100,000. In 1897 there were about 240,000 volumes, with many thousands of pamphlets. The annual increase is 18,000 to 20,000 volumes.

The library is strong in almost all the branches of learning taught in the university. It is especially rich in architecture and art; in botany it is second only to the library at Harvard University; it is rich in the political and economic sciences. Special collections which may be mentioned are the Avery library of architecture and are of 15,000 volumes, the Goethe collection of over 1,200 volumes and the Kant collection of about 700 volumes.

DIVER'S WORKING SUIT.

It Is Made of India Rubber and Is Enough to Scare the Fish.

The work of a diver is attended by many risks, but dangers become familiar through long custom, so his task usually has few terrors for him. He descends trusting to the proper working of the mechanism by which he is supplied with air and to the strength of the life line, which lowers and pulls him up.

The diving suit, which is the one generally used now, is made of India rubber, with a helmet and breastplate of copper. Outside of the rubber, to protect it from hard usage, an extra suit of canvas overalls is worn, and after a rough piece of work this canvas is frequently torn to shreds. Around his waist the diver wears a belt made of bars of lead fastened crosswise on a leather band. His shoes are of metal, heavily weighted, so that he can maintain an erect position easily, and the entire suit with which he enters the water weighs about 175 pounds. This is necessary to enable him to sink to the required depth. The helmet is supplied with windows of thick glass, one in front and two others at each side of it, so that by turning his head slightly inside the helmet the diver can see for some distance around him.

The air tubing is of strong, flexible rubber, through which the fresh air from above is driven down by means of a pump. This tube, before reaching the opening in the helmet through which the air is supplied to the diver, is carried through a ring on the breastplate at the diver's left shoulder. This is so that he may be able to grasp it quickly, without having to grope for it, in case he needs to signal to those at the pump above. One pull on the tube means that he wants more air and two pulls warn the pumpers that he is getting too much. If the air were supplied in excess the suit would become so buoyant that it would tend to rise. After being passed through the shoulder ring the tube goes around and enters the helmet at the back. From here the air passes through a flat rubber tube to the top of the helmet, where the single tube divides into three branches, one of which goes down to the nostrils and the other to the ears.

After the air has been breathed it passes on down inside the suit, inflating this sufficiently to overcome a certain degree the hydrostatic pressure. Without air inside it the rubber would be pressed against the diver's body and limbs by the weight of the water, and would drive the blood up into his head. There is another opening in the back of the helmet, through which the foul air finds its escape. This may be seen coming up to the top of the water in the form of bubbles. The life rope by which the diver is lowered and raised is about as thick as an ordinary clothes line. It is wound securely about his waist and fastened under his arms. Three pulls upon it signify to those above that the diver wishes to come up.

It is possible to use electric lights under water, but it is not widely done. If a diver has to use one hand to carry his light he is badly handicapped in his work. Often he works by the sense of touch.

THE HEYWOOD SHOOTING.

Alba Heywood Himself Tells How it Occurred.

So many of our readers know Alba Heywood, the popular actor, that we give in full, his account of the shooting affray that came so near costing him his life. He says:

I wish to make a statement to my friends regarding the shooting affair between Mr. P. T. Pegues, manager of the Longview, Texas, opera house, and myself at said theater on the night of Feb. 24.

In the settlement we found he had issued eight passes more than the limit of his contract allowed. I asked him to settle for them. He replied that they were for his family. Knowing him to be a young man I of course knew they were not for his immediate family. I also knew from my treasurer that two of the passes were for two young ladies brought there by Mr. Pegues' brother. I contended that as the contract limited him to 16 that I was rightfully entitled to my share of the price of the eight tickets. He contended it was customary to pass in the managers family free. I assured him I never objected to a manager passing in his wife, but "his sisters, his cousins and his aunts," I considered it too much and especially did I claim pay for the two young ladies his brother brought. He replied he never heard of such a thing before, that it would be just as reasonable for him to charge admission for the members of my company. I replied that he was mistaken, it was not a parallel case, that the members of my company together with myself and the attaches of his house were all participants in and contributed to the giving of the performance but that those he had passed in I was in no way interested in as they were there purely and simply to enjoy the performance.

Mr. Pegues insisted that it was the first time he had ever heard of such a thing to which I replied that there were several features of the engagement that were new to me. At this point he replied with some feeling that if it had not been for him I would not have played to a fifty dollar house. I said I could not understand how that should be. He replied because he had introduced my advance agent to Mr. ....., the president of a society organized in Longview for the purpose of bringing good attractions to the town and but for that I would not have played to a fifty dollar house. I replied, Yes, you introduced my agent to this gentleman who was in no way financially interested in the affair, but who went out with my agent, hustled the business, listed the town and gave you and me this elegant house, doing the work you should have done and putting these dollors into your pocket and mine and now you claim the credit of it simply because you introduced them. The fact is that after this disinterested party had done all this for you and me you were not gentleman enough to offer him a complimentary ticket or even thank him.

At this he became very angry, jumped off from the stool on which he sat in the box office, at the same time quickly drawing his revolver and with it stricking me a terrific blow on the left side of the nose with the muzzle of the gun lacerating it terribly saying: "You say I am not a gentleman, you ..... and I will kill you on the spot." I thought I was shot in the head, but the wound indicates that the ball did not touch me. He struck at me again but I warded off the blow by raising my arm so he only inflicted a scalp wound. At the same time I pressed my revolver against him and fired. He ran out into the auditorium and I fired two more shots at him. He fell facing the stage. I walked out of the opera house turning up town to give myself up.

When I had gone about a rod I heard a shot and turning saw him in the door way. The shot had missed me. He fired again the ball penetrating my chest a little to the right of the center between the nipple making its exit about midway between my spinal column and my side. I emptied my revolver at him and from the number of shots he fired I judge he reloaded. I put one new cartridge in my revolver snapped it twice but it did not respond.

He was hit four times, in the head, in the left side, in the hip and in the breast. The last wound being similar to mine.

He then started up the road calling for help. After going a short distance he fell and was taken into a house near by.

I started for main street and walked about two blocks where I met four men who carried me to my hotel.

I wish to correct the statement that the press have made that I lay unconscious for twelve hours. The fact is I walked up staias to my room and assisted in undressing myself. I have not fainted nor have I taken any anesthetics since the shooting.

I do not care to pose as a hero, as comedy is my line, but when cast in heroic parts I do the best I can. I simply fought for my life. A mouse or canary bird would have done the same if cornered. There were no witnesses to the affair.

POOR WIT

The Press is inclined to get humorous when it refers to the brutal treatment of Speaker Reed, towards the members of the House of Representatives. Of course the humor in this case is aimed at Congressman Robinson, but the Press must not forget that the egotistical Reed serves republicans in the same way when it suits his fancy. The incident in question, came up just before taking a vote and when each member that Reed would deign to let speak at all, was allowed five minutes. Something that Mr. Robinson said, displeased Reed and he kept interrupting our member, and finally told Robinson the time was up and he must sit down. There was all of the glorious thing Reed did, if there was any glory in that. But Robinson got the laugh on the big speaker by asking if his time had been used by speaker in interrupting him. And Speaker Reed was brutal enough to reply that this was the case. He had himself used up a part of Robinson's time, so as to make him sit down. History does not record a smaller or meaner act on the part of any speaker of the House. Republican members are as bitter against his bulldozing as are democrats. The Twelfth Indiana district has no more power in congress that Speaker Reed, a member from Maine, chooses to give. And every congressional district in the United States is in the same shameful condition. Every self-respecting congressman and private citizen ought to revolt against such unrepublican tyranny no matter what party he belongs to.

THAT SENATORIAL TANGLE.

For the benefit of some of our more recent subscribers, who did not see the very clear statement published in the COURIER about a month ago, and fearing they will be mislead by a statement sent out recently [illegible] the above we call brief attention to the matter again. The statement alluded to is a greater tangle than the "Senatorial Tangle" itself. Here is the first part of the article.

"Senator N. W. Gilbert, of Angola, who was elected from the district composed of Steuben and Lagrange and is now thrown in the district of Noble and Lagrange as a holdover was here yesterday. He is in the holdover district with Senator Nusbaum, making two holdovers in one district and leaving Steuben and DeKalb without a senator. It is the election in this district which will cause fifty-one senators in the next legislature."

To give an idea of how clear this statement is, we explain.

1. Senator Gilbert is not "now thrown into the district of Lagrange and Noble." He does not live in either county, if he did he would be all right and there would be no 51 senators. He lives in Steuben county which is in the new district in which both he and Senator Nusbaum are now "holding over."

2. If he is one of the two holdovers in this district of Steuben and DeKalb which is true, how could he be over in the other new district of Lagrange and Noble?

3. And if he is in "the holdover district with Senator Nusbaum making two holdovers in one district," how would that fact leave "Steuben and DeKalb without a Senator?" For Nusbaum lives in DeKalb and Gilbert in Steuben. And if a new member is elected that would make three when one is all we can have in one district.

4. How can the elect ion in this district cause fifty-one senators?" Why should we have an election in this district this year, when we have a double number of senators in it already?

6. It is not the election in this district that will make the fifty-one members. It is the election in the district of Lagrange and Noble that the fifty-first man will be elected, if at all. Each of those counties has already its proper share of representation in the state senate. Lagrange shares Mr. Gilbert with Steuben and Noble shares Dr. Nusbaum with DeKalb. If they elect a new man, they will each have another half of a senator. Dr. Nusbaum and Mr. Gilbert are both entitled to hold the full four years for the office is one provided by the constitution and the legislature cannot change the length of their terms or legislate them out of office.

6. Altogether we think the article we have quoted is the wildest piece of editorial writing we ever read. It is a veritable "Senatorial tangle" which the COURIER herewith untangles and makes plain.

Writes to Dr. Hartman and tells Him What Makes Her So.

Mrs. Lucy Lee, of Naples, Tex., had almost come to the conclusion that the blessing of health was no longer hers, and so when she regained it, her happiness was almost too great for words. She writes as follows: "I am well now and am enjoying good health better than ever before in my life. How happy I feel that I can write and tell you this. I cannot praise Pe-ru-na too much. Man-a-lin is the best medicine I have ever tried for that purpose; it relieves me from all pain. I advised my neighbor to use Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin for catarrah and stomach trouble. It is the best in the world. I can do all my house work and not feel it. I can't praise Pe-ru-na as I would like to; it is the greatest medicine there is in the world."

Dr. Hartman receives many such letters as this every week. Some of them have been gathered together and published in book form. The book is called "Facts and Faces," and will be sent free to any address by the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

COURT.

Interesting News From the Temple of Justice.

Monday forenoon came up the case against the three Elkhart boys accused of looting cars on the Lake Shore road Their names are Charles Gemberling, Wm. Eash and John Carpenter. The fathers of Gemberling and Carpenter were present and testified. Carpenter is manager of the opera house at Elkhart and runs a transfer line also. He testified that his son was usually a good boy, but had been arrested and fined, three or four years ago for jump on behind carriages. He did not know of his boy being away from home, except perhaps once when he went on a freight to Goshen. His boy had not been away from home till a week ago last Sunday. That was the day the boys were caught on the train. The boy was 14 last November.

Mr. Gemberling testified that his boy had been good enough at home but had been arrested two or three times. He was 16 last October. He said he bought the shoes the boy now has on but the clothes were given him by a bigger boy who had outgrown them.

Capt. Wright, chief of police of Elkhart testified he knew the boys. They had the reputation of being tough but not criminal especially.

A young man named Obers testified he had worked for Carpenter driving team on the transfer line. He and others including three boys would go into the barn Sundays and play cards. He was evidently a tough.

Geo. French, conductor on the train gave the fullest testimony. He said when he left Toledo with his train he went down the line and examined every car to see it was locked. The first stop was at Wanseon; the next a short one at Edgerton; then a longer one at Butler. Here he again looked to see if the cars were locked. At Kendallville they stopped to let a train pass and while standing there his head brakeman came to him and told him there was a car open. Both walked back and found one door open a few inches. They looked in and saw a big box was up against the door. They pushed the door further open and saw a boy on top the box asleep. There was a small crowbar and an iron bolt about 15 inches long, lying by the door. They took the bar and punched the boy on the box. He awoke and they made him come out. He told them there were two others and they went in and got them. A lot of hats were strewn over the car floor and a number of small packages tied up were lying about. One boy had on one of the hats and his own cap was in his pocket. The boys said they lived in Ligonier and the conductor said he would take them there. He telegraphed ahead to have the boys arrested and taking them in to the caboose ran to Ligonier where the boys were taken out and locked up. On Monday as the DAILY COURIER stated last Tuesday they were brought here.

The story of the boys is that they took a freight at Elkhart, but at Ligonier were ordered out. They got another train to Kendallville, but they were fired again. There they got a third train and got to Butler and not caring to go further got off. The west bound train Mr. French's, came along and stopped, they claim they found a car open and got into it. It was also plain that after getting into the car they either found some of the boxes open or else they broke into them.

Mr. Welshimer defended the boys, while Pomeroy and Rhodes prosecuted them.

At the conclusion the Gemberling and Eash boys were sent to the Reform School until they are twenty-one and the Carpenter boy was let off on a suspended sentence. It was a wise thing to do for we believe the boy will reform.

The case against Isaac Speer of Waterloo came up today. Speer had bought a set of scales which proved useless, He sent them back and several letters were exchaged and the House sent him another scales, which he says he did not order. They are still in the freight house. There were but few witnesses, but several letters were read. W. H. Leas was attorney for the plaintiff and J. F. Shuman for Speer. Mr. Speer came out ahead and will not have to pay for a thing he never ordered.

For Spring

NEWVILLE.

As we never see any items from our town in the WEEKLY COURIER we thought we would send in a few and let the world know that we are not dead, but booming right along with the rest of our sister towns.

Miss Mabel Whitehurst who has been very sick is able to be out again.

Charles Cotrill who has been visiting friends and relatives in town and vicinity has returned to his home in the West.

Walter Miller is getting the material on the ground for a new house which he intends to build this spring.

Mrs. Bodiker and daughter, Carrie who have both been the sick list are improving which makes Mr. Kiser, (Mrs. B's. son) feel happy as he has been "chief cook" for some time.

Mrs. Mary Meek who has been quite sick with lung fever remains about the same.

The old Porter house has been torn down and away. The building has been unoccupied for some time, and had become unfit to live in.

Clarence Wyett has moved on the old Mottinger farm east of town.

Rev Clark will preach at the Disciple church next Sunday morning. A cordial invitation is extended so all.

The protracted meeting which has been in progress for over a month at the U. B. church did not close with the quarterly meeting which was last Saturday and Sunday as many expected it would. Rev. Coolie a colored evangelist, has been assisting Rev. Kriebel with the protracted meeting, but Elder Lilly, of Hicksville presided. It closed Monday night. Rev. Coolie, has left here to assist in a meeting at Farmer Center, O.

Presbyterian Meeting

The meeting of the members and congregation of the Presbyterian church last evening was well attended and a great deal of business was done. They unanimously agreed to purchase a new organ and make the needed changes in the church to accommodate it. By making the deal now, they can get a good allowance for the present organ. While making the changes on the church, they will provide for a lecture room, which has long been needed. Mr. Colvin also read his resignation as pastor. This is a step contemplated for some time, as he had already announced. He has had offers from other places, and we understand has not yet decided what he will do for the immediate present. It was the most important meeting they have held for a long time, and best feeling prevailed throughout the session.

Mr. Colvin has been pastor of the church for more than four years, having preached here first in December of 1893. With one exception his pastorate has been the longest in the past thirty-five years of the church's history. He has made many friends in Auburn, who will regret to see him go elsewhere, and whose good wishes will follow him into his new field and it should be added that he has the most kindly feeling for the people here.

BUTLER.

Dick Abrams who was confined in the Auburn jail for the past two weeks for larceny has escaped the meshes of the law, experienced a change of purpose, joined church and bids fair to become a respectable citizen once more. Our people ought to do what they can to hold him up.

Reuben Ulm, of Huntertown, Ind., a veteran of the late war has been visiting with Butler friends and greeting his G. A. R. comrades about town.

James Stuller, a former resident of Edgerton, O., but for several years past, a resident of our place died at his home on East Oak street last Saturday morning. He had been ill for several weeks and his death was not unexpected.

The rains of the last week have made the roads about town very bad, and but few people from the country have been venturing upon them of late.

The Moughler hotel on the south side had two close calls from fire last week, one caused by an over heated stove pipe doing a slight damage, another much more serious, yet not fatal caused by the extreme carelessness of the oil man delivering them gasolene, for coal oil. One of the help filled all the lamps with this dangerous explosive and some of them were lighted one caused an unusual splutter, when one of the guests placed his hat over it and extinguished it, and another, was thrown out of door and exploded there. Persons dealing in this dangerous fluid, should exercise extreme care. No serious damage resulted, but had there been an explosion of one of the large amps that hold a quart or more, some lives might have been lost and the building destroyed.

William I. Jones, the aged father of our townsman, A. G. Jones was buried in Kansas last week. His son received a telegram of his severe illness and hastened to his home but failed to reach it until after his death. Our older citizens will remember him as a former resident of Butler.

BUGGY EVERY 20 MINUTES.

The Kiblinger factory is now turning out a finished buggy at the rate of one every twenty minutes. Thirty a day is what they are doing, which is the same thing.

This reminds Mr. Vann, the foreman of the iron work department, that not long ago, he mentioned this to a farmer when the later, without stopping to think, remarked; "Well I don't see how the paint would get dry in that time." Of course, they don't take a buggy and finish it right up. But they have a good many going on at the same time.

CLOSE CALL.

This forenoon came near being a bad day for P. L. Bishop, of the South End Flouring Mill. He had gone upstairs to adjust some part of the machinery, and in fixing a belt, his right hand was caught under it and it held him fast. He caught hold on the belt with his other hand and held on to keep from being drawn in further. He succeeded in this, but could not get free, and was not liberated till Mr. Richwine, the engineer stopped the machinery and rescued him from his dangerous position. His hand was bruised and hurt some and three fingers dislocated but no bones were broken. He cared for his hand properly and was soon at his work again. We are glad he was so lucky as not to be seriously injured.

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is a strengthening food and tonic, remarkable in its flesh-forming properties. It contains Cod-Liver Oil emulsified or partially digested, combined with the well-known and highly prized Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, so that their potency is materially increased.

What Will It Do?

It will arrest loss of flesh and restore to a normal condition the infant, the child and the adult. It will enrich the blood of the anemic; will stop the cough, heal the irritation of the throat and lungs, and cure incipient consumption. We make this statement because the experience of twenty-five years has proven it in tens of thousands of cases. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

Mich., and they drove through to Angola and there took cars to Auburn. They will return in the same way. They have not so much mud in Branch county as we have, but they found it convenient to wear rubber boots till they got to Angola, and then left them there. It has been only a week since Mrs. St. Clair was here to attend the funeral of her mother, Mrs. Lindorffer. Isaiah McEnterfer is a son of Geo. McEnterfer who many years ago moved from this county into Branch Co. Mich.

—The three Pilgrim brothers Theo. Dorsey and Ed. left today for Kewanna Ind., where they will open a repair shop and also build wagons and carriages. They have been residents of Auburn for a good many years and have been employed in our carriage factories and blacksmith shops most all of the time. The people of Kewanna find them all good workmen and with their families, valuable additions to that city. We hope they may prosper.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bishop are now at home and installed their lovely residence, corner of Jackson and Eleventh Street. We have received lovely announcements of the marriage, which took place at the home of Miss Hotchkiss at Medina, Lenawee Co., Mich., on March 9th. In common with all our people, the COURIER extends its best wishes and heartiest congratulations. We feel certain that our society people will make Mrs. Bishop feel she has made no mistake in selecting Auburn for her home.

—M. I. Hoffman, the photographer, took a picture of Mr. St. Clair as he lay in the casket this forenoon. We saw the negative and if is especially good. Mr. Hoffman is one of the best photographers that ever came to DeKalb county. The crowds that visit his gallery for sitting on bright days is further proof of the statement.

—ExCommissioner James M. Henderson has been sick for some time at his home in Jackson township and his friends fear it may be a serious case.

—A. Lewis has received a rattle snake skin 5½ feet in length, from his son Harry at Coco, Fla. Harry is growing in strength down there, to which we are glad to note.

—Wm. Carr came home Monday from Ligonier where he has been visiting some time.

—S. R. Rickel came down from Waterloo yesterday and made his usual friendly call on the COURIER. He is going into the ice business we understand, and hope he will succeed.

—John Anthony and wife returned Monday to their home in Stark county, Ohio. They had been visiting with Mrs. Anthony's people, the family of E. D. Raub and with the family of H. C Shull, with whom Mr. Anthony was employed for about five years. They have a farm and will follow that business They have many friends here who will wish them success.

—The other day, Mrs. Refner was combing the hair of her little baby girl, and as it was somewhat tangled, she had to pull it some of course. Little Gertrude did not seem to appreciate this very much and evidently feared her hair would come out. She suddenly cried out. "Now Ma, do you want me to look like Joe Link?"

—We have recived a copy of the illustrated pages showing the various buildings of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition to be held at Omaha this summer. It was sent by W. J. Austin, our former "Boot-Upside-Down" man. His house, The American Hand Sewed Shoe Co. have a prominent card in the book. The illustrations are beautiful and show that the Exposition will be a big affair.

Saturday's Daily.

—When you want to buy a Binder, Mower, Wagon, Buggy, Plow, Harrows, Cultivator or any other tool used on the farm don't fail to see Culbertson & Boland, cheap hardware merchants, Auburn, Ind.

—Nelson Morr started for Ohio this morning on the 4:30 B. & O. train. He goes to Ashland and expects to remain there for some time, though how long, he cannot say. Mr. Morr is a model young man and will be greatly missed here, especially in church work and similar circles, where he has always been active and earnest. We hope his new home may be pleasant for him every way. Later: Mr. Morr missed the morning train and will try it again tomorrow.

—Hicksville is having progressive dinner or supper parties of the sort lately mentioned in the DAILY COURIER. It is the guessing of the conundrums etc, that causes the fun, though if the hostess is a good cook, the eating is fine.

—Peter Bishop, of St. Joe, is here visiting his children, G. A., E. M. Bishop and Mrs. Ves Zimmerman.

—Here's how they get the news who do not take it from the COURIER. The Hicksville News says:—"John Eakright, who resides north of Spencerville struck the hammer of his gun while out hunting, and blowed his brains out."

Philosphers take things as they come. Good housekeepers take the best that's to be had when the price is no barrier. When you see Fox's XXXX Square Wafer Butter Crackers on a woman's grocery list, make up your mind she sets a good table. *

HOMER and ESTEL CLARK.

—Angola has not seen the end of the investigation into the county matters of Steuben. Recently the Herald had a powerfully written article aimed at the county attorney up there. It is full of pointed questions addressed to that functionary, many of which we predict will never be answered, nor an attempt made to do so. We have always noticed one thing in regard to our sister county on the north. Her people are slow to anger, but when once warmed up they are fighters who never recognize defeat.

—Vernice N. Bruner an employe of the office has purchased the Hamilton Hustler, and will continue the publication at the same place. The Hustler is receiving a very liberal advertising patronage and had ought be a paying venture if managed right.

—Mrs. Byron Grube of Flint, Inc., has been here a few days visiting old time friends. Among others she wished to see was Mr. Meese, but he was out in the country. She says we have too much mud down here to suit them. She reports all well.

—St. Joe News:—A Mark Center farmer says the agricultural seed swindle should be prohibited in some way. He recently sent to the agricultural department for a certain kind of plug tobacco seed. They sent him word that they were putting out no tobacco seed this year excepting fine cut.

—Dell Myers yesterday sold out his livery and feed barn to Isaac Kutzner. Mr. Kutzner takes possession of the livery establishment at once, but Mr. Myers will retain and run the feed yard and barn till August.

Monday's Daily.

—The editor of the Hicksville Independent has been fighting the saloons of his place furiously. Last week the Defiance papers say he came up to court as a witness against a saloon keeper, when some one got him drunk and had him arrested and fined. This drinking habit is a bad thing for editors. But there are others, even in DeKalb.

—Wm. A. Goodrich, of Morenci, Mich., was here today long enough to pay for the COURIER. He went out on the farm eight miles west.

—Mrs. High came home Friday from a visit to her brother, Ex-Commissioner Henderson. She left him slightly improved but still in a critical condition.

—A singular loss occurred last week on the Lake Shore road. On stopping at Laporte a mail coach was found to be on fire. They could not stop it, and called in the fire department. But the car was nearly consumed and much of the mail destroyed. Cause unknown.

—W. F. C. Francis was down from Waterloo Saturday and again today.

—C. C. Kryder, of Richland and W. H. McGiffin, of Fairfield, were among our callers Saturday.

—J. E. Rose seems to be improving. It is likely that his enforced rest will be of benefit to him.

—Fred Waterman came down from Waterloo this morning as he is one of the trial jury.

—D. D. Moody had a case before 'Squire Noel of Butler township today Schaab Bros. had brought suit against Owen Hensinger to recover an account of about $35.00 which Della Hensinger had run at their store and which they claim Owen agreed to pay. The defendants some time ago agreed to confess judgment to the amount of $8.00 and this morning Schaab Bros. accepted that amount, both parties paying their own attorney fees. E. D. Hartman was the plaintiff's attorney.

—Isaac Speer, of Waterloo, was here yesterday on some court business. A man is trying to make him pay for a thing he never ordered, and he very properly fights it. We are sorry to see him in poor health again.

—We were pleased to have a call today from Hon. S. S. Shutt, of Spencerville. He was here on matters of business.

—Mr. Hague received a letter yesterday from Charlie. It was dated at TerreHaute, but he had also been a part of the time at Richmond. He is delivering new switchboards for telephone lines.

ANOTHER GLASS BROKEN.

There was another big window broken yesterday. Some boys were shooting marbles in front of Grund's barber shop when one of the little stone bullets skipped upward and struck against the glass shattering it in such a way as to utterly ruin it. It is not as large and expensive a glass as others that have been broken but it will cost some body a considerable for all that. One great trouble with this breaking of valuable glass lies in the fact that most of those who do the breaking are not able to pay the damage and the innocent owner of the building has to foot the bill.

OBITUARY.

John C. St. Clair, son of Samuel and Susanah St. Clair, was born in Union County, Pa., March 3 1823, and departed this life at the home his son-in-law, H. P. Stroh, in Auburn, March 9, 1898, at the ripe age of 75 years and 6 days. He came to his end in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season. Mr. St. Clair remained in his native county till maturity, learning in his youth the trade of a carpenter. In the year 1850, he came to DeKalb county, a single man and worked at his trade two years. In 1852, he was united in marriage to Caroline McEntarffer; to this happy union were born seven children five of whom survive him. After his marriage he settled on a farm near Waterloo, where he cleared and improved sixty acres of land. On this place he lived till 1862, whe he sold it and purchased a tract of 160 acres of heavily timbered land on section 15, in Union township. To this he added till he had in his possession 380 acres of valuable land. Mr. St. Clair commenced life a poor young man, but by industry and economy he accumulated a handsome fortune. No doubt many who launched out upon the ocean of life with him, with equal and perhaps better advantages, failed in their undertaking, while he pressed on to the goal of success. Nothing daunted his courage or thwarted his determination of make a success of life. Mr. St. Clair was an honored and respected citizen of his county. He filled the office of assessor and has three times been elected trustee of Union township, amd in 1876 he was elected to the responsible office of sheriff of this county. To each of these offices he was faithful in the discharge of every duty, and to his successors he turned over his office and books without a single stain on his good name. Such a man with a clean character, who has faithfully and truly served the people in public office, will not be forgotten by the people. At the expiration of his term of office as sheriff he again settled down on his farm and gave his whole attention to farming. On July 5, 1884, Mr. St. Clair had a stroke of paralysis, from which he partially recovered, so that he could attend to his business affairs, and go about on the farm. Several years ago he was taken down by lagrippe, which left him in very poor health, so that that at times he suffered intense pain, which ended with his death on last Wednesday evening. During all his suffering, he was not given to complaining and fault-finding endured it all in the spirit of patience and christian fortitude. On July 4, 1888, his beloved wife, who stood by him as a true helpmate through all the changing experience of life, fell asleep in the arms of death, which loss he keenly felt. He had proved the precious promises of the word of God and found Christ to be a present help in every time of need. On June 26, 1891, he was again joined in marriage to Mrs. Susanah Dole, who proved to him a faithful companion until his death. After his second marriage he left the farm, and moved to Waterloo, Ind., where they lived till four years ago, when they came to Auburn, to live with his daughter, Mrs. H. P. Stroh where he departed this life. When broken down health rendered him almost helpless his wife and children who loved him so much took great delight in ministering to his physical wants. Mr. St. Clair was to his family all that a father and husband could be; he loved his own with the fondness of a father's heart, and was deeply interested in the welfare of his children. He endeared himself to his family by his generosity and kind ministration, and christian counsels. Mr. St. Clair was an obiging and peaceable neighbor, an upright and honest man in his business life, and a trustworthy and loyal citizen. In his young manhood days, he became a christian, and united with the English Reformed Church in Pa., and when he came to this county he transferred his membership to the Reformed church at Waterloo, where he continued his membership until that organizatson disbanded: he then united with the Presbyterian church at Waterloo where he was a member at his death. He never departed from his faith in Jesus Christ, but fought the good fight of faith, and laid hold on eternal life. The promises of the bible were exceedingly precious to him, and relied on them till the last hours of life, when he laid down the weapon of warfare and entered upon that eternal life beyond. Mr. St. Clair leaves to mourn his death a wife, five children, eight grandchildren, one sister, besides many other relatives and friends. The funeral services were conducted from the Presbyterian church at Waterloo Friday at 2 p. m. Interment took place in the Waterloo cemetery, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

Sale Saturday,

Mrs. Inez Tefft will have the sale of household goods next Saturday which she advertised for last week. The sale will take place at the Wm. Craig residence.

COURT.

Wednesday's Daily.

Yesterday afternoon came up the case between the town of Auburn and the estate of the late Lewis Spangler. Sept. 17, 1896 the town council advertised in WEEKLY COURIER an ordinance requiring certain property owners to make sidewalks. Two pieces of property belonging to Mr. Spangler on the west side of Main-st. near the Wabash station were among the number advertised. Mr. Spangler did not build the walk and it ran on for about a year, when the town marshal, Mr. Potter was ordered by the council to have the walk made. This he did and now the Spangler estate, by W. W. Spangler, Lewis Spangler's son, refused to pay for the walk. Link was attorney for the town and Hartman for the Spangler estate. Both sides admitted the facts as above stated. But it appears that when Mr. Spangler first got the land the street at that point was left only 66 feet wide, but in selling the lots Spangler allowed for the street to come his way to the full width And in some cases he made provision for this in the deed. But in a similar case against the town fifteen years ago, he beat the town and made the town lose the cost of a sidewalk they had built there under the same circumstance as now. It could not be shown that he had ever deeded that extra strip to the town or that the town had either bought it or had it condemned. Now however there was a new element to be considered. The town and the public had had the use of that strip for street purposes, more than the twenty years required to give them full right to it. The attorneys made a good fight.

HAVANA VERY WEAK.

HER DEFENSES COULD NOT RESIST MODERN GUNS.

The Cuban Capital City Has Many Fortifications, but They Are of the Antiquated Kind, Not Strongly Built and Are Poorly Equipped.

Medieval Fortresses.

Time was when the city of Havana was one of the strong places of the world. That was in the days when battle ships carried as many as 125 pop-guns, against whose puny fire towering walls of massive granite served as an impregnable defense. Modern ordnance, with its monster shot and almost fabulous range, has changed all that, and to-day Havana is not only not the mighty fortress that it once was, but, despite the fact that vast sums have within the last two years been squandered on is defenses, it can now hardly be considered as capable of offering any serious resistance to attack, either by land or sea.

The seaward defenses of Havana may be divided into two classes—those within the harbor and at its entrance, which are interesting only from an antiquarian and picturesque aspect, and the modern works, armed with a few pieces of heavy breechloading ordnance, which, since the beginning of the war, have been erected along the shores east and west of the harbor mouth.

Best known of all the forts of Havana is the world-renowned Morro Castle, the marvelously picturesque medieval stronghold that crowns that rocky eminence at the left of the entrance of the harbor. A hundred years ago its massive bastions, bristling with the heaviest artillery of the period, frowned defiance to the navies of the world. Now the Morro, stripped of all armament save a few harmless cannon, serves only as a prison, as a garrison for recruits from Spain and as a signal station and pedestal for the great lighthouse that towers above the seaward height of the fortress just across the eastern ditch. Dividing it from the castle proper is an outwork known as the Velasco Battery. Across the harbor from the Morro stands the quaint old Castillo de La Punta, a square bastioned stone fort, mounting three or four old Parrotts and a solitary 15-inch Rodman of the kind which is now being removed from Forts Hamilton and Wadsworth to make room for modern ordnance. Beyond the Punta, all the way to the Cavalleria wharf, the shore is fairly encrusted with the remains of batteries, in their day most formidable, but now stripped of armament and used only as barracks or store houses.

The walls of the stupendous fortress known as La Cabana crown the heights on the eastern shore of the harbor from near the southern sallyport of the Morro all the way to the village of Casa Blanca in an unbroken palisade of gray and white stone, stained here and there with broad splashes of vivid red. La Cabana is now nothing but a vast prison and place of execution. Originally designed to mount hundreds of guns, it now possesses only a saluting battery and five small rifles, with a few ancient pieces, which are only available for defense against a land attack. The condition of La Cabana's ordnance may be inferred from the fact that the garrison, after superhuman exertions, was only able to return the Maine's national salute of twenty-one guns with nineteen straggling shots, delivered in what one of the American officers declared to be the "raggedest salute I ever heard."

Most formidable of all the modern defensive works of Havana is the great sand battery at Playa del Chivo, on the sea coast, about three-quarters of a mile to the eastward of the Morro. It was recently declared by an examination of all the new bateries as the "only one in the construction of which the least glimmer of embellishment had been shown." The battery mounts two magnificent twelve-inch Krupp rifles, which, however, are destitute of all protection save what is afforded by a broad but very low parapet of sand.

Half a mile further to the eastward is an unfinished battery of similar construction, mounting four eight-inch guns and a few small mortars. Both these batteries could be readily taken in flank and carried by troops landed in the unprotected little haven at Cojimar, three miles to the eastward of Havana. On the heights in the rear of the first battery are several large powder magazines, completely exposed to the fire of ships.

To the westward of the harbor lies a chain of batteries, extending from La Punta all the way along the shore to the mouth of the Almendares River, where there is another sheltered landing place with no other defense than the ancient castle of Carmelo, erected in 1509, the oldest building of European construction in the new world. A force landed here could proceed along the shore road under cover of the guns of the fleet and march into the city, carrying one battery after the other on the way.

Of this range of works, the first, beginning at the eastward, is the Reina battery, a stone structure armed with a few antique pieces of ordnance. Next to it, and within the outskirts of the city, is the Santa Clara battery, an earthwork which ranks next in importance to the big Playa del Chivo battery. It mounts three old style ten-inch Krupps and two twelve-inch Ordonez guns. These latter were built in Spain on a system that has nothing to recommend it beyond cheapness of construction, consisting as they do of a steel tube re-enforced, incredible as it may seem, with nothing better than a cast iron jacket.

Within a stone's throw of Santa Clara is a little masonry battery, mounting four breech-loading mortars of only eight-inch calibre. The battery is of such light construction as to offer only a trifling protection to the guns. Further westward at the foot of H street, in the suburb of Vedado, is another battery mounting two ten-inch and two six-inch modern rifles.

As the main defense of the city against land attack are the antique castles of Atares and Principe, in the latter of which is a small battery of modern mortars, whose fire is capable of being directed seaward.

ANTIQUATED FORTIFICATIONS PROTECTING HAVANA HARBOR.

Ivory Used by the Ancients.

The earliest recorded history—we might say prehistoric, the hieroglyphical—that has come down to use has been in carvings on ivory and bone. Long before metallurgy was known among the prehistoric races, carvings on reindeer horn and mammoth tusks evidence the antiquity of the art. Fragments of horn and ivory, engraved with excellent pictures of animals, have been found in caves and beds of rivers and lakes. There are specimens in the British museum, also in the Louvre, of the Egyptian skill in ivory carving, attributed to the age of Moses. In the latter collection are chairs or seats of the sixteenth century, B. C., inlaid with ivory, and other pieces of the eleventh century, B. C. We have already referred to the Ninevah ivories. Carving of the "precious substance" was extensively carried on at Constantinople during the middle ages; combs, caskets, horns, boxes, etc., of carved ivory and bone, often set in precious stones, of the old Roman and Anglo-Saxon periods, are frequently found in tombs. Crucifixes and images of the virgin and saints made in that age are often graceful and beautiful. The Chinese and Japanese are rival artists now in their peculiar minutiae and detail.—Popular Science Monthly.

The True and the Imitation.

Dora seated at the play
Weeps to see the hero perish—
Hero of a Dresden day,
Fit for china nymphs to cherish;
O that Dora's heart would be
Half so soft and warm for me!

When the flaring lights are out
His heroic deeds are over,
Gone his splendid strut and shout,
Gone his raptures of a lover,
While my humdrum heart you'd find
True, though out of sight and mind.

WHAT ONE TORPEDO DID.

Knocked a Great Hole in Steel Bottom of the Rebel Brazilian Aquidaban.

Before the rebel Brazilian fleet in the harbor of Rio Janeiro, under Admiral De Gama, surrendered in 1894, Rebel Admiral Mello had sailed out of the harbor in the Aquidaban. The torpedo boats sent by the Brazilian government to find the ship came upon her in the harbor of Desterro, down the coast. The Gustavo Samplo, which did the torpedoing, is a torpedo gunboat, having a bow tube and two broadside launching tubes, two twenty-pounder rapid firing guns and four three-inch rifles. She, in company with a torpedo boat something after the style of the Cushing, entered the Desterro harbor, where the Aquidaban was at anchor, shortly after midnight, April 16. The torpedo boat advanced and at 100 meters fired her bow torpedo. At 75 meters she launched her broadside. Both missed. The Sampio then advanced and at 75 meters fired her box torpedo, which missed, and at 50 meters her port broadside. The last torpedo struck the Aquidaban about ten feet below the water line and twenty-five feet abaft the bow, making a hole twelve feet square on the port side and a round hole three feet in diameter on the starboard side. The plates for several feet around the hole on the port side were crushed in.

The Aquidaban sank in shallow water and was afterward raised and repaired. The cut published herewith is from a photograph taken of the Aquidaban when she had been placed in dry dock for repairs, and gives an excellent idea of what kind of hole is made in the bottom of a steel ship when a Whitehead torpedo strikes her.

In the civil war in Chili, in 1891, the government cruiser Blanco Encalada was sunk by a torpedo in the harbor of Valparaiso. It was at night and she was lying at anchor with no searchlights going and no torpedo nets down. An insurgent ship came steaming in and fired three torpedos at her in rapid succession. One of them hit and the Blanco Encalada sank rapidly. She went down in deep water and could not be raised.

The first torpedo of which there is any record in warfare was one which blew up a British armed schooner off New London in 1777. It was a floating torpedo, which was sent against the British ship by the tide.

WHAT A TORPEDO DID TO THE AQUIDABAN.

Insanity in Prussia.

There has been a good deal of comment of late upon the increase of insanity in England. It seems, from a recent official report, that a similar if not a worse condition of affairs exists in Prussia, where the lunatic asylums find difficulty in providing accommodations for the crowds of applicants for admission. In 1871 the total number of lunatics in Prussia was 55,063, in 1880 it had risen to 66,345, while in 1896 it had gone up to 82,850. It is interesting to note also that, while the growth of insanity is general, it is more marked among men than among women. Of 100,000 Prussian males it seems 278 are found insane; but in a like number of women only 243. From figures given in the same return it appears that blindness is diminishing, while the number of deaf mutes is rather increasing.

Russian Dainties.

There are many curious things sold in the Russian markets, and one can buy eels and snakes and chicken legs. Lambs' feet are sold as a great dainty, and calves' feet are bought for soup.

The woman with small feet may be vain, but she walks on her pride.

BUTCHERY OF VIRGINIUS' SAILORS BY SPAIN

THE black episode of the Virginius is still fresh in the minds of the American people. It shows what may be expected by any government that handles Spain with too much consideration in diplomacy. The Virginius, known originally as the Virgin, was a British blockade runner during our civil war. In 1870, when the Cubans were trying to break away from Spain, the Virginius resumed the old occupation, only with a change of base. For three years it succeeded in carrying on its business without being captured. It was under the command of a citizen of the United States, Captain Fry. The crew were partly American and partly Cuban. But one ill-starred day the Virginius came upon another vessel, the Tornado, which had been built in the same shipyard as itself and for the same purpose, but which had drifted in the fortunes of ownership into Spanish hands. After a hot chase the Virginius was run down and captured. Captain Fry protested that his was "an American ship, carrying American colors and papers, with an American captain and crew." All this was true, but far from being "saving truth." The vessel and all on board were taken to Santiago de Cuba, the passengers thrown in prison and Captain Joseph Fry, the commander, and his crew kept on board the Tornado. Drumhead court-martial was held for the trial of the prisoners and almost immediately four of them were shot in the back, their heads displayed on spikes and their bodies trampled by horses. The trials, condemnations, and executions of the others were in squads. In the first batch was a gallant soldier of our own war, but a British subject, Brigadier General Washington Ryan. In the last batch Captain Fry himself was shot. With such indecent haste were these executions made that the news of the capture of the Virginius had not yet reached Havana nor Madrid. General Juan Burriel, the governor for that Cuban province, caused the cable to be cut that the American consul, E. G. Schmitt, at Santiago might be prevented from making any communication to his government, and the United States consul at that place was not allowed to leave the consulate or have any intercourse with the prisoners until the last day. Not a man would have escaped, but before the entire work of butchery had been finished a British gunboat came along in that region and heard what was going on. The captain lost no time in reaching Santiago, and without waiting for the slightest ceremony demanded that the slaughter cease or he would bombard the town. That sort of pluck and promptness, from the days of Drake down, have made Great Britain a great nation. In less than ninety days ninety-three men under sentence of death were saved by the brave and humane interference of Sir Lambton Lorraine of the Niobe. He told the Weylers, or butchers, of Santiago de Cuba that he represented the United States and Great Britain both, and if any other man was harmed he would shell the town. That settled it. The Spaniard is full of bravado, but in the face of resolution and courage he quails.

For a time public indignation in the United States ran very high. Mass meetings were held in many places, the newspapers showed deep resentment of the insult to the American flag and the atrocities which American citizens had suffered. Immediate vengeance was called for and the government made a faint show of preparations for war. It went so far as to threaten to withdraw Minister Sickles from Madrid, but on the eve of his withdrawal Spain consented to consider proposals for restitution and indemnity. Then followed a series of diplomatic negotiations, the final result of which must have made all Spain chuckle with delight. The men who had been rescued by the Niobe were put on board the Virginius in the remote port of Bahia Honda, and there, before a handful of witnesses, the Spaniards went through the farce of a salute. The Spaniards should at least have been compelled to take the Virginius into the harbor at Havana, and there, in the presence of all the people, made to pay homage to the United States. Spain paid the sum of $80,000 in full indemnity for the lives of fifty-three persons murdered by its representatives, while all communication of these victims was shut off from the country to which they might have looked for protection. The total survivors of the crew were fifteen and of the passengers eighty-seven, who were surrendered at the same time as the vessel. This closed the episode of the Virginius, which aroused more indignation in this country than any other event save the firing on Fort Sumter in the memory of men now living. The blood money was pocketed and the insult to the flag has remained unavenged to this day.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

THE ISSUES.

While the Presidential campaign is about two years off, it is not a difficult matter to tell in advance the issues upon which it will be fought. In 1896 the Republicans carried the country on a platform virtualy of high tariff and the gold standard. The people were told that a grave peril confronted the government, and that the Republican party was the only deliverer standing between prosperity and ruin. They were told that if the Republicans were placed in power, the mills would be opened, the wages of labor would be raised, confidence would be restored and an era of unprecedented prosperity would set in. Well, the Republicans have had practically a free field, and what has been the result? In spite of profuse promises, five-cent cotton is the rule in the South, wages have been reduced throughout the mills of New England, and thousands of workingmen in that section are out on a strike. Now, these things indicate the utter failure of the Republican program of gold monometallism and high tariff. Nor are the people blind to this failure. The elections everywhere show that they have discovered the Republican game, and are convinced of the insincerity of that party and the hollowness of its promises. The "shouting and the tumult" of the Presidential election hardly died out before Carter Harrison, a staunch advocate of free silver, was elected Mayor of Chicago by one of the largest pluralities ever given in that city. Nearly all the municipal elections in the Western States showed a like change of sentiment. Tammany Hall, odorous as it is, has been restored to power in New York City, and New York State has gone Democratic recently by about 60,000 majority. There are no indications of faltering allegiance on the part of the South and West to free silver. In Kentucky, which was carried by the Republicans in 1896 by the skin of their teeth, there has been a revulsion of sentiment, the gold standard Democrats have been blotted out, and the Democracy has again obtained control of the State. Everywhere the drift of opinion is toward free silver and a revenue tariff, and Democrats may as well prepare to line up for these two issues. The Republican party will be committed to gold monometallism and high protection, and the Democracy will be found fighting valiantly for free silver and a revenue tariff. On this platform the Democratic party would to-day, without any preparation, canvassing or speech-making, sweep the country.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Fraud on the Farmers.

The McKinley administration poses as the particular friend, first, of the protected industries, and, secondly, as the champion and knight errant of agriculture. It treats the farmers of the United States as ignorant mendicants whom the Government should supply with essays on the tape worm in poultry, grape cuttings, strawberry plants, pamphlets on the diseases of domestic kine, hog cholera serum, primers on the art of packing eggs for market, bovine tuberculin, garden seeds and dissertations upon the contents of crows' stomachs.

The Department of Agriculture is being used as a stalking horse behind which wily and unscrupulous politicians hide themselves while they fling their nets and snares to catch bucolic balots. The extravagance of the political sports who thus hunt for votes is seemingly without limitation. Walking delegates who are put on the pay roll of a department merely to give employment to partisan bummers and heelers and sent abroad neither reflect credit upon the Government that sends them nor confer benefit upon the taxpayers, who are bled to sustain them.

There are special agents and special agents now promenading the globe from this Department of Agriculture at Government expense. Their per diems and salaries are liberal in the extreme. Their daily expenses are generous if not extravagant. And Uncle Sam pays all. Some of these utilitarians are looking for leguminous plants adapted to American soils and climate. Just as though the enterprise of the seedsmen of the United States had not already ransacked the earth for these things at their own expense! Other perambulating patriots under this paternal system are looking for new varieties of apples, berries and pears. All of these special agents are a fraud upon the people and the Government. If they are not why is not it published to the world when they are sent out and the pay which they are to receive and the expense which they are allowed frankly stated to the citizenship which pays them all?

Is it not true that the expenditures of the Department of Agriculture are constantly increasing and that demands for more appropriations for it and the weather bureau are constantly being made, without any commensurate benefits becoming visible to the public eye?

Legislation for Deserters.

The introduction of bills for the removal of the charge of desertion from men who enlisted in the armies of the Union in our great war, and who failed to put in an appearance when their commands were mustered out, has been going on for a third of a century. It is the general opinion of honorably discharged soldiers that this thing has gone far enough. They assert, and they know something about the matter, that most of these deserters are men who enlisted for bounties and got out at the first opportunity.—Washington Post.

Republicans Held Responsible.

The Republican organs had a lot to say about the little surplus the Dingley bill scraped up in December, but their silence on the January deficit of $7,000,000 is most profound. This would indicate that they don't even find the outlook encouraging, for an occasional shortage is not a thing to be discouraged over. Touching on the prospect, the Albany Argus says: "It is still regarded as improbable that the Dingley tariff can, in a full normal year, produce enough revenue from customs to make up the amount required for the expenditures of the Government. The Treasury statements show that for the first seven months under that law the deficit was $43,854,791, so that a gain of more than $10,000,000 a month will be required for the next five months to overcome the deficit. The Republican party will be held responsible for this failure, and its political effect will be apparent in the Congressional elections." It is noted, however, that the Republicans have already begun to bring their philosophy to bear on their expected defeat in the Congressional elections.

They Would Save the Party.

To vindicate American honor, to avenge murdered American seamen, to deal swiftly, spiritedly and justly with the Spanish power, that does not assure safety, that gives to destruction an American war vessel riding at anchor in a Spanish harbor open to the world, has been roundly denounced by organs of the administration as jingoism.

Whoso in his fervid indignation prematurely offered his personal service to the military arm was held up by these organs to laughter, fleers and jeers. It was ridiculous to wave the American flag. It was presumptuous in a free American citizen to speak his sentiments with force and directness until a supine administration at Washington gave him permission. Let the trumpets and the drums of American war spirt remain silent. The baton of the great national leader would not permit patriotism to become vocal. Wait. Be calm. Be cool. Be patient.

But the organs discover of a sudden that war is patriotism. Not a war in vindication of American honor, not a war of vengeance upon the murderers of Americans—that would be jingoism—but a war to save the Republican party, re-elect Major McKinley and keep in office the administration of the mediocrities. The war whose pretext is to be Cuban misgovernment and whose alleged object Cuban independence—since our "business interests" are to suffer as long as there is Spanish attempt to establish Spanish rule in the island—is to be fought not by the patriotism and intelligence of the country, but by the "cankers of a calm world and a long peace," the host of unemployed who if not given work may in their discontent plump their ballots this fall against the Republican party and so sweep the country.

We must have war, not for the destruction of an enemy, but for the salvation of McKinleyism. We must no longer wait, no longer remain cool or patient. War with a respectable purpose is condemned as the device of the unspeakable jingo. But war to save McKinley and Wall street and a so-called sound currency must at once be entered upon as a holy crusade. But struggle as McKinleyism may, Republicanism is doomed. War or no war, Democracy will sweep the country this fall.—Chicago Chronicle.

One Year of McKinley.

At the close of the first year of President McKinley's term it may be said with absolute truth that only those are blessed who expected nothing, for they have not been disappointed. The record is almost a blank in so far as good deeds are concerned. The promised era of prosperity has not yet arrived for the working masses, the burning questions of the time have not been acted on, and the treasury deficit has not come to an end, although the Dingley tariff was passed specially for that purpose.

The country is no more prosperous today than it was a year ago when McKinley took the oath of office; the finances of the nation are not in better shape, and the outlook for the future has not improved. On the other hand the trusts and monopolies which contributed so liberally to the Republican campaign fund, which had so much to do to put the present administration in power, have been duly rewarded, and Mark Hanna is a greater man than he was on the 4th of March of last year. He has been placed in the United States Senate by one of the most contemptible tricks known to our history—the crowding out of poor John Sherman and forcing him into a position in which he is a mere cipher—and he is of so much consequence that special accommodations have to be provided for him in the White House.

To Republicans who sincerely believed that the McKinley administration would rise to the high level of its opportunities, the performances of its first year must appear particularly mortifying. As for the Democrats, they anticipated nothing else than the flat, stale and unprofitable showing that has been made.—New York News.

McKinley May Be Too Cool.

What did President McKinley mean when he said: "You may rest assured there will not be war with my consent, except for a cause which will satisfy good men here, the nations of Europe and Almighty God?" If he meant that he would oppose war unless forced to it by the lashing anger of all the outside world, he spoke like a craven.—St. Louis Republic.

This Legislature Named Hanna.

Whispers which may develop into open charges of corruption and bribery are now heard in Columbus. It is intimated that the legislation of the House is controlled by certain members who are willing to pass or defeat pending bills for a consideration.—Cleveland Leader.

PLUCKING THE INNOCENT.

One Fakir Who Was "Done" by the Farmers.

"No," said the soap fakir to a group of people that had gathered around him, "there is no use talking to me about the innocence of the countryman. He may buy a gold brick occasionally or sign a blank check and lose his farm, but, as a rule, he can take care of himself just as well as the next one and generally a little better. If I knew as much as some farmers I wouldn't be in this business, and you can gamble on that.

"Why, say, do you know what happened to me the last time I was down in the country? I got pinched, that's what I done. I got my satchel out in front of the hotel in a little town about thirty miles out east of here and began to do a few tricks to draw a crowd.

"After I'd made an egg disappear and pulled a few knots open for them, I says: 'Now, gentlemen, I'm goin' to show you a trick that nobody else on earth has ever attempted. You see my hat here? Well, we'll imagine for the time bein' that it's a flower pot. Out of that hat I'm goin' to make a bush grow up, and when I've done that I'll make every leaf on it turn into a $5 note.'

"What? Did I do it? Of course I did! But, say, do you know what come of it? Blamed if they didn't arrest me and fine me $15 for raisin' bills, which the justice of the peace said was contrary to the statoots made and provided.

"Well, I sort of had a hankerin' to know whether they done it in good faith or just because they thought I was easy pickin', and what do you think I found out? Why, the people of that town hadn't paid any taxes for eight years. They'd actually been runnin' things by pluckin' just such innocent fellows as me.

"Now, gentlemen, there's a $1 bill in one of these little packages. Who will give me 10 cents for the first choice?'—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ISAAC B. POTTER.

New President of the League of American Wheelmen.

Isaac B. Potter, the new president of the League of American Wheelmen, is a lawyer and one of New York's most enterprising citizens. For nearly a decade he has been identified with league affairs. He was chief consul of the New York division. Under his able guidance New York's membership in the league was increased from 4,857 to nearly 26,000. He fought the Albany lobbyists and obtained the passage of the Armstrong bicycle baggage bill. That was the first bill of its kind to pass in this country. Other States have emulated New York, and it is Mr. Potter's hope that before long every commonwealth in the United States will have done likewise. He has done grand work in the cause of good roads. That is his hobby. He once edited a magazine published in the interests of improved highways. It is said the publication was the best of its kind ever undertaken. Mr. Potter is a brilliant orator and is one of the best parliamentarians in this country. Last year the league grew under his direction. That organization passed the 100,000 mark with him as its chief executive, and its treasury is in a most prosperous condition. He may be depended upon to continue the good work.

What a Recent Discovery Reveals.

The Smithsonian Institution has received a collection which is of importance to the archeologist.

It is known as the Seton-Karr contribution, having been discovered by this Englishman in Somaliland, on the eastern coast of Africa. The implements were purchased from the discoverer by the Smithsonian Institution.

There are about fifty pieces in the collection, made of flint or quartide, and ranging in size from an inch or so in length to half a foot, some weighing several pounds. The objects are supposed to be spear heads, battle axes and wedges, truncheons, bludgeons, or whatever they may be termed.

The discoverer had this to say on the subject of his find and the locality where the objects were unearthed:

"Certain landmarks as to the four rivers mentioned in Genesis led me to think that the Garden of Eden, if it ever existed, may have been here, and that these very tools had been made and used by Adam and his numerous descendants. At any rate, my discoveries in Egypt and Somaliland lead me to the idea that man's original home, or the place where he was gradually evolved, must have been in Africa, or, at least, in a tropical land, where clothes were unnecessary and food plentiful to hand."

A Potato Digger.

A new potato digging machine has a steel-pointed scoop to raise the potatoes and earth on to a slotter elevator, over which a cylinder brush is revolving to separate the potatoes from the dirt, after which the tubers are carried to a screen, which allows the small potatoes to fall into one box and carries the large ones into another box.

Hypnotic Wonders.

No one need go to Paris now to see all that is marvelous in hypnotism. In the hypnotic wards of many hospitals of this country are subjects that a mere glance, it is said, throws them into the trance state. But in order to overcome that obstinate kidney trouble, the persistent use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is necessary. Use it for bilious and nervous diseases.

A Carefully Guarded Bank.

The Bank of France is very carefully guarded. Every day, when the money is put into the vaults of the cellar, masons are waiting, and at once wall up the doors with hydraulic mortar. Water is then turned on and kept running until the cellar is flooded. A burglar would thus have to work in a diving suit, and break down a cement wall before he could commence to loot the vaults.

Beets as Large as Your Arm.

The editor of the Brown City (Mich) Banner recently paid a visit to Western Canada, and speaking of a garden that he saw in the Edmonton District says:

"On Aug. 23 we had the pleasure of visiting the model seven-acre garden at Edmonton owned and operated by one Donald Ross, a typical Scotchman, and a whole-souled, good-natured old gentleman as you often meet. He gave the Yankees each a hearty handshake as we were introduced in succession by the Canadian Government agent, who was our guide and pilot while at Edmonton, and to whom we are indebted for many courtesies conferred. Mr. Ross informed us that he cleared from $800 to $1,000 annually from the sale of roots, vegetables, flowers and plants. We here state that we never before saw such a growth of vegetables at that season of the year. He said that he raised 750 bushels of onions to the acre. Beets were growing as large as your arm, turnips the size of one's head and cabbages as large as a patent pail. Following are prices that Mr. Ross gave us as receiving for his produce: Beets, 50 cents per bushel; carrots, 40 cents; onions, $1.25; turnips, $5 per ton; cabbage, 4 cents each; green corn, 25 cents per dozen; tomatoes, $1.50 per bushel; potatoes, 25 to 30 cents; cauliflower, $1.00 per dozen; cucumbers, 15 cents per dozen; strawberries, 25 cents per box; squash, 4 cents per pound, and other produce in proportion. He kept a hothouse 12x180 feet, heated by a furnace by means of flues. One man besides himself attended this garden, except at time of gathering the crop."

Agents of the Canadian Government are now located at different points in the United States, and using their efforts towards securing settlers on the fertile lands of Western Canada, to which the gold fields are tributary.

DOINGS OF WOMEN

JEALOUSY AND HAPPY LIFE.

THAT is the question that bothers many a wife. To be loved devotedly is the ambition of every woman, but to have that love take the form of exacting suspicion, or a sort of affectionate jailership, is not always desirable. Opinions galore are given on this topic and we can only judge from the lives that come closest to us, in fact the lives that are lived under our observation.

To begin with, there is a couple happy as two young lovers, the husband, however, so insanely jealous of his wife that he has broken off even her women friendships. If she were to walk as far as the gate with another man a tragedy would be the almost certain result. Yet, as we said before, they are both serenely happy. Would they be so if circumstances brought about a new existence and set up new conditions? Let us hope so, for it would be a pity to spoil their illusions. From them the thought wanders to another couple, who see no reason, because they care more for each other than anyone else in the world, why all the other pleasant people should be excluded from their companionship. The wife dances, talks and drives with other men. The husband dances, talks and drives wth other women. There is no question of jealousy because there is perfect confidence. When they are together they are not bored. The husband is pleased to have his wife admired and she is happy to find that she has not married a freak whom no one else would want. It is a hard question to decide and one upon which the parties themselves alone should sit in judgment, but it is our belief that jealousy is but another name for selfishness, rather than an indication of any overpowering affection.—Philadelphia Times.

Scientific Shirking.

No woman's strength is equal to the demands made upon it by claims—domestic, social and intellectual—of these latter days, and since this fact is indisputable why not look the problem squarely in the face and decide calmly when to shirk? The question, of course, chiefly concerns the homekeeper; she who endeavors to keep a house up to concert pitch of tidiness and not just occasionally and in spots, either; but all over and all the time. Besides the mere sweeping, dusting, arranging and menu-providing to be superintended, there are, too, the hospitality that she must be ever ready to offer smilingly, and the duties to herself—not to speak of church and charitable work, club life and the claims of society. One cannot do everything; why try? Of course, the question at once presents itself: Where shall the remedy be applied? In answer to which common sense, system, a right estimate of essentials and self-control may be suggested as the best aids to the conscience in deciding what shall be left undone. With a judicious application of "scientific shirking" there need be no lasting truth to this statement. However degenerate it may sound, "shirking" is the only thing by which a woman can, under the pressure of present living, hope to keep her health and to escape a care-crazed brain.

Care of the Hands.

The first necessity in the care of the hands is to keep them white and clean.

For the roughest of the housework as much as is possible should be done in gloves.

With the determination to do so, it will be surprising how few of these daily occupations cannot be literally "handled with gloves."

The difference in the texture of the skin, and the ability to cleanse it, will amply repay the housewife for the sacrifice of her old gloves and prejudices.

As a rule, for washing the hands, neither very hot nor very cold water should be used.

A few drops of ammonia or a small quantity of borax may be added to soften the water.

Ground mustard is excellent for cleaning the hands after having handled strong-smelling substances.

After having the hands a long time in water, rub with a little vinegar or lemon juice, and then with oatmeal.

Woman in Business.

She had served acceptably as treasurer of the club for a little over a year, and that was an exceptionable record, observes the Chicago Post. "Don't you have difficulty in balancing your books?" they asked. "Oh, dear, no," she replied. "Why, it's the easiest thing in the world. I just add up what I have received and substract from that what I have paid out to show what is due the club, and then I make my husband give me a check for the amount. There's really nothing hard about keeping books when you know how."

Chokers and Ties.

Collars of dresses are made very plain and smooth. The latest one is of velvet folded plainly about the throat without a bow, and pinned with a round jewelled clasp. Tailor gowns and skating costumes are worn with a big cravat bow of plaid silk or velvet, or a large, rich-looking scarf pinned about the throat, the long ends reaching to the waist. Capes of fur and velvet are worn with a lace scarf with a big bow in front.

A Costly Veil.

It required 500 hands to make the bridal veil of the Princess Margaret of Prussia. It was composed of 500 different pieces, all the work being done with the needle. The several pieces, each of which required ten days for completion, were joined by the most skillful lacemakers in a pattern which appeared to be all the work of the same pair of hands.

Shrewish Wives of Famous Men.

Ben Jonson had a shrew for a wife, who used to go to the ale room after him and bring him home, scolding all the way.

Boswell, Johnson's biographer, married a scold, and in his "Uxoriana" recorded faithfully all her snappish sayings and his own answers.

Rohault, the philosopher, had a wife whose opinion of him was so high that she sat at the door of his lecture-room and refused to admit any but well-dressed persons.

The great Dr. Cadogan married a lady several years older than himself. She was jealous, and in company accused him of poisoning her; whereupon he told the company they were welcome to open her at once and show her her mistake.

The famous Rev. Andrew Bell had a virago wife, who left him and then devoted her time to abusing him by mail. She once addressed a letter to him: "To that Supremest of Rogues, who looks the Hang-dog that he is, Doctor Andrew Bell."

every branch of the law. The New Zealand courts immediately admitted her to the bar, although in Great Britain and British possessions there is a prejudice or conservatism that has prevented any other woman from being thus honored.

Senora De Lome.

Senora De Lome, as the wife of the blundering Spanish minister is called, suffered greatly on account of the disgrace and humiliation which her husband brought upon his family and country by the writing of the foolish letter. The senora was one of the most popular women in Washington. If De Lome had submitted that letter to his wife it probably would not have been sent to Spain.

Women Laborers in Germany.

There are in Germany no less than 2,000 women marble workers, 379 feminine blacksmiths, 309 petticoated masons, 147 female tinners, besides 50 roadmakers, 53 slaters, 19 clockmakers, 7 armorers, all of the gentler sex, also 3 lady chimney sweepers, and a number of quarrywomen and female workers in sewers.

Chapped Hands.

Chapped hands are the bete noire of the average woman during cold weather, but a little care will soon obviate the difficulty. Wipe quite dry after washing, and then rub in a few drops of glycerine diluted with water, wiping thoroughly again, and taking care to wear none but loose gloves when out of doors.

Diet in Cold Weather.

If you would preserve the beauty of your skin do not indulge too freely on cold winter mornings in over-rich food, such as buckwheat cakes and sausages. And remember that fruit is just as essential to your diet in cold weather as in warm—indeed, more so, as we have fewer green vegetables.

WOMAN'S FATE.

From the Record, Bushnell, Ill.

No woman is better able to speak to others regarding "woman's fate" than Mrs. Jacob Weaver, of Bushnell, Ill., wife of ex-City Marshal Weaver. She had entirely recovered from the illness which kept her bedfast much of the time for five or six years past, and says her recovery is due to that well-known remedy, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Weaver is fifty-six years old, and has lived in Bushnell nearly thirty years. She is of unquestioned veracity and unblemished reputation. The story of her recovery is interesting. She says:

"I suffered for five or six years with the trouble that comes to women at this time of my life. I was much weakened, was unable much of the time to do my own work, and suffered beyond my power to describe. I was downhearted and melancholy.

"I took many different medicines; in fact, I took medicine all the time, but nothing seemed to do me any good.

"I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and some of my friends recommended them highly. I made up my mind to try them. I bought the first box in March, 1897, and was benefited from the start.

Mrs. Jacob Weaver.

"A box and a half cured me completely, and I am now rugged and strong. I have not been bothered with my troubles since I began taking the pills.

"I have recommended the pills to many women who are suffering as I suffered. They are the only thing that helped me in the trial that comes to so many women at my age.

"MRS. J. H. WEAVER."

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station

Reasonable success seems to have followed the efforts of the management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all the passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this Great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50 cent bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

The numerous readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WORKING WOMEN WHO SUFFER.

Should Get Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—The Whole Truth can be Told to her Because she is a Woman.

The suffering and pain endured by some working women is almost past belief.

Here is a letter from one of the multitude of women who have been restored to health and usefulness by Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel as though your advice had lifted me from the grave. I must have been very near it. I suffered terribly at time of menstruation, was constantly troubled with cold hands and feet, was extremely nervous, could not sleep well, was troubled with frightened dreams, had heart trouble and a feeling as though my breath was going to stop, also had leucorrhœa. I tried to get help but all remedies failed, until I wrote to you. I cannot thank you enough for your kind advice, and I wish to tell everyone the great good your remedies have done me.—TAMMA C. HOOVER, Wolfsville, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a quarter of a century has been helping women to be strong and well.

The following statement from Miss H. PATTERSON, of 2531 Lawrence St., Philadelphia, Pa., should interest all working women who are troubled with female complaints:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell what your medicine has done for me. I am a working girl and have to stay at my work all day. I suffered greatly with bearing-down pains and backache. I was advised by a friend to try your Vegetable Compound. I did so and can say positively I am cured. I have recommended your medicine to all my lady friends, and would advise any of my sex suffering from female weakness to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound a trial, for I know it will cure."

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women troubled about their health to write to her at Lynn, Mass., and secure her advice free of all charge. All such letters are seen and answered by women only.

IT'S THE REAL CURE
GUARANTEE TO CURE
goes with every box of Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure.

DYSPEPSIA

IT'S THE REAL CURE
Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is prepared in Tablet Form; Convenient to Take; Pleasing to the Taste. It Always Cures.

THE DISEASE OF CIVILIZATION

Few disorders inflict greater suffering upon its victims, and while it seldom causes death, it permits the sufferer to linger in misery for the alloted term of life. However, a large majority of the serious ills are the result of a diseased stomach.

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure

IS THE NEW WONDERFUL TREATMENT FOR DYSPEPSIA and INDIGESTION.

DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION!

Heart Disease, Apoplexy, Consumption, Paralysis, Mental Derangement, Despondency, Suicide, and in fact almost every disease surrounding us today is brought on by deranged Stomach and Liver. With these two organs healthy, seventy-five per cent. of deaths would be avoided until good old age, hence we should watch carefully these two organs, and be prepared at any time to check all those premonitory symptoms of their chronic disease, such as Offensive Breath, Furred Tongue, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Belching of Wind or Food, Distress in the Stomach and Abdomen, Nausea, Loss of Appetite, Faintness of Stomach, Heartburn, Imperfect Circulation, Dizziness, Palpitation and Other Heart Troubles, Shortness of Breath Headache, Ringing in the Ears Dull Pain Between the Shoulders, Blurred Vision, Hard, Knotty and Unsatisfactory Stools, Heavy Load in the Pit of the Stomach, Confused Mind, Etc. These symptoms do not all appear at one time, but any one of them is indication of a disordered Stomach.

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is a positive cure for all forms of Indigestion and Stomach Troubles. It heals, invigorates and soothes the stomach when weakened by overeating, or when the lining of the stomach has been affected by injurious medicines.

SYLVESTR STONE, M. D.
The Eminent Specialist in Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels and Liver.

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure!

NOT AN EXPERIMENT,

But the result of a life's work by one of America's foremost physicians—A specialist in Stomach Diseases.

It corrects acidity of the stomach, stops the fermentation of the food and stimulates digestion, expels foul gases, allays irritation, and acts as a gentle cathartic, without over-stimulating the secretions, and consequently leaves the bowels in a more healty condition than ordinary laxatives.

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is a pleasant, mild purifier, wholesome to the stomach and bowels, and a perfect promoter of a hearty appetite. It causes food to be properly digested. As a restorer of non-acting, slime-covered stomach has no peer. It cleanses the tongue, sweetens the breath, regulates the bowels.

TABLET FORM!

This new wonderful treatment is prepared in tablet form, and is pleasant to take, as well as convenient.

THE DIET!

You are not obliged to starve while taking Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Tablets, but can eat anything the palate craves and that agrees with you.

INDORSED BY THE PULPIT, THE PRESS AND THE PEOPLE!

HAD NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

Archie Delaney, 500 S. Second Street, Elkhart, Ind., a passenger brakeman on the Lake Shore road between Elkhart and Toledo, says: "I had an awful case of nervous dyspepsia, was treated by doctors in Toledo and Elkhart, never received much benefit, but the first box of Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure set my stomach to working like a charm. I don't know what dyspepsia is any more. I always recommend it because I know it does the business every time."

Hiram Baer, 400 Goshen Ave., an engineer at the Dr. Miles Medical Co., say: "Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure did me a world of good. I am entirely well.

A Narrow Escape

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Cough and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God I am saved and now a well and healthy woman. Trial bottles free at H B. McCord's Drugstore. Regular size 50c. and $1. Guaranteed or price refunded.

WHAT NEXT?

An exchange says:- The society people of Garrett, have introduced something new in the way of a social. It is what they call a foot social. The young ladies sit behind a screen and stick their naked feet through holes prepared for that purpose. No tickling is allowed, but the young man who guesses correctly the owner of a certain pair of feet has the privilege of escorting the young lady home. Those who do not guess correctly are fined twenty-five cents for each guess. It is said there was enough raised in two evenings to repair the church and pay part of the minister's salary.

NO PAY—NO CURE

The Sure Lagrippe Cure

There is no use suffering from this dreadful malady, if you will only get the right remedy. You are having pain all through your body, your liver is out of order, have no appetite, no life or ambition, have a bad cold, in fact are completely used up. Electric Bitters is the only remedy that will give you prompt and sure relief. They act directly on your Liver, Stomach and Kidneys, tone up the whole system and make you feel like a new being. They are guaranteed to cure or price refunded. For sale at H. B. McCord's Drugstore, only 50 cents per bottle.

PATRIOT LADS

We spoke the other day of the lad who sent his 29 pennies to the secretary of the navy, to help build a warship to take the place of the Maine. Yesterday a funny thing happened in Auburn. The lads here are well posted on the situation and greatly interested. Three bright little boys of the north end, Donald Schaab, Victor McCord and Charlie McClellan got up a sort of international contest. Victor was the American while Charlie and Donald assumed the role of Spaniard, not because they like Spain more, but they had to have two sides. So, war was declared, and it was not long before the Spaniards had "blown up the Maine." Then Victor objected. He insisted that Americans should not be treated that way and finally shouldered his gun and marched home. He was sure the old flag had been insulted and they musn't do that while he was around. Then the war could not be carried on, with one side lacking. So Charlie and Donald fixed up a new deal by which Donald became Captain Sigsbee. But as Charlie didn't like to be Spaniard any longer, there had to be a cessation of hostilities. And the war was declared off.

ATTACKED BY DOGS.

Wm. Kruse was attacked by two big dane dogs belonging to Dr. Fitch and Judge Roby, while returning home from town last night. It was about six o'clock, as he passed Dr. Fitch's residence on Main-st, and he noticed the two dogs playing in the yard. A moment later they sprang upon him, the Fitch dog grabbing him on the left arm, tearing his coat, and leaving his teeth marks upon his flesh. After an exciting struggle Mr. Kruse succeeded in scaring the dogs away and he went on to his home. This morning he was up town and will probably ask to have the dogs muzzled.

NOT ALWAYS UNDERSTOOD

A fact overlooked, or not always understood, is that women suffer as much from distressing kidney and bladder trouble as men. The womb is situated back of and very close to the bladder, and for that reason any distress, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or uinary passage is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort.

The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided by setting urine aside for 24 hours; a sediment or settling is evident that your kidneys and bladder need doctoring. If you have pain or dull aching in the back, pass water too frequently, or scanty supply, with smarting or burning—these are also convincing proofs of kidney trouble. If you have doctored without benefit, try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy. The mild and extraordinary effect will surprise you. It stands highest for its wonderful cures. If you take a medicine you should take the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, on receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention the AUBURN COURIER and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamptom, N. Y. The Proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

COURT

A great deal of odds and ends of work. He has been done. Today, Friday, came up the delayed case of Dick Abrams has been up before on similar charges. It is always for stealing when he is drunk. He has served a term in states prison in Ohio and about the same in this county. A year or two ago he had a narrow call in the court here, on a charge of stealing some things in Butler. But the proof did not seem to be such as could justify sending him over the road and he was let off, although people generally felt sure he was guilty. This time, he got drunk and broke into Capp's meat market at Butler and took some hides, etc. The prosecutor, by C J. Coats at Butler. brought out the facts that Abrams was a hardworking, saving and industrious man when sober, but after being straight for several months he was liable to go on a drunk and then he had a mania for stealing. He would steal anything and pawn or sell it for whisky. His wife would have to hide her watch, when he started out on a spree, or he would steal and pawn that She said that in all ways except this, he was a kind, careful man. He dresses his wife and boy well, as was seen when they were in court. He gives her the money he earns and she has used it to pay for a comfortable home. He is, according to witnesses an excellent hand to work and both he and she get work from the best of families. In view of all these things, an unusual course taken. The two attorneys, A. J. Baxter and C. J. Coats, joined with Mrs. Abrams in a bond of $250 for his appearance at the next term of court, the May term, and the indictment holds good. If he drinks again by that time, he will be given the full sentence, which may be two to fourteen years. If he remains sober there will be no trouble and the matter may be continued. It is the feeling of all concerned, that his punishments heretofore have done no good. The only thing is to keep him from drinking. Judge Roby gave him a sensible and feeling talk and we believe he will try earnestly to keep from drinking.

Then came on the divorce case of Mrs. Mary Huey. She is a daughter of John Bohler of Waterloo, and is well known and respected wherever known, having worked in several families in Auburn and elsewhere. She testified that her husband John Huey had failed to support her, and for two years she has supported herself by working out. She was given a divorce.

The damage case of Charles Lehmbeck vs Lake Shore Railway goes to Noble County on change of venue, and 30 days given to do it.

The divorce case of Dimon vs Dimon, was ordered to be left off the docket.

In the divorce case of Isadore vs Roy Hoffman, Roy did not come into court

Attorney Sharpless was appointed guardian ad litem for the minor heirs in the partition of Burkhart estate.

The partition of the Metcalf estate could not be made by dividing it up, and it was decided to sell the property and divide the money. C. J. Coats was appointed commissioner to sell the property. He is to pay Peter Sunday $39 18 out of the first money he gets after the costs are paid. Then he is allowed $15 for his services and A. J. Baxter $15 for services as guardian ad litem for the minor heirs.

Mary Hughey who was divorced from John Hughey pays the costs of the case and takes her maiden name of Mary Bohler.

The old Hogue estate near LaOtto, was in court a short time for settlement and division. It was amicably adjusted.

John Hamman gets $329 judgment on a note against Isaac and Ezra Loutzenheiser.

W. W. Tomlison gets judgment of $79 against Dirrim et al.

In the case of Veeley vs Buck to quiet title, ordered that title should be fixed up at Veeley's cost.

Eli W. Shull was appointed guardian for Henry A. Shull, it being claimed that the latter was not in suitable mental condition to manage his property.

New Dog Tax Law

It is now in force, and all who own, harbor or keep dogs about them, should understand the main points in this new law before the assessor appears, in order to save themselves trouble and expense. Dogs are now assessable when three months old. The tax is due when the assessment is made. The assessor gives a receipt for the money paid him. The amounts to be paid are as follows: $1 for one male or splayed dog; $2 for each additional male or splayed dog, and $3 for each female dog owned, harbored or kept by any person. In Auburn and Garrett, there is a special assessment of $1, and $2; hence, dog tax in these two towns is as follows: $2 for one male or splayed dog; $4 for each additional male or splayed dog; and $5, for each female dog owned, harbored or kept by any person within these two corporations. Any person who refuses to pay the township assessor his dog tax and take a receipt therefore, is liable to a fine of from $5 to $20. Also, to a fine not exceeding $100, if he make a false statement in regard to number, sex etc., of his dogs. Also the township assessors and township Trustees are liable to fines of from $10 to $20 for the non-performance of their duties as laid down in the new law. Kindly keep your dog money in readiness for the assessor after April 1st.

ASSESSOR OF UNION TOWNSHIP.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL.

Great Minds Run in the Same Channel.

The republicans must have started out their bureau that furnishes "original" political editorials for their organs over the country. In the Dispatch and Waterloo Press of March 10th, we find that each has precisely the same article from end to end and each has put it in as his own original production, the work of his own brain We give a part of the article not having space for all. Here it is:

"It seems that it is the 'crime of '89' instead of the "crime of '73" that is responsible for the reduction in the prices of farm lands That eminent statistician and student of finance, the Commissioner of Labor of New York State, has just presented a report in which he says that the farmers of that state, while they complain bitterly at the reduction in the prices of their lands, state that the reduction has occurred within the last five or six years."

The undersigned hereby extends thanks to the many friends who so kindly assisted us during the sickness, and burial of our father, and also to the choir for excellent music rendered. We shall ever hold all in great remembrance, MRS. SUSANAH ST. CLAIR, THE CHILDREN.

Honesty and Virtue.

There is more honesty and virtue contained in a bottle of Salvation Oil, than in any other liniment known. "Mrs. A. Fiedler, 2864 Palethorp St., Philadelphia, Pa., confirms this truth: She found Salvation Oil to be an excellent remedy for rheumatism, stiff joints, bruises, etc., and thinks it should always be kept in the house." Don't listen to the dealer's arguments in favor of a substitute. Insist on getting Salvation Oil, it costs only 25 cts.

THROUGH THE ARM

Charles Kinsey, of the Olds Bros store received a letter from St. Joe this morning stating that his brother George, had been shot through the arm. The load entered between the wrist and elbow and horribly mangled that member. No information could be obtained as to how it happened but the supposition is that he was probably standing up with his arm on the end of the gun when it was accidentally discharged.

THOMAS SOMMERS,

PRISON REVOLT

We see by our daily dispatches that the prisoners at Michigan City tried to break out. At supper, Thursday, they rose from the table and began to throw things at the guard. They were only stopped when two of them were shot and seriously wounded. This is not the first time it has happened there in the same way. Some twenty-five years ago, they rose up from dinner, the leader called them to follow him to liberty. They were rushing to over power the guard in spite of his orders to stand back, and the ringleader was shot through the body. The rest, seeing their leader down and more guards coming gave up. The man lived but it was a close call.

La Grippe Cured

This modern malady has become dreaded not more for its direct fatality than for the weakness of body and mind it leaves behind it. Prolonged debility, permanent prostration, melancholy and suicide follow La Grippe. For this disease there is no remedy superior to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"The best remedy for la grippe that I know of is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."
REV. JOHN K. CHASE,
South Hampton, N. H.

"My wife and five children were taken down with la grippe, while the disease was so widely prevalent. I dosed them with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and before using quite two bottles my family was restored to health. I know of several obstinate cases of the same complaint which were also cured by this remedy." J. PARMINTER,
Paulette, Miss.

"I was cured of la grippe by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

ENGLIS SYMPATY.

We spoke yesterday of the eviddnt sympathy of the English people and government in regard to our attitude on the Cuban question. It seems to have been more pronounced than we then knew. Thursday, in the British House of Commons, one member wanted to introduce a resolution to ask "Whether the British government would consider the advisability of placing the services of the British fleet at the disposal of the United States in the event of complications between the United States and any other nation."

This was not introduced as the member himself asked to make a few changes. But he said many members had come to him and said they liked the idea and would support it. He added:

"There is a widespread opinion that it is high time the foreign powers should be told in unmistakable terms that any blow struck at either Great Britain or the United States was equally a blow at the other. I believe the present government sincerely holds that in the face of foreign complications, the interests in the future of Great Britain and the United States are inseparably intertwined. It does clearly express the feeling of the house of commons, that any trouble threatening the United States will be shared by Great Britain."

Other members of the house of commons who were interviewed on the same subject all spoke in a similar strain.

They eveidetly remember with gratitude that when they were many years ago, storming the Pei Ho forts in China, and having a hard time, the American man-of-war near by sent up a shout "Blood is thicker than water" referring to our kinship with the English, and our Yankee sailors went in side by side with the English, and helped win the day.

"Three from two you can't," says the schoolboy. Right! Three from two you can't, either in dollars or dividends or sarsaparilla. It takes the best sarsaparilla root to make the best sarsaparilla extract. The best sarsaparilla comes from Honduras, C. A., and the Dr. Ayer Co. practically controls the entire product. Yet others claim to be making "best" sarsaparilla. They must be making it out of the remainder left after subtracting three from two. But, "three from two you can't." You can't make the best sarsaparilla without best root. You only get the best when you which is made wholly from the best root imported from Honduras.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

In a recent issue of the Chicago Record, Wm. E. Curtis, its able and well informed reporter who sits daily in the reporters' gallering of the House, says in his letter, when speaking of Spain:

Another point of even more importance is that the United States government will not declare war under any circumstances, The President proposes to do his duty with regard to the Maine and with reference to the rebellion in Cuba, guided by his own conscience and his sense of justice, and if Spain is not satisfied she of course has right to resist. But the government of the United States will always act upon the defensive. If there is a war hostilities will be declared by Spain and the first shot will be fired from a Spanish gun. Notwithstanding the rumors, nothing will be done and no course will be decided upon until after the Maine report has been received. The character of that report will determine the president's action.

This is a remarkable statement and we are not prepared to believe it, although Mr. Curtis is one of the best informed men in the nation, and being a strong republican, stands, close with the administration. But we ask ourselves. Is it possible, that there would be no declaration of war no matter what the provocation? Suppose it should appear by the report of the commission, that the Maine was blown up by the Spaniards. Would there be no trouble over that? What nation in the world would see an unfriendly nation blow up and destroy its costly warships, and kill 258 of its men, and not rebuke such a brutal act by the most extreme means even to war? We cannot accept such a monstrous theory as that as gross an insult as this would be allowed to pass. We have a better opinion of this administration. But we cannot help a feeling of astonishment and disgust when we see such a statement as the above sent broadcast over the country. We hope and believe the administration has the patriotism to resent as it should be such an insult as that of the Maine, should it be shown that the Spaniards were to blame.

COURT.

We left off with the case between the town of Auburn and the Spangler estate. The town had brought suit to recover the money they had paid to have a sidewalk built along the Spangler property on south Main-st. It was ascertained that the portion of the lots that project into the street had been used as a street for over twenty years, and that was the main point. So Judge Roby gave the town a judgment for the amount claimed, $70.

The case of Arbuckle & Ryan against Henry Vogtman, came up Wednesday afternoon. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Vogtman bought a threshing machine of the Arbuckle & Ryan Co., and this suit is to collect the pay. It appears that the property is some how in Mrs. Vogtman's name and she objects to paying the debt. The result was against Vogtman. The court decided that they should pay $365 84 and the mortgage against both be foreclosed. J. F. Shuman was attorney for plaintiff, and L. J. Blair, W. H. Leas and Wm. XX McDonald for defendant.

Oscar Taylor and Wm. Kennedy were appointed to partition the land in the Burkhart estate.

James Blake's report as administrator in the Daniel Yeothers estate was not accepted and W. H. Leas was required to bring action to secure a more satisfactory settlement. After 3 p. m. court stopped for the day.

ONLY EIGHT.

The Albion New-Era is authority for this:

There are but eight log school houses remaining in Indiana to tell the story of this distinguished feature of the state's early educational system and to remind the settlers of pioneer days when the log school house was the only one to be found. Strange as it may seem, these eight are all found in the south part of the state and near the location where the first settlers of the state carved out homes for themselves among the hills and in the forests.

HOW SPANIARDS TALK.

They Think Americans are Afraid of Them and Won't Fight.

A late dispatch has appeared in several daily papers, which we reproduce to show our readers how the Dons view our slow and careful way of doing things. It reads:

A good sample of the literature with which the Spaniards are regaled appears in the Carlist organ, the Correa. It is in the shape of a letter written to Don Carlos from a correspondent in New York and says:

"We are in the crater of a volcano. It seems as though not only the Maine, but the whole union fleet has been blown up. Fragments of ships are falling like fiery rain upon this city. Ninety-nine per cent of the people blame the Spaniards for the catastrophe. The fact is, the feeling prevailing among these hawkers is one of terror.

"For a couple of years they have believed that the Cuban question was all thorns for Spain and roses for themselves. Now, finding themselves suddenly chastened, words fail to describe their fear and amazement. If we now had at the head of our government a man of worth, he would be master of the situation and show to the world these people in the ridiculous light they deserve. We few Spaniards who for our sins, find ourselves in this hell, recognize that if Spain gave a quick energetic blow they would not resist and would quickly cry for mercy for a prolonged war to this country would prove a terrible foe. Men of money abound, but they have no spirit and no self-sacrifice. If we quickly landed a few sharp blows the demoralization would be instantneous and they would surrender at discretion. What a pity we are letting slip this possibility, the only opportunity providence will will will give us of gaining at one stroke respect, credit, glory and money."

Free Pills.

Send your address to H. E. Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample of Dr. King's New Life pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of constipation and sick headache. For Malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranted to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold at Robbins & McCord's drug store.

AN UPSET.

One of White's livery teams from St. Joe and a team a Mr. Stewart was driving came together near Jack Dills residence last night. It was so dark that either driver could not see. In the tangle Mr. Stewart's buggy was tipped off of a fifteen foot embankment and completely ruined through the occupants escaped uninjured. The accident was due to the drivers not being able to see the other on account of darkness.

HIGH WATER.

It has been several years since we had as heavy, a water fall as that which came last night. It came down in torrents all the forepart of the night and more or less all the latter part. The big drain that passes along by Dr. Ford's seems to have got stopped up again and so the whole of the low grounds along North VanBuren and Jackson were flooded. Many found it it difficult to get at stables, etc., and some houses were cut off from land. Mr. Greenberg who occupies the basement of the old Sam Buss property it is said found everything afloat in the house. When he awoke this mornirg the water was nearly up to his bed and his trunk was afloat. As soon as the big tile got clear of mud that accumulated in it, the water began to flow out and the lakes grew less. Of course Cedar Creek will be up this evening and to morrow.

NOTES.

John Blany found his premises under water this mornine. He found his pig likely to drown and went out and got a morter box put the pig in and towed it ashore. Then he managed to get to the barn and get his horse out and took it to a place of safety.

Karl Husselman, while delivering milk in the northwest part of town this forenoon, found a place so deep the water came into the bottom of his wagon He had to hustle to get out

Warsaw's Boom

Warsaw is going to have an electric car line run out to Winona Grounds this summer. It will pay well, for not only are these grounds thronged in summer, but the U. B. College is located near by. The land is now being laid out and ground for the buildings has been staked off, and building will soon begin. The grounds are across the Pennsylvania tracks on the highlands just north of the Winona Station. Truly Warsaw is taking on a healthy boom.

Commissioners Court

The first work of the Board when they met in regular session on Monday March 7, was to examine warrants drawn, which included all from No. 1808 to 2000 inclusive in series P. Also warrants from No. 1 to 156 in the new series, all being for the quarter ending Feb. 28, 1898, and compared them with the allowances made by the Board and with the certificates issued by the county clerk and found that all were properly drawn. They also examined the record of receipts and disbursements in the treasurer's office for the same quarter and found the same correct.

The second day, they worked on bridges in view of the two to be built, and fixed the time of receiving bids, at March 17.

The third day was given over to liquor license business. Licenses were granted John Berg, Joe Pfefferl, Albert Zewes, D. E. Lung, Allen Parks, John H. Zeek, John Sobraske, Peter Behler, Naaman R. Dean, Richard Till, W. F. Shaver.

On the fourth day, the various county officers made report of the fees collected by them and turned over to the treasurer during the past quarter.

The fifth, sixth and seventh days were devoted to examining and allowing or rejecting bills.

On the eighth day they took up the matter of costs in changes of venue between the two counties of this judicial circuit, Steuben and DeKalb, so as to insure that no needless or excessive charges be made by either county as against the other. The following fees were agreed on by the two county Boards, the county to which the change is taken to charge and collect the same from the other county:

In cases disposed of without trial, $2; In cases tried in the court, one day's fees for clerk, sheriff and bailiff for each day of such trial, as well as the proper costs of jury. In no case shall either county charge for light, fuel or use of public building, and no mileage for the jury unless the jury be called especially for that case. Also there will be allowed 50 cents to the clerk for his certificate to the order of the court making the allowance.

This agreement was signed by Norris Brown, Albert H. Olmsted and Geo. S. McNett the commissioners for Steuben and by Isaac Gunsenhouser E. R. Shoemaker and J. W. Bateman the commissioners of DeKalb.

The ninth day, Wednesday. They received the report of Supt. Bartels of the County Home, which was approved.

Treasurer Hine asked to have the Board vacate certain lots and alleys in the town plat of Sedan. The Board finding no objection to the petition and that the legal 30 days notice had been given by publication granted the petition.

The Board had a considerable work to do in regard to ditches.

FINAL REPORTS.

Were made on the John N. Clark ditch, the Samuel Hilkey ditch, the Hugh Watt ditch, the Albert Buchanan, the Kimber—Weldin a joint ditch between DeKalb and Steuben; the Shermain Trail ditch. The Mary O. Talbert ditch, and the J. P. Hornberger ditch.

UP SIDE DOWN.

Mrs. Little now stands ready to reccommend Billy as a first-class garden maker. The other day when it was warm and nice and the ground drying up she was reminded that now is the proper time to begin the garden work. She had some choice pie plant that she wished put out in a favorable place and gave them to Billy, with instructions as to where they should be placed. Billy took the roots and promptly went to work and in due time reported the job completed. Mrs. Little gave him the proper plaudit of "well done" and went about her work satisfied that all was well with her early garden. In the course of the day, however she went out to see how much the rhubarb had 'grown already' What was her surprise, to find that the plants were put in bottom up. Billy explains that all the experience he ever had with pie plant was in the finished product in the form of pies and as he could not then see as it made any difference which side of the pie plant was up he never thought it would make any difference. Pie plant is pie plant any way. no matter how you plant it. And to this theory he clings.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

THE TRADE SUMMARY.

Demand for All Staple Articles Grows Stronger.

Bradstreet's report says: The aggregate volume of business was sufficiently large to allow favorable comparisons with past periods in this and preceding years. Aside from the quieting demand at a few leading Eastern markets, the situation possesses nearly all of the favorable features noted heretofore. The best reports of distribution in leading lines comes from the central west and northwest. Favorable weather improved the distribution of dry goods, clothing, millinery, building materials, agricultural implements and nearly all other products forming staple articles of consumption among farmers. Southern fruit and vegetable shipments promise to be early and heavy distributive trade is increasing in the northwest. Navigation will practically open on the lakes the first of April, and witness a general move of craft.

A Faithful Dog.

Burglars entered the house of Mrs. J. M. Stone at Toledo. One of the robbers caught her by the throat and began choking her, while the other man tried to stuff a handkerchief in her mouth. A dog in an adjoining room heard the trouble, rushed in and pounced on one of the robbers. The other robber made his escape by jumping through a window. After a desperate struggle with the dog, in which the robber lost a portion of his clothing, he broke loose and jumped through the window his companion had escaped through. The woman was badly injured about the throat and was about to give up the strugle when the dog came to her rescue.

Grain for Europe.

The Philadelphia Record says: "Nineteen steamships were chartered Saturday to load grain at Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore on European account, which is claimed to be the largest number ever chartered for that purpose in a single day. It is estimated that these vessels will carry 3,000,000 bushels of grain to foreign markets, and it was reported that many orders from London were not filled because of the rush, as it was impossible to fix the tonnage owing to the unexpected demand."

Act of Friendship.

London special: The Brazilian warship Amazonas was formally turned over to the United States. Commander Corres delivered the ship to Lieut. Caldwell, an attache of the United States Embassy, saying through an interpreter: "This action of our Government is an act of friendship." Lieut. Caldwell replied: "For which my Government thanks you very much." All heads were then uncovered and the Brazilian flag was hauled down and the stars and stripes were run up.

Spain Preparing.

The Navy Department is advised by its representatives abroad that Spain is actively engaged in strengthening her coast defenses. Fifteen thousand men are now on duty in the coast forts and batteries, and there is a reserve force of 3,000 that can yet be drawn upon. The entire change of the coast defense has been handed over to the Spanish authorities, and the forces which are now on duty in the fortifications are said to belong to the regular naval establishment.

Death from Playing at Hanging.

Herbert Stanley, the 12-year-old son of P. S. Stanley, was strangled to death while playing at hanging. With his smaller brother he was in the barn of his father near Nottingham, Ind., and saying to his companion: "Watch me hang myself," tied a loop of a rope, which was suspended from a beam of the barn, around his neck and swung off from a ladder.

Indiana Boy's Find.

George Hower of Cambridge City, Ind., who has been in the gold regions of Alaska for the past three years, has the honor of finding the largest nugget if not the richest yet discovered in that region. The nugget is worth close to $500.

Spain Protects Torpedo Fleet.

Madrid special: The Imparcial explains the holding of the Spanish Torpedo fleet at Canary by saying that in view of later events it is deemed best that the vessels be escorted to their destination by a cruiser.

Blanche K. Bruce Dead.

Hon. Blanche K. Bruce, Registrar of the Treasury, died at his home in Washington. He was one of the prominent leaders of the colored race.

Spain Buys a Cruiser.

London special: A dispatch from Rome says the Italian Government has sold the armored cruiser Varez to Spain.

Short Work Made of a Rapist.

Alexander Anderson, a young negro, attempted to criminally assault a school girl at Grenada, Miss. Three hours later he was captured by a mob, confessed and was hanged. Anderson was made to climb a cottonwood tree with a rope about his neck. He was then pushed off a limb and strangled to death.

A $1,000,000 Loss.

There was a heavy frost in the California Valley the other night. It damaged the apricot, peach and almond crop not less than a million dollars.

A Big Blaze.

The Victor mills of Cohoes, N. Y., a nine-story brick structure, was destroyed by fire. They are said to have been the largest wool mills in the United States, employing over one thousand operatives. The loss is between $400,000 and $500,000, covered by insurance.

Stricken Blind.

Eugene Saulsey, Chairman of the Republican County Central Committee at Indianapolis, while in his office, was stricken with total blindness, the result of atrophy of the optic nerve, and physicians report that his blindness is permanent.

FREEDOM FOR CUBA.

That Is the Purpose of a Joint Resolution Introduced in Congress.

Representative Wheeler of Alabama, has introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That a joint committee consisting of five members of the Senate, to be appointed by the Vice President, and five members of the House, to be appointed by the Speaker, be created to report without delay to the two houses an address to the Government of Spain declaring in firm and diplomatic language that Americans and American interests in Cuba must be protected and that the atrocities now being perpetrated in that island must cease.

Resolved, That the executive be requested to immediately transmit this address to the Government of Spain by such methods as he may deem most advisable, together with a letter of endorsement and approval of this action on the part of Congress.

Terrible Machine Gun.

San Antonio (Texas) special: A rapid fire gun which was recently invented by J. W. Greer of Yoakum, Texas, is being thoroughly tested under the directions of the War Department. Artillery officers here claim that it is the most powerful machine gun ever invented. It is intended for artillery service. The gun is wholly automatic in its action, after the first shot is fired the force of the recoil being used to load, fire, clean and cool itself. This gun fires 300 three-inch projectiles per minute, 250 four-inch projectiles per minute, or 100 six-inch projectiles per minute. It can be fired at any elevation, even 90 degrees, without damage to the carriage.

Englishmen Leave Cuba.

Havana special: With the departure of the court of inquiry after a second visit to the wreck, the tension is serious. The court is nearly ready to report. There is no reason to change the belief that the court will find the disaster was caused by an explosion outside the Maine. No one believes any Spanish officials or officer of rank to be implicated. Spaniards and Cubans alike are much interested in discussing the forthcoming elections and their probable results. This correspondent has seen a cable message from London to several English tobacco merchants, telling them to leave the island at once and hinting that war seems inevitable.

Wants to Fight a Duel.

Washington special: Senator Mason has received the challenge sent him by Marquis de Alta Villa, editor of the Spanish illustrated paper El Cardo. The challenge is to mean a combat with swords. Senator Mason is described in the document as an ignoble Yankee Senator who scolds like a woman and who has not valor to fight like a man; who would take a slap in the face without resenting it. The American people are referred to as a people who deal in pigs and whose flag is the almighty dollar. Senator Mason takes the challenge in a jocose spirit.

Fierce Prairie Fires.

Cimarron (Kan.) special: With the wind blowing forty miles an hour, a prairie fire has been ranging within sight of this place, sweeping everything before it. Thousands of acres of pasture lands have been burned off and reports are coming in of losses of live stock and buildings, but so far no loss of human life has been heard of. At one time the wind changed suddenly, driving the flames toward town, and it took hard work on the part of a large force of men with teams and water wagons to prevent the town's destruction.

War Symptom in Michigan.

The first symptom of war so far in Michigan came the other day when the State Military Board received a request from the War Department that each company of Michigan troops be divided into squads of eight men each, in charge of Corporals, and that complete lists of these divisions be reported at once to the Secretary of War, thus insuring getting troops out in the shortest possible order. More than two years ago the Second Regiment was divided in this manner and so is ready at a moment's notice.

Big Bank Robbery.

The Peoples' Savings Bank safety vault at Mount Pleasant, Mich., was robbed of $3,600. Duplicate keys were used. The bank is in the hands of a receiver. The Peoples' Bank gained a wide notoriety in connection with the Farmers' Bank, at Shepard, Mich., the cashier of which was supposed to have been murdered in August last.

Notorious Criminals.

Twenty notorious criminals have reached Seattle, Wash., on the steamer Rosalie from Skaguay, having been driven out by the United States authorities and citizens' committee.

Sold Into Slavery.

Two negroes will be sold into slavery at Glasgow, Ky. They have repeatedly been convicted of vagrancy, and the county has advertised their services for sale for the time of conviction.

Scores of Lives Lost.

Advices from Hong Kong say that on the island of Amberna, the town of that name was totally destroyed by an earthquake in January, killing 100 persons and injuring 200.

Floods at Joliet.

Joliet, Ill., has experienced one of the greatest floods in its history. The loss will reach $100,000.

PREPARING FOR WAR.

GOVERNMENT RUSHING WORK IN MILITARY DEPARTMENTS.

Day and Night the Making of Guns, Shot and Shell Goes On—How the Messengers of Destruction and Death Are Prepared for Use.

Engines of War.

Hurry up! Hurry up! This has been the watchword in all departments of military work during the past two weeks. It is particularly so at Reading, Pa., and Newark, N. J. In the former place the Carpenter Steel Company has an order from the Government for 27,000 projectiles, and at the latter place the Benjamin Atha and Illingworth Company have an order for all the heavy guns they can make. Both these orders are to be gotten out in "hurry up" time. This of course is all because the trouble between the United States and Spain. We have a lot of beautiful vessels, but it is learned from trustworthy sources that of all our first-class floating engines of war, only one—the Massachusetts—is supplied with projectiles sufficient to last over a day in action. It is only since 1890 that projectiles have been manufactured in this country. In that year the Carpenter Steel Company undertook the work at the solicitation of the Navy Department. The tests of the work for the past seven years have shown that the projectiles of American manufacture are not only up to but even surpass in quality and effectiveness the very best that can be made abroad.

Day and night the work of getting ready the munitions of war is going on in these two places. The grinding wheels and boiling cauldrons of metal are continually doing their work. There is no time to lose. The projectiles must be ready and the guns to fire them must be complete if we have any business with Spain.

REPRESENTATIVE CANNON,
Who introduced a bill appropriating $50,000,000 for national defense.

There are several kinds of projectiles known respectively as armor-piercing projectiles, semi-armor piercing or deck-piercing projectiles, mortar shells and common, or target, shells. The armor piercers are of the highest grade of projectiles and are intended to perforate the heaviest armor that can be placed on a battleship. With adequate velocity given by the powder charge in the gun a projectile of this class is designed to penetrate a face-hardened nickel steel plate which is equal in thickness to the diameter of the shot. The tremendous strain brought upon the projectile at the moment of impact with the plate calls for steel of the very highest strength and toughness.

To begin with, these missiles are made of pig iron. This is selected with special reference to its strength and purity. It is melted and converted by the process known as puddling into very pure and strong muckbar, which consists of almost chemically pure metallic iron. Every known precaution is observed to eliminate innate impurities from the metal in the puddling process. When the contents of the crucibles that contain the molten metal is thoroughly melted it is poured or "teemed" into a ladle, from which the steel is tapped into iron molds and form ingots of the proper shape and size for the further work. For a projectile of the largest size, which measures when finished 13 inches in diameter and 48 inches in length, the ingot weighs one ton.

When the steel has solidified the mold is stripped from the ingot. It then goes to the forge and under a steam hammer which weighs almost ten tons it assumes approximately the required shape.

After being gradually cooled the forgings are taken to the machine shop, where they are turned and bored to their final dimensions. An idea of the accuracy of this work may be formed from the fact that for most of the dimensions the greatest variation allowed is one-hundredth of an inch, while for certain parts, such as the diameter of the fuse hole, absolute accuracy is required, and the variation of even one-thousandth of an inch is not allowed, the purpose of the boring is to produce a chamber or cavity within the projectile which is intended to contain a high explosive. The base of this cavity is closed with a plug which screws into the projectile, and which contains a small aperture through which a detonating fuse can be introduced to fire the explosive.

The most delicate operation in the whole process is the hardening of the projectiles. This is done by heating and cooling repeatedly. The work of all the other departments may be spoiled here. If the steel is too hard, it will shatter on the face of the plate against which it is fired. If too soft, it will "mush," in either case failing in its purpose. Every step in the process is under the direct supervision of a skilled Government officer, and when the projectiles are turned out one from each lot is selected for test firing. Upon the quality of this the acceptance of the whole pile depends. Thus, while all possible speed is being made in getting out these messengers of destruction and death, there is also the strictest regard paid to accuracy and efficiency.

The work of making guns at Newark is just as intricate and important as that of manufacturing projectiles at Reading. Tons of metal are melted in the great furnances and this when at the proper degree of heat and purity is let off into the great casting pot.

The gun comes out in the rough, and the worthless portions are broken off and the manner in which these stand the tests is the standard upon which the quality of the metal in the entire gun is judged. At first the gun is cast in a solid piece. Then it is bored with machinery adjusted with the accuracy of the movement of a watch. Six weeks is the shortest time in which a modern gun can be made, but this is when everything goes along satisfactorily. Oftener than otherwise this result can only be obtained through much trying and expenditure of time. The work of making the guns, to one not thoroughly acquainted with all the intricacies of the business, seems to be largely a matter of knowing how to properly manipulate the machinery employed in the process. Except in the forging room scarcely a blow of a hammer is heard. The shops are almost as silent as the grave. Wheels revolve, cutters turn, men stand placidly by the side of machines, moving softly here and there. All this time, each second, the gun that some day will belch forth fire and steel of its own is coming nearer completion. Chips fall as the bars revolve, but the cutters are not heard. The guns, it would appear to the onlookers, are almost making themselves.

MAKING PROJECTILES FOR THE BIG GUNS.

WORKING ON THE HEAVY RIFLES IN THE NAVAL ORDNANCE FOUNDRY IN WASHINGTON.

NEARLY 1,000 SHIPS ARE READY.

Available for War Purposes If Manned by Quick-Fire Guns.

The naval militia organizations, in accordance with the instructions issued by the department last week, are beginning to report on the number of merchant ships and steam craft of all kinds available for war purposes if manned with quick-fire guns. Pennsylvania and Maryland and some of the New England States report a large number of vessels in readiness for impressment by the national Government on receipt of orders from the President. These craft vary in tonnage from large coastwise ships to powerful seagoing tugs, and all, when properly equipped, could render most effective service. The militia organizations will be depended on to man a great number of ships, except those which will form the auxiliary fleet for operations in the open sea. Fast yachts have been found innumerable, and owners of some of the fleetest and most sumptuous have informed the officials that if required they will be willing to deliver them to the Government for war purposes.

Big tugs and little yachts are now being considered with a view to forming a torpedo boat flotilla, each being manned with a torpedo tube and two or three six-pounders. It is proposed to utilize a large number of heavy towing ocean-going tugs as improved rams, and assign them exclusively for harbor defense purposes.

The information so far received by the department shows that 929 vessels of all types available for impressment are at the service of the Government, including a large number on the lakes, which would not under any circumstances be used unless it was developed that the Eastern ports failed to present the requisite number. Of these forty-three are on the list of auxiliary cruisers, or ships which are engaged in coastwise and foreign trade, and capable of high speed and great steaming radius. These would be manned with guns manufactured at the Washington gun factory and sent to join the flying squadrons or to harrass the enemies' commerce.

FLEET OF MONITORS FOR COAST AND HARBOR DEFENSE.

AJAX. WYANDOTTE. AMPHITRITE. MIANTONOMAH. NANTUCKET. PASSAIC.

In the House on Friday the bill to pay the Bowman act claims, aggregating $1,200,000, for stores and supplies furnished the Union army during the war was considered until 5 o'clock, but beyond completing the general debate little progress was made. Of the 800 odd claims in the bill all but a few come from the South, and dilatory tactics were resorted to to prevent progress. During the filibustering the House was in an uproar. At 5 o'clock, after completing two pages of the bill, the House recessed until 9 o'clock for an evening session to be devoted to pension legislation. After the evening session the House adjourned until Monday. The Senate was not in session.

During its session of three hours on Monday the Senate passed a considerable number of bills from the general calendar, among the number being one authorizing the construction of eight new revenue cutters not exceeding in aggregate cost the sum of $2,025,000. A resolution offered last Thursday by Mr. Chandler (N. H.) authorizing the committee on naval affairs to send for persons and papers in the course of the investigation of the Maine disaster, was adopted. Mr. Lodge (Mass.) of the foreign relations committee called up the joint resolution for the relief of August Bolten and Gustave Richelieu. The resolution as reported from the foreign relations committee is as follows: "That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby empowered to take such measures as in his judgment may be necessary to obtain the indemnity from the Spanish government for the wrongs and injuries suffered by August Bolten and Gustave Richelieu by reason of their wrongful arrest and imprisonment by Spanish authorities at Santiago de Cuba in the year 1895; and to secure this end he is authorized and requested to employ such means or exercise such power as may be necessary."

In the House on Tuesday it was agreed to consider the bill for the relief of the legal heirs of the victims and survivors of the Maine disaster as soon as the postoffice appropriation bill is out of the way. During the general debate on the postoffice bill members eagerly took advantage of the latitude allowed in committee of the whole on the state of the Union to discuss various political questions. Messrs. Griggs (Dem., Ga.) and Walker (Rep., Mass.) discussed the conditions of the cotton industry, and Mr. Tawney (Rep., Minn.), a member of the Ways and Means Committee, replied to the speech of Mr. Johnson (Rep., Ind.) made some time ago against the advisability of annexing the Hawaiian islands. Mr. Tawney strongly advocated the annexation of the islands. After the passage of numerous bills from the general calendar the Senate began consideration of the measure providing for a national system of quarantine. Little beyond the reading of the bill was accomplished.

On Wednesday the postoffice appropriation bill, which was technically the subject before the House, was almost lost track of in the debate. The Cuban-Spanish question, which had been kept in the background heretofore, forged to the front. Mr. Cochran (Dem., Mo.) brought the question into the arena, and in the course of the debate that followed Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio took occasion to deny emphatically the stories afloat to the effect that the President desired an early adjournment of Congress in order that he might effect a settlement without congressional interference. The subject of Hawaiian annexation also came in for attention. Mr. Williams (Dem., Miss.), Mr. Adams (Rep., Pa.) and Mr. Berry (Dem., Ky.), all members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, made speeches on the subject, the former in opposition and the two latter in favor of the proposition. Business in the legislative session of the Senate was confined to the passage of a few bills, largely of a local character. The national quarantine bill was not considered.

On Thursday the session of the House was devoted strictly to the postoffice appropriation bill, which was taken up for amendment under the five-minute rule. The questions which consumed the major portion of the time related to the allowance for clerk hire at postoffices and to rural free delivery. The House increased the allowance for rural free delivery from $150,000 to $300,000 and defeated the proposition for increased clerk hire. Among the bills passed in the Senate was one to authorize the construction of a gunboat on the great lakes to take the place of the United States ship Michigan, and to cost, exclusive of armament, not to exceed $230,000. Adjourned till Monday.

Notes of Current Events.

A full State ticket will be nominated by the Republicans of Kansas at Hutchinson June 8.

Electricity as a substitute for hanging is being considered by the Massachusetts Legislature.

It is finally settled that the battleship Kentucky will be christened with water instead of wine.

Heavy consignments of Tennessee marble are being shipped to the City of Mexico from Knoxville.

Nearly 60,000 acres have been reclaimed in Ireland during the past year from bog and marsh lands.

Judge John Newton, the last treasurer of the Southern Confederacy, is critically ill at his home, near Staunton, Va.

Sixteen-year-old Sadie Storer is in jail at Huntsville, Ark., together with her sweetheart and her mother, charged with the murder of her father, A. M. Storer, a prosperous farmer at that place.

California orange growers have succeeded in developing an orange tree that will withstand a temperature of 12 degrees and yet yield a sweet and well-flavored fruit.

Six thousand painters and decorators of New York will demand $4 and $3.50 per day for eight hours' work on April 4. If their demands are not granted a strike will follow.

A terrific hail storm occurred near Pocatello, Idaho, doing immense damage to stock. The storm was accompanied by thunder and lightning and the hail stones were as large as hen's eggs.

The army recruiting officer at Chicago received an order from the War Department at Washington to "enlist all desirable applicants fitted for artillery, and send them to Fort Sheridan." Within five hours after the order had been posted on the bulletin board over 500 men had applied for enlistment.

A question arose in the English House of Commons as to the expediency of tendering the United States the use of the British fleet in the event of war, the interests of the nations being so closely allied. It was not up for consideration by the House officially, but many members expressed themselves as favorable to the project.

SEVEN MINES IN THE HARBOR.

Maine Court of Inquiry Will Present Some Material Evidence.

A Key West correspondent asserts that the court of inquiry will present with its findings the material evidence of the existence of not one mine, but of seven, in the harbor of Havana. A shattered section of a submarine cable, containing seven conductors, is in the possession of the court, delivered to it by one of the American divers, and it is the strongest proof yet offered that the Maine's destruction was encompassed by an agency within the control of the Spanish authorities.

It is about fourteen inches long, seven-eighths of an inch in diameter, and contained seven copper wires insulated with a gutta percha covering. The outside was of lead, one thirty-second of an inch thick.

The discovery was made about thirty feet from the submerged bow, and within the radius of fifty feet in which the divers have been working. To those of the court familiar with electrical appliances the character of this section of lead-covered cable was at once apparent. It was such as would be used only in deep seas, or for some work in shallow waters when absolute protection against breakage or induction would be assured. An ordinary okonite or gutta percha covered wire would be all that would be necessary for telegraph or telephone service.

KANSAS LAW VALID.

The State Has a Right to Keep Out Texas Cattle.

The Supreme Court, in an opinion rendered by Justice Harlan, affirmed in the broadest way validity and constitutionality of the law of Kansas forbidding the bringing into the State of cattle capable of communicating to local cattle the Texas fever. Justice Brewer dissented. Certain citizens of Kansas sued the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad Company to recover damages for the loss of cattle which were affected with the Texas fever communicated from cattle brought into the State by the railroad company, under a State law which made the company liable for the effects of disease derived from cattle so imported into the State. Judgment was given against the railroad company and it appealed to the Supreme Court.

A Nebraska league of Maine avengers has been formed in Lincoln, composed largely of veterans of the late war, although there is no restriction in membership. The motto of the league is: "He who insults the American flag must apologize or fight." When the membership list is complete it is proposed to send it to President McKinley.

"The feeling in Spain toward the United States is very bitter," we are informed by the cable. There are sweeter things on earth than the feeling the United States has for Spain, if the Spaniards are looking for facts these days.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Dying Man Arrested—Erganbright Convicted of Embezzlement—Murdered by a Jealous Rival—Attempted to Kill His Motherless Children.

Arrested While Dying.

John Davis, ex-postmaster of Toledo, was arrested under pathetic circumstances. Some irregularities had been discovered in his accounts, although it is generally believed that his shortage was due to errors rather than criminality. A deputy marshal called at his home and found him in bed, unable to move, having been stricken with paralysis. The physician advised that he be not disturbed, and after the warrant was read the officer left. Mr. Davis is 60 years old and it is not thought likely he will ever be called before an earthly tribunal.

Convicted of Embezzlement.

Wallace A. Erganbright, aged 29, was found guilty of embezzlement in the Greene Circuit Court and given a punishment of imprisonment at the reformatory from one to three years and fined $400. Erganbright was the operator of the Linton Exchange Bank, which closed its doors Oct. 11, 1895. The State charged that he was running an insolvent bank, doing business with little or no capital stock. A number of depositors lost money in the bank, only 44 per cent being paid.

Jealousy Causes a Murder.

At Brazil, Frederick Ellis shot and killed Frederick Krack of Center Point. Ellis is infatuated with Mrs. Andrew Brewer, who recently secured a divorce from her husband, and was at her home when Krack called and said he desired lodging for the night. Ellis objected to his entering the house and shot him. Ellis is in jail charged with murder.

Killed by a Train.

John L. Mowrey, aged 72, a prominent citizen of Whitestown, was instantly killed by being struck by a Big Four passenger train. The body was thrown seventy feet and horribly mangled. The deceased was one of the early settlers of Boone County and quite wealthy.

Tries to Kill Four Children.

At English, Emile Devan tried to kill himself and his four children by administering laudanum. Mrs. Devan died nearly a year ago, and since then Mr. Devan has brooded over his affliction until it is thought his mind has become unbalanced.

Hanged Himself.

William L. Lee, a prominent and well-to-do resident of Jefferson County, becoming despondent on account of ill health, hanged himself with a roller towel from the kitchen door of his premises in West Madison.

Within Our Borders.

At Jeffersonville, James Willis was fatally shot by J. W. Montgomery.

The Phi Delta Theta fraternity in Indiana observed its fiftieth anniversary.

At Putnamville, C. E. Williams' store, J. J. Bowen's residence and a barber shop were burned.

The famous Mount Tabor Baptist Church case, involving doctrinal questions, has been compromised.

Frank Lamar, son of County Recorder Nathan Lamar, and a well-known teacher, has been called to the chair of science in Wilmington College, Wilmington, O.

The general merchandise store of J. R. Stearns at Mechanicsburg was destroyed by fire, together with the Masonic lodge room and Dr. Walker's office. The total loss is about $4,000, partially insured.

The failure to find oil in the J. P. Willman well, in section 15, Licking township, was a bitter disappointment to the men who are developing the Hartford City field. After drilling the well 110 feet in the sand it was abandoned.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Indiana has been asked to come to the rescue of DePauw University at Greencastle. The Rev. W. H. Hickman, vice-chancellor of the university, standing before a meeting of forty ministers of the church, said the time had come when the church must take the university under its protection and support it or the institution must be abandoned. He created a sensation by announcing that the millions that had been promised the university from the estate of Washington C. DePauw had dwindled until the greatest amount to be hoped for is $200,000.

John W. Lovett and W. W. Huffman, capitalists of Anderson, will incorporate a company with $150,000 capital stock for the immediate construction of an electric railway between Laporte and Michigan City. The plan of the projectors is to have cars running within 100 days. This road, it is believed, will be built to form connection with a trolley line now projected from Hammond, via Valparaiso to Michigan City, thus ultimately bringing Chicago into communication with all towns in that section of the State, Laporte and Michigan City to be the eastern terminal points of the line.

Benjamin Farley, convicted of murder and sentenced to twenty-one years in the penitentiary, has been released on parole. Farley killed Alexander Stewart at Lebanon during a quarrel six years ago. On his trial the defendant declared he was the victim of a conspiracy, promoted by Stewart's wife and one John Smith, for the purpose of involving Farley and Stewart in trouble with a view to Stewart being killed, so Smith and Mrs. Stewart could marry. This contention had many supporters and was given color by the marriage of the couple a few days after the murder. Farley is over 70 years of age.

Adolph S. Laue, for fourteen years grand secretary of the Knights and Ladies of Honor of Indiana, died at Vincennes.

A pocket of what is thought to be surface gas was struck by men while drilling for water on the farm of D. U. H. Farr, near Paragon. It rushed from the well with quite a roar and it is thought that it can be procured in paying quantities by many who were near at hand.

While clearing ground for the erection of the Buckeye Window Shade Works at Anderson, workmen unearthed one of the largest deposits of mummified bodies yet found in that section. They were pretty well destroyed by decay, and were unceremoniously dumped into a wagon. There was a whole wagon load.

As Henry Vondilengen was crossing the railroad at what is known as Farmington, Seymour, he was struck by the pay train on the Pennsylvania Railroad and instantly killed. One horse was killed and his hay wagon split into kindling, while the other horse escaped without a scratch.

A strange malady, supposed to be hydrophobia, is said to be raging among the cattle in the Wabash and Patoka river bottoms, west of Princeton. The animals afflicted have every symptom of rabies, and they are supposed to have been bitten by a mad dog. Farmers are killing the infected animals, but the disease seems to be spreading.

THREE WISHES.

It was years ago, when I was a child,
A fairy came to me;
"Now, look at your heart and wish," she smiled;
"You shall have wishes three.
Look deep in your heart and wish," she said,
"For what you wish shall be."

I looked in my heart—I was but a child—
And I wished for a red, red rose,
The sweetest, the largest, the reddest flower
That in any garden grows.
It came and it withered with an hour;
Flowers fade, as every one knows.

I looked in my heart—I was but a child—
And I wished for a milk-white dove.
It came, and surely never before
Had any bird such love.
One day it unfolded its wings and flew
Far into the heaven above.

I looked in my heart—I was but a child—
Yet a child can be so wise;
"Give me what's sweeter than any sweet rose,
More fair than the dove that flies,
A lover, affectionate, good and true!"
'Twas then I looked into your eyes.

BARRAUD'S VENGEANCE.

"Take my advice, Morris. Leave pretty faces alone or you'll get into a scrape—as I once did," he added reflectively.

It was Max Deuchars, the well-known baritone, who had spoken, and the room instantly divined that an adventure lay beneath.

"The story! Let's have the story!" we cried, with one accord, and some one, with delicate forethought, filled up his glass.

"Well, I suppose there is one, if you care to call it such," he said, "so here goes. Most of you remember my entering the profession"—there was only one profession in Deuchars's eyes—but you probably did not know that it was pure accident that gave me my first chance. But so it was. I was cast for a very minor part, indeed, but I was always ambitious, and even then had understudied Barraud, the principal baritone, so thoroughly that I was practically word-perfect in his lines.

"He was a good actor and the cleverest I have ever known at make-up, but careless and indifferent and endowed with a temper the reverse of serene, which caused him to fly off at a tangent on the slightest provocation. One night he failed to show up at the proper time. Dickenson, the manager, was at his wits' end. The regular understudy was taking a holiday. The audience could not be pacified much longer, and he was at a loss what to do. Then I stepped in and volunteered to play the part. He eyed me dubiously for a second or two, but I suppose I looked pretty confident, for he said:

'All right; try—and for goodness sake be quick.

"I tried, and—well, I made a hit. A few weeks later, when Barraud's engagement required renewing, Dickenson offered me the part as a permanency. Naturally, I accepted. This turned the chagrined baritone's resentment against me, though his dismissal was entirely the result of his own negligence, and he went away uttering vows of vengeance against what he termed my sneaking ways.

"So much for Barraud. I did not see him again for nearly two years, during which I played the hero nightly with—modesty forbids me to say more than a fair amount of success. And now, having got rid of what a novelist would call the prologue, let me commence in earnest with the story.

"I had been asked to sing at a morning concert somewhere in the suburbs in aid of a charity. Immediately I ascended the platform I became conscious of the surpassing beauty of one face among the row after row in front of me. The girl did not look more than 19 or 20. The exquisite contour of her cheeks, the shapely mouth and nose, and above all, her eyes, fringed with lashes that seemed to droop instinctively to conceal their depths of hazel, all went to make up a face that was well night perfect in its loveliness.

"I had a hazy idea of having seen her before somewhere, but could not resolve it into anything definite. Each time a few bars' rest gave me the opportunity I looked down upon her. Strange to say she was generally gazing at me at the same moment, and our glances met. Once I could swear that she even smiled at the circumstance and lowered her eyes purposely. It was the same during my second song. A subtle kind of magnetism seemed to play between us.

"I was encored, and this time I responded, going no further from the platform than just out of sight of the audience. When I reascended it, the seat she had occupied was empty. I was disappointed, and racked my brain again to think where I had seen her.

"When I returned to the artists' room a surprise awaited me. A tiny note lay on my bundle of songs, with my name on the envelope. Instantly I jumped to the conclusion that it was connected with the owner of the lovely face, and tore it open in a little flutter of excitement. Inside was just a plain card, and traced in pencil, in a dainty feminine hand, this:

"'Come and see me. I have something to tell you.'

"I was at once elated and disappointed. Elated because I felt that my guess was correct; disappointed that she had given no name, nothing whereby I could identify her. She gave an address, 15 Osborne Terrace.

"I looked at my watch and hesitated. I could spare half an hour and still be in time for the theatre. My mind was soon made up.

"Taking a card out of my pocket, I scribbled a few lines on the back hastily. 'Dear Jack,' I wrote, 'Awfully sorry I cannot meet you as promised. Pressing engagement—Max.' They were to Jack Albery, our tenor. I had promised to meet him at the club and go down to the theatre together afterward. That much accomplished, I proceeded to the address given by my fair correspondent.

"'I——' I began to the trim housemaid who answered my ring, and then I stammered and looked foolish. I had forgotten that I did not know her name.

"The girl smiled behind her apron. 'It's all right, sir. Will you come this way, please?'

"She showed me into the daintiest of boudoirs. Rich curtains and rugs, the thick axminster on the floor, and the array of little ornaments scattered profusely around the room proclaimed its owner to be accustomed to luxury. A second or two later the curtains opened and in walked, not she whom I was expecting, but—Barraud! I gave a start of amazement. I had pretty nearly forgotten his existence; but the insolent smile, just showing the white of his teeth, on his face as he advanced, brought back vividly to my recollection the circumstances of our last meeting.

"'So we meet again, Mr. Deuchars?'

"'It seems that we do,' I replied coldly; and, seeing that he was about to speak, I added; 'But will you please acquaint your mistress that I am here? My time is limited.' I took him to be a servant. I had heard that since his dismissal he had contracted habits of intemperance and gradually sunk own the social ladder.

"Much to my relief, after a moment's hesitation, during which he appeared undecided whether to continue the conversation or accept rebuff, he chose the latter and vanished. Five minutes, perhaps, elapsed. Again the curtain divided, and this time—ah! I stepped forward to greet my divinity.

"'I must apologize most humbly for keeping you waiting, Mr. Deuchars,' she said. 'I hardly dared hope that you would find time to pay me a visit.'

"'Beauty has but to express a wish and it immediately becomes a command,' I replied in my most tender manner, and bent low to take her hand when——

"'Ho! ho! ho! ho!—ha! ha! ha!'

"A burst of derisive laughter checked the gallant intention and caused me to start back in dismay. A furious clutch at a flaxen wig, the sound of a dress being roughly torn down the middle. Barraud! Again! It was a grotesque figure that confronted me. Shreds of feminine attire clung to him here and there, and the hasty wipe he had given his face had had the effect of distributing the grease paint and powder on it in blotchy, uneven patches.

"Then I comprehended. I have said that he was a consummate master of the art of make-up, and his slight, girlish frame had lent itself to his talent with marvelous effect. I had been tricked, duped, deceived completely.

"And now! For what purpose had he lured me into his power? For in his power I felt that I was. There was a gleam of incipient madness in his eyes, and the smile of mocking triumph on his patched and powdered features gave him the appearance of some unreal, fantastic figure; some bizarre conception of an overheated imagination. A sense of impending danger caused me to shiver slightly.

"At last he broke the silence, which was fast growing oppressive.

'Well, M'sieur Deuchars, do I not make a charming young lady? Does not your mouth water when I cast my eyes up at you—so? I suppose you thought that because my revenge was long in coming I had forgotten. Barraud never forgets. I have waited long for an opportunity, but now—You see that?' he said, breaking off suddenly. It was a revolver, and I looked apprehensively at the polished barrel. 'Shall I tell you what I propose to do with it? But let me congratulate you before I do. You sang well this afternoon, exceedingly well—for the last time.'

"The emphasis he threw into the last words confirmed my worst suspicions, and I heard my heart beat faster. Bitterly I cursed the headstrong foolishness which had placed me in his grasp. I looked round the room. I was caught like a rat in a trap. There was apparently only one exit, and he sat guarding that and toying carelessly with the revolver. I waited in trepidation for him to resume.

"'It is now 5:35. At 6:30 or soon after you ought to be at the theatre; is not that so? But you will not be there, make up your mind to that. I propose to—to—what you call kill two birds with one stone.'

"'In the next hour you and I will have a nice, quiet conversation—we will recall old memories—and by that time, my very dear friend, the stage manager will be saying to himself: "Where the dickens is that Deuchars?" He will begin to fret about and get excited, as he did on a former occasion, for the understudy is away and there is no one who can take Deuchars's part—ah! you are surprised to find that I know anything about that, are you not?'

"With callous refinement of torture he prolonged his words until a cold perspiration came out all over me as I sat there helpless and inert.

"'So much for the stage manager; I shall consider that we are quits. For you, my dear friend, I have another method. At seven o'clock I shall invite you to play a little game of chance with me. I shall place two pieces of paper in that hat of yours. On one your name will be written; on the other, mine. You may then take one out; I give you the privilege of drawing. If it bears your name, you will be free—you will have won the game. If mine is the name, I have won, and at 7:30 o'clock I shall shoot you through the head with this revolver. I give you half an hour, you see, to prepare. I have only one more thing to say. Do not make any attempt to escape; it will be useless, as I have here an effectual means of preventing it. Another thing; the servant who let you in at the door is my wife; she is the only person in the house besides ourselves. You need not waste your breath in calling out, therefore; you understand?'

"He ceased, and I was left to my own thoughts. What they were you a madman, of course, there was little doubt. I had something over an hour on which to ponder on the very slender chance of life I possessed after that time, for how did I know that he would keep faith even if our bout with chance resulted in my favor.

"If the worst came to the worst, I was resolved to make a fight for life, at any rate. I would not sit there and be done to death like a dog. Another fifteen minutes—seven! As the last chime fell on the silence he got up. My hat lay on a table near by; carefully he measured two pieces of paper of exact size, wrote on them in a firm hand, and placed them in it.

"'Now, let us take our little gamble with Dame Fortune. Monsieur Deuchars, I invite you to draw. If she favors you, very good; if I come off the victor——'

"A loud knocking at the door interrupted me. But I had caught the sound of a voice I knew. I rushed to the window and shouted with all my strength: 'Jack! help! Jack!'

"He raised the revolver, but I was on him before he could draw the trigger, and pinned him with my arms. Fiercely he strove to wrench himself free, but I held on like grim death, till Jack Albery and another man burst into the room. Barraud's little scheme was foiled. He saw it, and had the good sense to give in quietly.

"Their opportune arrival was brought about in this way: Jack went down to the club as arranged, and my missive was duly delivered to him. He thought nothing of it, and proceeded to the theatre in due course, but as the time passed and I did not arrive, he began to wonder what had happened. Then, in feeling for something in his pocket, he chanced to pull out my note again. This time he was surprised to see some writing he had not noticed on the previous occasion. It was the card I had received at the concert.

"In the hurry of the moment, when pencilling my message, I must have written on the back of that instead of my own card. He waited another few minutes and then decided to come in search of me, feeling sure that it was no trivial affair which would keep me from the theatre. For prudence sake he had taken a companion, and they arrived, as I have described, just in the nick of time.

"Well, my friends, that is about all. I was not anxious, as you may guess, for the affair to become public property, and we let Barraud off, after promising that he would clear out of the country and give up his murderous intentions. However, I heard a day or two afterward that his brain had become completely deranged and that he was confined in a lunatic asylum."—Tit-Bits.

FAMOUS CAVALRY CORPS.

A Spirit Which Makes Fighting Not A Trade, but an Inspiration.

In the celebrated corps known as the Guides Cavalry esprit de corps is more than a word. It is a living part of the regiment. Even the last joined recruit feels no punishment so deeply as the reproach: "You do no credit to the corps," and mature soldiers in very shame voluntarily take their discharge if so addressed by an officer.

Illustrative of the high value placed on personal bravery in the guides as against a Babu-like knowledge of the drill book, two interesting instances may be mentioned. There was on the Yusafzai border a noted freelance named Futteh Khan, who had a small following of horsemen as bold and intrepid as himself. Even the gallant and resourceful Sir Harry Lumsden, with his guides, could not bring this man to book, though oft he tried. At last Lumsden struck at a unique solution of the problem by deciding that he would enlist Futteh Khan and the whole of his band! Accordingly a polite note was written saying that Lumsden had the greatest respect for the bravery and daring of Futteh Khan and his band, and it was a pity that they and the guides should continue a bootless feud to the profit of neither, and that he would make Futteh Khan a ressaldar and take over the whole of his band as it stood! Futteh accepted the offer and he and his men served with distinction for many years with the guides, taking part in the historic march to Delhi and doing yeoman service before its walls.

The other incident occurred when Sir Francis Jenkins was Colonel. The guides, with other troops, having made a turning movement, dropped down into Khyber Pass, in the rear of Ali Musjid, so as to cut off the enemy's retreat when the frontal attack should be driven home. Among the first batch of the fugitives to come up the pass was a squadron of Afghan cavalry, which, making a rush for it, managed, with some loss, to run the gauntlet and get through. One man alone was seen quietly walking his horse in the wake of the fugitives and defiantly waving his sword in the face of the heavy fire of 800 rifles. How he came not to be hit was a marvel, but Sir Francis immediately ordered the "Cease fire" to sound. The colloquy which ensued was delightfully unique. "Who are you?" said the Colonel. "I am Sultan Jan Kazilbash, and I don't care a box of grapes for you and the whole of your army." "You are a monstrously brave man, anyway," said the Colonel, "will you enlist in my regiment?" "Yes, I will," said Sultan Jan, "for I have heard of you and the guides as brave warriors." And enlisted he was on the spot, made a Duffadar there and then, and afterward served with distinction through the campaign. At the end of two years, when the war was over, he went to his Colonel and said: "I am a man of war, and cannot face all the drill and monotony of an Indian cantonment in peace time; with your highness' permission I will now take my discharge." And away he went, a freeman born, and as such determined to die.—Times of India.

Opium From Lettuce.

A sort of opium is obtained from the common lettuce. The scientists give it a long name, which, no doubt, means something very learned and profound, and declare that they can find important differences between the opium of the lettuce and the opium of the poppy, but, for all practical purposes, the one is identical with the other. many a man who has eaten lettuce knows how sleepy it causes him to become an hour or so after dinner, and the older the lettuce the greater the sleepiness, for in mature lettuce the milk juice is well developed and all the properties of the opium are present.—London News.

A FORGERY.

THE POOR ALLIGATOR.

Rapid Decline of One of the Ugliest Beasts on Earth.

Florida tourists note a sharp advance in the price of alligator material, and also in the raw material in life. This is owing to the large decrease in the supply. Diminutive live alligators have advanced from 25 cents each to 50 cents, and larger ones in proportion; in some instances a greater per cent. is charged for the full-grown reptiles, for they are much scarcer than are the baby alligators.

This is because of the sportsman and his deadly gun, who shoots the saurian out of mere wantonness and a desire to make a record. The Seminole Indians also conduct a war of extermination against the alligators, but as they kill for revenue only they are, in a measure, excusable. They also trap the smaller ones, from the tiny babe 10 or 12 inches in length to the "youngster" of two, three or four feet.

The baby 'gators are boxed by the curio dealers and sold to ladies who affect great interest in the ugly things for pets. As the 'gators only live on air and muddy water and an occasional chunk of meat every three or four days, they are not troublesome. The Indians, knowing of the scarcity of alligators in all of the Florida streams, have imitated the paleface curio dealer and charge more for their 'gators.

The baby alligators, while not valuable for their small hides, are killed by the hundreds and mounted. Some serve as thermometers—the tube running up the back. Another curio is a baby alligator standing upon his hind feet and playing a violin with its forefeet. Others are arrayed as waiters offering some article for sale or holding a lamp to light visitors to a tank holding a 16-foot or 18-foot live saurian.

Alligators three or four feet in length, mounted serve as grotesque advertisements and appear to be "so natural" that the stranger is frequently in doubt whether "the thing is alive" or not, and make a detour in order to be on the safe side.

Very few colored people are successful in catching large alligators. There seems to be a mutual distrust and antipathy on both sides. While the alligator is not always looking for a fight, but desires to be let alone, he will fight a "darky" on sight. As soon as he spies a negro he will dive and rise at about the proper place and land him, or rather sweep him in, if within reaching distance. Not so in the case of white hunters. The alligator will swim away, unless its young is attacked, and then it will crawl out on shore and use its huge tail as a battering ram. One stroke will knock a man senseless.

The scarcity of the alligator crop is now a live issue, and as this is one of Florida's attractions it is urged that something be done to stop this wholesale slaughter. It is possible that the next Legislature will come to the rescue of the friendless alligators.

SUBSTITUTE FOR REAL BABY.

NOTED BRITISH JOURNALIST.

A. C. Harmsworth's Great Newspaper Work in Staid Old London.

In all the history of journalism there has probably never been a man who has acquired such immense power over English newspaper development as has come into the hands of Alfred C. Harmsworth, the proprietor of the London Daily Mail and of thirty other papers and magazines. Certainly there has never been a man from whose every action such strikingly successful results have flowed, and upon whom all eyes have centered as they center upon him. The Daily Mail, a half-penny paper which he started about three years ago along lines novel at least for England, and which he has so managed as to bring it to a daily circulation of 400,000 copies in that short space of time, has shaken the long-established customs of London newspaper editing to their very foundations. Other men have built up immense and profitable journals, which, whether of temporary or of permanent character, have kept aloof from the established senders of news and have had little effect upon them. His great characteristic is that he has introduced new ideas about the things to print and new methods of treating what is printed which have created a demand of an entirely new type. And this demand, short as is the time which it has had to manifest itself, is one which is bound to make itself actively known, and which the newspaper proprietor is coming to recognize as absolutely essential for him to take account of.

ALFRED C. HARMSWORTH.

"Forcing" the Studies.

The abandonment of the Froebel system in the government schools in Paris is an interesting educational announcement. The Paris correspondent of the New York Evening Post makes this comment upon the change: "Experience has proved the wisdom of the old saying, 'Work when you work, and play when you play.' A game forced, the teachers say, is no longer a game; and while the children are amused at first, they soon weary of Froebel's instructive 'mother play.' The authorities here consider that prolonging during the ages of 8 and even 9, as the Froebel kindergartens do, the association of amusement and instruction, makes the child lacking in application and retards him, which is clearly proved by the fact that the children who leave the kindergartens at 7 go into the second and third grade of the primary schools, knowing reading, writing, addition, substraction, the geography of France and the multiplication table up to seven. So while there are still occasional ardent devotees to this method in Paris, the government has pronounced against it, as failing to amuse from the standpoint of play, and hindering the fullest development in the nature of work." The prolonging of the kindergarten age is doubtless at the root of the trouble. There is no doubt that in this country, also, the spirit of the Froebel teaching is by no means always followed. But wherever it is comprehended the results are necessarily good, being founded upon a deep philosophical principle of life. The fault is not in Froebel's philosophy, not in the motor power, but in the sort of machinery used, so to speak, in the ignorance of the teachers of its rightful and spiritual and educational application.—Boston Transcript.

TORPEDOES FOR DEFENSE.

GUARDING A HARBOR WITH THESE ENGINES OF DESTRUCTION.

Secrecy of the Work of Placing the Torpedoes—Planted All Over a Harbor, and Connected With the Shores by Electric Wires—Various Kinds of Torpedoes.

An expert on explosives in the employ of the Government at San Francisco, and who is particularly familiar with the handling of large torpedoes, gave some interesting information to a Chronicle reporter regarding the manner of placing and directing these terrible destroyers.

"The explosion which destroyed the battle-ship Maine in the Harbor of Havana, no matter what its cause," he said, "has drawn general attention to the importance of torpedoes as a means of harbor defense. It was recognized, from the very moment of the disaster that the destruction of the great armor-clad ship might have been due to a torpedo. And so inquiries have naturally arisen as to the extent to which American ports are protected in this manner, if at all.

"No work of the War Department is conducted with more privacy than that which pertains to the use of torpedoes for harbor defense. No published reports of any bureau or department of the government of the United States indicate what plans have been adopted for the placing of torpedoes, or at what particular point it is proposed to establish them, either in the case of war or at any other time.

"Torpedoes are of metal, cylindrical in form, about four feet in length and a foot or more in diameter. This quantity is sufficient to blow a hole through the bottom of any ship afloat, if exploded under water within fifty feet of her hull. The installation of 500 or 600 torpedoes, the number for the complete protection of this port, could be accomplished in a few weeks. This would include the laying of the submerged wires and the establishment of the necessary electric connections and instruments on shore. When completed no visible trace of the work would remain. The location of the electric station would be so masked as to be wholly concealed from observation. When fixed in their proper positions, in accordance with the most improved modern methods, the torpedoes would be 100 feet apart. As the destructive area of each is measured by a radius of fifty feet, to place them closer together than 100 feet would be to cause the explosion of one to set off all the others in the same line or group. The preferred arrangement or grouping is the quincunx, a system often adopted by orchardists in the planting of trees to insure the greatest economy of space.

"It is the electrical control of these terrible engines of warfare that makes them most dangerous and effective. Each of a long line of them over which a ship must pass in entering the harbor would have its designated number, and a chart in the hands of the operator or his assistant would show the precise location of each, as measured from certain fixed points of observation. By means of his delicate instruments the operator could in a moment test the electric connections of any single torpedo, and so ascertain if all were in readiness for an explosion. He could so govern the electric current that any given torpedo would be exploded the instant it were touched by an approaching ship. Or he could explode the charge at the proper moment by the pressure of a finger upon the key of his instrument. If all were in proper order and condition no enemy's ship or fleet of ships could pass within the harbor, unless, perhaps, in the darkness or shielded from view by a heavy fog. Even in those circumstances the torpedoes would be effective if the attack were anticipated, for the electric current could be so regulated that each would explode on contact with a ship.

"The War Department has distributed a large number of torpedo cases among the ports most exposed to attack. And in addition to the fixed and submerged torpedoes there are the automobile or dirigible torpedoes, of which there are several descriptions. These may be discharged from a ship or the shore, attain a high speed under water by means of compressed air or electric energy, and are directed in their movements by electric wires, which are reeled off as the machine rushes onward to the object of attack."

Health Notes.

A good complexion depends largely on the proper circulation of good blood throughout the body. Good blood depends on the assimilation of digested food of the right quality.

Anything which interferes with the proper circulation of the blood tends to make the complexion poor; for example, tight lacing, tight shoes, tight neckbands and tight waistbands. Many cases of red nose are due to some form of pressure.

Red hands, too, are often due to some impediment in the circulation of the blood; for example, tight gloves often produce redness and coarseness of the hands. In early youth redness of the hands is as often as not due to impeded circulation, and to their exposure to cold winds after they have been washed.

Where redness of the hands preceeds from a chapped skin—a very frequent source of trouble—the remedy is to dry the hands very thoroughly, and to strengthen and soften the cuticule by means of glycerine rubbed on while the hands are moist, and also of putting on and wearing loose kid gloves at night.

Glycerine is a safer application than vaseline, because vaseline increases the growth of hair on the face and hands.

A simple but effective remedy to remove the swelling and inflammation of a sprain which causes great pain consists of three drops of turpentine and the yolk of an egg, beaten together very thoroughly. Rub the sprained part every morning and night with this.—London Mail.

SOME QUEER TIMEPIECES.

Old-Fashioned Watches Made in Curious Shapes.

Since timepieces have come within the reach of everybody and watches are made large enough for bicycle bars and small enough for a lady's ring, it is curiously interesting to recall some of the old-fashioned ones that served our ancestors so well generations ago. Even today some of us have caught a glimpse of the portly old gentleman whom Dickens loved to picture, with his ornate seals, wide guard and enormous watch that filled to bursting the capacious fob that was its resting place, but like many other cumbersome fashions, these respectable timepieces are interesting now only as curios.

Long before our time or that of our grandfathers watches were made in such fantastic fashion that it is a marvel that their owners managed to carry them about.

No one seems to know the exact date of the first timepiece, but the middle of the fifteenth century seems to have been the period when "portable clocks" began to appear. In the different collections of antiquaries there are a few specimens of the "Nuremburg eggs," or watches made in oval shape and coming from the town after which they were named.

In the possession of Lady Fitzgerald of England, there was one watch which was shaped like an eagle, which had a small boy on its back. This odd ornament was made to hint at the story of Jupiter and Ganymede. The breast of the bird opened to show the dial beneath it, and the works were most elaborately ornamented. When the fair owner of this treasure did not wish to wear it on her girdle she placed it on her table.

Gold and silversmiths seem to have let their fancy run riot during the sixteenth century and watches made in the form of ducks, acorns, of cockleshells and of all possible things made their appearance. Most of them struck the hour and one notable invention fired a diminutive pistol at certain intervals.

When Henry II. of France fell in love with Diana of Poitiers—about 1547—she was a widow and wore mourning. Of course that offered an opportunity to the extravagant courtiers of the day and the result was that all the ornaments at court were fashioned after such gruesome ideas that the ridiculous was close upon the sublime, to say the least. Rings were formed like skeletons, tiny coffins of gold were worn as ornaments and they contained enameled figures of death, but the most striking products of the hour were the watches, which dangled from fair ladies' belts and which represented grinning skulls, the tops of which lifted to disclose the dial plate. Of course the eyes were brilliant jewels and small fortunes were spent in the elaborate ornamentation of these funeral trinkets, and the people who wore them have all passed away, and since 1620, or thereabouts, the flat oval or round timepiece has been the general favorite.

Time does not go so fantastically with us as it did with those untutored geniuses of earlier times, and perhaps our plain, substantial watches tell us much of our character as did those bizarre inventions of earlier days about men and women who wore them.

Cellars and Health.

In towns and the country alike it is the dark corners, the neglected and little-used places in a house, which most frequently contribute to its unhealthfulness, and in ways which are the more insidious because so often unsuspected, says the Philadelphia North American. In this respect the cellars of many houses have much to answer for, for as a rule they are dark and damp, with no direct rays from the sun to kill the mephitic gases which always seek low levels, and no ventilation to disperse them, even where the cellars themselves are not made the repositories of cast-off rubbish and vegetable refuse. The warning, however, cannot be too often given to look to it that the cellar is not neglected. Its ceiling and walls should be plastered and whitewashed where possible, to keep them dry and clean, and the occupants should prevent their cellars from becoming places where rubbish may be shot. The floors should be well paved or cemented to keep out emanations from the soil, and where practicable they should be ventilated by keeping open, in dry weather, windows or doors communicating with the outside air. They act slowly but none the less surely. Frequently they are not noticed at all, although damp and mouldy cellars have undoubtedly done much to undermine the health of many families. This cellar air is taken up through the rooms of a house gradually and in small doses at a time, produces an upward current every time the cellar door is opened, and neglect in regard to this matter is sure to entail serious consequences, because the real reason is often overlooked.

Fooled the Detective.

A detective in a well known retail store is engaged in the mental process of kicking himself whenever he thinks of a certain transaction which took place last week. At a time of day when the store was crowded the detective, who was keeping a sharp lookout for evildoers, was approached by a well-dressed, intelligent looking man, who informed him that he was employed as detective in another store and had followed a shoplifter from his firm's store to the present place, where they would find her at the glove counter stealing gloves. "Let her alone," said the strange detective, "and when she loads up I will follow her home and we can then make a big haul." Consent was given to this plan and the shoplifter stole two or three hundred dollars' worth of goods unmolested. Then she went out followed by the strange detective. That was the last seen of the pair, and the detective wonders how on earth he was duped so easily.—Philadelphia Record.

PUSH IT ALONG

Because it is not a "good thing" we say push it along. We mean the water that has been running into town from the northwest and making lakes where we do not need them. If the water from out in the country towards the poor farm had never been run into town, the low grounds in the northwest part of Auburn would be all right. Why would it not be good idea to have the water turned east before it reaches town, and let it run across and into the creek that way. Then there will be no more trouble with lakes in northwest part of town.

The Columbia City Sanitarium.

The Columbia City Sanitarium will be open for the season of 1898 on Monday March 21st. No medicines will be used in the treatment of diseases. All treatment will by given by roots, herbs barks etc. applied externally and by foot and bark baths applied in a new and successful manner. We will give treatment for all diseases.

BROKE JAIL

And Stole a Part of it While He was About It

It will be remembered by readers of the COURIER, that three young toughs from Elkhart were tried before Judge Roby last Tuesday for breaking into and looting merchandise cars on the Lake Shore road. They are Charles Carpenter, Wm. Esh and John Gemberling. The Judge sentenced Esh and Gemberling to the Reform School till they were twenty-one, and gave Carpenter a suspended sentence as it was believed he would try to reform. Two days after the boys were taken back, Esh escaped. He went out of the door, and took the keys with him. The matter was kept hushed up at first though the Gazette, got an inkling of it, and spoke of the escape. But little was heard of the matter till yesterday when Judge Roby received a bunch of keys by express from Elkhart. They proved to be the jail keys, and were sent on by Mr. Gemberling, the other lad's father, evidently with the hope to curry favor with Judge Roby, and perhaps get a favor for his son, Judge Roby feels that there is a screw loose some where, and believes some one unlocked that door and helped the boy to get out. And should this ever be proved on anyone, it will be a sorry job for the offender. It is a serious question, whether a jail as secure and strong as ours, cannot be made to hold a lot of tough boys. The boy may have discovered that the door was not locked and quietly slipped out, taking the keys with him. If this were true, why was the jail left unlocked, and by whom? On the other hand, did some one slip into the corridor and finding the keys there unlock the door and help the boy out, lock it again and carry off the keys? And again, why did not the boy take the door along with him? or the corridor? or the whole jail? The only reason insight is that he was too tired to carry more than he thought he had use for. But we feel sure of one thing. If the offender is discovered, there will be music in the air for Judge Roby is determined to make an example of him.

BUTLER.

Deep mud still places an effectual embargo on everything coming into Butler across the country.

The U. B. friends continue their revival effort and are having fair success They have good houses of our best citizens and have had considerable outside help.

Rev. Disbro of the M. E. church preached his last sermon before going to Conference, last Sunday to one of the best houses he has had for many Sabbaths.

Frederick W. Oberlin died at his residence in Butler last Saturday morning after an illness of many weeks. His funeral took place from his residence last Sunday afternoon, Rev. Maikley of the Church of God officiating. Mr. Oberlin was born in Massilon Ohio, Sept. 21, 1826, came to Franklin township in 1847. In 1851 he married Mary Stentz, to them were born seven children. Mrs. Oberlin died in 1866, aged 27 years. In 1867 he married Mrs. Martha A. Miers, to them were born a daughter, Mary Jane, who with her mother and five of his other children survive him. Mr. Oberlin has been a resident of Butler for about fifteen years and was honored and respected by all who knew him. His remains were laid to rest in Butler cemetery.

Wm. Brown an old and respected citizen of Franklin township died at his residence 4½ miles north of Butler. last Tuesday, March 15th, aged about 76 years. Mr. Brown came to this county from Ohio in the forties and married a daughter of John Jacob Gunsenhouser. His old or former residence was 1½ miles east of Butler. He has lived in Franklin township about thirty years. His wife, three daughters and five sons survive him.

A very enjoyable meeting of teachers and school patrons took place in the high school room last Friday afternoon The meeting was an open free-for-all affair and several topics pertaining to school methods as now conducted were compared with those extent thirty or more years ago. The old method proved to have had many redeeming features. Among them the spirit that then prompted the teacher and the thoroughness of the work done, illustrated with living examples. All went away feeling that their old school days old school mates and teachers were not forgotten but only laid away on a higher shelf.

HOLDEMAN CONVICTED.

Holdman the defaulting tacasurer of Elkhart county, has been sentenced to the state prison on an indeterminate sentence of one to five years for embezzling $22,000 of the county funds. At the first ballot, the jury stook 6 to 6. That was Friday night after midnight. About 2 in the morning they stood 9 to 3 for conviction. At about 10 Saturday forenoon they had agreed on conviction. T. R. Marshal for the defense moved for a new trial, and till the papers can be prepared and this point settled Holdeman was taken to jail. He admitted the truth of all the charges against him. Strangely however he claims he did not know that he was using more than his salary, which he says was $3,500 a year A man who don't know the difference between the $7,000 he would get in two years, and the $22,000 he used in the same time over and above his salary is not fit for any office. It reminds one of our own treasurer, who came out about $14,000 short in two years. Let the people think of these things when they select candidates for office this summer.

A GOOD MEMORY

often saves money and also good health If you are troubled with constipation, indigestion or any form of stomach trouble remember to take home a bottle of Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and health will be restored to you. Trial sizes 10c (10 doses 10c) large size 50c and $1 F. E. Davenport, druggist.

A MERCHANT LETTER

To Dr. Hartman, President of the Surgical Hotel.

Marshall is a neat little city of 7,000 population in the State of Texas. Among its many enterprsing merchants is Mr. V. E. Wyatt. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, Mr. Wyatt says: "I have been afflicted with lagrippe four times and the last time was worse than the first. I began to think, after trying several remedies without any relief, that the disease could not be cured. Two years ago was the last time I had an attack of it. I decided to try Pe-ru-na and got six bottles The first bottle I took did me more good than all the medicines I had taken before. I recommend Pe-ru-na to all who are suffering with any disease it is advertised to cure. I am well and stout now. I want everybody afflicted as I was to know of the wonderful merits of Pe-ru-na." Unless treated by Pe-ru-na, lagrippe leaves the system in a deplorable condition. It completely demoralizes the nervous system, deranges digestion and disturbs nearly every function of the body. Pe-ru-na is a perfect specific for this condition. It is an admirable remedy for the after effects of lagrippe.

For further testimonials, see book entitled "Facts and Faces," sent free by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

PROFIT IN CHICKENS.

SEDAN, Ind. March 21, 1898.

EDITOR COURIER:

As you had an egg story last week I will give you one for this week. From March 1st 1897 to March 1st 1898 I kept account of eggs each day from about 100 hens and at the end of the year I find I have gathered 10,052 eggs or 837 dozen, of this number 125 dozen were used leaving a balance of 712 dozen that sold for $72.56, a fraction over 10c per dozen. By adding 125 dozen more at 10c per dozen makes a total of $85.06 Now we add $12.55 to that for poultry sold, making a total of $97.61. We have no account of feed but we know we are well paid for feed as we do not count the nice spring chicks and fries that are so enjoyable and we should not omit a lot of fertilizer that pays making an average of near $1 per head And have no fancy stock, no fancy coops or a drug store to furnish poultry food. Now poultry men let us hear from some one else.

Well Children

that are not very robust need a warming, building and fat-forming food—something to be used for two or three months in the fall—that they may not suffer from cold.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda supplies exactly what they want. They will thrive, grow strong and be well all winter on this splendid food tonic. Nearly all of them become very fond of it. For adults who are not very strong, a course of treatment with the Emulsion for a couple of months in the fall will put them through the winter in first-class condition. Ask your doctor about this.

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. See that the man and fish are on the wrapper.

Continued!

Within the next few days the shelving and counters must be taken out of the store for the placing of new shelving and counlers. We have no place to move our goods and and we will continue our remodeling sale until workmen overtake us. Our inability to secure a room to move stock into while work is being done has been unfortunate for us, but a blessing to hundreds of customers that have patronized us during this sale, and we can see no other way out of the dilemma but continue the sale as started.

—Dr. Baxter is paying special attention to Diseases of Children also Diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Nervous system. tf

—NEW SUBSCRIBERS, say about forty, can pay us in wood, when the roads become better. Send in the names. We also have a number of old subscribers who pay in wood and when roads get good, they can deliver it.

—Children and adults tortured by burns, scalds, injuries, eczema or skin eiseases may secure instant relief by DeWttt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is the great Pile remedy. By H. B. McCord.

—When you want to buy Hardware or Farm Machinery cheap, don't fail to call at Culbertson & Boland's cheap hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

—Whooping cough is the most distressing malady, but its duratian can be cut short by the use of One Minute Cough Cure, which is also the best known remedy for croup and all lung and bronchial troubles. For sale by McCord.

—The Turnbull is the most durable and lightest running wagon made and Culbertson & Boland Auburn, Ind. will sell you one at a reasonable price. Call and see them before buying.

—What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and biliousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. By H. B. McCord.

—Noble County is bound to serve her swamps as DeKalb county has done. The New Era says. "More than twenty laterals have been surveyed on the Elkhart River ditch to the present date."

—After yeaes of untold suffering from piles, B W. Pursell of Knitersville, Pa., was cursd by using a single box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema, rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this remedy. For sale by H. McCord

—G. A. Meade is back to town again for the first time since he was hurt several weeks ago. His wrist is still swollen some, but is improving and in time will probably be all right.

A thrill of terror is experienced when a brassy cough of croup sounds through the house at night. But the terror soon changes to relief after One Minute Cough Cure has been administered. Safe and harmless for children. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Little Ethel Beadle whose eye was operated on lately by Dr. Buson at Ft. Wayne finds herself getting along without the glasses used to strengthen the eye after operation. She is now having some sickness like lagrippe. After she has recovered from that she will have the other eye treated. We hope to see the little one fullly restored.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbuaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—Mr. Cloy is the first man in town, as far as we have heard, to begin making garden. He has quite a bit of his big lot spaded up, and it looks dry and nice. But it is hardly advisable for the most of us to start in so soon. There will be other kinds of weather yet.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter orbetter way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung trouble that can follow neglected colds. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The big fire at Chicago yesterday on Wabash Ave was in point of the loss of life in the building, the worst they have had since the cold storage building was burned during the World's fair. The loss of life yesterday was greater, being about thirty.

—There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created—they are the ant, the bee and DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the last being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

—J. W. Stroh, of Crawfordsville, Ind., is meeting with fair success here in securing new applications for the Ben Hur court. No person can affort to be without insurance when it can be secured on such reasonable terms. A feature of the Ben Hur insurance is that at the expectancy period your policy is paid up and one half will be paid you in cost, the other half payable at death. Both ladies and gentlemen are eligible to membership. Drop a card to Mr. Stroh and he will explain the matter more fully.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. 25c.

Friday's Daily.

—Miss Mary Beuret returned today from Fort Wayne.

—Mr. and Mrs. Chas C. M. Brown entertain a party at six o'clock dinner this evening.

—John Fretz banged his hand this morning. It huat badly but not seriously.

—Mr Boland says his daughter Mrs Frank Eckhart continues to improve and has ever since they reached Los Angeles.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs and timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, Lesh, Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

The Auburn people who went to Chicago this week are expected home this evening. They are Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Robbins and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hartman. The latter went Tuesday morning and the former on Wednesday morning. They probably saw something of the terrible fire that happened there Wednesday.

—Truth enters the mind through several doors; the eyes, the ears, the mouth the sense of touch. The truth of our claims concerning the goodness of Fox's XXXX Square Wafer Butter Crackers will reach your mind through your mouth. Take a bite and give the facts a chance to convince you. *

Saturday's Daily.

—Ed Koons was over from Garrett today.

—Editor Miner, of Garrett was in the city yesterday.

—Editor Gardner of Butler came over to Auburn yesterday noon.

—Miss Louise Long is at Butler visiting the old neighbors over Sunday.

—Mrs. P. D. West was at Fort Wayne today.

—E. Y. Williamson, of Waterloo, father of Mrs. H. B. McCord was here yesterday.

—John Snyder and wife of Fort Wayne, were in the city a few hours today. They were enroute to Garrett.

—J. E. Rose was able to sit up a little yesterday and the day before. We hope soon to see him out on the streets again.

—There was a big crowd of men at Trout's barn all day today to see the horse buying, which was very lively. Very good prices are being paid.

—Company K now numbers 64 men, the highest number it ever had. The limit of a company under the present military organization is 84.

—Emillius Case of Spencerville was here yesterday. He and H. H. Fates of that place had got into a dispute over some business matters but settled it without going into court.

—Charlie McClellan, wife and little son went up to Chicago Wednesday, together with Ed. Robbins. Today all go up to Rhinelander, Wisc., where the new hoop factory is to be located.

—J. J. Martin, of Albion was over here today. He was on his way to Columbia City and South Whitley to meet his wife and her sister Mrs. Steve Martin who are just home from a visit with relatives in Ohio.

While in Chicago Walter Hartman called on Dr. Louis Falk the pipe organist and others to assist in completing the specification for the Presbyterian pipe organ. The specifications will be submitted to several organ maunfacturers and the trustees will give the contract to the lowest bidder.

—The Presbyterian C. E. meeting at the home of Mrs. Barns, was well attended last evening and all seemed to enjoy themselves well, including the fruit lunch the young ladies had provideded. The only drawback was the hard rainstorm that kept pouring down and in part of which they had to find chances to get home.

– Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hartman and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Robbins came home lass evening from Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. H. saw a part of the great fire in which so many lives were lost. Mr. Hartman himself was at Lyon & Healey's just across the street when the fire broke out. After viewing the scene for a little space, he went over to the Great Northern, near by for his wife, and when they got back, the police had drawn a line to prevent people from coming close. So they were luckily spared the sight of people jumping from windows to certain death. But they saw some of the victims carried away. It was a terrible experience.

—Our townsman, D. A. Garwood, not only has one of the handsomest, and most convient residences in the city, but has the prettiest lawn to be seen anywhere. His is the genuine lawn grass and as much pains have been taken to keep the yard level it now presents a magnificent appearance. Would all the lawns in town looked so handsome.

—Mr. Saxton will try and do as much of the work of assessing as he can, though his health is quite poor. He calls the special attention of the people to the new features of the dog tax law, which we recently published. People are required to pay their dog tax direct to the assessor when he calls to assess the other property. It will make the ownership of a dog a pretty expensive luxury.

—The Waterworks specifications which were printed at this office have been completed and were sent out today. The date of letting the contract is Wednesday April 20th at 8 p. m. On that date over one hundred bidders are expected here. Our hotels will not be able to accommodate all these people.

Monday's Daily.

—Charles Callahan the regular line man of the Postal Telegraph came over from Albion to save the pole that stands in the water at the east end of the new bridge. It is right in the whirl of waters that cut away the embankment and though deep in the ground, it began to loosen and get tottery. Mr. Callahan fixed it up and tayed it with guy wires, so as to keep t up till the waters subside, and he will then streng hen it permanently

—There will be a big auction sale April 15, at the late residence of Samuel Grill in Springfield township, Allen, Co. at which the Administrator, Wm. Nelson, will sell a large amount of personal property, including stock, farm tools, carpenter tools, household goods, steam planer, lumber and many other things. Phil Car, of Ligonier, will be the auctioneer. Remember the date.

—A letter from Frank Myers at Toledo, brings a handsome remittance to the COURIER and the word that his family are well although they have passed through the grip which has prevailed in that town this season. He is still employed with the Simmons Boot & Shoe Co.

—Today the sun "crossed the line" that is it has come as far north as the equator, or as far as Auburn is concerned it rises and sets on a line with Seventh Street. At least that is the contract under which it has been working. Notice the next sunset and see that old Sol is living up to his bargain.

—The smokestack at the jail blew over in the high wind that came with the big rain early Saturday morning and a large part of it hangs over and will have to be repaired soon.

—Maj. Kuhlman reports a rainfall during Friday night of 2.15 inches and 2.40 inches for that 24 hours. That is the heaviest since the 24 hours in July '96, when the wheat was so badly injured. Then it showed 2.60 inches.

—When you want to buy a Binder, Mower, Wagon, Buggy, Plow, Harrows, Cultivator or any other tool used on the farm don't fail to see Culbertson & Boland, cheap hardware merchants, Auburn, Ind.

—Train up your hired girl in the way she should go Teach her at the start to take nothing but Fox's XXXX Square Butter Crackers when you send her for crackers. *

—When our government decided recently to buy a big lot of rifles and ammunition abroad, congress hastened to pass a law admitting it free of duty. At once the demo cratic members began to ask why they did not let the duty stay and let the "foreigner pay it." Dingley, the author of the tariff law, jumped up and said "everybody agrees that if we buy goods abroad the purchaser and consumer have to pay the duty." So the truth is out at last

Mrs. E. Sherwood, C. M. Phillips and W. F. C. Francis are among the Waterloo people who came down this forenoon.

—Mrs. Albert Teters died last night at her home in Garrett of lung fever. She leaves seven small children. The funeral will be on Wednesday and interment at Auburn.

—Wm. McKinley was in town today.

—Wm. Carr don't find the muddy roads too much for him and he gets to town about every day.

—Perry Fair has moved south. We suppose to Fort Wayne. The goods were shipped Saturday.

—Mrs. T. J. Cuppy has been visiting friends at Butler a few days this week.

—Capt. Braden of Ligonier died at his home there March 18 at the age of 74. He was a prominent veteran of the late war and will be well remembered by all the old 30th Indiana boys.

—The two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Jacobson of Goshen, fell into a tub of hot soap suds Saturday and was badly scalded. So bad were the injuries to the poor child's back and arms that the skin has peeled off all over the entire surface.

—The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C Shiffer will be interested in learning that they have moved from Leipsic, Ohio to Tecumseh, Mich. We presume he has some position on the railroad there.

—A. Lewis still receives encouraging letters from Mrs. Lewis and Harry now in Florida. Harry continues to improve although both are a little homesick, they are going to stay for some time yet and give the climate a fair trial. They may move to another part of the state to get the benefit that usually results from a change of location.

—Mr. Leedy expects to move his family to Ft. Wayne about next week and make that city their home. He will stop traveling for the Journal and take charge of its advertising department which will give him a chance to be at home. We greatly regret to see Mr. and Mrs. Leedy leave Auburn. They are a pleasant couple and will leave many friends here.

At a recent meeting of telephone people the business of independent companies was discussed. Geo. W. Beers of the Ft. Wayne Telephone Co. says his company has 2,875 phones in use in the seven counties in this part of the state. All independent companies seem to be at war with the Bell Company, as there are 137 town in the state now using other lines. The independent companies have 4,800 miles of wire along roads, besides the wires in the towns.

—There has not been an Opera Company for some six or seven years in Auburn or any of our adjoining cities The Mackay Company will be here April 1.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Mrs. John Baxter is reported quite sick again.

—Miss Diehl of Butler is a guest in family of Clerk Long.

—Mrs. Clinton Potter and little girl are quite sick.

—Geo. Campbell's baby is better today Dr. Baxter thinks.

—We acknowledge many pleasant calls from the democratic committeemen who were here today.

—With the meeting of two parties, democrats and populists in the town today, the streets looked pretty lively.

—Alpheus McClellan and wife are the parents of a girl born this morning. Dr. Baxter was the attending physician.

—Ed Kelham of Garrett was a most welcome caller today and has thanks for a handsome remittance to '99. He reports the roads almost impassable.

—Miss Minnie Finch of Corunna is in town a guest in the family of I. O. Bachtel. She came over yesterday to attend the meeting last evening of the Rathbone Sisters, she being a member.

—Mrs. E. D. Beadle and little girl went to Ft. Wayne today to have the child's other eye treated. The one first treated has done splendidly and they think it now safe to treat the other.

—In pioneer days we used to think we must have a big storm every time the sun "crossed the line." Now, it seems to be crossing the line every day or two for several weeks.

—The commissioners were at the poor farm yesterday to take a list of the property. They found things in pretty good shape and are well suited with Mr. Bartles' work. There are some minor changes they may make in the near future.

—Two horses for sale cheap, for cash. Inquire of Dr. Adams, north Main-st., Auburn.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Chris Ashelman went to Ft. Wayne today.

—Ed. Ross is nursing a sore hand, the result of a hurt while at work. It is not serious, however, and will give him a chance to rest up.

—The two new cruisers we bought of Brazil have been given new names. The Amazonas will be called the New Orleans, and the Abreuall will be the Albany.

—I have a buyer for a $500 or $600 house, in southwest part. Will pay $300 down. What have you to sell? Must be a bargain. d&wtf

WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—Angola had quite a deputation of attorneys here yesterday, J. A. Woodhull and Senator Gilbert, Frank Powers and Cyrus Cline, all being engaged in the Steel Range case, noted elsewhere.

—J. Beuret announces in this week's WEEKLY COURIER a new stock of Farm Implements which he will handle this year. He has the agency for the celebrated Osborne machinery which is recognized to be among the best.

—Our friend Mike Lumm went through town on the Wabash the other day. He never fails to come out and look over the old home, whether the train slacks up or not.

—Evergreen cemetery assessment No. 7 is now due. Lot owners are requested to settle promptly. By order of directors.

F E. DAVENPORT, Sec'y.

Sid. Cool came up from Logansport yesterday and goes home today. He says the family are all well except his father has some rheumatism. Mrs. McQuiston is better and is now at home.

—The democratic county committee met here yesterday, though very little business was done, as the the roads are so bad that nearly one third of the members were absent. The meeting therefore adjourned to meet two weeks later, on April 5.

—Mrs. Mattie Walters who has been with her folks, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Moody for a couple of weeks, has been sick about all the time. The trouble is some form of malarial fever. She had hoped to have a visit with her young friends, but so far has hardly been able to leave the house.

—The storks have been kind to Auburn people for the past year or two. Every physician seems to have an especial one in service. And the DAILY COURIER reports all of them. The latest one is the girl baby reported by Mrs. Swartz at A. G. Loderwicks. But the blessed bird is hovering over other happy homes in Auburn.

—A correspondent from Kentucky says a number of farmers planted their corn the 9th and 10th of this month and others will plant soon. Potatoes were planted in February. Rabbits are very numerous and have destroyed considerable of the growing wheat crop.

—The annual M. E. conference will convene at Hartford City to morrow. Bishop Fowler will preside. Statistics of the conference show the membership to be 50,980 with 477 churches valued at $1,500,000. The conference annually raises $46,000 for church work.

—Miss Rhodes, of Bay City, Mich., the lady who has been with the Trentman Sisters as trimmer, will arrive in the city Friday, after spending three weeks in the wholesale millinery establishment at Grand Rapids familiarizing herself with the latest styles in millinery.

CASTORIA.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

CARNIVAL

The Subscription has been Completed by the Committee

Today the soliciting committee for the 1898 Carnival composed of A. C. Robbins, H. R. Culbertson and Geo. L. Lanning, finished their work so far as it can be done now.

They were very successful and have $857 in good subscriptions, and about $100 additional can be raised later. With the $161 on hand we have a fund $1018 for the '98 Carnival.

A meeting of the subscribers will be held in the Court House room Tuesday evening (24) at 7:30 to elect a Board of Directors. The Board elected then select officers to manage the coming Carnival. In this manner the stockholders decide who shall handle the fund raised by them.

COURT.

The Steel Range case came up in court here yesterday the points in question being before the judge alone, as it was an injunction case. The Economic Furnace Co. of Marion Indiana were plaintiffs and asked for an injunction to restrain the St. Louis Iron Range Co. from interfering with their business. Woodhull & Gilbert of Angola appeared for the Marion Co. and claim that the St. Louis Co. which is a very wealthy one with large capital and established in 1864, sends its men and teams out to follow up the Marion people and sell a similar stove or range and try to keep the Marion people from making sales. They claim that two of the St. Louis men will be put on track of each Marion man, one to be on hand during the day and the other during the night, and see that the rival house makes no sale. The name of the Marion stove or range is similar to that of the St. Louis Co. So, the St. Louis people claim they have no right to sell a stove so near like theirs in build and name. Hence they claim the Marion people are infringing on heir rights and they propose to follow them up and break them up financially. They have already broken up saveral other similar firms in this way, firms that have tried to sell a similar range by sending men out on the road. The fight is a big one and rather complicated. In the afternoon Mr. Powers on behalf of the St. Louis Co. asked to have the case taken to the United States court. The judge took it under advisement.

He concluded to let them take it to the U. S. Court. The case came here from Steuben county. Today, but little was done and court adjourned over till tomorrow.

Much other odds and ends of work has been completed.

Conrad Lumm vs Mary Phillips mechanics lien, plaintiff gets $19 and order to foreclose the lien.

The case of Margaret E. Barton estate vs John E. Lung, the plaintiff gets judgment of $357.

ED BAKER'S DOZEN.

It was several dozen, however. On Monday Ed Baker, at his bakery on West 8th street made 505 loaves of bread. He had to bake that day both for himself and Chris Bauer. Mr. Bauer took 190 loaves leaving Mr. Baker 315. Tuesday evening they were all gone and as Mr. Bauer had baked that day he had to begin about six o'clock to get bread of Mr. Bauer. This great consumption of the staff of life shows that our people do not do much of their own baking and proves also that our bakers make acceptable bread.

—Charlie Weaver now takes a push cart to bring express from the Lake Shore. The sidewalks are better than soft roads.

WOULD CHOOSE FOR HERSELF.

QUEEN WILHELMINA has a mind of her own. It is not often that a girl jilts a prince with a million quarterings and a trunk full of titles. It is not often she gets a chance. She could not afford to jilt a prince if she were at all ambitious. This is just what the girl queen of Holland has done, however. It is seldom that love has anything to do with it and the marriage is often arranged without the consent of the princess being sought. The arrangements for the wedding of Queen Wilhelmina were made along the regulation lines that have obtained in European courts for a century. Nothing was overlooked with the exception of the girl queen herself. When she learned that her mother, the queen regent, had chosen her cousin, Prince Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar, as a husband for the Queen of Holland there was rebellion right away. Wilhelmina kicked over the traces and said she would never marry her cousin. There is consternation in the palace of the Dutch court. Wilhelmina is showing that she is not going to be a doll Queen of Holland. She is not going to accept anyone to be her life companion. She has wept in her mother's arms and begged the queen regent not to press the suit of Prince Bernhard. She has also said she would not marry the prince even if her throne depended upon it.

QUEEN WILHELMINA.

The Other Half.

The "other half" of which one-half of the world is said to know nothing might be the very rich rather than the poor, says the New York Times. The poor cannot conceal themselves from investigating eyes. The rich, while they are in a way much before the public, may be comparatively little known. The world might be surprised if it knew something of the character and good works of many of the people of whom it knows only as connected with some society function.

"The women of the most beautiful characters I have ever known," says a woman who knows, "are in the upper classes of New York society. They belong in the most select circles, what is known as the 'howling swells.' They are women of great wealth, who are always invited to all the most fashionable functions. They may accept for the sake of their children or for some other reason. Certainly not because society is their only thought. They are women of broadest sympathies; women whose one thought from the time they arise in the morning until they go to bed at night is to do their duty conscientiously."

Curfew for Married Men.

The very latest curfew idea comes from Waycross, Ga., where a demand is made that the bell shall ring for the coming home of married men rather than of the children. The ladies had been engaged in a discussion of the law to clear the streets of the youngsters who made the night hideous and the movement had gained considerable headway when a local paper suggested that there was more need of corralling the fathers of the family than of chasing down the little children. The suggestion took at once. Those married men who are known as bon vivants were at first inclined to laugh at the proposition, but it has been agitated until now the very seriousness with which their wives have taken it up causes them considerable annoyance.

Miss Christine Bradley.

Daughter of the Governor of Kentucky, who christened the battleship bearing the name of that State.

Cook to Catch Husbands.

Cooking to catch husbands is the object of a new and nameless club which, it is rumored, has recently been formed by a dozen St. Louis girls. Only unmarried women are eligible and the by-laws are said to prescribe two things:

First—Each member must try to catch a St. Louis man for a husband within a year.

Second—Each member must learn to cook three dishes better than they can be cooked anywhere else in town.

What these dishes shall be is left to the selection of each member, i. e., they are supposed to be the favorite dishes of the mother of the man whom the girl is anxious to catch in the matrimonial net. The man in question is to be invited to little suppers, which the girl is to prepare. Previously she must find out from him what is his mother's favorite delicacy. Once a month the club meets, and the various dishes that have been served are discussed as to their efficacy in bringing the eaters thereof to terms.

Kleptomania Brought Home.

"Kleptomania is a disease peculiar to the female sex, and is one to which any woman is susceptible." Such is the startling declaration of a German scientist, presumably learned, who has just published a work on "Kleptomania, Its Causes and Cure." Dr. Frederick Von Kunitz of Berlin is the daring man who has put forth the statement that the majority of women have a natural inclination toward—to put it bluntly—thievery. According to the author all women have sown in their poor, weak moral nature the seeds of theft. These pernicious germs, he calmly maintains, will sprout and flourish like beanstalks unless nipped in the bud.

Woman's Sphere.

They talk about a woman's sphere,
As though it had a limit;
There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whisper'd yes or no,
There's not a life, or death, or birth,
That has a feather's weight or worth,
Without a woman in it.

Treatment for Sleep.

A cloth dipped in cold water and bound around the back of the neck, just at the base of the brain, will often produce sleep when all else fails. Do not resort to the use of drugs for sleeplessness. The relief is only temporary, and often a habit is acquired that is very hard to overcome.

Thumb Worth $75,000.

Inez Carusi, one of the greatest of harpists, has lost the use of her thumb, and has valued it at $75,000 in the suit she has brought against the Metropolitan Railway Company of New York. A street car gave a jerk while she was standing on the rear platform and she was pitched out on the track in front of a car coming in the opposite direction. Her head was cut open in several places, her jaw was broken, front teeth broken, and there were many injuries to her body. Most serious was the injury to her thumb, which will prevent her from ever again playing a harp. The right thumb was broken in two pieces. The tip of the thumb was pierced between the forefinger and second finger, and her wrist was injured badly. Now all her power is gone. For such a small thing as a thumb a woman has lost her profession. That is why $75,000 is asked of the Metropolitan Railroad Company.

MISS INEZ CARUSI.

Ink Spots.

When ink has been spilled upon linen, try dipping the spots in hot melted tallow. The hot tallow seems to absorb the ink, and after washing it the stains will be found to have entirely disappeared.

A Hint to Guests.

A guest should always be careful to keep her own room in perfect order, so that no extra work is made for the hostess or the servants.

THESE ARE CLEVER INSECTS.

Female Ants Whose Toilets Are Arranged by Maids.

We well know enough that ants are the most advanced of all the insect world, that they can talk to one another, and have regular laws and regulations in their tiny colonies.

But the last discovery about them is, perhaps, the most astonishing of all.

A naturalist has been making observations on their toilet, and has discovered that each insect goes through a clearing process as elaborate as that of a cat, only never performed by herself, but by another, who acts for the time as lady's maid.

Ants of the genus "atta" were the subject of these observations. These, he found, slept in relays for about three hours. When they woke up they would stretch their limbs just like warm-blooded animals; under the microscope, he could even watch them yawn. Then begins the toilet.

The assistant starts by washing the face of her companion, and goes on to the thorax and legs. The attitude of the cleansed one is one of intense satisfaction, resembling a dog or cat when his head is being scratched. She lies down with all her limbs stretched loosely out; she rolls over on her side, even her back, a perfect picture of ease. The pleasure the creature takes in being thus combed and sponged is really enjoyable to the observer.—Science.

There Was No Assault.

"You can testify to the assault of this defendant on the person of this boy, can't you?" asked the attorney of the witness in the justice court.

"Doan 'spec I cud, suh."

"Well, do you swear that you saw the assault?"

"Nossuh, kent swar dat, boss."

"What! I thought you were present when the trouble occurred."

"I wur, jedge, an' they wurn't no 'saultin' done."

"Well, what was done?"

"Why, dattar woman, Lindy Brown, jes' nachully busted de boy open wid a six-foot plank."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

TOPSY-TURVY.

This it is that puzzles me—
How the little Japanee,
'Way beyond the great salt sea,
In the land of silk and tea,
Is just opposite to me!
Both are standing on the ground,
And the earth between is round!

O, I cannot help but frown,
For perhaps I'm upside down,
And our peaceful little town
And its church and steeple brown
Also are all upside down!

No, I will not think 'tis I
Who am hanging in the sky—
I much rather think 'tis he,
The funny little Japanee.

BIRD VOICES.

The resonance in the voices of birds varies very much. A blackbird can be heard singing about half a mile, and a thrush at a little less. The long wailing scream of a curlew, on the other hand, may be heard on a calm day for two and even three miles over the flat salt-marshes, and the redshank has nearly as far-reaching a voice. Little songsters, like the wren, cannot be heard two hundred yards away, and even a robin's voice does not carry very far. The hoarse croak of a carrion crow can be heard about a quarter of a mile, and rooks can be heard when they are almost out of sight in the heavens.

THE CHILD'S FAITH IN HIS MOTHER.

A little fellow, disputing with his sister, said: "It's true; for mother says so; and if mother says so, it is so, if it ain't so."

Another boy, not more than seven years old, hearing a gentleman at his father's table discussing the familiar line, "An honest man's the noblest work of God," declared he knew this was not true, for his mother was better than any man that ever was made!

You must never, if you would avoid serious mistakes, send a verbal message by a child; for children are apt to translate the message into their own language, and give it a different shape from that intended. A teacher, who had left a book on the desk of a colleague, sent one of her pupils for it, and he abruptly asked for it thus: "My teacher wants her book; you have got it in your desk!" From his tone and look you would have thought the lady had stolen it. A little girl, who was sent to a chemist's to purchase some dye-stuff, forgot the name of the article, and said to the chemist: "What do folks dye with?" "Die with? Why, cholera, sometimes." "Well, then," said she, "that is what I want; give me three pennyworth!"

I have always admired the cleverness of a boy who was sent by his master to Dean Swift with his compliments and a fine salmon. The lad came in abruptly and said: "Here is a fish from my master," and was about to make off, when the Dean stopped him. "Is that the way to deliver a message?" said he. "Now, you take my place, and I shall show you how to act." The boy did so; then the Dean, cap in hand, came in with the salmon, and, making a reverential bow, said: "My master sends his respectful compliments to your reverence, and desires you to accept this small token of his regard for you!" "Good!" said the boy, "and here is a shilling for your pains!" That was certainly an Irish boy, who inherited the genius of his race; and his lesson to the Dean was as good as the Dean's to him.

THE KITTEN AND THE PELICAN.

Behind a big old-fashioned house, in a large city, there lived a large pelican. The bird was allowed the liberty of the yard, around which he would walk sedately. He could not fly far, and he had lived there so long that he seemed content to stay.

One day, when the pelican was taking his morning exercise, a little kitten from a neighbor's yard came strolling along the fence. When she first saw the big bird her eyes opened in wonder, her tail grew big, and her hair stood out. But presently, as the pelican did not hurt her, she became used to him, and jumped down into the yard to investigate.

Now, whether the pelican happened to be in a lively mood, and wanted a game of play with somebody, or whether he remembered the way his father used to catch fish by throwing them up in the air and catching them again, while he was a little nestling and lived in a tree beside a river, I don't know. But the pelican picked up the little kitten, and, giving it a toss in the air, opened its huge mouth as if to catch it as it came down.

Puss seemed to think it was rather good fun. With a quick motion she turned over, and came to the ground on her feet. Then she scampered around Mr. Pelican's legs, nearly upsetting him. He turned, made another grab at the little cat, and gave her another toss. Down came Kitty again landing safely on the grass, not at all frightened at this new rough companion. She seemed to enter into the sport of the thing, and stood still to be tossed as if she rather liked it.

The pelican got tired first. His master came out of the house with a good dinner of fish for him. He picked up a fish, gave it a toss, and caught and swallowed it. Puss, who was looking on with open eyes, came in for a share of the pelican's dinner, and they have been the best of friends ever since.

HOW THE TWINS CAUGHT THE DOCTOR.

Ben came down the back steps with a stamp and a slam, just as Rob had succeeded in tugging Cousin Joe's big double runner out of the barn.

"She says we can't have it," he announced crossly. "She says, if Aunt Mary's a mind to let us when she gets back, why, all right. But she can't take the 'sponsibility."

"Huh! Who wants her to?" asked Rob, dropping the rope in disgust. "She isn't going to get hurt. Grandmothers don't know everything, anyhow."

The twins sat down side by side on the double-runner. They gazed wistfully along the straight, icy hill that began at their gate, dropped steadily for almost half a mile, and straightened out for another half mile beside the river. It was the longest coast in town, and in perfect condition.

"There'd be time for two slides before supper," grumbled Rob.

"Yes. And to-morrow's Saturday and Aunt Mary won't get home until night," added Ben. "It'll probably rain, and spoil it all, anyhow."

At last, deciding to make the best of it, the twins got up and built a fat snow man. Then they found relief for their rumpled tempers by pelting him to pieces, until it grew dark and Nora called them in to supper.

They didn't enjoy their meal as much as usual, however; for grandma was up-stairs most of the time, taking care of baby Alice, who had been sick more than a week, and who was worse to-night. The twins felt that, even if grandmothers don't know everything, it was rather pleasant to have one around. Just as they were finishing their cookies in silence, grandma hurried through the dining-room with an anxious face. They heard her tell Nora to run for Doctor Brown, and they heard Nora hurry down the steps and out of the yard.

Now, the doctor lived in the very next house down the hill, with only Aunt Mary's field in between. So Nora was back in a few minutes. But the twins knew from her look, as she ran into the dining-room, that she had not found the doctor.

"Oh, mum," she gasped, as soon as she saw grandma, "the doctor was driving out of his yard just as I got to our gate. He turned down the hill and I ran and called; but I couldn't make him hear. Oh, what shall we do?"

The twins didn't wait for anything more. Catching up their caps and mittens, they rushed out into the yard where they almost tumbled over the double-runner, standing as they had left it. The same idea flashed into both heads at once. Without a word, Ben settled himself in the steerer's seat, with his feet against the bracers, and wound the steering ropes around his hands. Rob gave a running push, and leaped on behind, and in a few seconds they had rattled down the icy driveway, slewed around into the street, and started in hot pursuit of the doctor.

The bright moonlight showed them the sleigh nearing the bottom of the hill. But the double-runner rattled and swayed along the icy track, gaining speed every second. Now the sleigh left the hill, and darted along the level road. The twins were half way down, and still flying faster. Soon they could hear the jangle of the sleighbells above the rattling of their runners. Now, they, too, left the slope, and began spinning along the level, gaining fast upon the sleigh.

As the bits of ice thrown up by the horse's flying feet began to spatter in Ben's face, "Hi! doctor!" he called out. "Go back——"

But, before he could finish, the double-runner tore past the sleigh like a race horse. Rob turned quickly in his seat at the end, and shouted back the rest of the message:—

"It's our baby. Please go quick!"

Rob saw the doctor turn, and start up the hill again.

"It's all right. He's going," he called to Ben.

Then the twins waited for the double-runner to slow up and let them off.

When they got back into the yard again, some twenty minutes later, the doctor was just coming out of the door.

"She'll get along nicely now," they heard him say to some one inside. "But it was lucky you thought of that double-runner."

And, when the twins came into the kitchen, grandma drew them close to her, one on each side, and put her arm around them. Grandma's voice was always a little shaky; but it trembled more than usual, as she said,—

"I don't know what I should do if anything happened to you; but if you want ever so much to coast to-morrow——"

"Oh, I guess we can stand it till Aunt Mary comes," said Ben, with a smile.

"Yes," added Rob, looking at his red hands. "It's too hard work pulling it back, anyhow."

How Gypsies Elect.

Tzigane tribes in Hungary elect their chiefs every seven years. The election of these "voivodes," as they are termed, takes place by universal suffrage. As soon as the name of the successful candidate is proclaimed he is applauded; the musicians of the tribe play and sing and a silver crown, the insignia of his office, is placed on the chief's forehead. Then he is presented with a plate of meat, ornamented with flowers, and a bottle of wine, which he drinks at once, after which he breaks the bottle. Then the new chief delivers a long speech to his tribe, and recommends them to respect the laws of their nation, after which every member of the tribe shakes hands with the new "King," and promises obedience to his orders. The selection winds up with an elaborate feast and dancing.

Among themselves the Tziganes speak their native language, which contains a number of foreign words. Like the North American Indians, they join to their family name another name, which corresponds to the character of the individual. They have an extraordinary aptitude for learning other languages; but their pronunciation is always strange and full of guttural sounds.—New York Times.

"In the Soup."

This expression comes from the German, some say, but its birth as slang took place at a game of baseball between New York and Chicago in June, 1888, at the Polo Grounds, in New York.

It seems that the members of the Chicago team had made themselves conspicuous by marching about the field before the game in dress suits and had consequently been dubbed "waiters" by the bleachers crowd.

The game was a disastrous one for the visiting team. They suffered a defeat by the ignominious score of 19 to 2. At the close an enthusiastic New York rooter yelled, "The waiters have fallen into the soup!"

This took the fancy of the excited crowd and was shouted all over the grounds. The newspapers repeated it in the accounts of the game and the theaters promptly took it up.—New York World.

SUBMARINE MINES.

What These Destructive Forces Are and How They Are Exploded.

Submarine mines have been much talked of since the Maine disaster, but comparatively few persons know anything about the laying or operating of these destructive forces, or of their uses. Mines were used extensively by the Confederates during the civil war, and the Germans made good use of them in keeping the French fleet from bombarding her ports during the Franco-Prussian war. Great improvements have been made recently, however, and the introduction of high explosives for use instead of gunpowder has greatly increased the power and defensive range of mines. These mines are solely for harbor defense and are particularly useful in this country. With an extensive coast and many large seaports, a country like this must resort to every possible means to keep the enemy beyond bombarding distance. This latter function may, in many cases, be performed by submarine mines alone. Foreign battleships draw from twenty to thirty feet of water. They cannot maneuver recklessly in entering the ship channels leading to our seaports, but they must stick to the middle of the channel if they enter at all. When, therefore, the outer entrance to the ship channel is beyond bombarding distance of a city it may be possible to plant such a system of mines that an enemy cannot pass.

ELECTRO-CONTACT MINE.

EXPLOSION OF 100 POUNDS OF MORTAR POWDER.

There are several kinds of submarine mines. The simplest form is the contact mine, which consists of an iron case (A), containing the explosive charge, and a cable (C) attaching it to the sinker (D), by which it is held in place. The case (A) has a number of projecting points (B), each armed with a firing pin. If a ship hits one of these firing pins the latter will be driven in, exploding a percussion cap, and the charge will then burst. The distance of the charge (A) below the surface must be so regulated that it may not be too near the surface when the tide is low, nor too far below the surface when the tide is high. An immersion of at least eight feet is necessary to give the charge the force to destroy a modern ship.

SCHOONER BLOWN UP BY TORPEDO.

The "electro-contact mine" is constructed on the same general plan as the contact mine, but some of the weaknesses of the latter are removed. The firing pins (B), instead of exploding a percussion cap when driven in, simply close one break in an electric circuit passing through the charge. There is an electric cable (C. C.) leading from the charge to the anchor (D), and thence to the station on shore, where there is another break in the electric firing circuit. Unless this latter break in the circuit is also closed at the shore station the firing pin, when driven in, will not explode the mine. Herein is an element of safety to friendly ships. When no enemy is in sight and friendly ships are passing in and out, the break is left open at the shore station, so that a mine if struck will not explode.

A CONTACT MINE.

The contact, electro-contact and observation mines can only be used in comparatively shoal water and in places where the current is not very strong. When the depth of water is considerable, or when the current is rapid, "ground mines"—heavy mines similar in construction to the others, but resting on the bottom—must be used. Ground mines have been planted in sixty-five feet of water. For this depth a charge of about 1,200 pounds of guncotton, equivalent to 4,800 pounds of gunpowder, should be used. The method of firing the ground mine is very simple and ingenious. The mine is held in position on or near the ground by a heavy anchor or sinker. Two observers are usually employed to determine when the enemy is directly over the mine. The mine is then exploded by means of electric cables.

THE RAM KATAHDIN.

The Powerful U. S. Turtle-back Ship Recently Placed in Commission.

The belief prevails among naval officers that in a naval fight the country would be electrified with the havoc caused among the enemy's fleet by such a vessel as the Katahdin. No modern vessel of this kind has ever been used in actual warfare, and, in fact, the Katahdin is about the only craft of her kind in the world. She resembles the old-style ram Merrimac only in the use of armor, the employment of steam power and the pointed steel prow.

THE RAM KATAHDIN IN ACTION.

The Katahdin has a length on the load water line of 250.9 feet and her beak or ram, which is below the water line, gives her an extreme length of about 254 feet. Other statistics of the vessel are: Displacement under normal coal supply, 2,155; tonnage, 582; extreme breadth, 43.5 feet; mean draught, 15 feet; indicated horse power, 5,068; speed, 16.11 knots; capacity of coal bunkers, 192.70 tons. The Katahdin is propelled by twin screws. Her full complement consists of 90 men.

The most peculiar feature of the Katahdin is her concealment under water. Only her smooth turtle back, covered with armor plate and surmounted simply by a small conning tower and a smokestack are visible. The tower is made of steel 18 inches thick, and unless squarely hit by a heavy shot at close range, is proof against any attack. Aside from her dangerous sharp beak of steel and her covering of armor plate the Katahdin is equipped with slight means of offensive or defensive character. She carries four six-pound, rapid-firing guns, which are intended as defense against torpedo boats or boarders. Her speed is low, hardly higher than that of a battleship; but with her tremendous momentum and powerful propelling force behind a sharp steel prow the Katahdin is calculated to do a lot of mischief among the enemy's fleet. The ram, being situated below the water line, is directed at the most vulnerable part of a battleship or cruiser, where armor is either thin or altogether wanting.

WHY SHE IS A HERMIT.

Melodramatic Story of the Life of a Kentucky Woman.

If the story of Polly Blake, the woman hermit, who lives in a forest twelve miles from Bardstown, Ky., were written up as fiction the verdict would be that it was improper and melodramatic. In 1835 Polly Andrews was engaged to a young farmer named Stephen Letton. During the summer a stranger of the name of Thomas Blake made his appearance on the scene and cut young Letton out of Polly's affections. Letton did not seem to mind his jilting and remained a warm friend of the Blakes after Polly's marriage. About a year later both men started on a journey together to what is now known as West Virginia. Before the men separated Letton borrowed money from Blake and a day later Blake left the house of the drover where they had both spent some time. The night following Blake's departure the drover's house was entered, robbed of $1,800 and the inmates murdered. The assassin then set fire to the house. Blake was put under surveillance. The detectives shadowed him for months. One day he paid out a bank note with a stain in one corner. The stain proved to have been human blood and he was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. In vain he protested that the money had been paid by him Letton for the debt of some months back. Blake died in the penitentiary. A few years after his death Stephen Letton, on his deathbed, confessed the crime. His motives were purely those of revenge. He had never forgiven Blake for supplanting him in the affections of the woman he loved. Then Mrs. Blake went into the wilderness to live. She has lived in her lonely cabin in the forest for the last fifty years.

POLLY BLAKE AND HER CABIN.

GENERAL ROSECRANS.

Was One of This Country's Most Picturesque Soldiers.

General William Stark Rosecrans, who died recently at his home, near Los Angeles, Cal., was one of the most picturesque soldiers ever produced by the United States. He will be known in history as a soldier only, although as a citizen he deserved highly of his countrymen. As a man and a citizen it may be said that few Americans lived a more useful life or were less selfish in taking their part of the public burden. Born and reared in the East, the General became fascinated with the climate of California and decided that he would spend the last years of his life in the golden State. Its people often besought him to help them administer their affairs. But he always declined these honors, which he regarded as the rewards of past services. He might have been Governor of the State and have occupied other lofty offices that were freely offered him. No American in California had more honors than "old Rosy" in his last days.

GENERAL ROSECRANS.

The King of the Woods.

Very few persons ever visit the southern portion of the United States and become at all familiar with its woodland life without being captivated by that prince of singers, the mocking bird. Not only as a musician, but in general "smartness," he is far and away ahead of anything else that flies. He is the "Yankee" among birds. In vivacity, in cleverness, in a quick and dexterous use of his small but brilliant brain, it would be hard to point out his equal. And when in the springtime the woods resound with his clear, flute-like and exultant notes, even the man, if such there be, "who hath no music in his soul," would find it hard to resist the contagious good humor of his glad and gleeful song.

And yet the mocking bird is incorrectly named. He is by no means a natural mimic. Half a dozen birds could be mentioned that in this particular far surpass him. This may seem a very strange thing to say, in view of the stories current so abundantly illustrating and emphasizing this supposed gift.

"Say no more," replied the professor, "say no more. Such a trifle is not worthy of a thought, I assure you."

America's Greatest Medicine

The following is a characteristic Hood's Sarsaparilla testimonial. Facts like these have made Hood's Sarsaparilla America's Greatest Medicine and endeared it to thousands of homes scattered all over this broad land.

"We like to tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for us. Our four children had diphtheria. From the very first our little boy Ralph, then seven years old, was very sick and for several days it seemed as if he would never be any better. After a while he began to improve and in a few weeks was able to go out, although weak and miserable. Then, gradually gave out. The physicians told us it was paralysis, which sometimes follows an attack of diphtheria. We did everything for him, but he grew worse until he was in a pitiful condition. He suffered terribly at night and complained continually of his head, and in what little sleep he was able to get, moaned unceasingly. He lost all control of the muscles of his body and limbs. He had no appetite and complained of feeling sick at his stomach all the time. After we had tried many different remedies and had about given up all hope we commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In a short time he ceased to complain, his appetite improved and at the end of three months he was able to attend school a part of the time. Now he is well and quite a strong and rugged boy. You are at liberty to use this testimonial if you desire, as we feel we cannot say too much in praise of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and building up medicine." MRS. R. E. ANDERSON, Cumberland, Maine.

Economy is also a characteristic of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Every bottle contains 100 Doses, and hence there is a solid fact concisely stated in the familiar line, 100 Doses One Dollar.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

SWIMMING TRICKS.

Floating Is Easy Enough if You Only Know How.

Plain swimming, with its attendant diving, treading water, floating and rolling in the warm sand is quite good enough sport for most young people. But there are a number of tricks and games in swimming which will help to make the sport more fascinating than it is.

Few people realize how very nearly

the human body comes to floating. Drop your arm loosely in the water and it will rest near the surface, buoyed in its place by the pressure of the water. If it were not for the weight of the head in proportion of the weight of the body a man would swim as easily and naturally as a horse or a dog. With these facts in mind, the good swimmer or floater keeps as much of his body under the surface of the water as he can. On the same principle a swimmer may keep himself afloat by holding a very small piece of wood in each hand, providing he allows himself to sink deep into the water in the position shown in the picture. Any boy or girl may readily test this plan. It merely requires a little confidence in letting the body so deep into the water. A big Swede named Stromberg, who made himself famous several years ago as a swimmer, well knew this plan. Sometimes in making long practice swims he took with him a compact piece of cork four or five inches thick. This he fastened to the back of his head by means of a small strap which ran around his chin. When he grew tired and needed a rest he would turn on his back and sink deep into the water. The cork float under his head was almost sufficient to buoy him up.

A boy who falls overboard from a ship, if he keeps cool and does not try to raise himself out of the water, as many frightened people do, can keep afloat for some time by paddling gently, his clothing acting as a float until it becomes well soaked.

One of the greatest sports "in swimming" may be had with a small rubber tube ten or twelve feet long. Two large empty spools should be fastened to the end of the tubes by crowding the rubber into the hole in the middle of each, which has first been enlarged with a jack-knife. The swimmer allows one of the spools to float on the surface of the water or fastens it near a stone or log on shore or next to a stake driven into the water. Then he places the other spool in his mouth and sinks out of sight under the water. Of course he can breathe through the tube and he can remain a considerable length of time without rising to the surface. Any boy will readily imagine the various pranks that may be played with such an invention. It will also be found useful in diving for lost objects.

FOR THE CAMERA FIEND.

Focusing Cloth Which Has Apparent Advantages.

Here is a focusing cloth, the advantages of which are apparent. The old-style focusing cloth, which mussed the hair and would persist in blowing away, has undoubtedly proved a source of annoyance to many a photographer of outdoor subjects. This little help may be very easily made at home, and is not so clumsy to carry as the ordinary square focusing cloth. It is made slightly larger at one end than the ground glass, and an elastic band is sewed in that end. This fits on the camera, and need not be removed during the taking of the picture. An elastic band at the other end holds the cloth against the operator's face. Another advantage is that it is not necessary to use one hand to hold the cloth at the bottom to exclude the light.

It would be worth while to imitate the elephant in his stately quietness.

It would be worth while to imitate the seal in his amiability.

It would be worth while to imitate the trained dog in his patience.

It would be worth while to imitate the bear in his affection.

It would be worth while to imitate the camel in his willingness to assume burdens.

It would be worth while to imitate the horse in his air of good breeding.

It would be worth while to imitate the tiger in his diplomacy.

GAINED 22 POUNDS IN 5 WEEKS.

From the By-Stander, Macomb, Ill.

Alderman Louis W. Camp has astonished his friends by a remarkable gain in weight, having gained 22 pounds in five weeks.

"I was broken down in health," said Mr. Camp to our reporter, "and was so badly afflicted with a form of stomach trouble that life was a veritable nightmare.

"I tried various remedies during the six months of my sickness, but obtained no relief.

"About two years ago I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I purchased one box and received so much benefit that I used five more and was entirely cured. I gained twenty-two pounds in five weeks. Since I stopped taking the pills I have scarcely had an ache or pain. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills restored me to health and I most heartily recommend them."

L. W. Camp on oath says that the foregoing statement is true.

W. W. MELOAN, Notary Public.

Following is the physician's certificate as to Mr. Camp's present condition:

I am a regularly licensed physician of Macomb, McDonough County, Ill. I have very recently examined Mr. L. W. Camp as to his general physical condition, and find the same to be all that could be desired, appetite and digestion good, sleeps well, and has all the evidences of being in a good physical condition.

BED FIT FOR A QUEEN.

One Woman Who Ought to Lie Down to Pleasant Dreams.

The sleeping apartments of Mrs. Ogden Mills, of New York, is the envy of all her friends. Her bed is a throne-like affair that was built in America. After examining beds in the Parisian shops Mrs. Mills decided that they were all lacking in the conveniences and comforts the modern American woman demands for her sleeping hours. So she came home, and of very plain oak her bed was built, the lofty canopy frame put up, the embroideries, ordered from an American needlewoman, hung, and then the great curtains and coverlid were edged with forty pounds of bullion fringe. These requisites for a perfect Marie Antoinette bed brought the price of it up far into the thousands, but the end was not yet.

A wonderful foundation of spiral steel springs first lined the inside of the couch, on the top of this a thin felt mattress was placed, and then on top a hair bed, slipped in a big silken cover, before sheets or blankets or blankets could be laid on. Finally the headboard, decorated by the brush of an American artist, was put into place, and lastly the electrician was called in to give the finishing touches. The good offices of the electrician was not an original idea on the part of Mrs. Mills, for all the new beds, built for comfort as well as beauty, have first of all a tiny button that anyone lying on the pillow can easily reach up, touch and turn on the light in a group of bulbs artistically arranged in the headboard. In Mrs. Mills' bed a couple of gilded Cupids in this board hold each a spray of lights that shed their radiance down softly over the pillow at the exact angle needed for comfortable reading. To make the light perfectly agreeable and easy for the eyes, the globes of glass are first ground and then treated with a varnish that subdues the hard electric glare.

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station

Reasonable success seems to have followed the efforts of the management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all the passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this Great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for Children teething: softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Innocent Children Sacrificed.

The "slaughter of the innocents" continues, until it is estimated that one-fourth of the human race die before attaining their fifth birthday, owing to our rigorous and changeable climate. And there are thousands of adults in this land that stomach complaints are reducing to confirmed invalidism, whom Hostetter's Stomach Bitters would promptly relieve and invigorate.

Mme. Wagner is nothing if not active and possessed of exceptional foresight. Already she has taken time by the forelock and has drawn out the program of the Bayreuth festival for the initial year of the next century. In 1901 will be given an exceptionally grand performance of "The Flying Dutchman," one of Wagner's early operas. The maestro's widow speaks of mounting the work in a style hitherto quite unheard of with any piece that has yet been produced at the Bayreuth "festspielhaus."

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

A Big Price for a Ride.

In the Century there is an article on "The River Trip to the Klondike," by John Sidney Webb. The author says of his trip to the mines: And here let me make a confession: I, with others, rode a horse. No one can imagine what a sensation this created along the creek. No one had ever indulged in such extravagance before. Though a man should wash out twenty thousand dollars in a day, he would be content to walk. But I rode at thirty cents per pound to El Dorado, and thirty cents to return, or 186 pounds for $111.60. They did not, however, put me on the scales like a sack of gold dust. Still, it was cheap, according to an Irishman coming over the summit, who remarked that he had had his goods packed over by Indians. "An' I got it chape," said he. "How much did you pay?" some one inquired. "I don't know," said he. "Then how do you know it was cheap?" "Oh, anything would be chape over that place!" he replied.

DIED FOR ANOTHER'S CRIME.

Hanged for a Murder Committed by Another.

In 1860, in Kankakee, Ill., Wiley J. Morris, a negro, was hanged for the alleged murder of a young white woman named Mary Murphy. Mary's parents lived five miles from Pontiac and she had visited them on a Saturday and was walking back along the railroad track on Sunday when she was murdered. Her body was found lying near the track.

It was proved that Morris was walking along the track a mile behind Mary, at a much faster gait, and must have overtaken her. He had been seen that night in Pontiac, and had then gone to Joliet and then to Michigan, but was sent after and brought back, and he had blood stains on his clothing. His story was that he had had a fight in Bloomington, and had in that way got blood on his clothes. When he was tried one man hung the jury, and then his counsel took a change of venue to Kankakee County, where he was convicted. He was hanged exclaiming: "You murder me; you murder me; you murder me."

In 1862 C. G. Hilderbrand, a celebrated outlaw in the Indiana penitentiary, wrote a history of "Hakweye Bill's gang," and among other exploits gave an account of the killing of Mary Murphy, whom the gang kept in its possession for three days before finally murdering her and laying her body by the railroad track. Those familiar with the case, including the Sheriff of Livingston County, were all convinced of the truth of Hilderbrand's story, and of the innocence of Morris.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Cornhill tells a story of an Englishwoman of high station who bewailed to a friend the loss by death of a somewhat ill-bred but extremely wealthy neighbor who had been very liberal in his help to her country charities. "Mr. X. is dead," said she; "he was so good and kind and helpful to me in all sorts of ways; he was so vulgar, poor, dear fellow, we could not know him in London; but we shall meet in heaven."

The Queen of England owns a dress manufactured entirely of spiders' webs. It was a present from the late Empress of Brazil, who had it specially prepared in her palace by twenty native silk-workers.

The Fullness Thereof.

Amid the discomforts of life and the fullness thereof, reaching to every family, there is that which can so easily mitigate or entirely cure, the wonder is why we endure and suffer so much. From big pains to little aches, which are the wear and tear of the physical structure of man, there are always remedies good, better and best. The choice should be always for best as the surest and the cheapest. In chronic or acute suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica or lumbago, or with the minor ailments of sprains and bruises, or of soreness and stiffness, the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil and the fullness thereof in so many complete and perfect cures make it stand out as the best remedy for pain. Why, then, should we stand on the order of going for it, and not go at once? In numberless cases the aggravations of discomforts and pains are from delay. Why should we suffer?

OVER-WROUGHT NERVES OF WOMEN.

Extracts From Letters Received by Mrs. Pinkham.

"I am so nervous and wretched." "I feel as if I should fly." How familiar these expressions are. Little things annoy you and make you irritable. You can't sleep, you are unable to lift ordinary burdens, and are subject to dizziness.

That bearing-down sensation helps to make you feel miserable.

You have backache and pains low down in the side, pain in top of head, later on at base of the brain.

Such a condition points unerringly to serious uterine trouble.

If you had written to Mrs. Pinkham when you first experienced impaired vitality, you would have been spared these hours of awful suffering.

Happiness will be gone out of your life forever, my sister, unless you act promptly. Procure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and begin its use, then write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., if there is anything about your case you do not understand.

You need not be afraid to tell her the things you could not explain to the doctor, your letter is seen only by women and is absolutely confidential. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with such troubles enables her to tell you just what is best for you, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

MRS. JENNIE BIERLY, Youngdale, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Will you kindly allow me the pleasure of expressing my gratitude for the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking your Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, headache, loss of appetite, a heavy bearing-down feeling, also burning pains in the groins. I could not sleep, was tired all the time, had no ambition. Life was a burden to me. The pains I suffered at times of menstruation were something dreadful. I thought there was no cure for it. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and my husband advised me to try your medicine. I took five bottles, and now I am well and happy. Your medicine saved my life."

5 DROPS [TRADE MARK.]

Rheumatism, La Grippe.

In Better Health Than for the Past Fifty Years.

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago. Dear Sirs:—It is just about one year ago when I first commenced using your "5 DROPS" for Nervous Rheumatism, Catarrh in the head and Bronchitis. I was so bad that I could not eat at all, in bed or anywhere else; my nerves were all in a quiver, and my Liver and Kidneys were all out of order; in fact, I was so bad that I had to raise up in bed from five to twelve times in one night to get my breath and to keep from choking, but to-day I am heartier and in better health than I have been for the past fifty years. Others are using it here with wonderful results and still more calling for it.

Yours truly, GEORGE YEAGER, Portland, Ind., Feb. 18, 1898.

IT IS THE BEST RHEUMATIC MEDICINE ON EARTH.

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago. Gentlemen:—I received the order all right, for which I send thanks. I am still taking the "5 DROPS," and am gaining every day—haven't felt so well for ten years. I have used all kinds of medicines, but have never found anything that has done for me what "5 DROPS" has. Our stage driver brings my medicine to me from Sharon, and he brings it very carefully, for he thinks there is no medicine on earth like "5 DROPS." He is using it for Rheumatism; he has only used it for three weeks and it has done wonders for him. He couldn't harness his horses without sitting down a number of times, and it has stopped all the pain in his limbs. MRS. GEO. H. ROWELL, Stratford, Vermont, Feb. 15, 1898.

"5 DROPS" cures Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Nervous and Neuralgic Headache, Earache, Toothache, Heart Weakness, Croup, Swelling, La Grippe, Malaria, Creeping Numbness.

FOR THIRTY DAYS LONGER to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a sample bottle, prepaid, by mail, for 25 cents. A sample bottle will convince you. Also, large bottles (300 doses) $1.00, 3 bottles for $2.50. Not sold by druggists, only by us and our agents. Agents wanted in new territory. Write us to-day.

TAKE DR. STONE'S NEW DYSPEPSIA CURE

Dyspepsia and Indigestion, the Most Miserable of Diseases—Millions of American People Now Wearing out an Unsatisfactory Life From the Effect of these Troubles—Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is Nature's Own True Remedy—It's Guaranteed.

Truly, a large proportion of the American people are today wearing out a miserable and unsatisfactory life from the effects of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint or Indigestion, Heart Disease, Apoplexy, Consumption, Paralysis, Mental Derangement, Despondency, Suicide, and in fact almost every disease surrounding us today is brought on by deranged Stomach and Liver. With these two organs healthy man's happiness would be complete as far as this world is concerned, and seventy five per cent, of deaths would be avoided until good old age, hence we should watch carefully these two organs, read and study all reliable information connected with them, and be prepared at any time to check all those premonitory symptoms of their chronic disease, such as Offensive Breath, Furred Tongue, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Belching of Wind or Food, Distress in the Stomach and Abdomen, Nausea, milk, acids, sweets, salt, fish, preserves, etc., etc., strong stimulating drinks, and all such abuses of the stomach cause the nervous system to become exhausted and withdraw it's support and influence from the stomach. Over mental work drains the nervous influence from the stomach, and digestion is stopped. Continued overloading of the stomach and habitually piling in, leaving that organ either debilitated or over-excited. The consequences are, that acid, gases, bile and other unhealthy serections accumulate until the patient exclaims: "Oh, I am so sick! Something is wrong with my stomach!" and he has all the distress and affects of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint. The stomach is the first organ generally to cause all our troubles. No medicine was ever prepared better calculated to sweeten the stomach, correct the acidity, to destroy the foul gases and allay the inflammation and excited secretions, and assist the stomach in its digestion, that Dr. Ston's New Dyspepsia Cure; at the same time it starts the liver to working, when all other troubles soon disapear, and a few doses will prove its wonderful adaptability to a diseased stomach. It corrects Acidity of the Stomach stops the fermentation of the food and stimulates digestion, expels foul gases, allays irritation, and acts as a gentle laxative without over stimulating the secretions, and consequently leaves the bowels in a more healthy condition than ordinary remedies.

SILVESTER STONE, M. D.

Loss of Appetite, Faintness of Stomach Waterbrash, or Heartburn, Colic, Imperfect Circulation, Dizziness, Faintness, Debility, Palpitation and Other Heart Troubles, Oppression and Shortness of Breath, Headache, Heaviness of the Head, Ringing in the Ears, Dull Pain Between the Shoulders, Blurred Vision, Costive Bowels, Hard, Knotty and Unsatisfactory Stools, Heavy Load in the Pit of the Stomach, Confused Mind, etc. The mind becomes affected, low spirits, fretfulness and irritability follow quickly until insanity is the result. These Symptoms do not all appear at one time, but any one of them is indication of a disordered Stomach.

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is a positive cure for all form of Indigestion and Stomach Troubles. It heals, invigorates and soothes the stomach when weakened by overeating, or when the lining of the stomach has been affected by injurious medicines.

The Stomach.

The Stomach is the most sensitive organ of all others, and one of the most important, as on it depends the whole human system for its nourishment. It is controlled by the brain and Nervous System indigestible food, the indiscreet mixing of incompatible victuals not calculated to be assimilated, such as

The cause of Stomach Troubles is not always indiscretions of eating and drinking. It may result from over work, worry, nervous and general debility, female disorders, or from the action of powerful drugs on the stomach.

If taken faithfully as directed, this new wonderful remedy will afford immediate relief, and within a brief time result in a permanent cure. In severe cases and those of long standing several boxes may be necessary to accomplish the desired results; however, life will appear brighter to the patient, and the general health improve with the first box. WAR NEWS

We have purchased 12 rapid fire guns of Sir William Armstrong, the English inventor. Each gun with its carriage and mountings cost us $21,000.

Our largest warships have each several 13-inch cannon In firing a full charge at an enemy with one of these big guns, the expense is over $1,000, each time. War is expensive at the present way of doing it.

The two warships we bought of Brazil were just being finished at a British shipyard, and were nearly ready to launch. The Brazilians can wait for other ones to be made and as we were in something of a hurry they sold them to us. For both we paid half a million pounds sterling or two and a half million dollars.

At the time we appropriated fifty millions to prepare for war, Spain was trying to borrow that amount. She couldn't get it. But we had it. We have for many years, had four times that amount of cash in our treas

There is a story out that Gen. Weyler wrote a letter in January, soon after he got back to Spain, in which he stated he had put mines into the harbor of Havana and would destroy any Yankee ship that came there.

It is on pretty good authority, that strain of this continued excitement and tremendous responsibility is telling seriously against President McKinley's health.

The report of the Board on the blowing up of the Maine is now to be expected any day. It surely will not be long.

The people of England are anxious for close relations with the United States, as we and they have so many interests in common. The British government also seems willing, but do not care to say so, as they have so many irons in the fire all over world.

Spain has still been trying to borrow money, but cannot. She owes so much now that capitalists don't think her bonds worth having.

There is a great deal of dissatisfaction with the slow and conservative course of the President. But it is well to wait till the report comes in. Then we shall be better able to judge. In the meantime, we confess it does look as if he is being guided to much by the Spanish minister. The latter asked him to stop sending food to starving Cubans in our war vessels. Now he has concluded to hire merchant vessels. Then they asked him to send our fleet away from its nearby station at Key West, and he had them come away back up to Hampton Roads. We think he did wrong in both these. If we must as an act of humanity feed the people that Spain is starving, we might be allowed to do it in our own way, and at the least expense. And as for the fleet, we own the city and harbor of Key West and have a right to keep our ships there. That is what we built those harbors for. The Spaniards have too much gall.

A revolt against Spanish rule is said to have broken out in Porto Rico requiring a large force to go to that island.

The Carlists in Spain are likely to get up another insurrection just now. Don Carlos belonged to a younger branch of the royal family, and always claimed he should have been made king instead of giving the place to the older family which had girls only. It It may yet cause serious trouble.

WILL TRY THE LAW

The township trustees all over the state are going to fight the efforts now being made to cut short their terms. The COURIER has already given a full statement of the condition in which the law now is. The previous set of trustees had their terms extended beyond the four years provided by the law, and then the last legislature fixed up the law so that the present set could have their terms extended to the same length. Now come those who believe that in neither case, the old set or the new, could the law be so construed or amended, as to give a trustee more than the four years named in the state constitution. Parties in Whitley county as the COURIER mentioned recently are going to test it by putting into the field a full township ticket to be voted on this full, while if the trustees now in office can hold as long as the last legislature provided for them, then no township officers would be elected till two years later. The assessors are in the same boat with the trustees, but have had no meetings thus far. But it is said they will help furnish the money to push the case through the courts. About every county in the state, including our own, has held meetings of trustees whose purpose is to fight any change that will throw them out of office before 1900. A state meeting was also held at Indianapolis. It should be settled one way or the other at an early date, so that if the law is not constitutional, a new ticket can be put into the field at the coming November election.

RUNNING 19 HOURS.

Beginning this morning the Greenler Company are running two shifts of men, keeping the big factory in this way humming for 19 hours each day. They do this to catch up with their orders. That's the way we like to see things go.

OBITUARY

Prudence (Parsons) McNabb was born in New Jersey, Aug. 18, 1811, and departed this life March 16, 1898 at the advanced age of 86 years, 6 months and 28 days. This life, however long, must come to a close, and we go hence whence we shall not return. On the 27th day of January 1829, She was united in marriage to Robert McNabb, and to this union were born ten children, eight sons and two daughters, five of whom have preceded her to the spirit world. In the year 1859, Mr. and Mrs. McNabb came to this county where they lived till their death. After the death of her husband she came to Auburn to live with her daughter Mrs L. J. Miller with whom she departed this life. Mrs. Miller had the constant care of her mother for the last 15 years and took great delight in ministering to her wants. Though blind and helpless, yet mother shall be missed. When a young girl mother McNabb became a christian and united with the Methodist church and has ever since continued her membership in that church. Though blind and deprived of many of the joys and pleasures of life, yet she beheld by faith her Saviour in that land that was afar off. She could not see to read His word, but she held sweet communion with her God, and fully trusted his promises. Many times did she express a desire to depart this life and be with Christ. It would be far better. During all the years of her blindness and suffering she complained not, but waited in patience till her change came. With her it was light in the evening time., Mother McNabb was a good woman a kind and devoted mother, and long shall she live in the memory of her friends. One whom you loved so much has been called to say good night to friends on earth and good morning to angels in heaven. If we are faithful unto death, these separations are not final, but for time only. Soon the mists of life will pass away and we shall embrace our dear ones again. Dear mother, we must now say to thee a long and last farewell; sleep on and take thy rest, we too shall soon come and lay ourselves down by thy side, until the resurrection morn. Mother McNabb leaves to mourn her death five children, twenty-three grand, children twenty nine great grand children and two great, great grand children, besides many other friends.

The funeral services were conducted from the home of Mr. L. J. Miller at 10 a. m. March 18. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

The Hot Springs of Arkansas.

It is announced that all three of the great hotels at this resort will be open this winter. The Arlington has never closed, the Park opened January 6th, and the Eastman January 25th. In addition there are fifty hotels and three hundred boarding houses, giving accommodations at reasonable rates to all classes of people This is the only health and pleasure resort under direct Government control. The curative properties of the hot waters are vouched for by the Surgeon General of the United States. Send for illustrated descriptive matter and particulars regarding the greatly reduced ninety-day round trip excursion rates, to C. S. Crane, General Passenger and ticket Agent, Wabash Railroad, St. Louis, Mo.

MT. HOPE.

Miss Icy Krise, of Auburn, visited her parents in this neighborhood last week.

Frank Melton while helping Howard Krise to haul a log out of the creek had the misfortune to get his ankle badly hurt. Dr. Sheffer was called and dressed the wound and he was taken to his home in St. Joe.

Alf Hurni has hired to Sherd Platner and began his work for the summer last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pugsley and baby visited with George Pugsley and wife last Sunday.

Mrs. Bertha Platner and Gustie Thomas made a trip to St. Joe last Tuesday.

Bryce Sawyer has hired to work this summer on the tile mill for Mr. Thomas

Charley Thomas begun plowing for oats last week but he found to his sorrow that his farming was nipped in the bud.

Ira Wingard is still hauling logs on the sled, he thinks if the sleighing should last till May he will get his logs all in the mill.

ANOTHER CHAIN

Started.—This Time the Messages Are Words of Praise Gratefully Given by Users of

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The public remembers that a short time ago a chain of letters was started for some worthy purpose, which reached such a magnitude that the whole world talked of it. A chain of oral messages has been started with also a worthy object, but different, for the reason that each one who participates reaps a benefit. The messages sing the praise of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer in the treatment of all nervous troubles and diseases resulting from debilitated nerves. Mrs. Geo. Halstead, Toledo, Ohio, has added over fifty links to the chain by telling that many of her afflicted friends what Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has done for her. These are her words: "Last spring I was all run down, nervous and very sick; due probably to the change of weather. The doctor was called and he treated me for a long time without much benefit. I then concluded to try Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer because I had heard such favorable reports from its use. I commenced to improve at once. I told the doctor what I was using and the beneficial effect, to which he replied, "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is a good medicine, keep on using it;" which I did and was soon up and about as well as ever. I have recommended it to over fifty people and results have been entirely satisfactory."

ONE BRIDGE LET

The commissioners worked on bridge matters yesterday, and today. The various bids were in yesterday, but so many things had to be considered that no decision was reached till today, and so far only for one. The 60-foot span bridge in Smithfield, at the Goodwin mill is given to A Wheelock at $815 The 35 foot leg bridge in Concord, has not yet been decided on. The Board considers all the bids too high. They do not feel justified in putting so much money into so small a place.

A FAILURE

We are told that those "foot socials" at Garrett are not a complete success. The girls are to stick their bare feet from under a screen and the young men guess whose feet they are. But it soon came to be known that half the girls had big feet and the others didn't wash theirs and the boys could tell every one in a minute. So there was no mystery and consequently no fun. So that game ended. Now the girls propose to get even by having the boys get behind the screen and breathe through a hole, and they think they can guess who it is by the breath Probably they will find a remarkable similarity that may render this plan uninteresting.

THE M. E. Conference

The M. E Conference will meet at Hartford City next Wednesday, March 23. Those pastors who have held their pulpits the full five years allowed, are W. D. Parr, Kokomo; E. T. Gregg, Decatur; J. H. Jackson, Elkhart; W. H. Daniels, Richmond; C. W. Smith, Dublin; C. E. Neal, Peru. Perhaps the most important business to come up, is the case of Rev. J. M. Driver, of Marion, who has been dismissed by his church, for conduct unbecoming to a minister. One presiding elder has to step out on account of the time limit. It is Elder H. N. Kerrick, of the Muncie district.

Lake City Sanitarium

Dr. L. A. Hines returned today to Warsaw where he and his brother Dr. Dr. W. L have been located for some time. They are now associated with C. D. Stafford in a company to take charge of the Sanitarium at that place. Our readers will remember that for several years, the Borton Institute was carried on there partly for the cure of inebriates and partly to utilize the waters of the strong medicinal spring that was obtained when Warsaw bored for gas. They got no gas or oil, but at about 900 feet struck a vein of mineral water, that resembles the famous Waukesha water north of Chicago only it is some stronger. The spring is near the Sanitarium buildings, and everything is conveniently arranged for the business to begin about the first of next month. It is well known that many cures were performed, before the Sanitarium was closed before, and the present owners are all active and able physicians and will, we believe make the Sanitarium a success. There are many invalids who need such treatment, and we have no doubt it will be well patronized.

NOT ALWAYS UNDERSTOOD

A fact overlooked, or not always understood, is that women suffer as much from distressing kidney and bladder trouble as men. The womb is situated back of and very close to the bladder and for that reason any distress, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or uinary passage is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort.

The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided by setting urine aside for 24 hours; a sediment or settling is evident that your kidneys and bladder need doctoring. If you have pain or dull aching in the back, pass water too frequently, or scanty supply, with smarting or burning—these are also convincing proofs of kidney trouble. If you have doctored without benefit, try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy. The mild and extraordinary effect will surprise you. It stands highest for its wonderful cures. If you take a medicine you should take the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, on receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention the AUBURN COURIER and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The Proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

NEWVILLE.

Mrs. Mary Meek is slowly improving.

Dr. Hill is also on the sick list. He is quite an aged man so his recovery will be rather doubtful.

Old Mr. Akins died Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. T. Jinkens of Butler. The funeral services took place at the U. B. church here Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The steel range men were still here Friday. They must be selling quite a number of ranges through the neighborhood, as they have been here for some time.

The recent rains have swollen the St Joe river so that it is almost even with its banks Great logs are floating down stream. Two men with a boat were seen towing some of the logs to shore Sunday.

Three of our young business men spent part of the day Friday in visiting the school. The school this winter has been very good, and the teacher Mr. Blaker is highly esteemed by both scholars and citizens.

The boys here organized a base ball club Wednesday, with the following members:—J. Hart, B. Allen, G. Ingles Don Blair, John Seely, Geo. Rex jr., T. Steepleton, W. Beninghoff, G. H. Ashelman, C. Blaker and C. C. Dean, manager. If the boys play as well as the Newville Club did two years ago the neighboring ball clubs will have to hustle.

The latest about town is that we are to have a saloon. Our town has been free from such an unnecessary evil for months and we think it is something we could get along very well without. Instead of drunken carousals we have had peace and quietness. Few drunk men have been see here since since the last saloon was closed. The proprietor is to be Naaman Dean, a brother to the proprietor of the last one.

Get More and You Get Less

Why is it every sarsaparilla which tries to sell itself, ranges itself against Ayer's as the standard? Why is it that all have to offer extra inducements—bigger bottles, fancy wrappers, cheaper price—anything, everything, but the one inducement of quality?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has never been equaled by any cheap imitation of it, and quality tells, just as blood tells.

It is the Standard.

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than twenty-five years, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. A preparation must possess great merit to maintain such a reputation. I believe your sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the general public. I often hear other manufacturers say that this is "as good as Ayer's," but no one ever yet heard it said that Ayer's was "as good" as any other kind. They always set Ayer's up as the standard of excellence."—S. F. BOYCE, Duluth, Minn.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE.

In Columbia City the people are at war over a sewer. Some want the sewer and some don't want the sewer and they are all fighting mad. The various members of the city council have received threatening letters, and on Saturday morning Councilman Diffendarfer, says the Post, on stepping out onto the porch of his residence discovered a cigar box on the north end of the porch, the lid of which was fastened down, and from its weight it was evident to him that it was filled with some heavy material. Previous experiences had made him cautious, and without attempting to open the box, he carried it to his packing house, where Bigelow Ramp took it in hand. He was on the point of prying the lid open when he noticed the ends of three tacks just visible is the lid, being driven through from the inside. F. L. Jones then opened the box from the bottom, where a curious and ingenious sight met their gaze.

A partition ran lengthwise of the box, about one third of the way from the front side. This partition was glued in, and in the center, near the bottom, were seven matches stuck through the partition, the heads protruding into the narrow cavity. Fastened to the lid by tacks which were seen on the outside was a piece of coarse sand-paper passing up over the matches in such a way that if the lid should be opened it would scrape over and ignite them. Filling the narrow part, partitioned off, was cotton saturated with benzine; and it also came in contact with the matches. The main portion of the box was filled with very fine coal dust, in which were buried seven thirty eight caliber cartridges; also buried in this dust were two bottles, each with short fuse attached, one containing gasoline, the other, some kind of liquid, but just what it was we have been unable to learn. Had the matches been ignited, thus setting off the other explosives, the results must have proven disastrous.

It is a noticeable fact, (whether significant or not) that the idea of seven is prominent in this attempt. There were seven matches, seven cartridges, and seven different agencies used in the construction of the machine.

THE M. E. CONFERENCE.

The conference at Hartford City began Wednesday with Bishop Fowler in the chair. L. I Naftzger was elected secretary. Only routine and formal business was done that day.

On Thursday the various presiding elders made reports. We give brief extracts.

Elder Simpson of the Ft. Wayne district reported 33 pastoral charges and three pastors who had served their full five years. They are C. M. Hollopeter, E. L. Gregg and S. C. Norris. Total membership in the district 10,000; in the Sunday Schools, 10,000; conversions during last year, 1,000; received on probation 1,205; net increase in the district 1,000.

Elder J. A Lewellen, of the Warsaw district, reported 33 pastoral charges $3,500 expended in church improvements; $5,000 of debt paid off; $17,000 subscribed to build a new church at Wabash; number of conversions, 700; and he passed as "satisfactory" the character of all his pastors except J. M. Driver.

Elder C. G. Hudson of the Goshen district reported, harmony and church growth all along the line faithful work and good collections.

Elder A. E. Mahin of the Richmond district reported 20 pastoral charges. Good revivals had been the rule and 760 conversions reported.

Elder Herrick of the Muncie district said everything was in a prosperous condition with his people. Salaies had been increased. Therewere 38 charges; an increase of $11,000 in collections; several new churches built; 2,709 conversions and 1328 received on probation.

The oldest member of the conference is Rev. Milton Mahan of New Castle having been in the work 57 years. Two others, R. S. Preston and R. A. Newton, have been members 50 years; 25 for 40 years and 43 began before the war; 39 supernannuated. There are 29 preachers serving the required four years of probotion

The conference decid d to change the date of holding it to the first week in April hereafter.

MILLIONS G VEN AWAY

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The propritors of Dr. King New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on H. B. McCord Druggist, and get a trial bottle free. Regular size 50 cents and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded. 3

NO PAY—NO CURE

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price 50c. For sale by Robbins & M. Cord.

An Exciting Problem.

Here is a little question for some of the physicists. Suppose a pulley and cord are suspended from the bough of a tree. To one end of the cord a stone is attached, and to the other end climbs a monkey. The stone balances the monkey. If the monkey climbs the rope what will happen? Will the stone rise or fall?

THE TREASURY DRAMA

We lay before our readers the excellent article found in the Gazette. It calls up many thought, some not very pleasant. But we hope it will be carefully read, and that it will in part furnish a much needed lesson to the delegates to the coming county convention There is a grave responsibility resting on these delegates this year. It reads:

"Perry Fair is no longer a citizen of Auburn. The actors in the treasury drama are all gone. Coffinberry is in a dynamite protected vault, the ex-treasurer is on his farm and now Perry has gone to Fort Wayne, we are now informed, and the treasury who was succeeded by Fair is serving out a sentence for his share in the plot against the people. Indeed the treasurer's office has furnished the material for a play in which tragedy and comedy could be strongly presented The blowing up of the safe twenty five or thirty years ago, would make an exciting scene. The scene where Treasurer L. J. Miller was asleep on his table and where Coop Ralston slipped a giant fire cracker in through an opening in the window and exploded it would make a scene of alarm, fire, smoke and confusion that would supply the comedy, and then the ploting of the hypnotist Coffinberry with the self-convicted ex-treasurer and with the old farmer treasurer and the sickly but scheming Perry, would make a third scene full of interest. The drama would be incomplete without a woman in it, and those who intrusted their money to the principal actors with which to purchase county orders, and perhaps, would play as important characters to complete the cast. Another scene would show the honest farmer, banker and merchant who had signed the bonds of the defaulters, as they were going down into their pockets, and getting out the last dollar as the faithful, toiling wife looked on with tearful eyes, or were borrowing from a friend or mortgaging the farm or home to raise the money, and still another would be the court room where just judges and faithful prosecutors were seeking to protect the people. This drama of the treasurer's office would bring out trials, and would show losses greater than would pay our county debt and have honest dollars in the treasury to spare.

THEY FLATTER US.

Engineer VanAuken is now receiving letters by the dozen from firms interested in building water works, and to whom he has sent copies of the specifications recently printed at the COURIER office under his direction. And nearly everyone mentions the completeness of the details in the specifications which were prepared by Mr. VanAuken solely. And incidently the COURIER gets a compliment for its neat job of this rather difficult work. We have room for only two brief extracts. The W. H. Meredith Pumping Machinery Co., of Cincinnati, says:

"The Specefications for the water works at Auburn came to hand. Accept our thanks for same. Allow us to compliment you on the fullness and completeness of the same."

The Rensselaer Mfg. Co. of Troy, N Y., one of the largest of the kind in the United State, writes:

"We are in receipt of Specifications for Auburn, Ind. Allow us to congratulate you upon the manner in which they are gotten up. They are as complete as any specifications we ever handled."

And so on of others. It proves what we have always claimed, that as good work in engineering as well as in printing and other lines, can be done here at home, by home men, as can be done anywhere.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

Antwerp had as uspicious highway robbery last Thursday night. Two men were on their way home after dark from a fishing trip when a third man held them up and took $50 from one of them and the other claims they got $9 from him. But it was a suspicious thing that he was not hurt, while the man who lost the $50 fought to save it and was nearly beaten to death. So at last the $9 dollar man acted so suspiciously that he was arrested. Then they arrested his brother under the belief that he was the third man who held them up. Both had to go to jail, The man who was so severely beaten will probably surviv, though in bad shape now.

SERVES THEM RIGHT.

And We Hope the Plan of the Board of Commissioners Will Succeed.

We refer to the order of the Board of County commissioners published in yesterday's DAILY. The COURIER has always advocated the plan of getting some work out of men confined in the jail who have been convicted of breaking the laws. Year after year we have seen the ornamented fice on the south edge of the public square filled with strong and robust men, a half of whom cared little or nothing of the disgrace of being there but put in their time in enjoying their enforced leisure to the utmost extent. And there have been a plenty of them who were shameless enough to boast of the good time they were having servinig out a sentence for stealing or assult or desertion and for a score of other crimes and misdemeaners of various degrees. And many of them have voluntarily gone to jail rather than pay a fine they could have paid as well as not, and there is in jail one man who could have paid the damages assessed against him by a jury of his fellow citizens for the wrong he had done to a girl who to say the least is in every way his equal. Another has just finished his year of incarceration for a similar offense against good morals. And so we might go on indefinitely. Not only are these fellows satisfied to lie in idleness and eat of the bounty of an indulgent public, prepared by skilled cooks in the sheriffs residence; but they have often become so aristocratic that they would "kick" on the good fare furnished them. Then when well filled with good cheer they would put in the happy hours singing and cracking jokes, and sometimes these were of such a character that the sheriff would have to stop them. And it has been known that they have insolently refused to stop and one sheriff at least, Mr. Ralston had to go in and thresh a lot of them to get them quiet. A great many of our citizens and tax payers have gone past the county bastile and heard the sounds of ribald music floating out through the grates and not a few have had insulting language shouted at them as they passed. One don't like to be insulted by a captive criminal that his own hard earned money is assisting to support in case. It don't go down. So we in common with all other good citizens hail with satisfaction this effort of the commissioners to make these men earn at least a part of the board. We don't know how well it will succeed. That remains to be seen. But all our people will wish the Board well and pronounce it a step in the right direction.

COURT

G. W. Reed, the man, who has been in jail so long accused of breaking into the farm residence of Adam Hartman in Fairfield township about a year ago, plead guilty and was sent up for an indeterminate (not intermediate) sentence of one to fourteen years, fined $50 and disfranchised ten years.

The young man, Lee Campbell who was accused of stealing of Mr. Lung at the Junction, was acquitted the proof not being plain enough.

Driver Not Driven Out.

Rev. J. M. Driver, it appears, has been whitewashed by a report of the committee at conference. They admit that by his own confession he "has been guilty of great improprieties and indiscretions," but he has promised to quit that kind of business. It does look like a sort of "indiscretion" for a minister, a married one, to have a habit of writing love letters to the young ladies of his flock. It does seem a little like an "impropriety" But the serious question as to soundness of the committee's finding is this: Would they have so readily forgiven Mrs. Driver had it been her instead of her husband?

CLEARING A UNITED STATES MAN-O'-WAR FOR ACTION.

"SPONGE AND LOAD."

A FIGHTING craft, cleared for action, loses much of its resemblance to the vessel as it lies in a harbor on a mission of peace, says the St. Louis Republic. The lines and halyards which stretch in all directions disappear; the graceful davits go below, the canvas awnings, the coils of hawser, the ship's boats, and every article useless in the fight are taken below deck, to the designated place for each. This action is necessary in order that the men may have plenty of room to work, and it also lessens the danger, as, mayhap a shell which would go clear of the ship strikes a steel line or other light obstruction and falls upon deck, destroying many lives and perhaps exploding a load of powder which sends the vessel to the bottom.

At the signal to clear every man on board runs to his post. The yardmen handle the halyards, the canvasmen look to the coverings and others to the boats. If a ship is at anchor the boats are dropped over the side, after their plugs are drawn, as it is then possible to raise them after the fight. If at sea they are thrown over to take care of themselves. This is done for the reason that men most fear amid a shower of shot and shell the flying, jagged splinters of wood that are thrown about when a boat is struck by a shot. Experience in the civil war taught the men that the wounds made by these splinters were not only as dangerous as those made by bullets, but far more painful.

While the boats are being taken care of, other squads of men are removing the stanchions, the running rails, the sides of the bridge and everything that can be put below the armored deck. Down in the boiler rooms the fires are already being spread, forced draughts applied in order to have the greatest amount of possible power on hand should it be required.

LOWERING THE WOUNDED INTO THE SICK BAY.

In the meantime the decks have been sprinkled with sand to prevent the men from slipping as they run back and forth, and at the call "to general quarters" they jump to their assigned places. The captain's position is in the conning tower, from which place he has electrical connection with every part of his ship. From the interior of this turret he can watch every part of the ship, and has a view of the horizon in all directions. The pressing of a button regulates the speed of the vessel, another guides her course, a third controls all the guns, directs the training of them and allows the captain to fire one or all, in groups or one crushing broadside.

While the men are awaiting the attack in general quarters, down below, the ship's doctor and his assistants are also preparing for the struggle. As a usual thing the sick bay, or ship's hospital, is too small for use in a battle of any length, and other quarters are provided, usually in one of the mess cabins. Here the surgeons hurry with their operating tables, their shining tools, their baskets full of bandages and chests of drugs and antiseptics. The baymen, as the nurses on board the ship are known, stand ready to care for their comrades as they are brought down on stretchers, torn and mangled by shells and flying iron.

There, below the decks, as unconscious as the engineers and firemen of the trend of the battle, must the surgeon and nurses work, their hands always steady, their nerves firm and with no thought of anything but the work before them. Not until the order of "Cease firing" rings out under the victorious flag above them, or they feel the list of the ship as it sinks, do they know how the fight is going. And if the ship is struck they go down only with the consciousness of duty well performed. Too often their bravery is lost sight of in the more pretentious acts of others.

With every man in place, every detail looked after and a knowledge that nothing save an accident can cause his plans to miscarry, the captain stands on the bridge with glass in hand and watches the approaching enemy. Above him on the fore military mast an officer is surveying the distance between the two vessels. As he makes his observations the result is called out by a lieutenant.

By this time both vessels are in full view. If the day is calm and the air clear, the men on the one iron monster can see the other, with its flags flying from every point where they can be attached. They can see the polished muzzles of the heavy rifles as they gleam in the sun, the glitter of the officers' buttons. With muscles strained, their hearts thumping in their breasts, and all excitement, they listen as the lieutenant's voice calls out clear:

"Five thousand four hundred meters; five thousand two hundred meters; five thousand——"

WAITING FOR THE FIRST SHOT.

The Battle Begins.

The rest seems buried in the great silence as there is a puff of white smoke from the side of one of the great crafts that seem so far away; there is a sound, like the rush of a great train, that turns instantly into a roar, a hissing sound as a great ball of fire drops into the water a few hundred yards away with a great splash and a muffled explosion below the surface that sends the sea spouting up like a fantastic fountain.

The battle has begun. The steady plomb, plomb of heavy guns, the sharp, rapid, cracking shots of the quick fire guns as they blaze out a stream of death, the patter of iron balls against the steel plates of the ship; the louder, tearing crash of heavy shots, the shouts of officers, the rumble of trucks loaded with projectiles over the deck, the smoke and dust and noise, aye, and the cry of comrades as they fall, torn and bleeding. Such is war!

After the first shot the intensity of suspense is broken, the sight of the mangled forms on deck is blotted out by smoke that stings the eyes until they pain like balls of fire, and the men fall into their work like veterans. They forget everything except the fight, and it is not until the engagement is over that they notice their bleeding wounds and realize the terrible amount of energy and force that has been expended.

While there have been but few battles since the introduction of the ironclad, enough is known that the strain on the men is something awful. The ceaseless din of heavy shot on the heavier plates, the tremendous concussions from the heavy guns cause hemorrhage, destroy the nerves and actually blister the flesh.

Men who have been in turrets and taken no part in the conflict have come out of the steel towers with their clothes in shreds and so unnerved that weeks of rest was necessary for recuperation.

The possibilities of naval warfare under these conditions are a matter of conjecture. Engagements will, of necessity, be short. Squadrons may be destroyed in a day, whole cities laid low by the tremendous force.

A MODERN NAVAL BATTLE.

MAY HAVE MEANT WELL.

But Her Efforts Did Not Meet with Much Success.

It takes fully six months for a story like the following to become public property. Last season a Washington woman, possessing both social and charitable ambitions, elected to give a reception. The affair was to be very exclusive. Judge of the surprise when a bundle of invitations was left at the door of a hospital in town upon whose board of managers Mrs. Z. serves. The invitations were found to be addressed to the trained nurses of the institution, and great was the wonder that the professional ranks had been invaded for society recruits.

A few days elapsed, and Mrs. Z. paid a visit to the hospital. Making herself extremely agreeable, she remarked to the nurses

"Well, girls, I hope you received cards to my reception?"

Smiles and acknowledgments answered in the affirmative, and Mrs. Z. went on complacently:

"Indeed, I was only too glad to remember you all. I appreciate how much work and how little play you girls have, and I thought you would enjoy a little glimpse of society fun."

"No doubt of it, Mrs. Z.," one of the nurses spoke up, "but none of us are likely to have gowns suitable to wear at such a function."

"Oh, that need not trouble you in the least," returned the smiling Mrs. Z. "Now, my idea is this. Of course, I understand you have no evening gowns, and that you know very few society people, but these facts must not interfere with your getting a peep at my guests and eating some of my supper. I thought the whole thing would be simplified if you all came in your pretty uniforms and caps, and took up your stations in the dressing rooms. You would only have to assist the ladies with their wraps and you could see the gowns to such good advantage, and——" But such a chorus of indignant exclamations rent the air at that juncture that Mrs. Z.'s sentence was never completed.

The social veneering must be thickly coated on Mrs. Z., for to this day she does not seem to understand why the nurses meet her advances with frigid indifference, and why her visits to the hospital are no longer pleasant.—Washington Star.

A Bullet Set in Gold.

Perhaps one of the most peculiar presents ever made by a bridegroom to his bride, says London Sketch, was that of Maurice Gifford to Miss Thorold on the occasion of their marriage last week. It was the bullet which was extracted from the wound in his shoulder which caused the loss of his arm. The gold in which the bullet was set was dug from a graveyard in Matabeleland, and was fashioned in the shape of a double-headed serpent, the heads supporting the missile, the whole making a very unique armlet.

Some people laugh as if it hurt them.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

WAR AND POLITICS.

Patriotism in Republican newspapers must have sunk to a low ebb when war against Spain is urged as a means of winning the fall elections for the Republican party. Democratic patriotism is made of a different material. If war with Spain is necessary to preserve the honor of this nation, Democrats will welcome war, irrespective of its results on party elections.

It is but just to say that the demand for war as a means of saving the fortunes of the Republican party and of securing offices for Republican politicians is not generally advocated by the Republican press. But it is a significant fact that a newspaper popularly supposed to represent the personal opinions of President McKinley has urged war with Spain as a means of "killing free silver." In discussing this narrow view of the question now before the American people the Atlanta Constitution says:

"The most ignorant pot-house politician could not invent a narrower platform. Let us intervene at the cost of war, if necessary, not because it is an act of highest humanity to put an end to a struggle that is hopeless for Spain and ruinous to Cuba; not because the republic is consecrated to the high cause of human liberty, but because it is the only way we can prevent half the voting population of our country from dishonoring the nation."

In the first place, it is entirely gratuitous to assume that a Democratic success at the polls would dishonor the nation. The Democrats have not endeavored to make political capital out of the Cuban situation. It would be honorable and patriotic for the Republicans to follow this good example.

More Dingley Deficit.

There was a sound of revelry in the Republican camp over the fact that for the month of February the business of the country showed a surplus in the treasury of about $1,500,000. There was nothing said about the deficit of about $50,000,000 which has been caused by the operations of the Dingley tariff, but the fact that for the first time since the bill went into effect a surplus was shown in the monthly report was trumpeted far and wide.

March has not given much encouragement that the experience of February will be repeated. The showing for the first week is as follows:

Expenditures	$11,082,600
Revenues	8,920,736
Deficiency	$2,161,264

The showing for the fiscal year from July 1 to March 7 is as follows:

Expenditures	$282,560,825
Revenues	231,479,844
Deficiency	$51,089,844

With a deficit of over $51,000,000, the prospect of catching up with expenses is extremely doubtful. Even if the tariff could do as well each month as it did last February, it would take more than four years to balance the books. As McKinley has but three more years to serve, it looks as though his administration would have the deficit permanently associated with it.

If the Republicans could be taught anything, they would begin to learn that a protective tariff cannot produce revenue. And if the experiences of the cotton mill owners teach anything, they teach that the Dingley bill is a failure, even as a protective measure. So far as can be determined by the workings of the Dingley law up to date, it is the most monumental example of Republican folly that has ever been given to the people of this country. And yet the Republicans claim that they belong to "the party of reform."

Railroad Law Up-to-Date.

The Nebraska freight rate suit, involving the power of injunction by the Federal courts as controlling the legislative, executive and judicial authority of a State, is one of the most important innovations upon State rights that has occurred in our history. Its importance is emphasized by the fact that the Democratic candidate for President at the last election, Hon. William J. Bryan, was counsed for the State of Nebraska a year ago, when the case was argued before the bench.

This decision was rendered by seven judges of the nine, namely, Harlan, Gray, Brown, Shiras, White, Peckham and Brewer. It holds that, though the Federal court could not have entertained a suit to enjoin a State, it can enjoin and forbid a State law; and that it does not need to have any statute to grant it that power, but can exercise it, at its own discretion, in order to establish what it considers to be equity. That a State, in chartering a railroad corporation, cannot reserve the authority to fix railroad rates and charges. And that the Federal court can, and will, intervene to see that a railroad corporation makes a profit on its capital. The decision is said to benefit every railroad and to tax every merchant, trader, farmer and traveler, who uses railroad facilities in the State of Nebraska, and it will, of course, be utilized and acted upon by every railroad in every other State.

Any State which favors incorporation and consolidation of capital in corporations may learn, from these decisions, that its control of its own corporations ends with the signing of their charter.—New York News.

Lee Was Needed Long Ago.

It is probable that if the United States had been represented in Madrid by Fitzhugh Lee in 1873, when the Virginius affair occurred, it is almost a certainty that it would not now be necessary to appropriate $50,000,000 for hurried preparations for war with the decrepit dons. That Virginius affair gave the dons an impression that the United States would submit to anything rather than run the risk of engaging in war.—Omaha World-Herald.

Weak State Department.

It is unfortunate that just at this important crisis in the history of this Government the office of Secretary of State should be practically vacant. Secretary Sherman, who holds the title and draws the salary as chief of the State Department, is not capable of performing the highly important duties of his office. Assistant Secretary Day has had no experience in national and international affairs, being simply a country lawyer. Shrewd diplomats in Europe, men who have been schooled in international strategy, are ready to take advantage of the lamentable condition of affairs in the American Department of State. With Sherman incapacitated by age, and ill-health, and Day possessed of no capacity whatever, it looks as though the nation would have to trust to luck.

Blacks and Corrupt Politics.

The negroes in the South ought to take the advice of one of their preachers, Rev. Richard Carroll, who says: "I see no good for you in politics, but I see plenty of harm. The colored population get excited every four years and many leave the farm to sit around and wait for an office. Some have not worked since McKinley was made President, and their families are approaching starvation. Politics has ruined us and put us back many years." Yet the Republican politicians, like Mr. Hanna, are also responsible. They corrupt the negro, promise him offices for delegates and whet his appetite for office seeking when he should be working at the bench or in the fields, raising his race by simple industry.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Hanna's Bold Game.

There is one thing about Senator Hanna which will have to be conceded. He didn't "beat about the bush" much when he was asked for his opinion about a war with Spain. He came right out and said there would be no war. He didn't hesitate to express his conviction that the disaster to the Maine was an accident. Of course, intelligent people understood from that the action and even the wishes of the administration depend on what the New York "financiers" want. He defies the people, and it would not be surprising to see him out openly for the Cuban bond scheme. The troublesome thing for Mr. Hanna will be, though, to get a popular indorsement of his performance at the coming elections.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Senator Mills' Retirement.

In announcing his withdrawal from the Senatorial race in Texas, Senator Mills has served notice on the country of the contemplated retirement to private life of one of the sturdiest Democratic exponents of the time. The tariff barons have had no more determined foe than the upright and resourceful Texan. It is hoped that he will find that repose and comfort in private life which his long and conspicuous public career merits.—St. Louis Republic.

Not the Man or the Place.

If war comes the country will need a man of judgment in Alger's place, and this visionary and foolish person will soon have to "go." What might be expected of him in great things is seen on a small scale in his locomotive sled and reindeer expedition schemes for Alaska, which every person of judgment saw from the first were irrational.—Portland Oregonian.

One Mystery Still Uncleared.

And yet the question remains unanswered by judge or jury: If the marching miners at Lattimer were fired upon because they made fierce onslaught on the Sheriff and his deputies, how did it happen that so many of the paraders were shot in the back?—Boston Globe.

Poor Reasons Better than None.

Republicans are asked to vote the Republican ticket because it is a straight Republican ticket on a straight Republican platform, including indorsements of the administration and policies of President McKinley and Leslie M. Shaw.—Des Moines Register.

The Chinaman's Care of Horses.

There is a Chinese vegetable peddler in Portland whose two horses have long been admired by his customers. He feeds them on the street, and one day lately, some passers-by, who saw that the man always seemed to be concocting some special dish for the team, watched him prepare their noonday meal

He led the horses into the shade, loosened the traces and took off the bridles. Then he took a nose-bag for each, and into each bag poured a good measure of rolled barley. Next he cut up some carrots small, put them into the nose-bags, and mixed them up with the barley. Finally he went to his wagon, and got four eggs, two of which he broke into each measure, and stirred them up with the barley and carrots.

The horses watched all these preparations with great interest, and were "correspondingly elated," as the election dispatches say, when the bags containing the appetizing mixture were hung on their noses. They proceeded to eat with much gusto, and the Chinaman turned to a frugal luncheon of his own, consisting of an onion and a piece of dry bread.—Portland Oregonian.

Night blindness is a rare condition, in which a person toward evening finds that objects are becoming less and less distinct, and at last he is totally blind. This may occur without previous warning, and cause great alarm, and next morning he finds that his sight is restored. This is repeated every night; but at last the eyes become weak during the day also, and suffer paralysis of the optic nerve. This strange affection may, in some cases, become epidemic. It has attacked bodies of troops exposed to great fatigue and the glare of the sun's rays. If there are no symptoms of disease within the brain, recovery generally results by protection of the eyes from the light, and entire repose. It is frequent among the natives of some parts of India, who attribute it to sleeping exposed to the moonbeams.

If you want to see an admirable illustration of American patriotism note how loyally the Democrats in Congress are supporting a Republican administration in the existing crisis.—St. Louis Republic.

HAD NEVER SEEN A BICYCLE.

Dutch Fishing Village Surprised by the Sight.

Vollendam, Holland, is one of the few places in the world that have never known a bicycle, or, at least, it never had until lately. Vollendam is a little fishing village. The people who live there are the oddest, most old-fashioned folks imaginable. The men wear magenta waistcoats and remarkable trousers, buttoned with huge silver buttons that are heirlooms. In Vollendam a man never loses his trouser button, but if he happens to do so a search is ordered all through the village, and no one rests until the button has been found and returned.

Vollendam is the quaintest village, visitors say, they ever saw. There are funny little peak-roofed houses, with the walls painted bright yellow and covered with old Delft ware that the people will not sell. The women wear aprons of bright blue, with a piece at the top of the brightest possible plaid. The bodices are of flowered chintz of bright yellow, embroidered in different colors, and even the sabots are grass green or yellow.

The little girls dress exactly like their mothers, and so do the little boys, in skirts and all, until they are 7, when they are put in bloomers; and the only way they can be told is by a little disc the size of a dollar embroidered on the back of their tight little baby caps.

The people of Vollendam never take up new things. But a few days ago there was a sensation in Vollendam, and it was caused by the arrival of two American girls. They were bloomer girls, who came over from Paris to see Holland. One of them was from Chicago and the other from a Southern city. They had heard that there were strange places in Holland, and they set out to find one of them.

When these girls arrived in Vollendam they went to the hotel, and there prepared to go forth; but when they came out they found a crowd of Vollenders around the door. Asking some one what was the matter, they received the reply:

"It is your bicycles."

Vollendam never saw a bicycle before.

When they learned that Vollendam had never before seen a wheel, they were astonished. After a little persuasion they kindly consented to give exhibitions of some simple feats. Their small tricks, that are known to every American girl who rides a wheel, filled the Vollenders with wonder, and one of them, more venturesome than the rest, asked to be allowed to sit on the saddle. Of course, she had to be held there, and this only increased her wonder at the performance of the American girls.

When asked if they would like to have bicycles introduced in Vollendam, they looked wistful, but shook their heads and glanced furtively at the men, as much as to say, "They would never allow it."

A Sufficient Notice.

Near Christina Lake, in Washington, a rough road leads from the main highway toward the lake, where there is a ferry operated by hand power. At the point of departure of this road the following sign, posted on a tree, informs passers of all they have to do to make the trip across the lake by this route:

"Wagon road to Cristina if you want to go across hollow or yeall also a grocery store and hotel."

Spring Medicine

These two words emphasize a necessity and indicate a remedy.

SPRING—the season when the blood is most impure as a result of the winter's closer confinement, higher living, slower action of the kidneys and liver; when humors of all kinds, boils, pimples and eruptions are most liable to appear; when the weak, languid condition of the whole bodily structure demands and welcomes help.

MEDICINE—that to which the millions turn at this season—Hood's Sarsaparilla. The original and only preparation especially adapted to the present needs of the human family; that which makes the blood pure and clean, as shown by its thousands of wonderful cures of dreadful blood diseases; creates an appetite and cures dyspepsia, as shown by its "magic touch" in all stomach troubles; steadies and strengthens the nerves, as proved by the people formerly nervous, now calm and self-possessed, thanks to

Only those who have been relieved of great suffering can fully appreciate the gratitude with which the testimonials overflow written in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Just read this:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—My first experience with Hood's Sarsaparilla was when I used it as a tonic and spring medicine. It did me so much good my faith in its merits became very strong. About two years later I had a running sore on my foot. It developed into erysipelas and affected the entire limb. At that time I was Very Much Run Down,

as I had been troubled with dyspepsia. The drain on my system was so severe and my stomach was so weak I became a ready victim of malaria. I feared I could never regain my health. My stomach rebelled at the simplest food, and the medicines prescribed for me gave but little relief. I sent for a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I had taken this medicine but three days when I began to improve. Continuing with it, I am now better and stronger than I ever expected to be. It has purified my blood and given good circulation. I have had no return of my old troubles since." MRS. W. KANE, Media, Pa. Hood's Sarsaparilla is

A Spy in a Royal Court.

"Marie Antoinette as Dauphine" is the title of an article in the Century, by Miss Anna L. Bicknell. Miss Bicknell says: Maria Theresa had a strong desire to give suitable guidance to her daughter. She consequently arranged with the German ambassador, Comte de Mercy-Argenteau, a secret correspondence, by which she was to be told of everything concerning the young Dauphine. Mercy kept a journal, which was regularly sent to the Empress, in which the most minute details of the daily life of the Princess are jotted down; every act, every incautious word, is registered. Being in utter ignorance of this agreement, Marie Antoinette treated Mercy with full confidence, often expressing astonishment at the information possessed by the Empress concerning her, but never dreaming that Mercy, whom she entirely trusted, was in fact an accredited spy through whom everything was revealed.

There is, it must be owned, something revolting in the part played by Mercy. True, the revelations were made only to her mother; but she was Empress of Germany, and while Marie Antoinette ought henceforward to have been devoted to the interests of France, the country over which her husband was to reign, the one idea of Maria Theresa was the prosperity and welfare of her own empire.

The water supply system of London covers 845 square miles, and delivers daily, through 5,147 miles of pipe, 187,580,233 gallons, of which 107,000,000 gallons comes from the Thames, 51,000,000 gallons from the River Lea, and the remainder from springs and artesian wells. The per capita consumption of the 5,675,270 inhabitants is 33 gallons.

The reservoirs, 54 in number, cover 580 acres, and have a capacity of 1,935,000,000 gallons, and there are 120 great filtering beds, some of which, it is said, can absorb 1,000,000 gallons of water per minute. There are also 33,065 fire hydrants. The water system is at present owned by private companies, but the immense pressure brought to bear by the people will probably make it municipal at no distant day.—Philadelphia Record.

The Modern Generation of Men,

Physically men are better to-day than ever. Our college youth are, as a general thing, magnificent specimens. The constitutionally weak and nervous can greatly increase their strength and restore the nervous system by the efficient aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which also removes dyspeptic and bilious trouble.

Oregon received its name from the Spanish oregano, wild marjoram, which grows in abundance on this portion of the Pacific shore.

Friendly Persecution in Sickness.

How many invalids would protest, if they dared, against the persecutions they are compelled to endure from friends who feel it their duty to call and condole with the sick. One sufferer breaks out in this manner:

"I feel as if I had just been to my own funeral, and it was a very sad affair."

"How so?"

"I was killed by a friendly call. My neighbor over the way, with a face as solemn as an owl, has just been in to see me, and he kindly remarked that I was so changed he shouldn't have known me, and he hoped I'd pull through, which meant, 'I'm sure you can't last long, poor fellow;' and had I heard that J——, who was taken sick at the same time I was, had been given up by the doctors? He mentioned several other equally cheerful items, which made me feel as if I should fly into a thousand pieces!

"A call like that is enough to kill anybody who doesn't know how to resist the influence of such sympathy. Heaven save the mark if that is sympathy! I call it torture. I do wish my friends would talk to me of something besides myself, and how I look, and how I feel, for I am reminded of all that far too often. If they want to show their friendship and help me get well, they will help me to forget myself and all my difficulties. Pray throw open the windows and let in the sunshine to dry off the dampness and gloom of that neighborly call."—Science and Health.

The Isle of Shakspeare's "Tempest."

Bermuda is said to be island of Shakspeare's "Tempest." When the English discovered it, they found it inhabited by hogs. The strange noises which mariners heard coming from it, and which they did not know were produced by hogs, caused them to say that it was haunted, and to report weird things of it. The houses are all built of coraline rock. When a man wants to build a house, he cuts his plank out of his ground and builds away. If he wants a plank for anything, he goes to the side of his yard and cuts out a slab. He seems to think very little about how the hole left is going to look. There are big and little quarries all about in Hamilton, which is the capital. One hundred barrels of good British gunpowder went from Bermuda to Boston in 1776. It was sent in response to a letter from General Washington, who emphasized the advantages which might accrue from commercial relations between Bermuda and the colonies, and suggested that these relations could be further strengthened by timely assistance in the way of ammunition. Great Britain kept then, as now, large military stores at Bermuda. It was whispered at the time that Bermuda thought of casting her fortunes with the colonies. However that may have been, she is loyal enough now to the British flag. It is a pretty thought that she now sends us Easter lilies where once she sent us gunpowder. Raising Easter lilies for the New York market is a favorite industry in Bermuda.

The ingenuity of the sportsman is, perhaps, no better illustrated than by the use he puts the English language to in designating particular groups of animals. The following is a list of the terms which have been applied to the various classes: A covey of partridges, a nide of pheasants, a wisp of snipe, a flight of doves or swallows, a muster of peacocks, a siege of herons, a building of rocks, a brood of grouse, a plump of wild fowl, a stand of plovers, a watch of nightingales, a clattering of choughs, a herd or bunch of cattle, a flock of geese, a bevy of quails, a cast of hawks, a trip of dottrell, a swarm of bees, a school of whales, a shoal of herrings, a herd of swine, a skulk of foxes, a pack of wolves, a drove of oxen, a sounder of hogs, a troop of monkeys, a pride of lions, a sleuth of bears, a gang of elk.—New York Herald.

CURES RHEUMATISM, ETC.

A Recent Discovery That Is Working Wonders.

The most prevailing afflictions that for a century have been engaging the most scientific skill of the medical world are rheumatism, neuralgia, catarrh, asthma, la grippe and their kindred ailments. The country is full of sufferers from these complaints. Although the most learned experts of the medical profession have labored for a century to produce a curative, until quite recently no positive results were effected. To the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., 167-69 Dearborn street, Chicago, belongs the credit for having produced the new remedy. It is being extensively advertised under the trademark of "Five Drops." The trade-mark is self-explanatory. Five drops make a dose. The effect is magical. In days gone by other alleged cures have been marketed with the promise to take effect in thirty days or more. Five Drops begins to cure at once. Immediate relief is felt. In order to more effectively advertise its merits the company will for the next thirty days send out 100,000 of their sample bottles of this positive cure for 25 cents a bottle by mail prepaid. Large bottle, 300 doses, $1 (for thirty days 3 bottles $2.50). Those suffering should take immediate advantage of this generous offer and write them to-day.

NOVELTY IN TIRES.

Self-Locking Double Tube Bicycle Tire Which Promises to Be Popular.

A self-locking double tube tire was one of the novelties of the Philadelphia bicycle show. The tire, which was exhibited by a Williamsport firm, requires no special rim, cement, wire or any other fastening device, as the illustration shows. It locks into itself, the interlocking of the corrugations becoming tighter as the tire is inflated and pressed against the rim. It is said not to pinch the inner tube and will not roll or slip. Months of use will not affect its resiliency.

Guard Pupils' Emotions.

"The Board of Education out in Alameda, Cal., has a tender regard for the sensitive feelings of children," remarked Edward J. Holland, of San Francisco, at Willard's. "A recent order by the board forbids the wearing of mourning garb on the part of any public school teacher. The chairman of these wise officials, in explaining the order, said it was in the interest of boys and girls whose spirits became weighed down through casting their eyes on the habiliments of grief, and were thus unable to attend properly to their studies.

"As an instance of ultra consideration for the young, I think this action of the Alameda School Board beats the record, but how about the feelings of some young lady teacher, who might desire to clothe herself in black as an evidence of family bereavement?"—Washington Post.

WOMEN AND THE WHEEL.

From the Gazette, Delaware, Ohio.

The healthfulness of bicycle riding for women is a disputed question.

Used in moderation it surely creates for women a means of outdoor exercise, the benefit of which all physicians concede. Used to excess, like any other pastime, its effect is likely to be dangerous.

The experience of Miss Bertha Reed, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. J. R. Reed, 335 Lake street, Delaware, Ohio, may point a moral for parents who, like Mr. and Mrs. Reed, have experienced some concern for their daughters who are fond of wheeling. In the fall of '96 Miss Bertha, who had ridden a great deal, began to fail in an alarming manner. Rest and quiet did her absolutely no good. A physician found her pulse at 104—a very high rate. Thinking this may have been due to temporary nervousness when he examined her, he watched her closely, but her pulse continued at that rate for two weeks. He was satisfied then, from her high pulse and steadily wasting condition that she was suffering from anæmia or a bloodless condition of the body. She became extremely weak, and could not stand the least noise or excitement. In this condition of affairs they were recommended by an old friend to get some of that famous blood medicine, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They did so, and almost from the first dose Bertha began to improve. She continued to take the pills and was by their means made entirely well, and more grateful people than her parents cannot be found.

She Rides Well.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved a boon to womankind. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, they restore the requisite vitality to all parts of the body; creating functional regularity and perfect harmony throughout the nervous system. The pallor of the cheeks is changed to the blush of health; the eyes brighten; the muscles grow elastic, ambition is created and good health returns.

Oldest English Business.

Probably the oldest business in England is an ancient linen drapery concern, which has been in existence since 1600. Under the title of the Sign of the Croune, the industry has been carried on in the old town of Shefford in Bedfordshire, nearly 300 years, for more than half of which time it has been in the hands of a single family in an almost direct line. Since 1750 this ancient drapery shop has been under the control of Cator & Sons, who occupy the original building.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Hopeful Words to Childless Women.

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and desolate old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some great lack of strength in the organs of generation. Such a condition is nearly always due to long continued neglect of the plainest warnings.

Frequent backache and distressing pains accompanied by offensive discharges and generally by irregular and scanty menstruation, indicate a nerve degeneration of the womb and surrounding organs, that unless speedily checked will result in barrenness.

Read Mrs. Wilson's letter:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—None could have suffered from female troubles more than I. I had tumors on the womb, my ovaries were diseased, and for fifteen years I was a burden to myself. I was operated upon three different times, with only temporary relief; also tried many doctors. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me by a lady friend, and after taking four bottles I was like a new woman. I had been married nine years, and had no children. I now have a beautiful little girl, and we feel assured she is the result of my taking the Compound.—MAY B. WILSON, 323 Sassafras St., Millville, N. J.

Modern science and past experience have produced nothing so effective in treating diseases of the female organs as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash used according to special directions.

If you know any woman who is suffering and who is unable to secure relief, or who is sorrowful because she believes herself barren, tell her to write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and ask her advice. The thousands of Mrs. Pinkham's cures are all recorded for quick reference, and a reply will be promptly sent wholly without charge, that will direct her what to do.

Mrs. B. BLUHM, 4940 San Francisco Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:—"It has been my great desire to have a babe. Since taking your medicine my wish is fulfilled."

AUBURN DOR R

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....March 31 1898

Jessie Boland Eckhart Dead.

It is with deepest sorrow that our people will learn of Mrs. Frank Eckhart's death. A telegram yesterday to Mr. Boland brought the sad news, that she breathed her last at 11:30 Pacific Time, or 1:30 our standard time. This morning Mr. Boland received a letter from Frank, written on Thursday, which said she had grown worse and they were alarmed about her. So it would seem that this adverse change, was but the beginning of the final struggle. It will be remembered that when she first went there, she began, to improve and this was kept up till within a short time. They will start home on the united express tomorrow morning and will reach here Friday evening. The funeral will probably be on Saturday or Sunday. Few deaths have occurred in Auburn, that have more of the element of sadness. A young woman of bright promise and flattering prospects, a happy home and loving husband and a sweet babe, a devoted father, mother and brother, in fact everything that could make life desirable, and death unwelcome, yet she is called away in her young womanhood to leave all these. It is a mournful instance of the uncertainty of human life.

Spanish Rule Nearly Over

Spanish rule in the new world has been one long record of cruelty and oppression, broken promises and bloody crimes. The first man from Spain, Columbus, broke his promise to reward the man who first saw the land. Then Spain broke promise with him and refused to give him a fifth of the land he discovered as, the terms were, but sent him home in chains.

When they landed in Central America, they sent word to the natives to come in and be converted to the true religion and be baptized, or else, prepare for battle. They came and were baptized 9000 in one day. Yet in a few years, so many had been slain or worked to death, that slaves had to be brought from Africa to do the work.

In all her conquests, Spain carried the "banner of the cross" with the flag of Spain and pushed the conversion of the heathen along with the conquest of new territories for Spain. Now she has lost nearly all her American possessions.

A hundred years ago, she had nearly of South America, Central America, and that part of North America, now including Mexico, Florida, and all the states west and northwest of that between the Mississippi and Rocky Mountains, as well as California. From fifteen states and two territories of the United States, the bloody foot prints of the Spaniard have disappeared. They still hold a few islands, the most important of which are the Phillipine group in the Pacific and Cuba and Porto Rico on this side.

Every variety of religion except their own was persecuted. Jews have been taxed annually thirty pieces of silver for no other reason than they were Jews. And in one city, Toledo, a colony of Jews saved their property from confiscation by filing affidavits that their ancestors sat in the Sanhedrim that ordered the criecifixion of Christ, but voted against it.

RAISING MONEY.

Spain is trying to raise money by private subscriptions and many of the people have agreed to give up a days pay out of their wages while several theaters have volunteered to give a nights entertainment to the government. And all this is to enable a poverty-stricken nation to buy a war ship which they may never need and which if war really comes might probably be taken from them. And all this time their proposed enemy, Uncle Sam, is feeding, clothing and doctoring the subjects of Spain over whose brutal treatment at Spanish hands, we are really contending. Spanish people may be patriotic, but they are neither wise nor humane.

THE ARMY.

The regular army of the United States has for some years been put by law at 25,000. Of these about 6,000 are cavalry which while important to keep Indians in check, would be of little other use in case of war with Spain, for it is scarcely probable that Spain would land a force in our country. The chief fighting would be at sea or in defense of seaport towns from attacks of ships, or if fighting is on the land it would naturally be in Cuba. In Cuba our calvary would be valuable In defense of seaports, the artillery would have most to do. It was largely for this reason, that the other day, congress made arrangements for two new regiments of artillery. Another law is proposed to increase the organization of the regular army to 104,000. But they would not be in active service, except in case of war. Reports from all the states show that there is of drilled militia, 114,000 men who are available at once. And the census reports show that we have ten millions of able bodied men the most of whom would be fit for service. Spain might as well think of these things at an early date.

THE MAINE REPORT.

The Report is Before Congress And The Presidents Send a Special Message.

We give in full today, the report of the Board, that examined into the causes of the destruction of the Maine. In brief, they have decided that there were two explosions, a few seconds apart. That the first was caused by a mine of explosives below the bow of the ship, and that this tore and bent upwards, the steel frame of the vessel making it very plain that the explosion came from below. This first explosion they say caused the second one, which was stronger and lasted longer and was in their opinion, the explosion of two or more of the forward magazines of the Maine, which completed the wreck begun by the mine. They cannot say how or by whom the submarine mine was exploded. Captain Sigsbee testified that when he came there he anchored to that particular buoy, because the official pilot said to do so. But he has since been told by captains who had been using the harbor for years, that they seldom or never knew of any other ships using that place. He therefore seems to think, he had been tied at that particular spot for a special purpose. He also admits that the Spaniards may have got angry with him, for a speech he made, when replying to a party of officials and ladies who came to visit his ship. Their leader made a speech which Sigsbee could not understand and it was translated to him. Then he made a short speech in English in reply. This the Spaniards published next day in their papers, making out that he favored the "autonomists," which he did not do. He says, this false translation may have angered them and may have caused some one to fire the mine. But he cannot say. In fact all is in the dark as to who is to blame, though fully settled as to what did it. It now remains for the president and congress to take such action as the circumstances warrant. It looks as if the situation were a grave one. No matter who exploded that mine, the fact of its explosion and destructive effects make it a national insult of the deepest character. The least thing Spain can do is to make an offer of heavy indemnity. But to us it does not look as if we could accept money for so gross an insult. We believe if this government shows the proper spirit, that Spain will back down and that the final result would be to free Cuba. This would relieve Spain, for insulting the United States, she has insulted the whole civilized world as well. The giving up of Cuba would set her right. The United States should demand this and not money.

AUBURN'S FIRST STRIKE.

At the Greenler factory they had to stop work in the hoop factory part, because no logs were coming in this bad weather. But a part of the men were set to work at night in the stave department. They were given work about equal to 8½ hours but were paid for 9 hours, but as it was night work the men, twenty in all, thought they should be paid for 10 hours. So they struck about 4 a. m. yesterday. The company however, felt that it had not proved profitable to run at night, and have given that up. So that settles it The hoop factory men will have to lie idle till the timber is plenty enough to start again which will likely be soon. The stave factory will keep at work in dao time. The hoop factory will start when they have logs. The hoop factory at Roann has also stopped till logs come in again.

MICHAEL SEILER DEAD

A Well Known DeKalb Educator Meets an Untimely Death

TERRE HAUTE, IND., March 28, Special to the DAILY COURIER.

Prof. Michael Seiler lost his life here yesterday by an accident. He made a misstep at the head of the stairs and fell to the bottom receiving injuries of which he died.

Mr. Seiler, is well known in DeKalb county and Auburn. He began here as a teacher many years ago where his home was in Fairfied township, where his people then lived on a farm. Later he graduated at the State Normal School at Terre Haute, and began his career as a teacher on a larger scale He was for some time at the head of the Auburn schools and later, resigned to become a teacher at his "alma mater" the State Normal. He afterwards became one of the regular faculty and so continued till four or five years ago when he severed his connection with the institution to enter the business of life insurance. His brother Frank P. Seiler is well known to all our people he being a resident of Ashley. Another, brother, Cyms, went from here to Elkhart county and some time ago served two terms as county treasurer All our people will regret to hear of Mr. Seiler's tragic death.

Easter Opening

The Bishop & Lackey Co., will give their first Opening of Millinery on Friday and Saturday, April 1, and 2. All are invited to inspect the new creations.

THE TIME OF RENEWAL.

All nature is renewed in the springtime The sky takes on a fresher color, the trees don their Easter garments, everything seems glad and happy. It seems a pity that such a beautiful season so disagreeable a malady as the so-called "spring fever" should unfit a great many people to enjoy the unaccustomed sunshine and freshness that prevails. What is spring fever? It is that sluggishness and irritability which everyone takes a spring tonic for. "Bad blood" some people call it. A great deal of "blood medicine" is sold in the spring of the year. The blood, the vigor, the health must be renewed with the trees and flowers and grass. The principal difficulty is which of the numerous spring tonics is the best? Which will cure permanently and remove quickly all the disagreeable symptoms. Read what Mrs. Adlin Adams Crafton, Ky., says of Pe ru-na:

"I was about to give up all hopes when I concluded to take Pe-ru-na. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can't speak too highly of it."

A book containing several hundred letters similar to the one from which this is an extract, will be sent free to any address by the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

BUTLER.

More rain and more mud and duller times for trade.

The writer, wife, and daughter, Florence, spent last Sunday in the city of Toledo, visiting with brothers and other friends. The city is stirred to its center of a new phase in politics. The old school board had been patterning after DeKalb county officials of recent date, and had become so effectualy entrenched that only an act of the legislature succeeded in rooting them out of office. A new deal is now on hand. There are five place to fill with new men, and there are eighteen republicans and twenty-two democrats on the ticket to be voted upon next Tuesday. The women vote on this election, and they are fully alive to the occasion. Nice warm weather dry roads and a multitude of wheels in sight everywhere—was an agreeable change from the sights in Butler.

It is reported that Wabash surveyors are running a line from Butler to New Haven to connect Detroit and Fort Wayne, if the Eel River road is lost to the Wabash.

UNION CHAPEL.

Sunday school every Sunday at 9:30. preaching every two weeks.

John Pyle is putting in a number of tile this spring which will be a great benefit to his farm.

Last Sunday after Sunday school a number of boys went over to the R R. switch to board a freight train for Hicksville. The poor boys stood around there all day waiting for the train that never came. They returned home at night all wet and very hungry.

Hiram Penland returned last Wednesday from his wedding trp.

Denis Poorman is getting timber to build a few drags. He is getting to be a good workmen and has done considerable work in his little shop this winter.

Clyde Hay has rented the John Pyle farm for another summer.

Clift Metcalf has moved on the old Speer farm.

Last Saturday evening as George Hoodlemier and son were returning from town they got part way home when they noticed that one of their buggy wheels was going down with them. It was a muddy job but they had to pry it up and put a rail under the axle and continued their journey by each one riding a horse.

ST. JOE.

Frank Bishop of Ft. Wayne visited his parents and best girl over Sunday.

W. A. G. Smith was in Garrett last Saturday looking after some jobs of carpenter work.

James Harter will move this week onto Jake Sechler's farm four miles north of this place.

Frank Barney has sold his residence to Mrs. Buchanan of near Concord Frank is remodeling the Knepper property and will move there as soon as the place is completed.

Wineland & Sons have their Hoop mill nearly torn down and will soon be ready to load on the cars and move to their location in Michigan.

A. B. Filley and Grubb have their new mill well under way and when done will be one of the best (if not the best) saw mills in the county. In addition to the saw mill, a planing machine a bolter, a feed grinding machine and a first class cider and jell machine will be added.

St Joe is again without a blacksmith Mr. Saylor our last, having gone no man knows where.

Dr. Becker of Dayton, Ohio delivered his two lectures here last week both of which were well attended considering the bad roads.

Dr. Ort of Wittenberg College Springfield Ohio preached Sunday evening at the Lutheran church to a large and attentive audience.

Isaac Meese informs us that M, E. Olds is to start a war daily in the very near future, and has already secured an option on Mr Meese as war correspondent at Key West or Dry Tortugas, It is possible that James Stewart will be sent to Havana to report the first battle.

Mrs. Hester Lower, of Hicksville, visited with friends in town Friday of last week.

Miss Jenkins, of Iowa, who has been visiting her grandfather, E. J. Dilley and other friends here, for the past three months returned home last Monday.

—The many friends of Mrs. Beeks Erick will be glad to learn that she is fast convalescing.

—Our Hello machine don't Hello; What's the matter.

John Bowers will work for Elmer Case this summer.

Emory Johnston had 5 gallons of maple syrup stolen last week.

Misses Mabel and Addie Wert were the guests of their grandparents, Mr and Mrs. John Ling over Sunday.

Robert Lockhart of near Custer was visiting with his parents here Sunday.

W. F. Krahn is agent for the International Tailoring Co. of Chicago and solicits your patronage.

Come to the entertainment at the Fairfield Center school house next Saturday evening April 2nd which will be given by the "Fairfield Dramatic Co." Dialogues, recitations, stump speeches good music, both vocal and instrumental are included in the program. The Calkins orchestra will furnish music. Some of the dialogues are "Back Woods School," "April Fools," "Awful Boots," "Bachelors Bedroom," etc. Also the "Yankee Peddler or Old Times in Virginia" is a lively drama in three acts. This is a realistic picture of plantation life in Virginia. The entertainment is well worth $1 to anyone who is not too old or too young to laugh, but considering the hard times we have decided to bring the price down within reach of all, the nominal sum of 5c. Apply immediately to John H. Reinoehl for reserved seats. Come early, curtain rises at 8 o'clock.

Thursday's Daily.

—See the new 1898, right hand cut, McCormick Binder and Big 4 Mowers at Culbertson & Boland's cheap hardware Store, Auburn, Ind.

—Dr. Baxter is paying special attention to Diseases of Children also Diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Nervous system. tf

—NEW SUBSCRIBERS, say about forty, can pay us in wood, when the roads become better. Send in the names. We also have a number of old subscribers who pay in wood and when roads get good, they can deliver it.

—When you want to buy Hardware or Farm Machinery cheap, don't fail to call at Culbertson & Boland's cheap hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

Ladies who were entertained by Mrs. Zent yesterday are very enthusiastic in praise of their hostess. It was in every way a lovely affair, for besides the regular members of the Reading Club, there were a number of invited guests who enjoyed it with them. And then the delicate and abundant luncheon captivated the guests, all of whom are judges of matters in this line. Thirty-five were present.

—Frank Draggoo is making repairs, on his new residence property on South Main-st. Brandon & Long are the men in charge of the capenter work.

—Mrs. Frank Kerr of Mansfield, Ohio., is visiting with her friend Mrs. Archie McIntyre this week.

—Jacob Hillegass of Huntertown died at his home Tuesday He was a very prominent man and at one time commissioner of Allen county. He was the father of Mrs. Lucy West who formerly lived in Auburn. His son Jerry Hillegass was several years county superintendent of Allen county.

What will the big dailies do when this cruel war is over. We picked up one yesterday and in big letters at the left hand it said "There will be no war." But in equally big letters at the right hand it said "There will be fighting in ten days." You pay your money and take your choice.

—Destructive floods are reported all along the upper Ohio river and the streams that flow into it. In fact there has been more or less damage all over the Central States. The cool wave will probably help stop it.

—G. W. Woodcox was in Auburn yesterday and reports his brother P. A. Woodcox is in very delicate health, and his case is considered serious. We are sorry to hear this, as he has always been an enterprising and useful citizen.

Friday's Daily.

—Ollie Clay, as a grocery man is making a success of it, and is building up a nice trade.

—Cook Ford is selling a great deal of timothy seed now, as farmers are sowing a good deal.

Dr. Swarts reports J. E. Rose as improving and believes he will be out in a short time. We are pleased to hear this.

—Miss Lulu Rempis of Waterloo and Mrs. Minnie Davenport of Chicago are the guests for the day of Mrs. Walter Hartman of North Main Street.

—Mrs. I. M. Johnson is improving but it is very slow. Her daughter, Mrs. Morrison is now sick having an attack of neuralgia in her head and face.

—The last Opera Company in town was April 17, 1890, in the other Opera House. The Mikado was given here a year or two before that.

—Henry Wallrath, of Logansport, is in the city in the interest of the "Record," a Catholic paper of Indianapolis in which they have an interest. His father, Hon. Peter Wallrath was a member of the last legislature, and is publisher of the "Sternen Banner" a German paper at Logansport.

—Mrs. Prosser is here from Elkhart and brings word that all are well up there. Mr. Kuhlman and Johnson are engaged in the manufacture of transformers and doing well. The Hornberger boys are also in the same work but are at Aurora, Ill., and prospering. Mrs. Prosser and her sister Mrs. Jones are here looking after their property which they still hold. Mrs. Prosser is going to make repairs and improvements on her Main street residence property. Mrs. Jones is putting down a new sidewalk along her dwelling house east of the Central House.

—Judge Powers was here yesterday, and in a conversation, we learned that Ex-prosecutor Eugene Davis is very sick. He was taken sick soon after the meeting of the Bar Association at Angola, and seems to get worse rather than better. The trouble seems to be in his head, and he is a good deal of the time delirious. His condition is serious.

—A pound of facts is worth a ton of theories. Thousands upon thousands of people prefer Fox' XXXX Square Wafer Butter Crackers because they have found them best notwithstanding the high-sounding but empty promises of imitators.

—Friends of Peter Conrad for a generation one of the leading citizens of Pierceton, will be interested to hear that he has bought a fine residence in Warsaw and will make that city his future home. He retains his wagon and carriage business in Pierceton.

Just then one of the others tripped and fell in the range of the shot, and was instantly killed. Young You, is a son of the A. J. You, who was a candidate for congress against Judge Lowry in 1884.

—The site of the horticultural building at the Centennial in Philadelphia was the ground on which was situated "Landsdowne," the residence of Joseph Bonaparte, a brother of the great Napoleon. It was burned some years before the Centennial, but originally built by Gov. John Penn. Joseph had been King of Spain for a few years, placed there by Napoleon.

—J. C. Lochner, so long connected with the COURIER office, went to Argos in Marshall county, today to take possession of a newspaper. The Reflector, that he has purchased. His wife will follow as soon as arrangements for the change can be made. Mr. Lochner has been a faithful assistant on the DAILY and WEEKLY COURIER and always discharged his duties in a way that was eminently satisfactory. He has the best wishes of the entire office, and hopes for his future success. He and his wife have been valuable citizens and we are sorry to lose them.

—The farmer, the mechanic and the bicycle rider are liable to unexpected cuts and bruises. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best thing to keep on hand. It heals quickly, and is a well known cure for piles. For sale by H B McCord.

—Floods in southern Indiana, getting worse. Rev. R. A. Montgomery of Waterloo, who was here yesterday was to have taken the afternoon train to meet his wife at Ft. Wayne, as she was coming up from Cincinnati to meet him and go to Waterloo where they are located now. But just as he was buying his ticket here, he was notified that she could not come, owing to the floods. So he returned to Waterloo on the evening train.

—Commissioner Shoemaker, who has been here yesterday and today as a witness in the Sherwood case, went to Ft. Wayne this forenoon to consult a surgeon, as to a probable operation to relieve his son, Scott Shoemaker, who has been ill so long. It appears to be a case of appendicitis, a very difficult disease to handle, and one requiring a good deal of skill on the part of the surgeon, of an operation is had. Scott has had a hard battle of it, and we sincerely hope the sought for relief may be secured.

—A letter from John Lochner at Argos says the roads are dry and good there, and that what Ed Scott and he want worst now is their bicycles. They never thought to take them along. He has had some trouble to get a house as yet.

—It is a great leap from the old fashioned doses of blue-mass and nauseous physics to the pleasant little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure constipation, sick headache and biliousness. H. B. McCord's sells it.

—The competition between Paper Manufacturers is to see who can produce the best goods and keep within the limit. All the best factories are in a pool or "trust" that sets the price Each factory tries to make the best result. The consumer gets for 8 cents papers of same quality as formerly sold for 40 cents. Davenport, the Druggist, has the Graves Papers. The largest factory and best products in the world.

Scott Shoemaker was taken through on the south bound forenoon train today on his way to Ft. Wayne for an operation. He was very weak and had to be carried on a reclining chair and was placed in the baggage car as he could not be got into the coach. The operation is to be this afternoon, if he is able to stand it. Dr. Stamets drove up to Waterloo this morning and assisted in taking him down. He says that while Mr. Shoemaker's general condition is improved the disease has reached such a stage that it can be stopped only by a surgical operation that will remove the part affected. The operation is one attended with a good deal of danger and no one can foresee the result. We shall hope for the best.

THE BISHOP & LACKEY CO.

SET THE RIVER ON FIRE.

The old description of a lazy man in New York state was "He'll never set the North river afire." But some boys in Ft. Wayne yesterday set the St. Mary's river afire. They saw the oil floating on the river below the gas works and struck a match. There flashed up a blaze that surprised them and it came near destroying the plant. Dense smoke arose and the more water was thrown on the worse it burned. The fire department had a hard fight to save the works. And now the town talks of getting the river insured. The great cause was the bursting of an oil pipe that allowed a large quantity of oil to flow out onto the water and it spread from bank to bank, up and down alike.

A Sensational Letter.

Some time ago, there was a rumor that Gen. Lee at Havana had received a strange letter, a day or so after the Maine was destroyed. Now, we find published in full what is claimed to that letter. It is in Spanish and gives the names of three Spanish divers, all very tough citizens, who were promised $6,000 if they would go under water and attach a big torpedo to the Maine, and blow her up. They got $2000 down but have never called for the rest. Whether there is any truth in this letter, we cannot say. The story is plausibly told.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

IS THE WAR ON?

Spain Moves Her Torpedo Flotilla Towards Cuba.

The Spanish torpedo flotilla has sailed from the Canaries for Porto Rico. The Navy Department, on learning this, immediately notified the President and War Department. This news has caused most intense excitement at the Navy Department, and has increased the gravity of the situation.

The fleet consists of six torpedo boats and seven torpedo boat destroyers—thirteen in all—constituting one of the most formidable torpedo squadrons now afloat.

There is a very decided current of sentiment among naval officers, including some of the highest, in favor of decisive and immediate action. They say that from a naval strategic view it would be most unfortunate at this time to have this great torpedo flotilla brought within easy reach of our squadron at Key West.

This it can be stated is not mere naval speculation, but has been given official cognizance and has been urged upon the President.

Spain's Answer Sounds Like War.

The court of inquiry appointed to investigate the cause of the Maine disaster, having reported that the loss of the battleship was due to an outside explosion, the State Department, by direction of the President, cabled United States Minister Woodford, at Madrid, to notify the Spanish Government of this conclusion. The Spanish Government cabled to Washington that the Spanish naval commission holds the disaster to the Maine to be of internal origin. The Government of Spain is not disposed to turn back the torpedo flotilla now proceeding from the Canaries, and would be disinclined to consider a suggestion from this Government tending to interfere with the disposition by Spain of her own naval forces. War preparations unprecedented were hurried to completion by the War and Navy Departments and the country is practically on a war footing.

Bandits Secure Big Plunder.

It is believed that the two men who robbed a train near Goshen, Cal., the other night, secured not less than $50,000. The statement is made that there was $35,000 in gold dust from Randsburg in the wrecked express car and nearly $25,000 was in the closed mail pouch. Officials of the Wells-Fargo Company deny that the robbers secured this amount. They decline to estimate the amount taken.

Another Battle in Cuba.

Havana special: An official dispatch from Gen. Luque to Gen. Blanco gives the news of a series of important engagements in Puerto Principe Province, in which over 8,000 men were engaged on both sides. The insurgents used dynamite bombs. The artillery was also used with terrible effect by both armies. The losses on both sides are said to be very heavy.

Want to Arbitrate.

Madrid special: At a Cabinet meeting it was resolved to propose to the United States that the Spanish and American reports on the loss of the Maine be compared before published in order to make them harmonious. In case such an agreement is found impossible the question must be submitted to arbitration.

Watson Is Out of Politics.

Thomas E. Watson, who was nominated for Governor of Georgia a week ago by the Populists, is out in an open letter declining to have the honor. After saying he could not be elected, no matter how the ballot went, he announces that he is out of politics for good.

Nominated by the President.

The President has sent these nominations to the Senate: Maplon M. Garland, Surveyor of Customs, port of Pittsburgh, Pa. John W. Lyons of Georgia, to be Register of the Treasury. Leslie Combs, pension agent at Louisville, Ky.

Lieut. Jenkins' Body Found.

The body of Lieut. Friend W. Jenkins of the Maine, was found near the torpedo tube, aft, as it had been hoped would be the case. The remains, of course, were badly decomposed. Private papers were found in his coat pocket.

Lost at Sea.

A dispatch from Marseilles says the French steamer Lydia has been lost at sea and thirty persons drowned. The Lydia left Constantinople March 4.

Two Drowned.

While returning home from market Samuel Hagey and wife, north of New Hagerstown, Ohio, were drowned while crossing McGuire Creek.

Uncle Sam Buys Another Boat.

London special: Lieutenant Commander Colwell, the United States Naval attache here, has bought for the United States Government, through an American firm, a first-class torpedo boat, built at Schichau for Germany. She is ready to sail.

A Pig Iron Trust.

A fully attended meeting of manufacturers of Bessemer pig iron in the Cleveland, Mahoning and Shenango districts was held at Cleveland. Final steps were taken in the formation of a pig iron trust.

Chinese Actors Bound for Omaha.

The steamship Keinshin Maru arrived at Port Townsend, Wash., from Hong-Kong and Yokohama, bringing as passengers thirty Chinese actors, who are the vanguard of the 400 soon to land in the United States to participate in the Transmississippi exposition at Omaha.

J. Sterling Morton Elected.

Former Secretary of Agriculture J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska was elected president of the National Sound Money League at its first annual meeting held in Chicago. A. B. Hepburn of New York was re-elected treasurer and E. V. Smalley secretary.

ROBBERS' RICH HAUL.

State Bank of Nickerson, Kan., Looted for $75,000.

The State bank of Nickerson, Kan., was blown open and robbed the other night. Three of the men, with masks on their faces, entered the building, a fourth was stationed at the corner of the street as guard. After digging into the vault dynamite was placed in the wall and the wall was blown to pieces. The explosion under the outer wall did not make much noise, but when the burglars undertook to get open the door of the safe they met with a greater resistance and several charges were made to break the door. The noise of the explosion aroused some persons who lived near the bank. They instituted a search as to the cause of the trouble and were met by the outside guard, who compelled them to go and sit down on the sidewalk. The fellows on the inside did a bad job of blowing up the safe door, as they blew most of the paper money to pieces. L. C. Brown, President of the bank, says that over $75,000 was taken, including the amount that was blown to pieces, which cannot be estimated.

IMPORTANT RULING ON LIBEL.

Truth of an Article Complained of Is a Justification in Law.

Judge Selden S. Spencer of division 7 of the St. Louis Circuit Court handed down a decision on the rights of newspapers to plead in justification in libel suits that the articles sued on were true. The point came up on a motion for a rehearing of the case of Charles B. Stark vs. Publishers George Knapp & Co., in which Stark sued for damages on account of articles published. Judge Spencer refused a rehearing of the case, which had been decided in favor of the defendants. The defense was that what was published was true. Judge Spencer said in part: "If the substance of the publication in its full and fair meaning is alleged and proved to be true the justification is complete."

LOCATES THE TREASURE.

Money of a Murdered Man Buried in an Old Orchard.

John Q. Yazle of Lima, O., writes to Mayor McMurray of Denver, Colo., requesting him to locate Mrs. William Thompson. Yazle says he has located the farmer in whose orchard the $30,000 was buried by Oscar Asherman after he murdered William Thompson in California in 1889. He says the confession of Asherman as told by his father after returning from his son's deathbed in Arizona, agrees in detail with the story told to Yazle by the man who helped Asherman bury Thompson's gold in an orchard. Yazle seeks Mrs. Thompson in the hope of receiving a reward for locating the money. The police in Denver have been searching for her since Asherman's confession was first published.

Cling to Old Customs.

Secretary Bliss at Washington has made public an interesting letter from Gov. John B. Brady of Alaska, containing observations made by him while on his annual trip of inspection to the various points on the coast aboard the United States ship Wheeling. Special attention, the Governor says, should be paid to vessels navigating the Yukon, the traffic on which is so large that the tendency is to take great risks. The Wheeling, after leaving Dyea, called at the village at the north of Chicago Island, called Hoonah. Here one of the leading men of the village had been accidentally killed by a child 6 years of age. The people never take account of accidents, and the Hoonah natives held the child's mother and her people responsible and demanded reparation, which was given, a body of 200 men thoroughly armed going to a native village near Killisnoe, at which place the child's mother and her people belonged, and compelling them to turn over many blankets, trunks and money. The Governor severely admonished the natives and told them their old customs would not be tolerated. From this point the Wheeling proceeded to Yakutat. The Governor has considerable to say about the practice of witchery, which seems to exist to a considerable extent in that part of the country. He tells of a man and two women who were bound and tied for bewitching a man. On the ninth day the bound man was released, and as he had nothing to eat, and but a few drinks of water, he was in a terrible physical condition. The Governor spent some time talking to these people, and after explaining the laws of the United States told them that in the future he would not deal leniently with those who had practiced witchcraft. The Wheeling returned to Sitka. Her cruise, in the Governor's opinion, had done great good to the natives, as they dread a gunboat more than anything else. He says he is convinced it is time to take the natives vigorously in hand and break up their witchcraft, distillings of rum and manufacturing of beer, and compel them to conform to our laws in all respects.

Accused by His Child.

Several weeks ago Mrs. John Cox and one of her children were burned to death two miles east of Texarkana, Ark. It was reported as an accident, in which Mrs. Cox had fainted and fallen into the fireplace, where the embers set fire to her clothing and burned her up. The flames were supposed to have also ignited a cradle and burned the baby. Now, as the result of a story told by an older child of John Cox, the husband and father has been arrested and is confined in jail charged with the murder of the woman and her child.

Buying Horses for Cavalry.

The Black Hills ranges are being scoured by the United States agents for horses suitable for the cavalry. A contract has been made with one large horse company near Fort Meade, S. D., to furnish 2,000 horses as soon as they can be brought in from the range. Negotiations are also being made by the Government agent there at the post for several hundred more horses from other ranches. The army officers think these horses are to be shipped South.

Willimantic Joins the Trust.

J. E. Lawton of Manchester, England, vice-chairman of the English sewing cotton corporation, and John R. Dos Passos, the New York counsel of the American Thread Company, have completed the final arrangements for the transfer of the Willimantic Thread Company's plant at Hartford, Conn., to the trust. Lawton furnished $3,000,000 and Dos Passos $2,400,000, $6,000,000 being the sum required to complete the deal.

Spain's Proposal Rejected.

Spain has proposed that the United States join in effecting a settlement of the Cuban question upon the basis of complete autonomy of the Canadian pattern, under Spanish sovereignty, and the proposal has been rejected. Both nations are now facing each other in a contest of nerve. It is believed that the President's firm stand will cause Spain inch by inch to yield to the inevitable without recourse to war.

Maine Report Received.

President McKinley has received the verdict of the Maine court of inquiry by wire from Admiral Sicard, and now knows that our battle ship was wrecked by an external explosion.

Left the Train in Boats.

On account of high water on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad between Zanesville and Newark, Ohio, a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train, No. 105, with four cars, was started for Newark over the Cincinnati and Muskingum Valley and Pan-Handle tracks. About three miles east of Frazeysburg high waters had undermined the roadbed for 200 yards. The train struck the hanging track at the rate of forty miles an hour, throwing the engine, Pullman car and day coach from the track into Wakatomica creek. The day coach, engine and tender were completely submerged. The train was running in reverse order, the engine being coupled to the Pullman. Fireman Peacock had a very narrow escape from being drowned, being rescued by the engineer and Pilot Sawyer. No one was seriously injured, but a few persons received cuts and bruises. Passengers and crew were taken to the shore in boats.

GOOD PROFIT IN FORESTS.

Chief Warden of Minnesota Explains Poor Lands' Possibilities.

In Brainerd, Minn., Gen. Andrews, chief forest warden of that State, in an address on forestry, said the virgin pine in Minnesota would be exhausted in about twenty years, but if the younger pine could be saved from fires and the State would at once encourage foresting the non-agricultural lands the lumber industry might be perpetuated. The public forests of Saxony, mostly on poor mountain land, yielded a net annual revenue of $4.50 an acre. There were a few million acres of similar soil in scattered acres in Minnesota lying waste and from which, unless forested, no income nor even taxes would ever be derived. The public had been in winter quarters on the subject too long.

ENSIGN SPEAR A BRAVE MAN.

Jumps Overboard in Uniform to Save a Drowning Sailor.

An act of heroism on the part of a young naval officer became generally known at Key West. Ensign Roscoe Spear of the Montgomery, now lying in the harbor, jumped overboard late the other night in response to the cry "man overboard." He was in full uniform, but after a few minutes found the luckless sailor, who was unable to swim and was being rapidly borne away from the ship. After a hard struggle young Spear brought the almost lifeless man back to the Montgomery, and both were hauled in more dead than alive. It took several hours to revive the plucky officer. Ensign Spear comes from Norristown, Pa.

Hidden Treasure Found.

Considerable excitement has been occasioned by the finding of $16,000 in gold and silver coin by men who were repairing an old house in the west end of Santa Fe, N. M., belonging to a family named Rodriguez. The money is supposed to have been buried some years ago by Rodriguez's mother, and as there are several heirs claiming it there promises to be developed considerable bad blood before matters reach a conclusion.

Cattlemen Elect Officers.

The Kansas State Cattlemen's Association closed its annual convention at Abilene. A resolution was adopted asking the railroads of Kansas to continue the feed in transit rate or pasture rate or to give them something as good. Officers were elected for the coming year as follows: Joseph White, president; G. A. Rogers, secretary; C. A. Hodge, treasurer.

Alaskan Toll Road Seized.

The Senators from Washington laid before Secretary Alger private but reliable information that a mob had seized the toll road leading from Skaguay, Alaska, over the White pass and was still in possession of it. The Secretary at once advised the commanding officer of the department of Columbia to restore the property to the rightful owners and protect life and property.

French Slain by Natives.

The Paris Siecle says a French expedition sent against Bossiriris, on the Island of Madagascar, has met with serious resistance, six officers and one hundred men being killed. The insurgents, it is added, also captured a number of rifles and 125,000 cartridges.

Tyler Known to Be Alive.

The family of Joel G. Tyler, the former teller of the Safety Fund Bank of Fitchburg, Mass., who has been missing since March 11, has announced that it is now known where Mr. Tyler is, and that he has suffered no harm.

Bark Wrecked at Sea.

Forty lives are believed to have been lost a few miles outside the Golden Gate, San Francisco, by the capsizing of the bark Helen W. Almy during the storm which had been raging off the coast for two or three days.

Wheelock G. Veazey Dead.

Wheelock G. Veazey of Vermont, formerly a member of the interstate commerce commission, died at Washington, D. C. Mr. Veazey resigned from the commission about a year ago on account of failing health.

Two Men Hold Up a Train.

Passenger train No. 18, north bound, was held up at Cross Station, a siding seven miles from Goshen Junction, Cal., by two masked robbers. The express car was blown up and one pouch in the mail car rifled.

Experience Lack of Funds.

It was announced that work on the new East river bridge at New York had been stopped for lack of funds.

HORRORS IN CUBA TOLD TO THE SENATE.

Senator Gallinger.

Senator Thurston.

SENATOR GALLINGER, of New Hampshire, said in the Senate Wednesday: "The war in Cuba is one of starvation and extermination, a war more cruel than the world has ever known. It is worse even than that of the Kurds against the Armenians. In an old building at Los Flocas we found 645 persons lying on the floors. Many of them were entirely nude, and all were starving. At Matanzas the railroad station was covered with poor, helpless beings, in rags, who had been driven from their homes only to beg for pity and bread. The appeals of naked children were heartrending. Weyler had here devised a scheme of human suffering and sorrow that put Dante's Inferno in the shade, and converted a prosperous people into a herd of starving unfortunates. Eight hundred dead were carried to their graves in six days by one hearse in San Christobal. Deaths resulted from lack of food, and in many other cities of the island every dog and cat has been eaten by the starving unfortunates. What a picture is this, eighty miles from our shore, and yet this great nation folds its arms and officially says: 'Am I my brother's keeper?' What of the Maine? I do not know, but one thing I do know. A government that would starve 400,000 of its own people would do anything. Human life purposely taken cannot be paid for in gold or silver, and if it shall appear that such was the fate of 250 American sailors, then heaven pity the guilty. For those words I may be called a 'jingo,' but I would rather be a jingo than a tory. I do not believe that Spain can subdue the insurgents. They have been oppressed so long that they prefer death to continued Spanish rule. In the interests of a common humanity this country should intervene and stop the war. It is a reproach on this age of civilization that a bankrupt country like Spain should hold in bondage a people which has aspirations for the same liberty that we enjoy."

SENATOR JOHN M. THURSTON, of Nebraska, who lately returned from a journey to Cuba, Thursday addressed the Senate upon the Cuban situation. "Mr. President," said Mr. Thurston, "I am here by command of silent lips to speak once and for all upon the Cuban situation. After three years of warfare and the use of 225,000 Spanish troops, Spain has lost control of every foot of Cuba not surrounded by an actual intrenchment and protected by a fortified picket line. The revolutionists are in absolute and almost peaceful possession of nearly one-half of the island. Under the inhuman policy of Weyler not less than 400,000 self-supporting, simple, peaceable, defenseless country people were driven from their homes in the agricultural portions of the Spanish provinces to the cities and imprisoned upon the barren wastes outside the residence portions of these cities and within the lines of intrenchment established a little way beyond. Most of these people were old men, women and children. Slow starvation was their inevitable fate. A conservative estimate indicates that 210,000 of these people have already perished from starvation. The government of Spain has never contributed $1 to shelter, feed or provide medical attention for these, its citizens. Twice within the past three years, Mr. Thurston said, "he had voted for a resolution recognizing the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents, but he was satisfied it was now too late to accord them belligerent rights, or even merely to recognize the independence of the Cuban republic. The United States should now actively use its influence for the independence of the island. It was the plain duty of the President of the United States to give to the liberal ministry of Spain a reasonable time in which to test its proposed autonomy. That time has been given. 'Autonomy is conceded has been given. The time for action has come. Every hour's delay adds another chapter to the awful story of misery and death. Only one power can intervene—the United States of America."

SISTER SHIPS.

The Kentucky and the Kearsarge Uncle Sam's Greatest Vessels.

The battle ships Kentucky and Kearsarge, launched Thursday, are exact counterparts of each other and make a brace of fighting machines more powerful than any two ships that steam upon the seas. Sister ships built on the same lines from the same specifications, the eye of an expert navy man would be needed to note any little differences in their construction. Both are tremendous men-of-war and unique in appearance. They seem rather short for their breadth of beam. Their extreme length is only 368 feet, while amidships they measure 72 feet 2 inches across. The forward freeboard measures 14 feet 3 inches, and the freeboard aft 12 feet 4 inches. The mean draft of both ships is 23 feet 6 inches, with their normal 410 tons of coal, which means a displacement of 11,500 tons. Power stands out in their every line, but it is in their tremendous armament and their magnificent armor that the Kearsarge and Kentucky frighten one even to look at them. Four threatening 13-inch guns peer out from the two main turrets; that is, two guns to each turret. Over the main turrets are two second turrets, which carry each two 8-inch guns. Fourteen 5-inch quick-firing rifles make up the waist armament. The secondary batteries consist of twenty 6-pounder rapid-fire and six 1-pounder guns and four machine guns. There are five torpedo tubes, two on each broadside and one at the stern. Two military tops mounting machine guns, complete the armament of these ships. It is doubtful if any other warship can hurl such a mass of metal from her side as these sister ships will be able to do when in action.

Their draft, when the coal stock is light, will enable them to steam into the principal navy yards and ports of the country. As for armor, the Kentucky and Kearsarge need ask odds of no fighting ship in our own or in any other navy. All the armor is of solid nickel steel, harveyized. The barbette's armor is 15 inches in thickness, and the 13-inch gun turrets are protected by 15 inches of the same hard metal. Directly in front these turrets are strengthened with 17 instead of 15 inches of harveyized nickel steel. Armored bulkheads will shelter the vitals of the ships. The Kentucky and Kearsarge can steam at the rate of ten knots an hour for 6,000 miles, or at thirteen knots an hour for 4,000 miles—clear across the Atlantic.

GUNS ORDERED EAST.

Military Authorities Take Important Steps in Anticipation of War.

A radical step in anticipation of war was taken by the army administration Thursday afternoon. Orders were issued to the commanders of military departments and posts in various parts of the United States calling for the immediate shipment to the Atlantic seaboard of all siege, field and rapid-fire guns in use at all infantry stations east of Denver.

The commissary department authorized the manufacturers of tents, camp equipage and clothing for the Government to furnish such articles in unlimited quantities for the use of the army until further notice. Accouterments within the quartermaster general's office, necessary in the time of war, are to be supplied for use of the State militia organizations, as well as for the standing army.

Orders for the shipment of heavy ordnance from various posts were issued as the first step in a general plan outlined for the movement of all the cavalry, infantry and artillery troops of the country, except those on the Pacific coast. Orders for carrying out the rest of the plan have been prepared in every detail, and the papers for execution of each step have only to be signed. Preparations for the general movement of the troops provide for the transportation of soldiers by special trains, and contracts have been made with traffic managers of all lines of railways which are to be used between points of departure and destination. It is found that as a result of these careful arrangements all the infantry and cavalry troops east of Denver can be set down at points where they are to be stationed within forty-eight hours of the receipt of orders to move.

Commanders of all military departments and posts involved in the movements have been supplied with all information in regard to the topography of Cuba, the outlying islands of the West Indies, and of the Philippines, which the bureau of military information of the War Department has been busily engaged in obtaining from every available source during the last few weeks. Charts of various kinds, showing the location of every point of military strategic value in the anticipated field of operation, with full description of it and its surroundings, and the value to the enemy, have been prepared for the instruction of the officers of the army. Special attention has been given by the bureau of information to the work of securing facts in reference to the source of the coal supply in Cuba and the Philippines, and the means of cutting off such supply from the enemy.

CROPS FROST-BITTEN.

Fruit Trees and Early Vegetation Suffer in Many States.

The cold wave which swept in from the west last week did much damage to fruit trees and early vegetation in all the States which it traversed. The injury has been increased by the fact that the preceding warm weather caused the trees to blossom freely. The extent of the damage cannot be accurately estimated, but telegraphic reports from various sections show that serious injury has resulted.

Throughout the greater part of Illinois orchardists and farmers take a gloomy view of the situation and predict that the fruit crop has been badly hurt. Reports of damage come from many points in Missouri, but horticulturists in the famous Ozark region think their crops will be protected by snow. Kansas, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Arkansas and Texas report damage to fruit trees. Reports from northwestern Arkansas show destruction has been wrought in the fruit crops of that section by recent heavy rain, snow and sleet. The strawberry crop of the entire northern tier of counties has suffered thousands of dollars' worth of damage, while all other fruits except the apple crop are believed to have been killed. Many Texas fruit growers assert that the blizzard practically ruined the crop. Others say that the freeze was not severe and general enough to do such widespread damage, but all agree that the loss will be serious.

Corea's first railway, twenty-five miles in length, is being constructed by American contractors. The excavating and rough work is being done by natives, who receive 35c a day.

MRS. THURSTON'S DYING WORDS TO THE WOMEN OF AMERICA.

On Friday the House spent another day on the postoffice appropriation bill, but disposed of only two pages of the bill. Most of the day was devoted to a debate on the merits of the pneumatic tube mail service in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and the advisability of continuing the existing contract. An effort to strike out the appropriation of $225,000 was defeated, but the opponents of the appropriation succeeded in securing the adoption of an amendment providing that no additional contracts should be made. An amendment was adopted making it a misdemeanor for any person to "pad" the mails during the period when the mails are being weighed to determine the compensation to be paid to the railroads for their transportation. The Senate was not in session.

The House on Saturday passed the postoffice appropriation bill, which had been under consideration since Wednesday. The main points of attack in the debate were the appropriation of $30,000,000 for railway transportation of mails and $171,000 for special facilities between New York and New Orleans and $25,000 for special facilities from Kansas City to Newton, Kas. These items annually attract more or less of a contest. This year the opposition seemed to be less intense. All effort to reduce the appropriation for railroad transportation signally failed, and the vote on Southern mail subsidy was 77 to 98 against striking out. By neat parliamentary maneuvering the opponents of the subsidy were prevented from getting a direct vote on a motion to recommit with instructions.

The Maine relief bill was passed unanimously by the House on Monday. The Senate bill to satisfy the claim of the legal representatives of John Roach, amounting to $331,151, for labor, material and dockage furnished by Roach, and the occupation of his yards by the gunboats Chicago, Boston and Atlanta, was taken up out of its order and a long and bitter fight followed. Without action upon the claim, the House took a recess until 8 o'clock. The evening session was devoted to the consideration of private pension bills. In the Senate Mr. Bacon introduced an amendment which he announced he would offer to the resolution providing for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States. The amendment provides that the resolution shall not be effective until the question of annexation shall have been submitted to the qualified electors of Hawaii and passed upon affirmatively by them. Mr. Allen secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Interior for information as to the number of all classes of pensioners, including the percentage of men and women and children, carried on the pension rolls. A number of bills of minor importance were passed.

In the House on Tuesday the naval appropriation bill was reported, but as it had not been printed the contested election case of Thorpe versus Eppes, from the fourth Virginia district, was taken up and debated until 4 o'clock, when, owing to the illness of Mr. Rhea of Kentucky, who was to have spoken in the afternoon, the House adjourned. In the Senate the quarantine bill was further debated. Mr. Carter of the Committee on Territories called up the measure reported by him making further provisions for a civil government of Alaska, and addressed the Senate at length upon it. Mr. Gallinger, who recently returned from a trip to Cuba, announced that he would briefly address the Senate upon his observations in Cuba. Mr. Foraker presented the credentials of his colleague, Mr. Hanna, for the term as United States Senator covering six years from March 4, 1899. The credentials were read and ordered filed. Among the bills passed was that to raise the age of protection for girls in the District of Columbia and the territories to 18 years.

In the House on Wednesday R. T. Thorp was given the seat from the fourth Virginia district. Sidney P. Epes, who obtained the certificate of election, was unseated by a strict party vote. The Republicans without a break voted for Thorp, and the Democrats and Populists, with the exception of Mr. Howard of Alabama, a Populist, voted for Epes. Mr. Thorp contested the seat of Mr. Kenney in the last Congress and was seated. The Republican majority in the House, which was 52 when the House convened last summer, is now 54. In the Senate the bill for the relief of the Maine victims was passed without debate. Senator Gallinger related his observations in Cuba. The Senate then resumed consideration of the bill making further provision for a civil government in Alaska, and later took up the national quarantine bill. Its consideration had not been concluded when the Senate adjourned.

Debate on the naval appropriation bill consumed the day in the House on Thursday. Adjourned until Friday. In the Senate Mr. Thurston in a thrilling speech told what he saw in Cuba. A number of bills on the calendar were passed. Mr. Bate presented resolutions in memory of the late Senator Isham G. Harris of Tennessee, and eulogies were delivered by Mr. Bate, Mr. Morrill (Vermont), Mr. Morgan (Alabama), Mr. Hoar (Massachusetts), Mr. Walthall (Mississippi), Mr. Hawley (Connecticut), Mr. Cockrell (Missouri), Mr. Stewart (Nevada), Mr. Chilton (Texas) and Mr. Turley (Tennessee). The Senate adjourned until Monday.

Told in a Few Lines.

Over 700 deaths occurred from the black plague in Bombay, India, during February.

A 7-inch vein of almost pure sulphide of silver was struck seven miles west of Ahumada, in the State of Chihuahua, Mex. The ore assays 22,000 ounces per ton.

Advices from Madrid describe the Spanish people as in a very nervous condition. The slightest hint of good will from a foreign paper is looked upon as an evidence of impending alliance.

A clergyman, while opening the New Jersey Senate with prayer, asked that the Emperor of Germany might be forgiven if his failure "to size this country up properly was due to insanity."

Two negroes are to be sold into bondage at Glasgow, Ky. They have repeatedly been convicted of vagrancy, and the county has advertised their services for sale for the time of their imprisonment.

Oklahoma society is much interested in a divorce case which will be heard at this session of the District Court. The suit has been brought by Mr. Sam Bigsnake, who wishes legal separation from Cress Bigsnake Littlecook, his wife. They are full-blooded Ponca Indians.

William Weber has filed suit at Austin, Tex., against the Houston and Texas Central Railroad Company for $2,500 damages, alleging that he held a first-class ticket but was forced by the conductor to ride in a smoker, was abused by the conductor, and charged with being drunk, when, in fact, he was only in bad health, which was aggravated by his treatment and mental anguish.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Anderson Man Shoots His Wife and Himself—Waste Land Along the Kankakee to Be Reclaimed—Boy Hangs Himself for Fun—Big Fire.

Bloody Deed at Anderson.

Neighbors broke open the house of Jas. Harrington at Anderson. In the center of the parlor lay the body of the man with a bullet wound in the right temple. Kneeling at a chair near a window as if praying, but dead, was the wife. Her head was resting on her clasped hands. A wound in her right temple told the story. There was blood over everything. It is thought that Harrington killed his wife, and then, realizing what he had done, shot out his own brains, first locking all doors and drawing all curtains in the house. Harrington was subject to violent outbursts of temper.

Bottle Works Fire.

The fruit-jar factory of Wilson & McCulloch at Marion was visited by a destructive fire. One of the feed pipes burst, the gas took fire from the engine and in a moment the engine room was filled with flame. In a short time the stamping works were apparently a total wreck. The main plant, in which the jars are made, was saved. The estimate of the loss is from $30,000 to $35,000, on which there is insurance amounting to $18,500.

Will Reclaim Waste Lands.

The Kankakee Reclamation Company, which proposes to reclaim from 50,000 to 75,000 acres of land in the counties of Porter, Lake, Laporte, Starke, Jasper and Newton, along the Kankakee river, has been incorporated under the State laws. It is the purpose of the company to make the river as straight as possible and remove all debris and then cultivate the land for sugar beet raising.

Little Boy Hangs Himself.

Herbert Stanley, the little 12-year-old son of P. S. Stanley, a prominent and wealthy farmer residing one mile west of Nottingham, attempted suicide. He placed a loop of a rope which was suspended to a beam of the barn around his neck, then jumped from a ladder. His brother ran at once to the house and informed the mother, who reached the lad before he was strangled.

Death of Judge Claypool.

Judge Solomon Claypool died at Indianapolis. For many years he had stood in the very front rank of the great lawyers of Indiana and had been employed on either one side or the other of nearly all of the most prominent legal battles of the last quarter of a century. He aided in the prosecution of the notorious Sim Coy.

Within Our Borders.

Henry F. Elliott was found dead in bed at Lincoln.

Kokomo has just completed a new high school building.

The city schools of Cahrleston have been closed on account of a prevalence of diphtheria.

At Shelbyville, Edward Wilcoxen quarreled with his wife, and Mrs. Wilcoxen drowned herself.

The Laketon flouring mills were destroyed by fire. The loss on the mill and machinery is $11,000.

The stove foundry of Bridge, Ford & Company of Louisville will probably be moved to New Albany.

Harry, the 7-year-old son of Sol Addison, was drawn into a sewer at Elwood during a rainstorm and drowned.

At Vincennes, William Osterhage murdered his wife, then placed the revolver to his head and blew his brains out.

At Crawfordsville, the jury in the case against William Thompson for shooting his wife, returned a verdict of guilty.

In Spice Valley township a natural gas well formed by nature has just been discovered on the farm of C. W. Bryant.

The electric clocks owned by the Western Union Company in Columbus were ruined by the crossing of the city's electric wires with those of the Western Union.

Morton Hudson, son of Col. R. N. Hudson of Terre Haute, who was prominent in public affairs in Indiana during his life, is under arrest at Tenanciogo, Mexico, on the charge of murder.

A. V. Ward, who is under arrest at Terre Haute for passing a forged check, surrendered the diamond jewelry he obtained frm C. D. Peacock, a Chicago jeweler, with a forged check.

James Dickey of Kokomo, one of the oldest employes of the Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City Railroad, was found dead, sitting upright in his chair. Heart disease was the cause of his demise.

Mrs. L. C. Dillman arrived in Spokane, Wash., from Terre Haute, to meet her husband, and greatly to her surprise found that she had been divorced over a year ago, and that Mr. Dillman had remarried.

John S. Moore, a "drummer" for an Evansville tobacco house, was found dead in bed at the Acme Hotel, Evansville. It is reported to be a case of suicide. He resided in Clarksville, Tenn., where he has a wife and two children.

At New London, an insane woman burned herself and her 16-year-old daughter to death. In the absence of other members of the family Mrs. Erastus Tucker poured kerosene upon the girl, her only child, applied a match to the saturated clothing and then pushed her into a closet and bolted the door. The mother then threw herself upon a pile of burning straw in her own room and perished in the flames, the straw being taken from the bed. The girl broke down the door of her flaming prison and ran across the street to a neighbor's to call for help. The house was saved. Mrs. Tucker had been mildly insane for a year, brought on by religious excitement.

Charles Welch, a liveryman of Farmersburg, has sued the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad for injuries he received when the dead body of William Bostick, who was killed in Farmersburg some weeks ago, struck him and broke his (Welch's) leg.

At Columbus, the jury in the case of Noble I. Burdge against Frederick Altemyer and wife, his father and mother-in-law, for the alienation of his wife's affections, was out of the court room just ten minutes when it returned a verdict for the defendants. The case came from Jackson County on a change of venue.

Miss Grace Marshall, a well-known young woman of Indianapolis, picked open a dynamite cartridge with a hairpin. It exploded and tore off one finger and the thumb of her left hand, badly lacerated her right hand, injured the sight of one eye and tore the flesh partly from one hip.

The City Council of Columbia City decided upon putting in a complete sewerage plant, to cost about $75,000, regardless of the remonstrance of about 90 per cent of the property owners. Since then numerous threats have been made against councilmen and the Mayor. Mayor Harrison received an anonymous letter, pinned together with two burnt matches, saying: "If my house goes your house goes too."

WHAT SEED SHALL WE SOW?

A wonderful thing is a seed,
The one thing deathless forever;
The one thing changeless—utterly true,
Forever old and forever new,
And fickle and faithless never.

Plant blessings, blessings will bloom;
Plant hate, and hate will grow;
You can sow today, tomorrow will bring
The blossom that proves what sort of thing
Is the seed, the seed that you sow.

Right Man in the Wrong Place.

"Who is that pretty young girl you just bowed to?" said Capt. Bigg to his friend John Arminger.

"Well, she's a girl with whom my acquaintance began in rather a remarkable way. You remember the eldest Stackpoole girl?"

"I remember the eldest Miss Stackpoole—Freddy—the one who hunts; but I should never dream of calling her a girl! And what possible connection has she with your charming friend?"

'A very close one, as I will tell you if you keep quiet and give me my head. You have evidently not heard that to the surprise and delight of her friends, Freddy Stackpoole became engaged last spring to a fellow called Herford, worth a lot of money, but rather ancient. You see, I've known the Stackpooles all my life; we belong to the same county, hunt with the same pack of hounds. I sent Freddy a letter of congratulation and a hunting crop—I heard afterward that she got 23—and accepted an invite to the wedding, which was to take place at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, yesterday, at half past two o'clock."

"But this is all beside the question," protested Capt. Bigg.

"It is not—it's the main part; so shut up. I arrived in good time and entered the church. The church was crammed, and I was a good deal surprised, I must confess, for I had no notion the Sackpooles had so many friends in London. However, I had no time to speculate, for an energetic youth buttonholed me and breathlessly asked: 'Friend of bride or bridegroom?'"

"'Bride,' I answered.

"'Here you are, sit this side,' and he shoved me into a back seat, next to an old gentleman who sat by the door, and whose legs and stick I nearly tumbled over. He was a little chap with a white beard and red face and wore an old fashioned blue frock coat and a pair of baggy lavender gloves.

"I looked about me and I give you my solemn word of honor that among all the crowd I did not see a soul I knew. Can you believe it?

"I happened to notice the old boy beside me. I caught him watching me furtively out of the corner of his eye. Our glances met and he said:

"'A friend of the bride's, sir?'

"'Bless you, yes,' I answered, 'know her since I was in pinafores——'

"'Since you were in pinafores,' he repeated, and he seemed rather taken aback.

"'Why yes,' and I was thinking of adding that she was ten or twelve years my senior, but, most fortunately refrained.

"He stared very hard for some time and then said: 'I suppose you are acquainted with most of the people here? Can you tell me who some of them are—any celebrities, eh?'

"You are aware, Briggs, of my fatal passion for a practical joke. Well, here was a temptation I was powerless to resist. So I answered:

"'Oh, yes, I think I can point you out two or three well-known characters.'

"'Thank you,' he replied. 'I am a country grandfather, as you may see—and I very rarely come to London. Now, who is that stout, very dark woman in yellow, with the gold spikes in her bonnet?'

"'Oh, that,' I promptly returned, 'is the Queen of the Sandwich Islands. She is over here incog at present—just a visit to her dressmaker.'

"'Dear me! Why I always thought Mother Nature was her modiste,' said the old man, with twinkling eyes.

"'Oh, no, she is quite civilized—wears shoes and stockings, and rarely touches raw meat.

"'And, pray, why did she honor this ceremony with her presence?'

"'Because one of the bridegroom's cousins is attached to her court as chief pearl diver. He is called the King Fisher, and I need scarcely add that it is a purely nominal, but well paid, post.'

"'Thank you, I see. Now, can you tell me who those two elderly men are who have come in together?'

"'With pleasure,' I answered. 'The short one is Henrik Ibsen and the other is Lord Salisbury.'

"'Dear me, this is most interesting; and the lady in the wonderful mantle?'

"'Is Sarah Bernhardt, and the little man just behind her, in spectacles, is the Spanish Ambassador—Don Jose Manolo; he is a celebrated waltzer, and his fandango is a thing to see.'

"'I'm immensely obliged to you for a great and unexpected treat. Hullo! I think she has come,' he added, craning his neck.

"Yes, she undoubtedly had arrived—there was the usual commotion and whispering and organ pealing, the usual procession of choir boys. Then the bride, walking very slowly—a lovely bride, though white as her gown—a girl of nineteen, splendid as lace and diamonds could make her, leaning on the arm of a boy of 20—not my bride, but an utter and complete stranger. She was followed by ten bridesmaids, in white satin frocks, white feathered hats and carrying immense bouquets of red roses; and the procession passed, leaving me dumfounded. I was an uninvited guest at the wrong wedding.

"My first idea was to make a bolt for it, but grandpapa's legs and stick cut off that door of escape so I determined to sit still, and make the best of an exceedingly disagreeable situation.

"The service over, the bridesmaids, armed with baskets of flowers, scattered themselves among the congregation and the girl you saw just now bow to me came down our way, all smiles, white feathers and favors. She seized on my old country grandpapa—as 'Grandpapa'—and said:

"'How silly of you to sit so far down dear; you couldn't see.'

"'Too hot up there,' he said.

"'She behaved like a true British matron and never shed a tear,' she continued, as she pinned on his favor.

"'Now, Gwen, you must decorate my companion,' he said, indicating me. 'He has been first-rate company and pointed me out all the lions and lionesses;' yet there was a look in the old man's eyes that I did not precisely understand.

"As Miss Gwen reached across to me her basket of flowers was upset and over the gathering up of these we became quite hilarious, not to say intimate.

"When the wedding cortege had filed by, there was the usual rush for carriages. Now was my chance. I rose, resolved to slip off, but so did my venerable companion, who pinned me firmly by the arm, saying:

"'You may as well look after me. We are going to the same place. I'm a lame old chap, and want an arm'—I should have said a leg. Before I knew where I was, I was being carried off in a swagger brougham, behind a pair of grand steppers; destination, Cadogan Square.

"The house was smothered in flowers and crammed with guests; my old man of the sea clung to me like a limpet and to my great dismay appeared to know every one. We passed through the packed masses, with a word here, a joke there and I gathered that his name was Sir Duncan. It was no news to me that he was Scotch.

"In the drawing-room he had another word was Gwen and then he remarked to me, with a malicious grin, 'Well, I don't see the Queen here yet, nor the playwright, not even the dancing ambassador. What has become of them?'

"What was to become of me was of far more importance, and, finding that my companion was making straight for the happy pair to tender his good wishes, and being an absolute stranger to both, I broke and fled, hoping to lose myself in the crowd, to find some efficacious means of escape, even were it through the kitchen and scullery. But the mob, surged toward the presents, carried me along in spite of my struggles and I found myself figuratively 'cast up' in front of a table covered with magnificent diamonds.

"I counted no less than three tiaras, as many necklaces and of stars, suns, birds, bracelets, bows, a great multitude. The surrounding company appeared to be almost exclusively Scotch and either intimately acquainted or of the same clan. Personally, I had never felt such a complete outsider in the whole course of my existence! There was one other man who stood close to me and who also appeared a stranger to all, and this afforded me the only crumb of comfort offered by the entire situation.

"As I stood, gazing blankly at the diamonds, he gave me a premonitory nudge, and then addressed me in a low voice, but with elaborate courtesy:

"'I beg your pardon, but can you tell me the name of the bride?'

"'No, I cannot,' I answered, shortly.

"'Then, perhaps, you can oblige me with the bridegroom's name?'

"'I am sorry I am unable to assist you,' I said, very stiffly.' I noticed that as his eyes wandered from me to the diamonds and then back again, they wore a very suspicious expression.

"'But, this won't do, you know," he whispered. 'I've had my eye on you this good while—you swell cracksmen are getting too fashionable altogether; too fond of wedding parties! Where's the diamond bracelet and three stars that were taken last week at Lady Banks's reception—eh? and the two valuable rings and the Spanish point flounce, from Mrs. Fleming's in Lancaster Gate; and, you know, you are not above a few apostles spoons, or even a pair of nut-crackers! You see I've caught you; I've had your description and photograph.'

"'What the deuce do you mean?' I asked, and I felt inclined to pitch him out of the window.

"'I mean that I'm a detective officer, of No. F Division and that I'm going to hand you over to my men below, who will take great care of you and escort you in a cab to Bow Street, where you will be searched and charged. Oh, we have been expecting you for some time.'

"I made a feeble and utterly futile effort to escape, but he said: 'The less trouble you give the better for you, as you know of old. You come away quietly; don't go and make a row and spoil the party,' and he gripped my arm as in a vise.

"'I say, stop,' I said. 'Here's my card,' and I lugged it out and handed it to him.

"Mr. R. Arminger,
"Arminger Park, Wilts.

"'The Apex Club, Pall Mall.'

"He read aloud and then calmly remarked:

"'Oh, yes, of course. I'm up to all these little dodges. I wonder you did not take a title.'

"'But I am Mr. Arminger, I swear.'

"'Is there any one in the room will swear to you?'

"'No one. I have come by mistake to the wrong wedding.'

"'So I should suppose,' he sneered. 'And you've made this mistake once too often.'

"Our altercation had been carried on in a window recess and no doubt if any one noticed us at all, they supposed that we were two dear friends enjoying an animated conversation after a long separation.

"'You come quietly,' he repeated for the third time and as I saw no other alternative, I obeyed. As we crossed the great landing, outside the reception-room, I noticed my old man of the sea, sitting on a divan. He touched me with his stick and said: 'Hullo, going already? Won't you wait and present me to the Queen or Madam Bernhardt? But I was too furious to reply. However, my companion stooped down and whispered something and showed him my card.

"The old fellow glanced quickly at it, then at me, and exclaimed: 'I thought I knew that nose! Why, you must be the son of Teddy Arminger, who was my old fag more that 50 years ago—you are Arminger, of Arminger, eh?'

"I bowed profoundly. Apparently, I had to thank my father's nose for my liberty! The Arminger nose had a widespread celebrity, but it was the first time that its reputation had been of use to me!

"'Mr. Hook,' to the detective, 'you are quite mistaken for once. Pray resume your duty.' Then to me: 'Come here and sit by me and tell me all about yourself.'

"'You are growing more and more like your father every moment,' he chuckled; 'he always got white when he was angry. You poked fun at me, young sir, and I paid you out by bringing you here against your will. Now we are quits, Gwen, come here,' he said; 'this gentleman, Mr. Arminger, is the son of an old friend of mine. I give him into your custody; he wants to escape, but don't allow him to stir. I hold you responsible.'

"Miss Gwen, delightfully ignorant of my narrow escape from the custody of the policeman, in a surprisingly short time restored my good humor, not to speak of my self-respect. She conveyed me into the refreshment-room, commanded me to distribute cake, presented me to the bride (her sister), and in short was so amusing, unaffected and light hearted that I remained her slave for half an hour.

"Well, that was something like a surprise party!" exclaimed Capt. Biggs, who had been interested to the point of silence. 'And the other function?'

"Had taken place at the same church at the same hour, on the previous day. I had made a mistake in the date, but about one thing there will be no mistake, I swear—I'll never go to another wedding as long as I live."

"Oh, yes, dear Jack, you will, to your own. And here they are, grandpapa and Miss Gwen, coming back again and grandpapa is going to stop and speak to you."

This acquaintance promises to extend further than the ladies' mile. for Mr. Jack Arminger will be one of the guns on Sir Duncan's moor this season.—London Telegraph.

He Lived on Funerals.

Wast de Kelkow, a Belgian of aristocratic descent, has fallen on evil days in Paris. He has given himself up to the police so as to avoid begging in the streets, and has been accommodated with a temporary home in the Central Depot. His story is a strange one. After having spent his patrimony he had to live by his wits. He accordingly set up as a graveyard orator. His plan was to follow a funeral and to inquire about the life and career of the dead person. Then when the interment was over he stood up at the graveside and descanted on the virtues of the deceased. This caused the mourners to regard him as an old friend of their defunct relative, so they thanked him tearfully and invited him to the banquets prepared for them at some restaurant near the cemetery. The Belgian was thus enabled to live on funeral baked meats, otherwise cold sausages, charcuterie and occasionally cold chicken. The supply was usually so copious that Wast de Kelkow put fragments of the feasts in his pockets so that he could subsist until another funeral gave him a chance of obtaining more food, as well as money, for he was occasionally tipped by mourners who relished or were moved by his sepulchral eloquence. At last, however, the Belgian found that his black clothes were becoming too seedy, and as he could not afford a new suit of the solemn color he surrendered to the police, charging himself with having obtained money under false pretences. He is now thoroughly enjoying the shelter of the depot, and looks forward to finishing the winter in a snug prison, free from carking care and from the necessity of delivering funeral orations over dead persons whom he had never seen.—London Telegraph.

A Useful Weed.

Kelp, as is known by those living on the sea coast is a crude alkaline matter, produced by the combustion of seaweeds. These are dried in the sun and then burned in shallow excavations at a low heat. About twenty or twenty-four tons of seaweed yield one ton of kelp. Kelp is composed of chloride of sodium, carbonate of soda, sulphate of soda and potash, chloride of potassium, iodine of potassium or sodium, insoluble salts, and coloring matter. It used to be the great source of soda, but a better quality is now obtained from the composition of sea salt. A ton of good kelp will yield about eight pounds of iodine, large quantities of chloride of potassium and also by destructive distillation a large quantity of volatile oil, from four to fifteen gallons of paraffin oil, three or four gallons of naphtha and from one and a half to four hundred weight of sulphate of ammonia. This latter as well as the sulphate of soda and potash enter into many of the commercial fertilizers.

There are in Scotland twelve factories, most of them at Glasgow, and two in Ireland which produce annually in all from this marine plant 130 tons of iodine. At Finisterre in France there are factories which produce 50 tons of iodine.

Seaweeds of several kinds are used for forage. Oxen, sheep and deer seek the fucus vesiculosus on the seashore in winter when other supplies are scarce; in the Swedish province of Gothland it is boiled and mixed with a little coarse flour as food for hogs; and in Norway, fucus seratus is used as food for cattle, generally sprinkled with a little meal.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

Origin of "Norway Oats."

David W. Ramsdell, aged seventy-three, died at his home, near South Royalton, Vt., recently. He was born in Washington, Vt., and always lived in that state. In 1861, in a package of seeds he received from the government at Washington, Ramsdell found a peculiar variety of seeds which experiments showed to be a new kind of oats which he named "Norway oats. Ramsdell in ten years made an enormous fortune from the sale of this grain. Over $3,000,000 was spent in advertising it. Poor business ability, however, dissipated his riches, and he died practically a poor man.

Parliament Lights.

The British Houses of Parliament are partly lighted by 40,000 electric lamps, which number is being constantly increased. Fifty experienced electricians are employed to keep the system in order.

It is reported that in the construction of a new trolley line in Birmingham, Eng., the rails came from Pittsburg, the cars from Philadelphia, the boilers from Erie, the engines from Milwaukee and the general fittings from Schenectady.

OUR GREATEST GUN.

Now Under Construction, and Will Be the Largest in the World.

The United States Government has under construction one of the largest—if not the very largest—cannons in the world. The castings are made at the South Bethlehem, Pa., works. Some of them have already been sent to the finishing department at Watervliet, N. Y., but it will take several months to turn the parts down to the exact dimensions of the gun and to assemble them.

What is involved in the handling of this great 16-inch gun can be judged approximately by the figures telling its dimensions and cost. It will be 50 feet long and will weigh 284,480 pounds. The castings from which it will be made will weigh more than 300,000 pounds. The cost of a 12-inch gun before assembling is nearly $45,000, and the cost of the 16-inch gun will be twice as much. The cost of putting together one of the 12-inch guns is $10,000. No one knows yet what the cost of assembling the 16-inch gun will be, but it will be a great deal more than $10,000. It has cost the Government more than a third of a million dollars for the special machinery to handle the castings for this big gun.

UNCLE SAM'S GREATEST GUN.

It has been figured that with the cost of the 12-inch gun at $60,000, the cost of the charge of powder for it (520 pounds) at $175, the cost of the 1,000-pound armor-piercing projectile at $350 and the amount of wear and tear figured at not less than $100 for each shot, more than $600 is the cost of each shot fired. The cost of firing the 16-inch gun will be nearly $1,000.

Where the 16-inch gun will be placed when it is completed has not been determined so far as anyone outside the department can know. It is thought, however, that the big gun will be placed near New York. It will be carried on three railroad cars, built for the purpose, and it will have to move very slowly, because of the danger at curves and in tunnels. It will be mounted on a disappearing gun carriage and twenty trained artillerymen will be assigned to work it.

THE DRY TORTUGAS.

Once Famous Fort and Prison Brought Into Prominence Again.

Fort Jefferson, on one of the Tortugas Islands, is regarded as one of the most powerful defensive works on the American coast. It covers an area of five acres, having two acres of the key outside of its limit. The Dry Tortugas command the Yucatan passage, and its possessors would really control all shipping to Texas, Louisiana, Mexico and the Central American States. Dry Tortugas is a group of ten small islands or keys at the eastern entrance to the Gulf of Mexico, about seventy-one miles directly west of Key West and 120 miles southwest of Cape Sable, the most southerly point of the mainland of Florida. One of these ten isles is Garden Isle, upon which Fort Jefferson was built under the direction of Gen. Totten, who instituted what was known as the masonry forts, our only kind of seacoast defense from 1850 until 1870. The Federal Government in 1870 began to discard the solid forts of brick and stone for the more modern breastworks of earth and concrete, which have a greater power of resisting the more powerful rifles of latter days. Fort Jefferson is a three-story brick structure, with walls four feet three inches thick, amply able to withstand the old smooth-bore cannon, but worse than useless as a resistance to the long-range rifles of modern war vessels.

The harbor of Garden Isle is far superior to that of Key West, where Fort Taylor is situated. The harbor at Key West is able to accommodate large ships in high water, but at Garden Isle, in the Dry Tortugas, ships can enter at any time, and the coral reefs around the island afford an excellent breakwater for the protection of vessels at anchor. Garden Isle, called so because it had enough soil on it for a garden, is only seven acres in extent. Fort Jefferson covers almost the entire island, and affords sufficient room to store all naval supplies necessary in a war with any southern country. Dry Tortugas and Key West are each about eighty miles from Havana and are seventy-one miles apart.

Dry Tortugas was used as a prison in the war of the rebellion. As the name indicates, there is not much water there. In fact, except for the rainwater, which is caught in the wet season and stored in tanks, there would not be a drop of water on the island. No spring has ever been found there. The Government has built large receiving reservoirs, and there is no danger of a water famine now. In the hot season the atmosphere is sultry, and when there are no fresh winds on the Gulf prisoners in cells suffer greatly.

FORT JEFFERSON AND UNITED STATES FLEET AT DRY TORTUGAS.

It was in Fort Jefferson that Dr. Samuel Mudd, the surgeon who aided John Wilkes Booth after the assassination of Lincoln, was confined with two other accomplices, Arnold and O'Loughlin. O'Loughlin died there. Mudd was pardoned in February, 1869, by President Andrew Johnson, and Arnold was pardoned in March of the same year. Military authorities agree that there is no place under the stars and stripes where a prisoner would be safer and more miserable without suffering any real cruelty than on the Dry Tortugas.

As early as 1830 President Andrew Jackson called the attention of Congress to the importance of Dry Tortugas as a military post and as a base of naval supplies. Lieuts. Tatternall and Gedney, who had been detailed to make a report, had surveyed the islands and taken soundings of their harbors. They reported that the present site of Fort Jefferson had the best natural harbor of any in the keys. President Jackson recommended that the island be occupied as a military post, and that an appropriation be made for the purchase.

A Widower's Tribute.

A pathetic little tribute to a wife's tact and self-forgetfulness was given by an old New Hampshire farmer. The couple had lived together happily for nearly fifty years, and when the wife died her husband seemed utterly unable at first to act, or even think, for himself. The funeral was taken in charge by an energetic niece, and according to those who were present everything was conducted with propriety. One of the neighbors stopped to speak to the poor old widower when the last offices at the grave had been performed.

"William," she said, laying a kindly hand on her old friend's shoulder, "I think everything was beautiful; it was just such a funeral as Mary wished, I am sure."

"You mean well, Mis' Snowden, I know," said the old man, looking up at her with dim eyes, "but you don't take it in as I do. Niece Ellen couldn't see to everybody's comfort as Mary would have. Why, I've thought a dozen times to-day, if Mary was only here to 'tend to this funeral, seems to me I could almost bear to have lost her!"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

How Thread Is Numbered.

The questions, "Why is spool cotton numbered as it is?" and "Why are figures not used in regular order?" are often asked. The explanation is this: The numbers on the spool express the number of hanks which are required to wind a pound. The very finest spinning rarely exceeds 300 hanks to the pound, while in the very coarsest there is about a half pound in each hank. The more common qualities, however—those from which sewing thread is usually made—run from ten to fifty hanks to the pound, and the spools on which it is wound are therefore numbered ten to fifty.

FLOATING HOSPITAL

That Will Carry the Red Cross Into Naval Engagements.

Unique in the annals of the navy the ambulance ship comes now to carry the ministering succor of the red cross upon a blood-stained sea. Without such an angel of mercy one well might wonder how the wounded are to be handled with enlightened tenderness after our next great naval strife. On a man-of-war there are no supernumeraries. Each man has his appointed place to fill, and perhaps a station at which he must fight, fall or perish. Who then shall bear him below, even if that be possible? The guns must be worked and the foeman faced. The surgeons and their limited assistants must reach him as best they can and bear him as gently and quickly as possible to the nearest bit of stinted space, and there give him that immediate relief which may mean his life.

There will be no chance for capital operations during an engagement; the best that can be done will be to check a hemorrhage or to bind together the bleeding parts. With such simple remedies as brandy, morphia or ammonia, tourniquets and rolls of bandages the surgeon will speed from place to place, stimulate the weak, revive the unconscious or lull to forgetfulness those whose tortures are intense. After the action, if the ship and those wounded survive, the latter will be carried to some haven of ministering care, and there treated in a way either to fan to a glow the flickering flame of life or to ease their last moments with infinite tenderness and thought. Then the ambulance ship will fill the place, and, with the impulse of that broad humanity that knows no difference, will come alike to the rescue of friend or foe. Now, let us see how Surgeon General Van Reypen's novel and noble idea has been made wonderfully practicable by the chief constructor.

Picture a craft 300 feet long over all, with a beam of 50 feet, so molded that she will be easy and comfortable under the normal stresses of weather, with an outward appearance not unlike a moderate-sized ocean liner, and one gets a fair notion of the proposed craft. Two sets of triple-expansion engines will turn her twin screws and drive her along easily at a 14-knot gait, and, with her bunkers filled with their 600 tons of coal, she will be able to cover 3,600 knots at full speed, or, at a 10-knot jog will have a steaming radius of 24 days. Her limited sail power will be for the purpose of steadying her in a seaway and making her more comfortable. With so moderate a draught as 18 feet on a total displacement of 3,550 tons she will be able to enter any desirable harbor.

At the uppermost, or awning deck, one finds there four large steam cutters and a like number of barges, intended for the rapid transportation of the wounded from their shattered ships to this navigable hospital, which in completeness of appointment rivals the best hospital on land. These barges are proportioned especially for this work, and bear upon their seats or thwarts a flying floor, upon which a dozen wounded may be stretched in comfort. Bound in their hammocks, and adjusted in an easy position by the well-known service device, they will be lowered into the waiting boats and promptly towed to the ambulance ship, where, by the aid of the boat davits and ready power, they will be carefully raised, swung inboard amidships on the upper deck, whence they will be carried to the elevators on either side and borne swiftly below to the operating-room, where the attention they need will be fully and quickly given them.

FLOATING RED CROSS HOSPITAL.

Would Need a Shark's Set.

There is a great deal of fun going the rounds in certain quarters at the expense of a policeman connected with a downtown station, who is known to be a lover of the flowing bowl, most of which he gets from the side doors of saloon-keepers on his beat. A never-failing indication of his indulgence in the habit is his propensity to inform all his acquaintances that he is suffering from a tormenting toothache.

After a few days, when he has become himself again, says the Philadelphia Record, he explains that he has had the troublesome tooth extracted. One of his fellow-policemen, who has kept tab upon the convivial cop, has come to the conclusion that the bibulous bluecoat must raise a new crop of teeth every year. He has already had six sets removed from his jaws, according to his own statement.

The victim, however, never takes a hint from his associates, but sticks to his old excuse whenever he falls by the wayside.

Spain's Substitutes for Telephones.

In Spain, where the telephone is largely used in place of the telegraph, an ingenious application of the phonograph to record the telephonic messages has been made. The receiving operator repeats the message into a phonograph, from which it can afterward be transcribed at leisure. This saves the delay caused by writing the message during its reception and insures greater accuracy, because the repetition of the message for the phonograph is heard simultaneously by the original sender at the other end of the line.

PRISONERS' TOO!

All Who Are Sentenced to The Jail Must Work.

WITH SHOVEL, PICK OR HOE.

They May Be Put at Hard Labor On The Streets.

WORK OUT THEIR FINE UNDER GUARDS

The Commissionars Have So Ordered as Will S:en By the Following.

It is ordered by the Board that all able-bodied male prisoners who may now be under sentence, or who may be hereafter sentenced to the county jail, while held for punishment or the non-payment of fine and costs, whether the judgment of the court sentencing said prisoner embraces imprisonment, or is for a fine and costs only, be put at hard labor upon any public street, alleys, or other thoroughfare in any city or town now or hereafter organized in this county or any other public road or highway in this county, or to work under the supervison of the County Surveyor on the public drain of said county, or in or above any of the public buildings or grounds belonging to the Board of Commissioners of this county or to any civil or school town or city now or hereafter organized in this county or to any civil or school township now or hereafter organized in this county or on any other work or improvements for the public good or ben fit during the whole or any portion of such prisoner's term of imprisonment, under the following rules and regulations hereinafter stated and such amendments and alterations therein as may from time to time be made by the Board and which said rules and regulations are hereby adopted by the Board for the government of said prisoners and the Sheriff of this county and such guards as may from time to time be appointed and hereinafter provided.

Whenever the County Surveyor or any person intrusted with any such work, desires the work of any of such prisoners on any public work, he shall apply to the sheriff of the County for such prisoners and said sheriff shall thereupon assign to such work so many of such prisoners as may be called for in such application. Said sheriff shall appoint a suitable and proper person as guard for such prisoners who shall be paid for his services as such guard, the sum of one dollar and twenty-five cts ($1.25) per day for each day actually spent by him in guarding such prisoners while at work except as hereinafter provided, such payments to be made out of the County Treasury by allowance of said Board as other claims against said Board are paid. The County Surveyor shall not receive any compensation as guard while in charge of any such prisoner.

When only one prisoner is assigned to any given work such guard must be paid by the town, city or township for which said work is done and will not be paid out of the County Treasury. Where such prisoners are put at work upon any street or alley in any corporated town or city or in, on or about the public buildings or grounds of any such town or city, such guard shall be marshal of such town or city, and for such services such marshall shal be paid the sum of twenty-five cents (25c) per day for each prisoner in his charge. Whenever any such prisoners are put at work at the County Asylum of this county, the superintendent of such Asylum shall be appointed as guard for such prisoners, and shall act as such guard without compensation.

During such time as any of such prisoners may be at work at said Asylum, they shall be boarded and lodged by the superin tendent of said Asylum as inmates of Asylum, and during such time the sheriff shall receive no compensation for board or lodging of such prisoners.

Whenever the janitor of the court house and jail of this county appointed by the Board, desires to work any of such prisoners in, on or about the said jail, court house, sheriff's residence, or public square of such county, said sheriff shall assign so many of such prisoners to said work as janitor may require and said janitor shall be appointed as guard for such prisoners, but shall not receive for services rendered as such guard any compensation whatever other than his compensation as such janitor as provided by his contract with said Board.

During the time any such prisoners may be at work under said janitor in, on or about the public square of said county or any of the buildings thereof, such prisoners shall be boarded and lodged by the sheriff at the county jail Such prisoners may be compelled to work ten (10) hours each day. Whenever any such prisoner reports himself as sick and unable to work, he shall be examined by the jail physician whose decision upon such question shall be final. Whenever any such prisoner shall refuse to work when required or shall shirk the work assigned to him by the guard in charge of such prisoner, he shall be delivered to the sheriff who shall punish such prisoner by placing him in solitary confinement or reducing his rations or placing him on a diet of bread and water only, or he may administer either or all of such forms of punishment in his discretion, but such punishhment shall only be administered with the consent of the jail physician and only during such length of time as such physician shall consent thereto.

For services under this order said jail physician shall not receive any other compensation than his pay as secretary of the County Board of Health has now provided.

Such persons shall be received by said guards from the sheriff or his deputy and returned to said sheriff or his deputy by said guards. Whenever practicable, such guards shall return such prisoners to the county jail for their meals and lodging, and when such prisoners are not so returned the guard in charge of such prisoners shall board and lodge them at his own expense and shall be allowed therefor by said Board the sum of forty (40c) per day for each prisoner which said sum shall be in payment for the board, lodging, washing and mending for said prisoners; provided, however, that when said prisoners are maintained at the County Asylum the superintendent thereof shall not receive and compensation for the board, lodging, washing or mending of such prisoners, and provided further that whenever the County Surveyor shall employ any of prisoners in the prosecution of the work of his office, he shall be re-imbursed out of the County Treasury for all sums actually expended by him for the board of lodging of such prisoners.

It is ordered by the Board that there shall be and is hereby established at the County Asylum a workhouse which shall be maintained until the further order of the board under such rules and regulations as the Board may, from time to time, adopt.

The superintendent of the County Asylum shall be and is hereby appointed superintendent of such work house, and shall have charge thereof and of the prisoners committed thereto, but shall serve as such superintendent without compensation.

All female prisoners sentenced or imprisoned in the county jail, all male prisoners sentenced to said jail, who may be pronounced by the jail physicians as not able bodied, shall be transferred to the said work house by the superintendent thereof, and there held until said sentence is fully executed.

All persons committed to said work house shall be compelled by the superintendent to work about such work house the buildings and lands appurtenant to and forming a part of said County Asylum at the discretion of said superintendent, and for any disobedience of any such orders as the said superintendent may make with reference to the prisoners, said superintendent shall have the right to punish said prisoners so disobeying bo solitary confinement or by a reduction of rations or by placing such prisoners on a diet of bread and water only.

The entering of this order on the records of this board shall be sufficient notice of the making thereof.

WANTED—OFFICE SEEKER.

Come Early and Avoid the Rush. The Early Bird Gets It.

It is not often that this county has to advertise for a man to fill one of her county offices. Yet this is about the shape we are in now. November 1896, we elected Dr. J. Weller Hughes, of Waterloo to the high and honorable office of Coroner and for about a year he faithfully sat on every unfortunate who had the nerve to leave this wicked world without the aid, advice or consent of a physician. Many mourning households have had their sorrows lessened by the delicate way he would fix up a string of long and crooked medical terms and weave them into a commonplace coroner's report. He was rapidly working his way into the affections of the people of his bailiwick when he was suddenly missed. Inquiry resulted in the discovery that he had found a woman who was more attractive that the duties of a county coroner and that he was now "at home" over in LaGrange county. Being in LaGrange he could not also be in DeKalb. Hence it had been noticed by readers of the COURIER that 'Squire VanFliet of Garrett was being called on when such services were needed. It was soon learned that Hughes' mantle had fallen on the 'Squire who assumed it quite gracefully But if Coroner Hughes had settled down in LaGrange he was no longer a citizen here and could not appoint a deputy. A non-citizen could not hold an office here, and consequently he was no longer a coroner, and being no longer coroner could have no deputy. But the law gives a justice of the peace the right to act as coroner, where there is none. So, Squire VanFleit can still act, though no longer a deputy.

However, the Board of Commissioners found it desirable to appoint a new coroner and have offered the office to at least two competent persons. But both have declined as there is so little in the office even if it is "worked up" and also because they have to give a $5,000 bond. So the office is still vacent, and the COURIER on behalf of a perplexed County Board advertises for an "office seeker." Who bids for this office? Don't all speak at once but come early and avoid the rush.

In the meantime the commissioners want it understood that in case of need the justice nearest to the place where the death occurs will be expected to act.

School closed here last Wednesday, Mr. Clyde Blaker principal and Mrs. Ida Troxler, assistant. Mr. Blaker's pupils presented him with beautiful picture entitled "Rustic Beauty" and also an easel.

Last Sunday night was entirely devoted to temperance work at the U B. church. Some grand thoughts were given and one in particular given by Rev. Kriebel illustrates the liquor habit to perfection. He told the story of a man who was trainer of wild beasts among the rest he had trained from its infancy a boa-constrictor until it had attained the great length of 35 feet. He had handled and petted it every day for 25 years. At last when he was performing with it before a large audience it embraced him in its awful coils and crushed him to death before aid could reach him, The boa-constrictor is figurative of the wine-cup when the victim first begins to drink. It is like the small boa-constrictor. But the habit coils around the victim and at last crush the life out of the helpless drinker. This should be a warning to those who are creating a habit for strong drink.

NEW RAILWAY MOTOR

A gasolene motor was tried the other day on railroad from Chicago to Cedar Falls, Iowa, making the distance 288 miles in 16 running hours being an average of 18 miles an hours. As to the cost, it took 58 gallons of gasolene worth $2.61, which would give the expense of running a ton weight over the rails one mill to be about half a mill. In other words, a "mile ton" cost half a mill and twenty "mile tons" would cost 1 cent. With steam locomotives a "mile ton" costs about 14 cents. So it will be seen that if we consider the cost alone, the gasolene motor is very much cheaper than steam.

THE TORPEDO BOATS.

A great deal is said about this new and dangerous aid in naval warfare. Spain has sent twelve of them to Porto Rico. Six are torpedo boats proper and six are what are calld "torpedo-boat-destroyers." They are small boats, but very swift. They can run twenty-five miles an hour where a big warship can run about eighteen. The torpedo boat carries torpedoes and tubes or guns in which they are placed to be fired or sent against a big vessel to destroy it just as the Maine was destroyed. The chief danger from these boats is their great speed for the big vessel cannot get away from them and its only safety lies in firing its heavy guns so rapidly and accurately so as to destroy the small enemies before it gets near enough to strike. Another plan is also being tried which is to have the big ship carry a steel netting to be put out in the water to keep the torpedo boat away in case they come to near.

THE POWER OF GOLD

Is Limited—The Power of Health is Unlimited—Both Rich and Poor May Have Health by Using

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The rich need health to enjoy their riches. The poor doubly so to prevent greater poverty. Rich is he who has health, however poor in money. To be both poor and sickly is the extreme of poverty.

As all physical power, both mental and muscular, depends on the condition of the nerves, they should be strong and healthy. If strong, obey natures laws and keep them so. If weak and sickly, restore them to healthy action by using Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, which is a specific for sick nerves.

Don't treat your stomach, liver, kidneys or blood, but look well to your nerves and they will correct the troublesome symptoms of all the organs. Read what Wm. McCutchen, Bucyrus, Ohio, says:

"My trouble was sleeplessness, caused, probably, by too close application to my business. I could feel that lack of sleep was surely undermining my general health. I tried several kinds of medicine advertised to cure such troubles, but they did me no good. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was recommended. I knew it would cure me after I had taken the first dose. Natural and refreshing sleep restored the activity of both brain and body, and I was soon well."

Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer does not stimulate the nerves to unusual action. It arrests the waste of nerve tissue and builds up the frame work of health.

HAND CUT OFF.

Mr. Eash's Letter

Judge Roby has received a letter from W. F. Eash father of Wm. Eash the boy who escaped from the jail here last week. Coming as it does on the heels of the trial, sentence and escape of his boy, it will be read with interest, and by the kindness of Judge Roby we lay it before our readers.

ELKHART, IND., March 19, '98

DEAR SIR:—

I want to inform you that I have this day sent you the jail keys (by U. S. Ex.) and I will state how I came in possession of them. My boy was home last Tuesday night and gave them to me and said that if he was guilty, he would have staid. But not guilty, and he flew. But he told me that he had help to escape, but he would not tell me how or who helped him to get away. He was at home about five minutes and kissed his little eight year old brother goodby and said to me take good care of him, and not to worry about him, that he would be sailing over the mighty deep in a week from now and I have not seen him since, and God knows where the poor child is, I do not. I would rater have him in Reform School than as he is. So you can see that I don't uphold any bad conduct of my boy or anyone else. Further, when he gave me the keys, he said for me not to give them up, because he had been only half fed while in jail at Auburn. But I thought it better for me as a parent and him as a child, for me to return them as I dont want any thing in my possession that does not belong to me.

Hoping that you will find no fault with me for so doing. Further, I can prove to you that I have always myself tried to do all that a father could do for his family, and I always shall do so.

Hoping to hear from you or some of the jail officers. From Yours Res.

W. F. EASH.

NOT ALWAYS UNDERSTOOD

A fact overlooked, or not always understood, is that women suffer as much from distressing kidney and bladder trouble as men. The womb is situated back of and very close to the bladder and for that reason any distress, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or uinary passage is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort

The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided by setting urine aside for 24 hours; a sediment or settling is evident that your kidneys and bladder need doctoring. If you have pain or dull aching in the back, pass water too frequently, or scanty supply, with smarting or burning—these are also convincing proofs of kidney trouble. If you have doctored without benefit, try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy. The mild and extraordinary effect will surprise you. It stands highest for its wonderful cures. If you take a medicine you should take the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, on receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention the AUBURN COURIER and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamptom, N. Y. The Proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

FIFTY YEARS IN DeKALB.

John H. Pyle came to DeKalb Co., fifty years ago today, that is March 25, 1848. He was then 21 years and 19 days old. He settled on the farm where he now lives and has been there ever since. He says that of all the heads of households, then in the county, only Dr. Ford, J. R. Cosper Phillip Fluke and himself are left. All have survived the partners of their early married days Mr. Pyle being the only one who now has a wife to share his declining years. When he came here, Samuel Ralston and Nelson Penn kept a store where now the beautiful Penfield residence is. And about everything else in Auburn has changed in a similar way. But his memory of those early days is pleasant, in spite of the many hardships and deprivations. People were neighborly, and helpful. They helped each other build houses, clear land and assist the sick. They made their own sugar, and raised the corn for their johnnycake. They were independent and happy. So, no wonder, he stops and thinks on this anniversary, of the past and links his early life with pleasant memories.

REPORT ON THE MAINE

AS PRESENTED TO CONGRESS.

Finding of Court of Inquiry Shows Conclusively That the Warship Was Destroyed by the Explosion of a Mine.

MAINE BOARD OF INQUIRY.

FOLLOWING is the full text of the report of the court of inquiry delegated to ascertain the cause of the Maine explosion:

"United States Steamship Iowa, First Rate, Key West, Fla:. Monday, March 21, 1898.—After full and mature consideration of all the testimony before it, the court finds as follows:

"1. That the United States battleship Maine arived in the harbor of Havana, Cuba, on the 25th day of January, 1898, and was taken to buoy No. 4, in from five and one-half to six fathoms of water, by the regular Government pilot.

"The United States consul general at Havana had notified the authorities at that place the previous evening of the intended arrival of the Maine.

"The state of discipline on board the Maine was excellent, and all orders and regulations in regard to the care and safety of the ship were strictly carried out. All ammunition was stowed away in accordance with instructions, and proper care was taken whenever amunition was handled. Nothing was stowed away in any one of the magazines or shellrooms which was not permitted to be stowed there. The magazines and shell-rooms were always locked after having been opened, and after the destruction of the Maine the keys were found in their proper place in the Captain's cabin, everything having been reported secure that evening at 8 o'clock.

Usual Precautions Taken.

"The temperature of the magazines and shell-rooms was taken daily and reported. The only magazine which had an undue amount of heat was the after 10-inch magazine, and that did not explode at the time the Maine was destroyed.

"The torpedo war heads were all stowed in the after part of the ship under the ward-room, and neither caused nor participated in the destruction of the Maine.

"The dry gun cotton primers and detonators were stowed in the cabin aft and remote from the scene of the explosion.

"The waste was carefully looked after on board the Maine to obviate danger. Special orders in regard to this had been given by the commanding officer.

"Varnishers, dryers, alcohol and other combustibles of this nature were stowed on or above the main deck, and could not have had anything to do with the destruction of the Maine.

"The medical stores were stowed aft under the wardroom and remote from the scene of the explosion. No dangerous stores of any kind were stowed below in any of the other storerooms.

"The coal bunkers were inspected. Of these bunkers adjoining the forward magazines and shell-rooms, four were empty, namely, B 3, B 4, B 5 and B 6. A 15 had been in use that day, and A 16 was full of New River coal. This coal had been carefully inspected before receiving it on board. The bunker in which it was stowed was accessible on three sides at all times, and the fourth side at this time, on account of bunkers B 4 and B 6 being empty. This bunker, A 16, had been inspected that day by the engineer officer on duty.

"The fire alarms in the bunkers were in working order, and there had never been a case of spontaneous combustion of coal on board the Maine.

"The two after boilers of the ship were in use at the time of the disaster, but for auxiliary purposes only, with a comparatively low pressure of steam, and being tended by a reliable watch. These boilers could not have caused the explosion of the ship. The four forward boilers have since been found by the divers, and are in a fair condition.

"On the night of the destruction of the Maine everything had been reported secure for the night at 8 o'clock by reliable persons, through the proper authorities, to the commanding officer. At the time the Maine was destroyed the ship was quiet, and therefore least liable to accident caused by movements from those on board.

"3. The destruction of the Maine occurred at 9:40 p. m. on the 15th day of February, 1898, in the harbor of Havana, Cuba, being at the time moored in the same buoy to which she had been taken upon her arrival.

"There were two explosions of a distinctly different character, with a very short but distinct interval between them, and the forward part of the ship was lifted to a marked degree at the time of the first explosion.

"The first explosion was more in the nature of a report like that of a gun; while the second explosion was more open, prolonged and of greater volume. This second explosion was, in the opinion of the court, caused by the partial explosion of two or more of the forward magazines of the Maine.

"4. The evidence bearing on this, being principally obtained from divers, did not enable the court to form a definite conclusion as to the condition of the wreck, although it was established that the after part of the ship was practically intact, and sank in that condition a very few minutes after the destruction of the forward part.

"The following facts in regard to the forward part of the ship, are, however, established by the testimony:

"That portion of the port side of the protective deck, which extends from about frame 30 to about frame 41 was blown up aft and over to port. The main deck, from about frame 30 to about frame 41 was blown up aft and slightly over to starboard, folding the forward part of the middle superstructure over and on top of the after part.

"This was, in the opinion of the court, caused by the partial explosion of two or more of the forward magazines of the Maine.

"5. At frame 17, the outer shell of the ship, from a point eleven and one-half feet from the middle line of the ship, and six from the middle line of the ship, and six feet above the keel, when in its normal position, has been forced up so as to be now about four feet above the surface of the water; therefore, about thirty-four feet above where it would be had the ship sunk uninjured. The outside bottom plating is bent into a reversed V shape, the after wing of which, about fifteen feet broad and thirty-two feet in length (from frame 17 to frame 25), is doubled back upon itself against the continuation of the same plating extending forward.

"At frame 18 the vertical keel is broken in two, and the flat keel bent into an angle similar to the angle formed by the outside bottom plating. This break is now about six feet below the surface of the water, and about thirty feet above its normal position."

Caused by Submarine Mine.

"In the opinion of the court, this effect could have been produced only by the explosion of a mine situated under the bottom of the ship at about frame 18, and somewhat on the port side of the ship.

"6. The court finds that the loss of the Maine, on the occasion named, was not in any respect due to fault or negligence on the part of any of the officers or members of the crew of said vessel.

"7. In the opinion of the court the Maine was destroyed by the explosion of a submarine mine, which caused the partial explosion of two or more of her forward magazines.

"8. The court has been unable to obtain evidence fixing the responsibility for the destruction of the Maine upon any person or persons.

"W. T. SAMPSON, Captain U. S. N., President. "A. MARIX., "Lieutenant Commander U. S. N., Judge Advocate.

"M. SICARD, "Rear-Admiral, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Naval Force on the North Atlantic Station."

RESENT RELIEF PLANS

Spaniards Will Interpret Their Execution as Intervention.

The Madrid Imparcial says that if the proposition attributed to the United States to send a warship with relief for the reconcentrados next week proves true, Spain will interpret the act as one of intervention which would be intolerable.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Standard says that the following is the substance of Spain's reply to the note presented by Minister Woodford:

"The Spanish reply, which is couched in firm language, stated that the Government cannot agree to the conclusions the American Government has drawn from inaccurate information that does not tally with the recent activity and progress of military operations in Cuba, and the visible popularity and progress of the new colonial institutions, which have been loyally accepted and supported, by even old adversaries of home rule. Spain cannot, naturally, admit the interference which is foreshadowed in the American note, and deprecates the sending of official relief and war vessels to Cuba as being the very elements that have retarded the progress of the Spanish rule in the island.

"Spain reminds the United States of all the concessions she has made to preserve cordial relations and conciliate America, the last proof being her willingness to submit the conflicting commission reports to arbitration. In conclusion, the Spanish reply shows that the Government believes that it has reached the extreme limit of concessions compatible with the honor and dignity of Spain, and will not admit encroachments on her rights of sovereignty in the West Indies."

SAGASTA RETAINS HIS POWER.

Liberals Win in Spanish Parliamentary Elections.

The Spanish parliamentary elections that were held Sunday went by a large majority in favor of the Liberals, the party now in power. Very little interest was manifested in Madrid and the polling booths were almost deserted. Most all the candidates elected there are Liberals. Riots are reported from many places, troubles being fomented by the socialists. This was especially the case in the provinces of Biscay, Navarre, Catalonia and Valencia. At Durango, in the province of Biscay, one man was killed. It is estimated that the Government won 300 of the 432 seats in the Chamber of Deputies.

Spain is said to have bought from Italy the armored cruiser Varese.

MINE UNDER THE MAINE

Verdict of Court of Inquiry Says the Fact Is Clear.

REPORT SENT TO CONGRESS.

Whole Matter Is Referred to Committee on Foreign Relations.

A MESSAGE FROM M'KINLEY.

Reviews the Maine Affair, but Makes No Recommendations.

Verdict of the Naval Court Shows that the United States Battleship Was Sent to the Bottom of Havana Harbor by the Explosion of a Mine Board Does Not Definitely Fix Responsibility, but Suggests It—President McKinley Reviews the History of the Maine from the Time She Was Sent to Havana—Report as Sent to Congress.

Washington correspondence:

At noon Monday the findings of the naval board of inquiry as to the cause of the explosions that wrecked the Maine were sent to Congress by President McKinley. In anticipation of the report being presented, the largest crowd which has attended a session of Congress in years was at the capitol. Not one-tenth of the people who stormed the doors were able to gain admission. The members of the House awaited the report with the same feverish anxiety manifested by the public, and there was scarcely a vacant seat on the floor.

The verdict of the court and the message from the White House accompanying is brief. The report as a whole is a formal, dispassionate recital of facts, and bears the stamp of that strict officialism which marks naval procedure. An abstract of the eight parts of the report is here given:

1. At the time of the explosion the battleship Maine was lying in five and one-half to six fathoms of water.

2. The discipline was excellent. Everything was stowed according to orders, including ammunition, guns, and stores. The temperature of the magazines at 8 p. m. was normal, except in the after 10-inch magazine, and that did not explode.

3. The explosion occurred at 9:40 o'clock in the evening of Feb. 15. There were two explosions, with a very short interval between them. The ship lifted on the first explosion.

4. The court can form no definite opinion of the condition of the wreck from the divers' evidence.

5. There are technical details of wreckage, from which the court deduces that a mine was exploded under the ship on the port side.

6. The explosion was due to no fault of those on board.

7. In the opinion of the court the explosion of the mine caused the explosion of two magazines.

8. The court is unable to find evidence to fix the responsibility.

The report is unanimous and is signed by all the members of the court. It does not refer to the existence or nonexistence of the mine in the harbor of Havana, except in the specific finding that a mine was exploded under the ship and the opinion that the explosion of the two magazines was caused by the explosion of a mine. This explains the remarkable destruction wrought. The explosion is thus shown to have combined the force of a mine without and two magazines within. The two explosions which the court finds to have occurred, with a very short interval between them, is an additional detail showing that two forces operated in causing the destruction.

The feature of the report of deepest interest to the navy is the complete exoneration of Captain Sigsbee and all on board, contained in the second finding, setting forth the perfect order and discipline prevailing on the ship, and more directly stated in the sixth finding, which declares the disaster to be due to no fault of those on board.

While the evidence upon which the court of inquiry based its findings was not sent to Congress along with the report, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee who saw this evidence, says that it presents strong proof of Spain's responsibility for the explosion. There is not only evidence of a submarine mine, but the officers of the Maine found pieces of a cable and the shore connections. This agrees with the report that Lieutenant Jenkins made such discoveries the day before the Maine was blown up, and with the statements which have been frequently published.

Message by McKinley.

In sending the verdict of the naval court to Congress President McKinley accompanied it with a brief message. He reviewed the history of the Maine from the time she was sent to Havana, but made no recommendations to the assembled lawmakers. In his message the President said:

"For some time prior to the visit of the Maine to Havana harbor, our consular representatives pointed out the advantages to flow from the visit of national ships to the Cuban waters in accustoming the people to the presence of our flag as the symbol of good will, and of our ships in the fulfillment of the mission of protection to American interests, even though no immediate need therefor might exist.

"Accordingly, on the 24th of January last, after conference with the Spanish minister, in which the renewal of visits of our war vessels to Spanish waters was discussed and accepted, the peninsular authorities at Madrid and Havana were advised of the purpose of this Government to resume friendly naval visits at Cuban ports, and that in that view the Maine would forthwith call at the port of Havana.

"This announcement was received by the Spanish Government with appreciation of the friendly character of the visit of the Maine and with notification of intention to return the courtesy by sending Spanish ships to the principal ports of the United States.

"The Maine continued in the harbor of Havana during the three weeks following her arrival. No appreciable excitement attended her stay; on the contrary, a feeling of relief and confidence followed the resumption of the long-interrupted friendly intercourse. So noticeable was this immediate effect of her visit that the consul general strongly urged that the presence of our ships in Cuban waters should be kept up by retaining the Maine at Havana, or, in the event of her recall, by sending another vessel there to take her place."

GEN. LEE, WIFE AND DAUGHTER.
(From a late photograph.)

The President referred to the disaster on the night of Feb. 15, the rescue of the survivors and care of the wounded. Then he proceeded:

"The appalling calamity fell upon the people of our country with crushing force and for a brief time an intense excitement prevailed, which in a community less just and self-controlled than ours might have led to heavy acts of blind resentment.

"This spirit, however, soon gave way to the calmer processes of reason, and to resolve to investigate the facts and await material proof before forming a judgment as to the cause, the responsibility, and, if the facts warranted, the remedy due. This course necessarily recommended itself from the outset to the Executive, for only in the light of a dispassionately ascertained certainty could it determine the nature and measure of its full duty in the matter."

LOADING PROJECTILES.

The President referred to the appointment of the board of inquiry, gave a synopsis of the board's report, and concluded his message as follows:

"I have directed that the finding of the court of inquiry and the views of this Government thereon be communicated to the Government of her Majesty, the Queen Regent, and I do not permit myself to doubt that the sense of justice of the Spanish nation will dictate a course of action suggested by honor and the friendly relations of the two governments.

"It will be the duty of the Executive to advise the Congress of the result and in the meantime consideration is invoked.

"The finding of the board is, in substance, as follows:

"(1) That the United States battleship Maine arrived in the harbor of Havana, Cuba, Jan. 25, 1898, and was taken to buoy No. 4, in from five and one-half to six fathoms of water, by the regular government pilot.

"(2) The state of discipline on board the Maine was excellent; and all orders and regulations in regard to the care and safety of the ship were strictly carried out. The magazines and shell rooms were always locked after having been opened. Everything was reported secure on the evening of the disaster at 8 p. m. The only magazine which had an undue amount of heat was the aft ten-inch magazine and that did not explode at the time the Maine was destroyed. The torpedo warheads were all stowed in the after part of the ship under the wardroom and neither caused nor participated in the destruction of the Maine.

"The dry gun cotton primers and detonators were stored in the cabin aft, and remote from the scene of the explosion. The coal bunkers were inspected daily. The fire alarms in the coal bunkers were in working order, and there had never been a case of spontaneous combustion of coal on board the Maine. On the night of the destruction of the Maine everything had been reported secure for the night at 8 p. m. by reliable persons, through the proper authorities, to the commanding officer. At the time the Maine was destroyed the ship was quiet, and, therefore, least liable to accident, caused by movements from those on board.

"The destruction of the Maine occurred at 9:40 p. m. Feb. 15, she being at the time moored to the same buoy to which she had been taken upon her arrival. There were two explosions of a distinctly different character, with a very short but distinct interval between them, and the forward part of the ship was lifted to a marked degree at the time of the first explosion. The first explosion was more in the nature of a report, like that of a gun, while the second explosion was more open, prolonged and of greater volume. This second explosion was, in the opinion of the court, caused by the partial explosion of two or more of the forward magazines of the Maine.

"The evidence bearing upon this, being principally obtained from divers, did not enable the court to form a definite conclusion as to the condition of the wreck, although it was established that the after part of the ship was partially intact, and sank in that condition in a very few minutes after the destruction of the forward part.

When the reading of the document was completed the Senate agreed to the printing of the message, report and testimony and the reference of the documents to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Both houses then adjourned.

English Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford advocates an Anglo-American alliance as "a move in the direction of peace, and calculated to immensely develop trade." Speaking of the possibilities of war, he said that no matter what happens in the beginning the United States must eventually win.

SUPT. CANNIFF.

Rapid Rise of a Well Known Railroad Man.

The LaPorte Argus has an interesting sketch of this well known official and as many of our people have met him, we offer no opology for copying the article entire:

"Superintendent Canniff, of the Lake Shore, is one of the very few who have acquired a high position in railroad life in recent years without being a relative of the railroad royal family. Caniff began his railroad career at Pittsford, where he sawed wood in the depot. While employed there he learned telegraphing and railroad business. His first post was at Trenton on the Detroit branch. When the Union Pacific was opened he took a station at Lone Tree, Neb. He thought the country was rather new and returned to the Lake Shore. He was made station agent at Salem Crossing, now Otis, Ind. Two division superintendent had graduated from that obscure station, and the boys joked "Bill" "Are you in line?" they said. Bill was. "I expect to be superintendent in due time," he said in seriousness Soon after he was made track master or the Northern Michigan railroad, and now the Lansing branch. In quick succession he became acting superintendent of the Lansing division and assistant general superintendent respectively. Now he is general manager."

The Kidneys

are the seat or the starting point of many maladies, all of them serious, all more or less painful, and all of them tending, unless cured, to a fatal end. No organs of the body are more delicate or more sensitive than the kidneys. When symptoms of disease appear in them not a moment is to be lost if health is to be restored. The best way to treat the kidneys is through the blood, cleansing it from the poisonous matter which is usually at the bottom of kidney complaints. For this purpose there is no remedy equal to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from kidney trouble, and have tried a number of largely advertised kidney cures without benefit. At last a friend advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The use of eight bottles of this remedy entirely cured my malady."—MARY MILLER, 1238 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

A QUEER FISH.

Friday's Daily.

With the coming of warm weather on each returnig spring, there is an exodus of boys from the streets of Auburn to the banks of Cedar Creek. This year has been an exceptionally favored one for these conditions. There is a vacation in the schools this week, and the creek has been so high as to be doubly attractive. Of course not many fish are caught in such high water, but now that the water is going down to the normal point, there is now, and then a good sized fish that has to give up his liberty and his life to some keen witted lad. And now and then the captive taken is of an uncommon kind. It will be remembered that four or five years ago, someone caught one of those little half fish, half lizard animals, now and then met with in our fresh water streams, called "water dogs" etc. It was kept on show for several days. This morning as Brad Ralston, Hubert Hartman, Carl and Ralph Brown, and possibly other lads were strolling along the banks, examining the clearer eddies of the water, they saw a good sized fish, about a foot and a half long, that at once attracted their attention. All stopped and looked at it. It was not of unusual shape, except, that it was flat and thin. But its actions were queer. First it would tip over a little to one side, and then after a brief pause, tip over the other way, as if it wanted to expose its sides fully to the rays of the sun, which was then shining brightly. The boys stood watching these queer antics and never thought of trying to catch him. Just then the light shone strong on the up turned side of the fished and showed at least two colors and what was more remarkable, these colors seemed arranged in forms, that somehow seemed familiar to the boys. They were surprised and waited for the other side to turn up which it soon did, and there along the fish's shining sides in letters of gold and blue, the startled lads saw this familiar legend, "Apr 1 1, 1898."

PAPER CHANGES HANDS.

The news came today that M. E. Gardner has sold the Butler Herald to Editor Geiger of the Churubusco Truth. Mr. Geiger will put in a man to run it, while he himself remains at Churubusco. Mr. Geiger is a good newspaper man, but being a republican we are not certain as to how he will suit the Butler democrats. Mr. Gardner goes to Lansing to establish himself in business.

BAD ROADS

No use to growl. But then, some places are worse than others. Will Schaab and W. C. Hartman were out west of Feagler's corners today, when they struck a sink hole of mud, two or three feet deep. The horse went down and stuck fast, and after some desperate struggles, gave up and lay there. The two men had a hard job to liberate poor animal.

THE FIRST RECEIPT.

Assessor Saxton informs us that the first person to pay his dog tax today, was Fred W. Hood, the young man who cares for Dr. Nusbaum's horse. His receipness to perform a disagreeable duty, also marks Fred himself as "No. 1." It is a good thing for a young fellow to start out in that way. Fred is not yet of age, but he is going to pay his taxes and will advise all others to do so.

The Wicked Telephone.

The COURIER came near having another telephone puzzle to record today. Last evening, a certain popular married lady heard her telephone bell ring and stepped to it and found herself talking with a strange voice, which went on chaffing her in a way she did not understand. "Who is it?" inquired the lady. "Why, it's I, don't you know my voice?" "No, I don't," answered the lady, "Why should I?" "Why, the dickens!" came back the strange voice, "Aint this——?" "No, it isn't said the lady", "This is Mrs ——" "Oh gee!" answered the man, 'I thought this was my wife and I was going to have some fun teasing her." Ting-a-ling-a-ling, went the bell at both instruments, and "the incident was closed"

DISCOVERED BY A WOMAN.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undertermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. 4

GOT PRIZES.

Tuesday evening D. A. Hodge held the drawing that decided the lucky ones in the contest for the music box. The numbers had been sold the usual way one cent for the first ticket, two for the second, three for the third ticket and so on up to 100, when the sale of tickets closed. It was also agreed, that when the drawing took place, the first marble drawn out should be the the second prize, or $5 in goods, and the last of all should be the first prize, or the music box itself. At the drawing the first marble that came out was 31, which belonged to Mrs. J. A. Barns. The last one that came out of the box was No. 69 and was George Boland's. So he gets the music box.

GOES TO WEST POINT

Cloude Link received a letter today from Congressman Robinson directing him to report for examination at West Point at an early date. He will start for New York next Monday, so as to be at hand when called on. It will be remembered that Mr. Link went to Chicago not long ago to take the preliminary examination, and while that first examination does not settle anything, it gave them a footing. Mr. Robinson was allowed to name two per to seek the position of cadet, and he named Mr. Link as first, but we believe has not named any one as alternate. So Mr. Link has a good chance, and we hope to see him succeed and get into this desirable school. It is a high honor for a young man if he can get this place, and get through. And we wish right here, also, to compliment our member, Mr. Robinson on his loyalty to his constituents, especially to the cannon people. He is himself a man of the people and leaves untried no opportunity to recognize those who are striving to rise by merit rather than by wealth or social position. Our member is all right.

THEY MUST GO.

They Will Follow the Old Flag Over the World.

It is often asked if the militia can be compelled to go to Cuba. We think they can and in case of war they will be sent wherever needed. It is true that the constitution of the United States does not say it in so many words but speaks in a general way of the powers of the president "to repel invasion." And in case of war with Spain no doubt the best way "to repel invasion" would be to seize Cuba and force the fighting to be done on the island rather than on the mainland of the United States. And such a course would be sensible and prudent and be sustained by the people. Militia themselves would not be likely to object and the only objection would come from some interested politician, like Congressman Henry U. Johnson, of Indiana, who in his frenzy to stick by the President in his recent policy of delay is calling aloud for "peace at any price." Such demagogues don't care how often our flag is insulted or our warships blown up, so long as they can make a little political buncombe out of it. But the facts are that history does not sustain the view that militia cannot be ordered out of the state in which they live. The first serious trouble over this idea, was early in the war of 1812 when our troops crossed Niagara river into Canada and had hard fighting with the British at Queenstown. Our soldiers were nearly all New York militia and when those who had got over were having a hot time, the others who were on the New York side, got panic stricken and refused to cross on the ground that they could not be made to go out of the state. The result was disastrous, for the part of our men who were across and fighting were finally compelled to retreat before superior numbers. This serious incident was never lost sight of and later in the same war, there was but little trouble, though the law was still unsettled. But when the great rebellion came on the same question again arose There was no time to make new laws, for volunteers by the hundred thousand were turning and being sent right to the front. So a short cut was taken. The regiments were at once sworn into service of the general government and then as far as their rights and duties were concerned, they were United States regulars and bound to go to the ends of the earth if ordered to do so. This at once puts an end to all quibbling. The first kick had come when the men raised for the three months services, were sent into Kentuckey and Virginia. These three months men were sworn into service of the state only and although they went where ordered, the danger was at once perceived That same summer of '61 the second call was not for three months, but "for three years or during the war." It was then that Uncle Sam swore them in for his own service and the danger of insubordination was over. In the present case, the militia will be at once sworn in to the service of the general government and will have to go to Cuba, Porto Rico or to Spain or to the Phillipine Islands if need be. And we believe so much in the spirit of patriotism of our present intelligent citizen soldiers that we feel confident that even this oath would not be needed to induce them to follow the stars and stripes to the end of the earth if duty to our country should call.

FROM TEXAS.

A letter from John W. Pepple brings pay for his COURIER to 99 and the news that he has changed his residence from Hillsboro, to Smithville. Texas. So he and Sam will have a chance to be neighbors. Both families are well. He says they are having a backward spring and railway busines quiet. Politically, the silver principles are getting stronger and he thinks Texas will give 100,000 majority next presidential election. Every body there is for Cuba. They may make DeKalb a visit this summer, and send regards to all here.

WAR IS INEVITABLE.

IMPOSSIBLE NOW TO AVOID A CONFLICT.

President Will Abandon All Further Attempt to Maintain Peace—Spain Has Broken Faith and Must Be Whipped Into a Reasonable Attitude.

War Cannot Be Avoided.

There is little doubt that the President and members of the Cabinet now regard conflict with Spain as almost inevitable. In his message to Congress, which will be sent in soon, it is understood the President will review at some length the record as it stands between this Government and Spain, but will not insist upon further time in which to continue negotiations looking to a peaceful solution of the Cuban problem.

The Cabinet meeting Saturday was unquestionably the most important held in many years. It received Spain's answer to the ultimatum of this Government, and finding it unsatisfactory, practically decided upon a policy which at this hour seems certain to involve hostilities. The whole record will be laid before Congress and the question is now under earnest consideration of what shall be the particular form our policy shall take in bringing to an end the horrors in Cuban and of securing the independence of the island. Propositions ranging from simple recognition of Cuban independence to a declaration of war have been urged at the Capitol, but there is hardly any doubt that a majority of Congress will await the executive lead before taking action and are disposed to adopt McKinley's suggestion on this point, with the thought that any of the resolutions, except possibly the simple recognition of independence, would lead to war.

Vanderbilt Will Give a Battleship.

William K. Vanderbilt, it is reported, has decided in the event of war with Spain, to present to the United States Government a warship to cost $5,000,000. This interesting information comes from a most responsible source, with the explanation that Mr. Vanderbilt, impressed with the justice of the nation's attitude in the present crisis, believed this to be the most direct and practical manner in which he could be of service to his country.

Mr. Vanderbilt, if his decision is as represented, has resolved to follow in the footsteps of his grandfather, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, who, during the Civil War, presented to the Federal Government the large steamship Vanderbilt, which was valued at $1,000,000.

Money for War.

Gov. Black sent to the New York Legislature an emergency message advising an immediate appropriation of $1,000,000 as a contingent war fund. Immediately on receipt of the message a bill in conformity with the suggestion was introduced and passed unanimously. In the Senate the reading of the message followed immediately by the reporting of the assemblies appropriation bill which was passed by a unanimous vote. The bill was engrossed and sent to the Governor, who signed it as soon as it reached him. The National Guard of the State will now be prepared for war on a minute's notice.

Earthquake Shocks.

At San Francisco, two violent earthquake shocks were experienced late Thursday night. Houses were wrecked, tall buildings rocked on their foundations, and many people ran half clad into the streets. The loss has not been estimated. No loss of life has been reported. The shock was general in the central portion of the State.

Aranguren's Death Avenged.

Lieutenant Colonel Benedicto, who commanded the Spanish forces which killed the insurgent leader, Aranguren, while visiting the house of Dr. Francisco Vidal, at Guanabacoa, has been wounded by a revolver shot in the back.

Steve Brodie Dead.

A telegram received at Chicago says Steve Brodie, famous for his jump from Brooklyn bridge, died on a train at Adrian, Mich. He left Chicago suffering from congestion of the lungs.

Shot a Girl and Himself.

Pittsburgh special: Because Bertha Spiegle would not marry him, William Hillman, a farmer of Munhall Township, near here, shot and killed her and then cut his own throat with a razor. The girl was 15 years old, and refused Hillman on account of her youth. Hillman will die.

Ready to Leave Madrid.

A dispatch from Madrid says Minister Woodford is making preparations to leave Madrid immediately in the event of a diplomatic rupture.

Killed on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

James W. Buchanan, a grand nephew of the late ex-President Buchanan, was run down by a train and killed in the Pennsylvania Railroad yard at Altoona, Pa. The mangled remains were discovered by his wife who had gone to search for him.

The Straits Open.

Mackinaw City special: The Straits of Mackinaw were opened by a southwest gale, which is rapidly driving the ice in Lake Huron. The straits are practically clear of ice. This is the earliest opening for the sixty-three years of which records have been kept.

PREPARING FOR A SIEGE.

Spaniards Want to Provision Havana for Three Months.

Havana special: It is asserted on good authority that the Government at Madrid and the local Government have determined to provision Havana city for three months against a possible blockade of the port by the American fleet. It has also been decided to bring 50,000 tons of coal to Cuba as soon as possible. The lack of money militates seriously against the carrying out of either plan. A strong effort will be made to get a portion of the coal at least, but the provision question has been to all appearances dropped. Gen. Blanco's proclamation doing away with the concentration system in the four western provinces is believed to be a shrewd political move, in view of the announced intervention of the United States for humanity's sake. Many doubt the practicability of the plan to make any but the hardiest of the reconcentrados self-supporting, while others aver that there are as many insurgents as ever in the provinces of Santa Clara and Pinar del Rio.

Spain Buying Warships.

Madrid special: While the situation here outwardly is of the calmest description, the actual position of affairs is regarded as critical. United States Minister Woodford is working energetically and it is known that the Spanish Government admits the desirability or necessity of complying with the demands of the United States, and it is only in the disinclination of the ministers to put this willingness into concrete form that danger lies. The point which Gen. Woodford is now pressing is that in the interests of humanity hostilities in Cuba must cease immediately. No date is fixed either in the first or in the present note, but the United States is now emphasizing the word immediately and insisting that Spain accept its general interpretation.

The El Pais says that four warships have been obtained by Spain from France.

The El Pais also says that orders have been issued to mobilize all the Spanish warships, and the torpedo boat Halcon is to sail immediately from Carthagena for Cadiz, where a second torpedo squadron is being prepared.

Italy, it is said by the El Pais, has decided to sell the armored cruiser Guiseppe Maribaldi to Spain.

Murdered the Whole Family.

The entire Lee family, consisting of four persons, were murdered on a ranch five miles south of Point Rock, Texas, by unknown persons. The instruments of death used were axes and clubs. The heads of the victims were beaten to a pulp and then hacked to pieces. The family consisted of John Lee, his wife, baby and a girl 4 years old. The murder is supposed to have been done by two middle-aged men, who had been refused shelter. A man whose name is unknown heard a scuffle at the Lee home and went to the rescue. He entered the house and struck a match, and lying on the floor found the dead bodies. The man who made the discovery attempted to cut his own throat. He says the two strangers attempted to kill him, but he escaped. His actions were suspicious, and he is being closely watched.

Cruelty of a Fiend.

Patrick Murphy, a miner of Butte, Mont., was arrested for most atrocious and fiendish cruelty to his wife. He had beaten her and the woman took refuge in the cellar. When she thought her husband had left the house she tried to come out through a trap door in the floor. Murphy, who was on the watch, jumped on the door and caught one of her arms between the door and the floor, where he held it firm. Then he slowly poured a kettle of scalding water over her arm, unheeding the woman's hideous cries for mercy. The arm was boiled from fingers to shoulder and amputation was necessary.

To Name One Ship "Ohio."

President Jones of the Ohio State Senate, had read in the Senate a letter received from Congressman Jacob H. Bromwell saying that in accordance with the Carpenter resolution he will offer and support an amendment to the naval bill naming one of the three new battle ships Ohio."

WAR TALK IN SENATE.

Resolutions Introduced by Frye, Foraker and Rawlins.

STORM GATHERS AT CAPITOL.

Two Senators Call for Belligerent Action Against Spain.

WANT CUBANS' WOES ENDED

Upper House of Congress a Scene of Intense Excitement.

Rawlins of Utah Offers Resolution Recognizing the Independence of Cuba and Declaring War Against Spain—Allen and Foraker Offer Resolutions Recognizing Cuban Independence—Senator Mason Makes a Red-Hot Speech in Favor of War—Galleries Applaud Bellicose Sentiments.

Washington correspondence:

The Senate plunged into the Cuban question Tuesday with a merciless disregard for the President's peace plan. Two Republican members of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senators Foraker and Frye, took the lead. Four resolutions on Cuba were introduced in rapid succession. Senator Frye of Maine, a conservative member of the Foreign Relations Committee, who by precedent of long service was entitled to the chairmanship of foreign relations, but yielded to Senator Davis, offered a resolution calling upon the President to intervene at once by force to stop the war in Cuba. Senator Foraker's resolution recognized the independence of the Cuban republic. Rawlins (Utah) offered one declaring a state of war between Spain and the United States. Allen (Neb.) offered one recognizing independence and Senator Foraker said he would insist upon early consideration of his resolution.

Mason (Ill.) followed the introduction of the resolutions in the Senate with a vigorous war speech. He described vividly the disaster to the Maine. He said that if ninety of the victims had been Senators or sons of Senators we would not have been forty days declaring war. Yet the lives of all Americans were sacred alike under our law and equally entitled to consideration. Mr. Mason said the catastrophe should be replied to vigorously. He could not speak for others, but for himself he was for war. This declaration brought out a vigorous outburst of applause from the galleries.

The Illinois Senator declared there could be no peace so long as a European nation owns and butchers its slaves on this hemisphere. He said it was not necessary for the Maine court to fix the responsibility. The law did that. If it was a torpedo or a mine it was a Spanish torpedo or a Spanish mine. Hence Spain must answer. He would oppose any proposition looking to indemnity, as he would oppose making a diplomatic incident of the catastrophe. He would oppose any kind of autonomy or any plan to assist Spain, but his demand was that the Spanish flag should be driven from the western hemisphere. Neither did he believe Cuba should be required to pay an indemnity to Spain. "We are told," he said, "we must wait on the Spanish elections, but if Spanish elections are as rotten as Spanish diplomacy we had better not wait. Let us awake," said Mr. Mason, in conclusion, "to glorious war, as did our fathers—a war that shall insure the honor and respect of our flag all over the world."

A storm has been gathering in Congress. Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning before the cabinet met the President was given to understand by leaders in Congress that unless he intervened soon he would have the matter taken out of his hands by Congress, which body has the right to declare war. The President has considered every conceivable plan looking toward peace, but Congress will hear nothing but intervention for Cuban independence. A Senator who is conservative made the statement that the President would be compelled to intervene for independence whether he wished to or not.

The revolt in the House against further postponement of action on the Cuban issue culminated in a conference of Republican members whose ideas are in accordance with a positive course. About fifty representatives attended, representing all sections. Representative Hopkins of Illinois, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, presided, and Representative Joy of Missouri was secretary. The meeting was called to take steps to secure immediate intervention in some form and the recognition of Cuban independence.

It was pointed out that while it was fit that the executive should be given, as he had been, a reasonable time within which to advise, it was exclusively the function of Congress to declare war, commence hostilities or take action of that character. The remarks made carried the view that a mere recognition of belligerency was not to be considered, for it would not of itself bring a cessation of hostilities and that intervention, armed and immediate, and recognition of independence only would be considered.

Practically all of Congress has been interviewed on the President's message and the tone of the interviews shows unmistakably that the message was a disappointment to both the House and the Senate. These interviews show, also, conclusively that the Democrats are a unit for immediate intervention for independence and they have with them a sufficient number of Republicans who have spoken publicly of the President's policy and thus indicated a willingness to stand up and be counted to enable this element to override the will of the Speaker.

SPANISH LEGATION, WASHINGTON.

THE CONGRESSIONAL BATTERY IN ACTION.

A SPANISH TORPEDO BOAT.

SPAIN SAYS ACCIDENT.

Madrid Experts Dispute Every Claim of American Board.

The conclusions reached by the Spanish naval commission which investigated the destruction of the battleship Maine are directly opposite to those in the report of the court of inquiry submitted to Congress. The synopsis is as follows:

The evidence of witnesses comparatively close to the Maine at the moment is to the effect that only one explosion occurred; that no column of water was thrown into the air; that no shock to the side of the nearest vessel was felt, nor on land was any vibration noticed, and that no dead fish were found. The evidence of the senior pilot of the harbor states that there is abundance of fish in the harbor and this is corroborated by other witnesses. The assistant engineer of works states that after explosions made during the execution of works in the harbor he has always found dead fish.

The divers were unable to examine the bottom of the Maine, which was buried in the mud, but a careful examination of the sides of the vessel, the rents and breaks in which all point outward, shows without a doubt that the explosion was from the inside. A minute examination of the bottom of the harbor around the vessel shows absolutely no sign of the action of a torpedo and the fiscal (judge advocate) of the commission can find no precedent for the explosion of the storage magazines of a vessel by a torpedo.

From the Front.

Capt. C. D. Sigsbee has been assigned to duty as aid to Secretary Long.

Merchants of Barcelona have offered the Spanish Government $40,000,000 to be used in case of a war.

Spanish military engineers are starting for the Canary Islands, and the Balearic Islands are being fortified.

Italy has decided to sell the armored cruiser Giuseppe Garibaldi of 6,840 tons, and well armored, to Spain.

The remains of Lieut. F. W. Jenkins, of the Maine, were interred at Pittsburg with military and civic honors.

Secretary Long has detailed officers to command all the auxiliary torpedo boats recently added to the naval service.

All the shipyards on the lakes may be started in full blast in case the war with Spain lasts more than four months.

The United States naval attaches at the various European centers are endeavoring to purchase more torpedo boats.

The Navy Department has issued instructions to transfer twenty cadets from Annapolis to the battleship Indiana.

There are over 2,000 men at work in the Brooklyn navy yard and operations continue without intermission day and night.

The steamship Utstein sailed from New Orleans for Matanzas, loaded with 600 tons of provisions for the starving reconcentrados.

At Harvard College Dean Hodges, the university preacher, read special prayers for the President of the United States and Congress.

Orders have been given to remove from all the war vessels in the Key West harbor all surplus baggage and unnecessary paraphernalia.

Foreign bankers are evidently becoming alarmed for the safety of their funds in Havana branches and are withdrawing them to New York.

Gov. Black, of New York, sent to the Legislature an emergency message advising an immediate appropriation of $1,000,000 as a contingent war fund.

The Madrid Pais says that orders have been issued to mobilize all the Spanish warships and that a second torpedo squadron is being prepared for sea at Cadiz.

The Dupont powder mills have received urgent orders from Washington to use every possible means to furnish the Government with smokeless powder without delay.

The life-saving crews of all Government stations on the Atlantic coast have been notified to hold themselves in readiness to enter the naval service at a moment's notice.

The work on the cannons now in process of completion at the Washington navy yard is being pushed with all the haste possible. More than 500 men have been added to the force.

Many applications are being received at the War Department from small towns along the coast for the erection of some means of defense to withstand the assaults of foreign ships in the event of war.

It was commonly reported in Havana that on a declaration of war on Spain being made by the United States a wholesale murder of Americans in Havana would take place and Consul General Lee would be the first to be assassinated.

The Government coal fleet, bound for the Gulf, that tied up just below Louisville, was ordered by the Secretary of the Navy to proceed at once, and at all hazards. The coal is for the use of the United States navy at Key West. The fleet carries nearly 2,000,000 bushels of coal.

The approach of the Spanish torpedo flotilla caused the Government to make a tremendous effort to secure all the available supply of searchlight mirrors in the world's markets. The search light offers the most effective defense against these torpedo craft, which are dangerous only when they cannot be seen.

The Ohio River Flood.

REPLY IS AN INSULT.

Spain Will Not Tolerate Interference in Cuba.

DONS WOULD PROVOKE WAR.

Make Insolent Proposition to Settle the Maine Affair.

DIPLOMACY COMES TO AN END.

Negotiations Closed and Time for Action at Hand.

Efforts of the United States for Honorable Peace Are Answered Only with Insolent Defiance and Evasion of the Real Issues—Spain Seeks to Justify Her Course, and Declares the American Demands Are Intolerable—No Hope that War Will Be Longer Averted.

Washington correspondence:

It seems apparent that the administration has been lenient in its dealings with Spain. President McKinley sought to bring Spain and Cuba to some amicable arrangement which would satisfy both, and not be too humiliating to the Spanish government, but Sagasta temporized and deceived until at last the President had to lay down the definite proposition that the independence of Cuba was the only satisfactory solution to the American people and the United States Congress. Sagasta sought for further delay, but, when he could not secure that, his ministry sent a reply which is an insult to the President.

The reply of Sagasta, when stripped of its diplomatic verbiage, informs the United States that it should attend to its own business and not meddle with the affairs of Spain. Spain will not submit to dictation from this government in the affairs of Cuba. She will leave Cuban affairs to the Cuban Parliament and she will consider the question of amnesty when the insurgents ask for it. The Spanish note answering the demands was telegraphed from Madrid to the powers, together with a copy of the American demands.

SENOR SAGASTA.

In this note Sagasta sweeps away all his diplomatic pretensions of desiring the help of the United States in settling the Cuban question and insolently tells the President to keep his nose out of other people's business. This reply from the Sagasta ministry was rather stunning, but it was no surprise to the members of the cabinet who have for some time urged determined action and expressed distrust of Spain's pretensions of a desire to end the war and settle the Cuban question in a way to satisfy the American people.

Sagasta also added insult to presumption and offered to arbitrate the question of the Maine. This was more than the President could endure with patience. He had made no demand upon Spain, but had sent to Sagasta the findings of our court of inquiry, and left to his own sense of honor the offer of a way for treatment of this question without that of war. But Sagasta's only reply is that he will submit this question to arbitration. It seems apparent at this writing that Sagasta is ready to end all the differences between this government and Spain with war, and hopes to provoke war by insult.

The President is done with diplomatic consideration of these questions. Congress, the war-making power, will deal with it.

President McKinley will not unite with Spain in an effort to relieve distress in Cuba. Spain's appropriation of $600,000 to feed the starving Cubans at this late day is regarded here as only a bluff, with no intention of spending a dollar for that purpose. Sagasta realizes that this government will intervene in Cuban affairs, drive Spain from the island, and then relieve the starving people. The only question to embarrass the administration in its program of intervention is a request that is said to have come from the insurgents, that this government simply recognize Cuban independence and leave to the insurgents the business of driving Spain out of the island.

The Cuban situation has now become such that this government cannot stop at simply a recognition of independence without making that independence secure. It cannot recognize the Cubans as independent and then leave them to starve as they have been starving for the last year. And, since Sagasta has failed to realize the President's hope that Spain would offer some honorable way of taking the Maine question out of the situation, there was no way of meeting it except by allowing Congress to take it up with the Cuban question. All the evidence points directly to Spanish treachery in that disaster. Congress so views it.

ZOLA ESCAPES PRISON.

Court of Appeals Holds He Shall Not Be Punished.

The French Court of Appeals, in the case of the appeal of M. Emile Zola against the judgment of the Paris assizes court, condemning him to twelve months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 3,000 francs, decided to sustain the finding of the lower court, but also decided that M. Zola shall not undergo any punishment. In other words, the verdict and sentence are affirmed, but they are not to be put into effect.

It was at first reported that the Court of Appeals had quashed the verdict and remitted the case for retrial to the Versailles assizes, but this proved to be untrue. The general interpretation of the action of the Court of Appeals is taken to mean an application of the Berenger law remitting sentences imposed upon first offenders in certain circumstances.

WORDS OF MENACE TO SPAIN.

War Resolutions Introduced in United States Congress.

By Senator Frye of Maine.

Resolved, That the President of the United States be and he is hereby directed and empowered to take such effective steps as in his discretion may be necessary to secure a speedy termination of the hostilities between the government of Spain and the people of Cuba, the withdrawal of the military and naval forces of Spain from said island, and the complete independence of said people.

By Representative Marsh of Illinois.

Resolved, That war be and the same is hereby declared to exist between the government of Spain and her dependencies and the United States and her Territories, and that the President of the United States is hereby authorized to use the whole land and naval force of the United States, including the militia and the naval militia thereof, to carry the same into effect.

By Senator Rawlins of Utah.

Resolved, That the independence of the republic of Cuba be and the same is hereby recognized, and that war against the kingdom of Spain be and the same is hereby declared, and the President is hereby authorized and directed to employ the land and naval forces of the United States of America to wage such war to success.

By Senator Allen of Nebraska.

Resolved, That the republic of Cuba now and some time maintained by force of arms, is hereby recognized by the United States of America, as a separate and independent nation. That the United States shall immediately intervene and put an end to the war now being waged on the island of Cuba, and shall succor and release from imprisonment the people there concentrated for the purpose of starvation and extermination.

By Senator Foraker of Ohio.

Resolved, That the people of the Island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent. That the government of the United States hereby recognizes the republic of Cuba as the true and lawful government of that island. That the war Spain is waging against Cuba is so destructive of the commercial and property interests of the United States, and so cruel, barbarous, and inhuman in its character as to make it the duty of the United States to demand, and the government of the United States does hereby demand that she at once withdraw her land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters. That the President of the United States be and he is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to use, if necessary, the entire land and naval forces of the United States to carry these resolutions into effect.

TELLS OF MARVELOUS MINE.

Yukonite Returns Dressed in Rags, but Loaded with Gold.

After five weary years in the Yukon valley, during which he found and worked a quartz ledge of wonderful richness, as well as faced death by cold and starvation a dozen times, Charles E. Baldwin of San Francisco has arrived in Vancouver, B. C. He was dressed in rags, but was loaded down with gold. He said:

"I went to hunt gold in Alaska five years ago and struck the richest mine in the world. It is a quartz ledge in the Tanana Hills, 280 miles north of Fort Selkirk. I have gone in on the ledge 85 feet, and I know the ore will run $2,000 to the ton. With a common hand mortar I have got out in four years $35,000. I brought out with me $17,000 in gold. If I wanted I could have pounded out two ounces a day. When Indians wanted pay for food I took a rock and hammered out the gold. I found many nuggets also." Baldwin says that when he left the mine the Indians were dying by scores of starvation. He will return to his treasure after a rest.

LEE'S LIFE THREATENED.

Warned in Two Days of Five Distinct Plots to Assassinate Him.

Havana advices say that Consul General Lee was warned Sunday and Monday of five distinct plots against his life. It was reported to him that many of the rabid Weylerites are determined to kill him and that all sorts of plans have been evolved to accomplish that purpose.

Gen. Lee professes to place but little credence in the many reports that reach him of threats against him, but it is noticed that he is more closely guarded than ever by the Government. The latest story to reach the consul was that he would be poisoned by a bribed employe of his hotel. To this Gen. Lee replied by asking the newspaper correspondents who sit near him at meal time, in case he is suddenly taken ill, first to shoot his waiter and then to run for a stomach pump.

EARTHQUAKE CAUSES PANIC.

Residents of San Francisco Frightened by Seismic Shocks.

Residents of San Francisco and neighboring cities were much excited over the earthquake which shook the city and vicinity just before midnight Wednesday. The vibrations continued fifteen seconds after the shock was felt and many persons were thrown into a panic. Buildings trembled on their foundations, telegraph and telephone wires were broken and numberless panes of glass were broken during the short space of time the shock was felt. Several hours elapsed before the fears of the panic-stricken populace were quieted and the streets cleared. Severe shocks were felt at Sacramento, San Jose, Merced, Stockton and Santa Cruz.

Marix Says It Was a Mine.

Lieutenant Commander Marix, judge advocate of the board of inquiry into the Maine disaster, on being released from the oath of secrecy in relation to the blowing up of the battleship, had this to say:

"We know that the Maine was blown up by a mine as surely as a physician knows a man was poisoned when he finds him suffering from the effects of poison."

In Jamesburg, N. J., somebody has stolen a four-story brick house. Is the rest of that State safely nailed down?

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Northern Towns to Be Connected by Trolley Roads — Record - Breaking Convention of Teachers — Crisis Is Threatened at Columbus City.

Elkhart Trolley System.

The South Bend and Elkhart Electric Railway Company, which is composed of Pittsburg capitalists who recently bought the two electric lines connecting South Bend and Mishawaka, has all arrangements made to extend the line to Elkhart, a distance of twelve miles, and will begin work as soon as the city grants it a franchise to use certain streets from the outskirts to the business center. The Indiana Electric Railway Company, which owns the lines in Elkhart and Goshen, has a franchise between these two places, and promises to construct the line this summer. The Elkhart, Goshen and Southern Electric Company also has a franchise between the two towns and for entrances to each, and promises to have the line in operation by the middle of June.

Convention of Teachers.

With an enrollment of more than 2,000 delegates to the Southern Indiana Teachers' Association convention at Terre Haute, all State records were broken. Shelbyville is to have the convention next year. The officers elected are: President, J. P. Funk, New Albany; first vice-president, W. A. Hester, Evansville; second vice-president, C. M. McDaniel, Madison; secretary, Janie Deming, Shelbyville; treasurer, W. D. Kerlin, Martinsville; executive committee, Superintendent Tomlin, Shelbyville; W. A. Hester, C. M. McDaniel, W. F. Axtell, E. C. Gorman, Miss Louise Barber, Terre Haute and Kittie Palmer, Franklin.

Fight Grows Bitter.

The war which has been raging in Columbia City over sewers between the City Council and a majority of the property holders reached a climax when it was learned that Councilman O. H. Diffendarfer's mother had found an infernal machine on his doorstep. A few nights ago Mayor Harrison was presented with a basket of rotten eggs and a note written in red ink, saying: "Defend yourself," with a dagger and two guns crossed outlined on the bottom of the note.

Agree on a Scale of Wages.

At Terre Haute, the Indiana operators and miners, after two days of conference, signed the scale for the year beginning April 1. In the main it was for the Chicago agreement, but smaller considerations in the price for machine mining and yardage to apply to local conditions required long consideration. It was agreed that in case of any further difference in local agreements they should be settled by arbitration without cessation of work.

Porter You Shoots His Friend.

Porter You, Arthur Smethers and Edward Schott, all sons of prominent Fort Wayne citizens, were out hunting near Lindenwood cemetery, when the gun in the hands of You was accidentally discharged, shooting Smethers in the face. The entire lower part of his jaw was torn to pieces and he died instantly. The boys were all less than 16 years old.

Within Our Borders.

At Frankfort, P. J. Kern fell dead at his home of heart disease.

At Eminence, Gilbert Miles was drowned in attempting to ford Rhoades creek.

Charles Chamberlin has brought suit against John B. Griffin at Terre Haute for $5,000 for alienating Mrs. Chamberlin's affections.

The northern Indiana Methodist conference passed a resolution giving laymen equal representation in the general conference by a vote of 145 to 2.

Two armed robbers entered the home of John O'Neill at Elkhart. He attacked them, but was worsted. The robbers escaped with a small amount of booty.

At South Bend, the suit brought by ex-Senator Clem Kern of Valparaiso and others to set aside the will of his brother, Ammon S. Kern, and secure about $70,000, failed.

James Shipley was blowing up stumps with dynamite near Falmouth, when a cartridge was prematurely exploded and set off a dozen cartridges which Shipley carried in a nail box on his arm. He was mangled almost beyond recognition.

J. D. Mackay, for many years the leading millionaire railroad magnate in the West, the other day applied for work in Anderson factories. He has lost his $5,000,000, death has claimed his wife and daughter, he is penniless and homeless and wants to get a new start in life.

Rev. Anson Hassler, pastor of the East Washington Street Presbyterian Church, Indianapolis, resigned and the church voted to accept the resignation. Some of the opposition then joined in a paper declaring the pulpit vacant immediately, and the next day ninety-four members asked for letters of dismissal.

Charles M. Mason, a pensioner, was found hanging to a tree on his Harrison township farm. Being out longer than usual attending to his morning work, one of the children went out to call him to breakfast when his body was found. The suicide was the result of financial distress, he having worried considerably lately over money he had borrowed. He was about 55 years old.

The damage and loss from the flood in Decatur County will surpass first estimates. It is thought it will reach the $150,000 mark. Three members of the Walters family in the Tanners Creek bottoms are missing, and a farm hand, Albert Phillips, was a victim in the cloudburst at Moscow. There was only one fatality at Westport, the drowning of Claude Shane. Late reports indicate loss of life on Flat Rock, below St. Paul, at the junction of Conn's creek, where two members of one family perished.

Eleven families left Anderson as the Holder colony to North Dakota. At Logansport the colony joined two from North Manchester and Marion, and a special train was made up of the emigrants.

The overflowing of a creek in the south part of Clay County did immense damage. Two mines belonging to Harrison & Andrews, large coal operators, were completely filled with water, within six inches of the roof, throwing 300 men out of employment. A mine in the north part of the county belonging to the Ehrlich Coal Company was also filled with water and will probably be abandoned.

Foster Alexander, a well-known rolling mill man of Elwood, who contracted tubercular disease of the limbs, is in a serious condition. Last winter he suffered the amputation of a leg near the thigh, but the disease continued to spread and now the other leg and one hand must come off in order to prolong life.

Marshal W. E. Starr arrested Clarence Snider, of local fame, at the Big Four depot at Greencastle. He will be charged with a series of offenses, the most important of which was robbing a mail sack which had been left on the Big Four station platform, transferred from the Monon Railway. Snider had been trying to sell a quantity of postage stamps lately.

HAIL to Him whose star is seen
Glowing in the Eastern skies;
Fairest of the sons of men,
Sweetest song in Paradise!
All the paths of earth He trod,
From the manger to the grave,
Proving life, "The gift of God,"
Deathless, as the hand which gave.

Christ is risen! Hear the song,
Filling all the aisles of air,
Where the stars of glory throng,
Where the angels answer prayer:
Christ is risen over all—
Every claim of mortal sense,
Sin no longer need enthrall,
Death no more life's ardor quench.

Christ is risen! Sing the words,
Till they feed the hungering world,
As the forest fills with birds,
As the floral fields unfold;
Sing them till the winds of heaven
Have their pure aromas blown
Into every port, and haven,
Where the name of Christ is known.

Christ is risen! Evil powers
Flee like mists the morning's sun,
Truth descends in healing showers,
God and Goodness, shine as one!
In these resurrection hours
Let us from our idols turn,
Wreath the cross with Easter flowers,
And the risen Christ discern.
—Ram's Horn.

FREDDIE'S EASTER CARD.

THE little fellow used to stand about the streets with pleading, wistful eyes, asking help from those who passed. But in the great city, amid the crowds, he was unnoticed and often jostled aside. For many months he had roamed the streets in this way; once in a while, only, a sympathetic stranger dropped a coin into the little outstretched hand. He was only six years old—too young to be thus tossed upon the mercy of the world.

One day in the late fall, when one began to shiver with the breezes that blew cold from the lake, the little fellow stood at his accustomed place. His feet were exposed through the tattered shoes, and his clothes seemed too thin and shabby to keep the little frame supplied with warmth. A lady stopped and spoke tenderly to the little fellow.

"Tell me, little boy, are you cold?"

"Yes'm."

"Why do you not go home?"

"Home!" and there was a far-away look in the sad eyes. "Mother sent me out this morning to get money to buy some bread. I have four cents and if I had one more I could get a big loaf and that would last two days."

"A loaf of bread—enough but one penny! Why, you are only a baby."

"I am all the man mother has, she says, and I must help her."

"Come, come, my child," and she hurried him along with her, fearing to listen to another word.

Hurriedly she said to some one: "Fill a basket and give it to this little man." His great eyes were opened wide with surprise and awe and before he could realize what was going on a basket was thrust into his hand.

"Come to-morrow to my house and let me talk with you," said the lady, giving her street and number.

The child could only nod a willing consent.

When the morrow came the little fellow found his way to the great house on the avenue. He found his way to a rear entrance and after a timid rap the door was opened by a neat maid who asked what he wanted. The child could only say: "I don't know. She told me to come—the great lady told me to come."

The maid turned and spoke to another, and after some simple jesting he was told to walk in, the servant supposing that he had been told to come to get a bite to eat. They gave him such a fine dinner, the little fellow thought as he ate and ate and ate, at intervals slipping into his pockets a piece of bread, a bit of potato and even a piece of pie. When he was observed doing this by the good-natured maid, she asked him what he was going to do with that, and he said it was for the baby. Then he went away, thinking that he had been forgotten.

That night the mistress of the great mansion summoned one of the servants to her and asked if a little boy had come to the house that day. "A little lad came this noon, ma'am, but bein' as I didn't know, ma'am——"

"I am sorry, Thompson; I wanted to see the little fellow. Tell me what you did for him?"

"Indeed, ma'am, I gave the lad a bit to eat and——"

"You did not tell him to come again, I know. I am very sorry. You may go."

That night the lady resolved to find the little fellow and go with him to his home and see the mother and the baby. For days she watched and hoped to see him somewhere. After many weeks, when she had given up the search, she was walking in another part of the great city. She spied the little fellow and called to him. His face, though still more wan, brightened as he recognized his benefactress.

"Where have you been? I have been looking for you, little boy."

Then he told her how, when he went home that night, after having gone to her house, he found the doors locked and all they had in the street. "It was dark and I looked round to find mother and the baby. They were sitting on a box in the alley. Mother cried when I told her as how you had given the things all to me.

"The next day mother and me took the baby and walked around to find a place to stay in that night where we could look after the baby, for it was sick and freezing, mother said. So she put her own shawl around it, and all day long I carried the basket full of bread, and we was glad we had that; but when night came we was still without a place to sleep again, so we slipped into a shed where we found nothin' in. Mother kissed little brother many times like as if to keep him warm with kisses; but I guess it was no good kissin' for that. When I waked in the mornin' I tried to wake mother kind of easy like so as not to wake the baby, but I seed they were both asleep, and not a little boy like me could wake 'em."

The lady bowed her head and she could not speak, but took the child by the hand and led him along with her for a little way, and when she could speak again, she said: "And where are you now, Freddie?"

"I am with some kind folks—the ones as lived in the little house that the shed belonged with. They took care of mother and the baby and took me to live with them till I find a better place."

"We will go and see them."

The lady found them to be thrifty, honest people, and in a short time a few changes were made and Freddie sent to school.

A year passed and little Freddie was spoken of as the child artist. Among his drawings, and through his books, was found a face pictured as an angel's. The face seemed ever before him. When the Eastertide came he had painted on a card the figure of an angel about which shone a shower of light; the face was that of the lady who had found him, hungry and cold. The angel hovered over a portal at which knelt a woman with a little child held close to her breast.

Freddie looked long and lovingly at this little emblem, then started out to take it to the lady—to hand it to her himself, he thought. In crossing one of the thoroughfares on his way, so intent was he upon his happy errand, that he was heedless of the horses dashing this way and that. Suddenly there was a warning cry, but all too late. The little fellow was picked from the pavement a moment later, the blood trickling from his head where the print of the horse's iron shoe showed the cause. They carried him to a place near by, where all that could be was done for him. In one little hand he still grasped the card, and only once he opened his eyes and said: "Give it to her, the angel." A gentleman who stood close to him took the card from the hand and removed the covering. As he noticed the face of the angel he uttered a little cry: "Clarissa—my wife; and this the little artist boy."

The lady had often told her husband of the little fellow and of his talent and of her plans for him when he should be older. The husband saw the child placed in an ambulance, then hurried home with the gift and the sad news. The lady went at once to the hospital, but all was over. He had been called home to join the mother and little brother, where cold and hunger could not come.

The Easter card is treasured after many years by the lady who has grown gray in her work of love and charity, which she knew not of, until taught by this little child the full meaning of love, faith and charity.

HOW LILIES ARE GROWN.

Farmers of Bermuda Have Reduced Their Culture to a Science.

OUT in the Atlantic ocean, 580 miles due east of the North Carolina coast, are 365 tiny islands. They are the Bermudas, and from them comes 90 per cent of the Easter lilies used in this country. Some of these islands are so small and so low that no one lives on them, for when the weather is turbulent the ocean has a habit of washing clean over them. More than 300 of the islands are subject to visitations of this kind, otherwise they would be inhabited and the lily crop would be a thousand times larger than it now is.

In all of the 365 islands there are but 12,000 acres of land, not as much as in a fair-sized Texas cattle ranch, and of this only 4,000 acres are under cultivation. Onions, potatoes and lilies are grown, and that is about all. New York gets 90 per cent of these three crops for distribution through the country, and the best paying of the three is the lily crop.

How many lilies are grown in the Bermudas is a difficult question to answer. The figures run away into the tens of millions. They grow like weeds, and if it were merely a question of producing lilies, the Bermudas could easily flood the world with them from one year's end to the other. But the Bermuda lily farmers handle their crop with only one purpose in view, and that is to make the beautiful plant bloom at Easter time. This, at first, was a difficult matter, but now it is accomplished with almost clock-like precision.

Aside from this there is little trouble in the work of growing lilies. The outer portion of each bulb consists of scales, overlying one upon the other. These scales represent layers, and at the base of each of them is a bud. Each bud represents a plant. The Bermuda farmer saves a few of his bulbs each year for seed, as the Northern farmer saves potatoes for the same purpose. He pulls off the scales and plants them in September, in shallow boxes of moist sand. From the bulbs spring delicate rootlets, which quickly extend through the sand seeking for moisture. As soon as the roots are sufficiently formed the embryo plants are set out.

By the following summer little bulblets are developed. These the farmer calls his stock. It takes about sixty thousand of them to plant an acre. They keep on growing through all the mild weather, and in the following June are ready to be dug. An acre of land ought to produce forty thousand marketable bulbs, with a diameter of from four to seven inches. It takes four years and sometimes longer to produce the great bulbs from nine to fourteen inches in diameter, from which spring the tall stalks crowned with many blossoms.

Their Easter.

They are such poor little children, most of them, that you would feel sorry for them. But when you saw the two lovely kindergartners, you would not feel so sorry; you would know that any little boy or girl who had such friends could not be very poor. These children have a number of young girl friends whom they do not know—young girls who have made this kindergarten possible in this neighborhood. As Easter came near, these young girls asked the kindergartners what they could do for these little children that would give them a happy Easter. They were told to make each child a rabbit. The rabbits were made, and just before Easter the festival was held. The children sang their songs, and played their games, and then one rabbit was taken out of a box. The moment the children saw it they shouted with delight. The kindergartner told a story about a rabbit, and then she gave it to one little boy to hold. He stroked and smoothed it, and then asked if he might kiss it. When he had kissed it the rabbit was passed around the circle. After each had held it a little while, the children were asked if they would each like to have a little rabbit for their very own. These little children seemed to think this was too much to expect, and looked charmed at the mere suggestion. When the boxes were taken out, and the children saw that they each were to have a rabbit, they jumped up and down in wild excitement.

They loved and stroked and kissed the rabbits, wild with delight. It was a cold day, and when they went home they carefully covered the rabbits under their coats. —The Outlook.

THE NEW EASTER EGG.

An Ungallant Philosopher.

"I suppose," said the man whose hobby is economy, "that as people advance in years they increase in wisdom. But I have my doubts."

"I'm sure that I have more practical views of life than I had some years ago," replied his wife.

"I won't dispute it. But the unalterable fact remains that a 7-year-old girl will be perfectly happy on Easter with a few hard-boiled eggs, which are inexpensive and good to eat, while a 27-year-old girl cannot exist without a high-priced hat, whose only function is to make some woman jealous in church or some man miserable in the theater."

Jones Was Ahead

The Brute—Well, I see that Mrs. Jones has got the best of you again. Her Easter bonnet is a much finer one than yours.

The Wife—Well, hers isn't paid for and never will be, while mine is.

The Brute—Great Scott! Then Jones has got the best of me.—Truth.

The Easter Maid.

The Easter bells, the Easter bells,
As on the air their music swells;
What message do they send to you?
"Why, this," she answered, looking down,
On Easter hat and Easter gown:
"Ring out the old; ring in the new!"

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

SCRAPS OF INFORMATION OF INTEREST TO EVERYONE.

The Sun as Effective Power—Vitality of Metals—A New Telescope—Goldfish Farms.

For many years back, inventors have given a great deal of time, thought and attention to the utilization of nature's forces, and have exerted a great deal of energy in devising ways and means for generating, controlling and employing power thus furnished them at little or no expense. Electricity, of which our globe is the great reservoir, has been harnessed and rendered a willing servant in the hands of scientists. Light has been made to do its share of work, as has also the wind. The wave has been subdued and its power utilized.

While it has many times been attempted to utilize the heat of the sun's rays, the work performed thereby has been insignificant in proportion to the power to be derived therefrom. It is now reported, however, that within the past few days several Boston capitalists have been working on a solar engine machine, and the completed engine, which has been set up at Longwood, near Boston, crude though it is, was tested successfully. The engine consists of three parts, a reflector, which concentrates the heat, a cylinder for generating the steam, and a device for keeping the sun's rays constantly in focus on the cylinder. In the machine set up at Longwood there is a heavy iron framework, which supports a series of glass mirrors, arranged in a semi-circular sheet, twenty-two feet in diameter. These mirrors are nearly as high as they are wide, and the framework on which they are placed is so adjusted that they will follow the sun in its circuit, and may be adjusted by hand from week to week to follow the declination of the sun.

The roller bearings on which the framework runs permit it to be moved from side to side by turning a wheel with one hand. The boiler is one of the peculiarities of the queer machine which would puzzle anyone unacquainted with heliodynamics. It is of copper, about eight inches in diameter, and as long as the curved mirror in the focus of which it is placed. Owing to the fact that the mirror is made up of innumerable facets of glass, the cylinder receives light on every part of its surface, cutting out an area of shadow at the back, and having the direct sunlight in front. The mechanism which keeps the rays of the sun continually focussed upon the cylinder is a clockwork arrangement similar to that used in astronomical observatories. In the test of the engine, which was made last Monday, after an adjustment of the machinery and the turning in of cold water into the boiler, the formation of steam began almost instantly. The gauge registered pressure of about eighty-five pounds in half an hour, which drove the engine steadily, doing the work of two horse power.

It is a fact of comparatively recent discovery in chemical metallurgy that metals lose their vitality from repetitions of shocks and strains, and may be said, as the expression is, to suffer from fatigue—that is, they may be worked till their molecules fail to hold together, and then they are in a state of exhaustion. As is familiarly known, bars of tin, rods of brass, and wires of any metal will separate, owing to fatigue, if bent backward and forward continually. But by careful experiments, however, the fact is made to appear that a remedy exists for this condition of metals, if the overstrain does not border on rupture, and this remedy is very much like that which is applied in the case of an overworked human frame, namely, rest. Feather-edged tools recover their vitality better than any other. Of course, the length of time required for this rest varies with different metals and the amount of strain to which they have been subjected. Hard metals, such as iron and steel, use up one and two years' time in the process; on the other hand, soft metals, like lead, retain their cohesive force longer and also require less rest.

A fact which has attracted no little attention in astronomical circles is the superiority exhibited by the 24-inch telescopic lens of the Lowell Observatory, at Flagstaff, Ariz., as compared with the greater Yerkes and Lick lenses. About 500 new double stars have been discovered with this instrument, many of the new stellar systems being large and brilliant, and therefore of the highest interest. Some of these new stars are very close and are barely separated in the great telescope, while others are very unequal in brightness and require the best atmosphere for affecting a good separation of the images. Curiously enough, it is proved that the two inner planets, Mercury and Venus, rotate on their axes in the same time in which they revolve in their orbits.

Goldfish are so extremely common nowadays that few people ever stop to wonder where they come from or how they are raised, says the Chicago Tribune. Comparatively little is generally known about the little cold-blooded vertebrates that swim about in the aquariums in so many homes. The pets require a careful and systematic raising that is scarcely appreciated by those who expect to get them for small prices of dealers in the city.

The largest goldfish farm in the world, if it may be called such, is located in Shelby County, Ind., about thirty miles from Indianapolis. Here the original goldfish men of the country have their propagating institution.

There are two farms, several miles apart, which are devoted to the different branches of the industry. In the north part of the county is one farm of eight or ten acres. The other is a few miles further south, and is about half again as large as the first one.

To-day there are in the various ponds of Spring Lake fishery over 200,000 fish, from which specimens are constantly being sent to every State and Territory of the Union. It is even said that some of the finest fish in the royal aquariums of Europe were raised by Mr. Shoup and his partner at this farm.

On each of the farms spoken of are a large number of small ponds, some of them not much larger than ten feet square. These ponds are all connected with each other by little channels, so that the water and fish can be let from one to the other without the least difficulty.

The breeding ponds, which are, of course, the most important, are protected from the wind and cold by high embankments around the edges. This is all the protection that is necessary for the fish, even in the winter time. So it is seen that, although the fish are undoubtedly delicate, they are much more hardy than is generally supposed.

Several times a year the fish are sorted in the different ponds and classified, so that the largest and finest ones will be together, and those which will not bring such good prices will be by themselves. Many people suppose that when the goldfish is hatched from the egg it has the peculiar markings on its scales which make it so beautiful and valuable.

This is not the case. In its youth in reality the fish is just the same as any ordinary fish, and looks like it for all the world. Even an expert could scarcely tell it from the little minnows which are found in any stream. They are of a whitish silvery color, and have not the least evidence of the beautiful hues which they will later assume.

First they begin getting dark, sometimes becoming almost black. From the dark complexion they begin turning to the reddish shade and finally come out in all their glory, full-fledged goldfish.

The food has not, as many people suppose, the least thing to do with the coloring of the fish. All the fish are fed exactly the same thing—toasted bread two or three times a week, and nothing else is given them for the subsistence. The sun seems to be the necessary agent and the only one to complete the scheme of nature, and even this sometimes does not work successfully.

The greatest difficulty with which the goldfish raiser has to contend is the pest world. Snakes, cats, coons, frogs, and insects innumerable are all fell destroyers of the goldfish, and the crawfish is by no means a second in the destruction which he can work when he gets in the neighborhood of the finny tribe. Some one must be kept constantly on watch at the season of the year when these insects and little animals abound, to see that they do not get into the water of the pond where the fish are.

The sting of some insects will kill a fish in almost every instance. Snake-feeders and some other well-known insects fly close to the surface of the water in the summer time, and with the greatest ease touch the tiny little fish swimming near the surface of the pool. An egg is laid on the fish or a stinger inserted, and either one will invariably prove fatal.

Goldfish are often killed by over attention, but sometimes by lack of attention. The two things which above all should be avoided are overfeeding them and failure to keep fresh water in the aquarium. An even, moderate temperature should be maintained, and they should be kept in the dark at night.

A Schoolmaster's Record.

It is well to recall, remarks Pearson's Weekly, when schoolmasters are being terrorized by the law for inflicting corporal punishments, the doings of one Johann Jakob Haberie, a German master, who recently died. He kept a diary of the number of punishments he inflicted on his pupils.

Johann records that during 51 years he distributed 911,517 strokes with a stick, 240,100 birch rod smites, 136,715 hand smacks, 10,986 blows with a ruler, 10,235 slaps on the face, 8,000 boxes on the ears, 115,000 on the head, and that he set some 13,000 tasks from the Bible, so that it was necessary to purchase a new copy, through wear and tear, every two years.

Seven hundred and seventy-seven times did Johann make his children kneel on dried peas, while 5,001 times he stood them in his corners with rulers over their heads. Here is food for parents to reflect upon before they summon schoolmasters for spanking their children.

The Peach.

The peach is cultivated in Belgium grafted or budded on the red plum, which imparts much of its superior vitality to the scion. The proper calcareous quality is imparted to the soil by manuring thoroughly and applying about a bushel of lime to each tree. The trees are trained upon the sunny sides of the houses, and few houses are without trees covering their walls. To shelter the buds at the time of flowering, branches cut from other green trees are placed among the upper boughs, or they are covered with mosquito netting or other material with meshes large enough to give passage to light and air; or simply devised shelters of straw are laid over them. The shields are usually placed in position about the 1st of March, and are not removed, except in cloudy weather, till all danger from frost has passed.—Appleton's Popular Science Monthly.

Edible Oil in Egypt.

In Egypt and the Soudan, in India and all through the East an enormous trade is carried on in vegetable oils, which take the place of our butter and margerine products. One of the principal edible oils is obtained from the ground nut known in France as "arachide oil." Over 1,000,000 hundredweight of these nuts are annually imported into that country for its production. Belgium also takes vast quantities. Archide oil is an excellent soap-maker, besides being an edible oil, and when cotton oil is high in price will compete with it in this branch of industry. In France alone there is already a very large consumption of it, to be counted in tens of thousands of tons.

Wrecks in the Baltic.

The Alaskan coast is becoming thickly set with wrecks, and it will soon stand a chance of heading the list for such suggestive landmarks, although there are now more wrecks in the Baltic sea than in any other place in the world. The average, there is one wreck a day throughout the year.

Debate on the naval appropriation bill consumed the day in the House on Thursday. Adjourned until Friday. In the Senate Mr. Thurston in a thrilling speech told what he saw in Cuba. A number of bills on the calendar were passed. Mr. Bate presented resolutions in memory of the late Senator Isham G. Harris of Tennessee, and eulogies were delivered by Mr. Bate, Mr. Morrill (Vermont), Mr. Morgan (Alabama), Mr. Hoar (Massachusetts), Mr. Walthall (Mississippi), Mr. Hawley (Connecticut), Mr. Cockrell (Missouri), Mr. Stewart (Nevada), Mr. Chilton (Texas) and Mr. Turley (Tennessee). The Senate adjourned until Monday.

Friday in the House was spent in consideration of the naval appropriation bill. There was much filibustering and only four pages of the bill were gone over. Adjourned until Saturday. The Senate was not in session.

The House spent Saturday in consideration of the naval appropriation bill. A strong effort was made during the day to increase the appropriation for the naval reserves, but it failed. Another effort to have the government uniform the naval militia also failed. The main contest of the day was over a proposition to decrease the number of timber dry docks authorized by the bill from four to three. It led Mr. Cannon, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who made the motion, to discuss the whole question of war preparations and to inveigh against undue extravagance. He was voted down—78 to 107. An amendment was adopted to permit the Secretary of the Navy to use any portion of Michigan's naval militia fund to repair the damage to the Yantic.

A message from President McKinley, outlining the findings of the Maine board of inquiry, was sent to the House on Monday. After being read it was promptly referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Mr. Walker of Massachusetts announced the death of his colleague, Mr. Simpkins, and moved that the House adjourn out of respect to his memory. This was done, and Speaker Reed appointed four members of the Foreign Relations Committee, to which the Maine report had been referred, to attend the funeral. In the Senate the President's message and the report of the board of inquiry were both read, after which the Senate adjourned.

After passing a bill to pension the widow of Gen. John L. Stevenson at the rate of $30 per month the House devoted the whole day Tuesday to the consideration of the bill to pay certain claims for stores and supplies furnished the Union by loyal citizens of the South during the war. There was a bitter contest over a claim of $217,000 preferred by the heirs of the widow of Gen. Robert E. Lee. She inherited the claim from Mrs. Fitzhugh, her aunt, who, it was admitted, was loyal. The claim was finally stricken out, but the House recessed before the bill was passed. It provides for the payment of about 850 claims, aggregating about $1,200,000. At an evening session pension bills were passed. In the Senate, after the introduction of Cuban resolutions and a speech by Senator Mason, seventy-four private pension bills were passed. Then Mr. Tillman presented resolutions concerning the death of the late Joseph A. Earle, Senator from South Carolina. Eulogies were delivered by Mr. McLaurin, Mr. Chandler, Mr. Clay, Mr. Spooner, Mr. Chilton, Mr. Cannon, Mr. Kenney, Mr. McEnery and Mr. Tillman.

A wild and uproarious scene occurred in the House on Wednesday when Mr. Bailey, the Democratic leader, attempted to force the hand of the Republicans upon a proposition to overrule the Speaker and pass a resolution recognizing the independence of the Cuban republic. Mr. Bailey presented the resolution as a privileged question. He was ruled out of order by the Speaker. An appeal from the decision of the chair was laid on the table. The House then went into committee of the whole and resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill. The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has agreed to delay action on all Cuban questions now in its possession until after the President has had opportunity to conclude pending negotiations.

A YOUTHFUL EXEGETE.

His Interpretation of the Scriptures Was Not Orthodox.

Strange are the workings of the infant mind. The little son of a well-known naval officer stationed here has advanced a new version of an old text. The wife's mother, who makes her home with her daughter, is of the old school, a dear creature, with puffs and caps, who reads her Bible from preference. It is a custom for her to teach her little grandson every day a verse from the Bible, and on Saturday of last week the verse selected was:

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy."

The child had unusual difficulty in committing the verse, but, once mastered, it must have settled deep into the very largest brain cell possessed by the little fellow.

Sunday morning the youngster came, fresh, white and starched, from his nurse's hands, and was deposited on the front porch until the family assembled for church. Emerging at the last moment, the mother was horrified at the sight of her small offspring seated upon the terrace digging with all his might into the moist ground.

"Baby, baby, come here this minute. Don't you know it is naughty to play on Sunday, and get yourself all dirt?" cried the mother.

The little fellow looked up with a puzzled air, and made answer: "Why, muvver dear, I is digging holes for Sunday."

"Digging holes for Sunday? What nonsense! You bad, bad little son," returned the mother, none too gently, trying to rescue the once immaculate suit.

"Now, muvver, dear, I did learn ve verse from grandma, and it was 'Remember ve Sabbath day to keep it holy,' and I is only digging ve holes for Sunday to make it holy, and I isn't a bad 'ittle son at all."

There was a suspicious trembling about the mouth, but it is needless to relate that the little philosopher was caught in his mother's arms and kissed before the cry developed, and that he was given two plates of ice cream for his Sunday dinner, all because of his original theory.—Washington Star.

THE HEAD OF OUR ARMY.

Gen. Miles Is Fully Acquainted with All of War's Horrors.

Gen. Miles, as well as almost all of the other generals of the army, entered the late war with the volunteers. They are therefore familiar with the needs and weaknesses of raw recruits, as well as the proper handling of well-trained men. Gen. Miles had passed his majority by only a year when he took the field as a first lieutenant in 1861. Four years later he was commissioned a colonel and brevetted a major general for extraordinary bravery. No privations of war could terrify him. He faced the roughest kind of travel and the bloodiest kind of guerrilla warfare, not only during the civil war, but during his campaigns against the hostile Indians on the Western frontiers as late as

GEN. NELSON A. MILES.

1886. During all these exciting campaigns he suffered countless escapes from death, being shot in the neck, hip and shoulder.

Prowling Cats Vanquished.

Innumerable cats, fighting, tearing about under the windows and howling at the top of their unmelodious voices, have made many sleepless nights for the family of Farmer Myers, residing not far out of Doylestown. They came from all the country around, choosing the yard as the place for high carnivals. In vain Mr. Myers hurled bootjacks, fired his shotgun and shouted for the nocturnal rioters to disperse. As summer wore away and autumn took its place they appeared in greater troops than ever.

A few days ago an artist entered the farm quarters while painting autumn landscapes, and it is to this man's ingenuity that Farmer Myers is at last well rid of the nuisance. One night of the uproar was enough to arouse the clever boarder to action. With phosphorescent paint he sketched the likeness of a ferocious bulldog on each side of the house, and confidently promised the farmer that there would be no more disturbance. When darkness fell again the figures of the dogs stood out in luminous relief, appearing like the ghosts of real animals awaiting their prey. Not a cat ventured within the fence, nor has one shown himself since upon the premises. The artist is considered by the Myers family a star boarder.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The World's Wonderful Cave.

There's a wonderful cave in the Island of Tonga, in the South Pacific. Byron called it "a chapel of the seas," says the London Telegraph. It is formed in a rock that is almost surrounded by the ocean. This rock is about sixty feet high, and broad proportionately. Many years ago a boy, the son of a native chief, was chasing a huge turtle, when his game seemed to sink into a rock. The lad watched and waited until the tide fell, disclosing a small opening in the rock about six feet under low water mark. Diving boldly, the young hunter entered the aperture, and, to his surprise, came to the surface inside the rock. The rock was hollow, and its interior was found afterward, when the natives explored it with torches, to contain many beautiful stalactites. When attacked and followed by enemies the natives who know the secret, leave their canoes, plunge into the water, and disappear. Their foes linger, astonished at their disappearance, for no person would suspect that the rock was hollow.

A policeman always has an excuse ready.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....April 7, 1898

THE WAR MATTER.

Troops of the regular army are being quietly taken from posts in the west and located near the sea coast.

Activity is the rule in all plants that make armor, ammunition, arms or anything that goes to fit out an army or navy.

Old, but formidable ships such as rams monitors, and torpedo boats are being rapidly fitted up for service for in case of war, they may prove the most valuable ships we have.

Plans are debated as to how we are to get large bodies of troops moved suddenly across the country. Several railroads have been notified that the government may soon need the exclusive use of their tracks and cars for a day or two, to move troops and equipments.

It is believed that the regulars will be distributed at convenient points along the coast, while the men who invade Cuba to drive the Spaniards out, will be the trained and practiced militia and new regiments of volunteers.

It is believed by General Miles that 25,000 good men can be landed in Cuba and clean the island of Spaniards, but no one thinks the rebels now in the field will be of much service to us. Others think 100,000 men will be needed and another 100,000 kept in reserve. All agree that except at Havana, the land fighting may not be severe but fights at sea will be the main part of the war.

Tammany Hall, New York, says they will furnish 26 regiments of good men. They furnished one well equipped and drilled regiment for the rebellion.

One enthusiastic man has a plan for the invasion of Spain, but no one expects this to become necessary or wise.

BLADDER TROUBLES

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such it is not liable to any form of disease except by one of two ways The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

SAMPLE SENT FREE.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief of cause of bladder troubles. It is comforting to know that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root fulfills every wish in quickly curing bladder and urinary troubles. It corrects frequent call, inability to hold urine and scalding or stinging pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessesity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample, bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail on receipt of three 2-cent stamps. Mention Auburn COURIER and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

DEATH OF P. B. NIMMONS.

Special to the DAILY COURIER.

BUTLER, IND., April, 5.

Phillip B. Nimmons died at his home in Butler this morning, after a long illness. It had for some time been seen that there was little hope of his recovery. He was one of the most prominent and intelligent men in his section and, through intermarriages was connected with some of the most prominent families. One of his daughters is Mrs. J E. Rose of Auburn, and another is Mrs. Judge Best of Minneapolis The funeral will be held at the M. E. church in Butler, Thursday at 1 p. m.

JAMES CATHER KILLED

Saturday, we did not hear the name of the man struck by a train near Butler and killed. It turns out that it was Rev. James Cather an old and highly respected citizen, one of the very earliest of the poineer preachers of DeKalb county. He lived but about an hour after the train struck him. His obituary appears in another place

MADE A NEW MAN OF HIM

Bryan, Ohio, Jan. 13, 1897,

Gentlemen:—For years I had been suffering from indigestion. Had a poor appetite and could not eat anything containing grease and had constantly a worn out feeling. After using three 9s bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin I am now able to eat anything my appetite craves and can say it has made a new man of me. ELI BOWEN.

QUEER ROAD ACCICENT.

There was a queer accident at Ft Wayne Saturday. A young lady on a bicycle met and express wagon and just then the street car came along. She jumped off her wheel to let the team pass and not get in the way of the street car, when the horse caught its foot in her wheel and horse, wheel and rider went down. The horse ruined one wheel and the wagon smashed the other, but the lady and horse were finally saved without being much injured.

GOT IT STRAIGHT

A man at Middleton, Ind., did not believe all the papers said about the war, and so went to a long distance telephone and paid a handsome sum to talk direct with McKinley. Of course McKinley didn't say a word, but left the conversation to his secretary. And the secretary said nothing of value, yet the man was greatly swelled to think he had news from headquarters.

"A HOWLING SUCCESS"

Wherever properly introduced Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as a cure for constipation, has met with a phenomenal sale. Many druggists cannot say enough in praise of its merits, as well as its great popularity with the people. In 10c trial size and also in 50c and $1 sizes of F. E Davenport.

CATARRH SIX YEARS.

Grew Rapidly Worse--Doctors Did No Good.

Mrs. Adam Staats, Menon, Wis., in a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, writes:

"I write this letter because of my sympathy for the suffering people. For six years I suffered with chronic catarrh. Whenever I caught a little cold I would have a severe spell of sickness. I used different catarrh medicines and the doctors did all they could, but the relief was only temporary. In December, 1897, my condition became very bad. I could not speak aloud; I had a terrible cough, profuse expectoration and frequently spit blood; night sweats and extreme emaciation. I was sure I must die of consumption. The catarrh seemed to have spread all over my body; my head throat, nose, bladder, and womb. At this time I received a book concerning Pe-ru-na. I immediately wrote to Dr. Hartman, who prescribed Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I followed his directions strictly. I began to improve with the first bottle, and during the time that I took the medicines I gained twenty pounds. I feel as well now as anyone could possibly feel. I am sure I would have been dead long ago had it not been for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Every woman should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book entitled "Health and Beauty." Sent free by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

MICHAEL SEILER.

So many DeKalb people and other readers of the COURIER knew Mr. Seiler that we feel it a duty to give more fully the details of his tragic death. The Terre Haute Gazette, of March 28, gives these details.

On Saturday night about 11 o'clock Prof. Seiler, who had just taken his bath, passed into the hallway on the second floor of his residence on south Seventh street. The family had retired for the night and he, therefore, turned out the gas in the hall and walked on toward the door of his room in the dark. In doing so he passed the landing of a s airway which comes up between two rooms and stepped off Losing his balance he fell heavily, striking his left cheek and left hand and went headlong for eight or ten steps to the first landing He got up and ascended the steps to his room where he told his wife that his hand was hurt and his face cut. She arose and bandaged the hand but neither of them knew any bones were broken. Prof. Seiler himself did not think he was very much injured. He thought perhaps he would better go to the doctor. Mrs. Seiler replied that she would send for the physician. While they were talking he said he felt sick at the stomach and added: "I feel just as I do when I have one of those spells with my heart." Immediately afterwards he lapsed into unconsciousness and Mrs. Seiler sent over across the street for Prof. Charman and for Dr. Luckett and Dr. Schell. They worked with him for some time and he seemed to rally. At a question from Dr. Luckett he opened his eyes and recognized him but shortly afterwards sank again and about half past twelve o'clock he died.

It is thought that possibly the fall and his hurts alone, would not have resulted fatally but that added to this was a heart trouble which the fall may have brought on again. He had several times before had attacks of heart trouble But the evidence of his wife of Prof Charman and wife and several others, enabled the coroner to bring in a verdict that death was caused mainly by the fall of ten feet to the first landing. His cheek was bruised and cut and the bones in one hand broken. He lived about an hour.

The Terre Haute papers speak of him in the highest terms, both as a citizen and a leading educator and man of marked literary ability. He was a strong democrat and as strong a member of the Presbyterian church. About two years ago he had severed his relations with the State Normal School and devoted his time to insurance. He carried $3000 regular life insurance, $3,000 in the Royal Arcanum and $500 in the Ben Hur.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

He was born at West Lebanon, Wayne County, Ohio, January 6th, 1849 and when 15 came with his parents to DeKalb County, Ind., settling in Fairfield township. After a brief course in school at Waterloo, he went to the normal School where he graduated in 1873. He afterwards took advanced collegiate course graduating in 1876, and since then took a post graduate course at the University of Chicago. He taught his first school in Branch County, Michigan then was three years superintendent of the Auburn schools, then one year in charge of the schools at Knightstown and later of those at LaFayette. In September 1881 he was given charge of the Department of Geography at the state normal, which he held thirteen years. In 1894 he was elected to the Department of German, but resigned this in 1896 and since then he has been special solicitor for the N. Y. Mutual Life Insurance. In 1882 he married Miss Helen M. Kent, of Selbyville, Ind, who with two daughters of 15 and 7 survives him. His mother and one sister are at Martinsville, Ind., his brother Cyrus at Elkhart, John H. at Akron Ohio, and Frank at Ashley, Ind All were present at the funeral. The attendance was immense and when the procession passed along the business street on the way to the cemetery, clerks, and proprietors and people filled the sidewalks and stood with uncovered heads while the funeral cortege was passing.

COURT.

The jury and Judge Watkins, of Huntington, are trying the case of McCormick vs Wabash Ry. It had been in court before, and Judge Roby was one of the attorneys, so he could not try it now. John P. McCormick owned the trotter, Non Parole, with a record of 2:12. She was injured while being shipped from North Manchester to Churubusco. He wants $5,000 damages. His attorneys are Ninde & Son, of Ft. Wayne. The road is represented by its attorneys, Stuart Brothers and Judge Hammond of Lafayette, and J. H. Rose, of Auburn.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

The rumors that the militia have been called out are not true. They are recruiting rapidly and getting ready to go if needed. The president now talks of interfering in Cuba to compel them to adopt new form of government called "autonomy" that has been proposed by Spain. But the most that we hear is mere rumor. Hanna says there will be no war, and he seems to run things.

OBITUARY

Jessie Boland Eckhart, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Boland, was born at Corunna, Ind., August 22, 1876, and departed this life March 27, 1898, at the age of 21 years, 7 months and 5 days.

Her parents moved to Auburn in October '76, where her earliest and latest years were passed surrounded by every comfort that loving parents could bestow.

While still very young, Jessie gave her heart to God and became a member of the M. E church. She was of a lovable disposition and met all with whom she came in contact, with a smile and pleasant word. She graduated from the Auburn High School May 25, 1894. June 3, 1896, she was united in marriage to Frank E. Eckhart, of Auburn. Their married life, though brief was a most happy one and to them were given a sweet babe, now nearly six months old.

Mrs. Eckhart with her husband was starting out with the possibility of a long and happy life, but scarcely had the journey begun, when the hand of disease fastened its fangs upon her and it was found she was gradually failing, and all that loving hands could do was of no avail. During her long illness she was a patient sufferer, was never heard to murmur or complain. As a last ray of hope they decided a change of climate might benefit her and they went to Los Angeles. California; but alas! their hopes were blasted, for in a few short weeks Jessie passed away. But when called to leave this world she was ready to go, she had kept her faith, finished her work, henceforth she can rest.

God created her in His own image, loviest of his works, a casket in which to enshrine a precious jewel, an immortal soul. And now in His good time, He has come and broken the casket of clay, and hidden His treasure in His bosom where it shall dwell forever.

Cherished wife. devoted mother, loved daughter and sister, good by.

There is no flock, however well attended,
But one dead lamb is there;
There is no fireside howe'er defended,
But has one vacant chair.

NEWVILLE

Dr Hull instead of becoming better, seems to grow weaker every day

Mr Fred Fusselman from St. Joe spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. Cooley will give a temperance lecture at the U. B. church Saturday evening, April 9.

A meeting was held at the hotel Friday evening for the purpose of organizing a temperance league.

W. C. DeLong has moved his restaurant to St. Joe. The saloon will occupy the building he vacated.

Dr. V. C. Brunson has been suffering lots of pain and inconvenience for the past week with a lame back but is getting better now

A train ran over Henry Kellner's foot Thursday at Garrett injuring it quite badly. He is now at his home.

A mistake was made last week by the writer concerning the date of the entertainment to be held at the Disciple church which is to be April 16, instead of April 9.

Mr. and Mrs. John Griest have agreed to disagree and he has gone to live with his daughter, Mrs. Countryman, in Hicksville. Mrs. Griest intends making a visit in Michigan.

Mr. Hatch has purchased the property owned by Hannah Mulinex and has been repairing it. He intends to move into it in the near future.

Easy.

Tramp—Can you tell me how I can get some work, sir? The Citizen (crustily)—Yes; buy a bicycle and try to keep it clean.—London Clarion.

BUTLER.

A young woman by the name of Greenwalt, died very suddenly here last Saturday. Suicide was suspicioned. A postmortem was held Saturday afternoon, conducted by Dr. Campbell, of Waterloo, and several of our physicians, but their verdict has not been made public at this writing. Excessive use of narcotics and liquor seem to have been prime factors in bringing about fatality.

J. A. Campbell visited Auburn on business last Monday.

Mrs. Jerry Barber is seriously ill at her home on East North-st.

People were enabled to get out of Butler dry (house) footed last Sunday for the first time in a month.

The Bicycle Factory is running about one hundred hands and working thirteen hours a day to keep in sight of their orders.

I. J. Knisely has bought the Mark Baily residence on West North street.

S. B. Jones has bought the old Joe Richardson dwelling on north side of West North-st.

John Fraudenberger has bought one of Lou Wades dwelling on Walnut street south side.

The Basket Factory has been compelled to shut down lately on account of inability to get cars to ship their goods. Their storage rooms that hold more than a dozen car loads are full to overflowing.

Thursday's Daily.

Women's

THE MINISTER'S WIFE.

She's little and modest and purty,
As fresh as a rose, and as sweet;
Her children don't ever look dirty,
Her kitchen ain't no way but neat.
She's the kind of a woman to cherish,
A help to a feller through life,
Yet every old hen in the parish
Is down on the minister's wife.

'Twas Mrs. 'Lige Hawkins begun it;
She allers hez had the idee
That the church was built so's she could run it,
'Cause Hawkins is deacon, you see.
She thought that the hull congregation
Jest marched to the tune of her fife,
But she found 'twas a wrong calkerlation
Applied to the minister's wife.

Then Mrs. Jedge Jenks got excited,
She thinks she's the hull upper crust—
When she heerd the Smiths was invited
To meetin' she quit in disgust.
"You may have all the paupers you choose to,"
Sez she, jest as sharp as a knife,
"But if they go to church, I refuse to."
"Good-by!" sez the minister's wife.

And then Mrs. Jackson got stuffy
At her not comin' sooner to call,
And old Miss MacGregor is huffy
'Cause she went up to Jackson's at all.
Each one of the crowd hates the other,
The church hez bin full of their strife;
But now they're all hatin' another

Types of Nebraska Beauty.

The selection of the two Nebraska girls, whose faces shall be a part of the composite photograph to adorn the trans-Mississippi Exposition medal, proved to be a greater task than anything yet undertaken by the directors. After three months' delay the selections have been made, and Miss Maye O'Shea, of Lincoln, and Miss Netta Harmer, of Syracuse, are the young women thus honored. According to the test, the facial expression of these two young women pastor in [illegible] Mont., that if there is a happier man in Montana he don't know where he is. It's a boy and his name is Bruce.

—It takes as much genius to bake a finely flavored nutritious cracker as it does to paint a picture or write a poem Fox's XXXX Square Wafer. Butter Crackers are above criticism because there's genius in the bake shop from which they come. *

—Dr. Hines reports that Abner Fretzen is getting along nicely. He is the man who had his fingers so badly sawed, that it was feared he would lose a part of them. The Doctor thinks now, they will be able to save all of them. Even the little finger, that hung by a small piece of skin may be saved.

—A little boy asked for a bottle of "get up in the morning as fast as you can," the druggist recognized a household name for "DeWitt's Little Early Risers," and gave him a bottle of those famous liver pills for constipation, sick headache, liver and stomach troubles. H. B. McCord sells it.

—An entire train load of Dunkards went west on the Pittsburg road Tuesday of this week. They have bought a large tract of land in Dakota and go there and make themselves new homes. They are a class of people that will make the desert bloom wherever they are.

—Children like it, it saves their lives. We mean One Minute Cough Cure, the infallible remedy for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, grippe, and all throat and lung troubles. At H. B McCord's drugstore.

—Kendallville Sun: —The commissioners of DeKalb county have made an order that all persons confined in the Auburn jail shall work eight hours a day upon the streets or highways of the county duing their imprisonment. It is a step in the right direction and if it is legal should be adopted elsewhere.

—Married at the Lutheran parsonage last evening, March 30th, by J. D Brozy. Mr. John Rettenmund of Garrett to Miss Roena Gall of Auburn This young couple will make their future home in Garrett. Mr. Rettenmund will run resturant at the B. & O depot. We wish them a successful future.

—Our solid friend Joseph Stahl was in town yesterday and made the COURIER cash box look happy, and the editor, also.

—Wood wanted. As soon as the roads are good enough, we are ready for the wood we could not take earlier. Subscribers please bear in mind.

—Good anywhere at any season or any hour on any occasion. No rest for Fox's Square Wafer Butter Crackers. They are in demand eveyywhere all the time by all who know how good they are. *

—When you want to buy a Binder, Mower, Wagon, Buggy, Plow, Harrows, Cultivator or any other tool used on the farm don't fail to see Culbertson & Boland, cheap hardware merchants, Auburn, Ind.

—The farmer, the mechanic and the bicycle rider are liable to unexpected cuts and bruises. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best thing to keep on hand. It heals quickly, and is a well known cure for piles. For sale by H. B McCord.

—The will be a meeting Saturday April 9th at 1 p. m. at the Baptist church the executive committee of the DeKalb county S.S. Association for the purpose of arranging a program for the next annual convention All Sunday School workers are invited to be present.

LEVI W. TRESH,
President.

—Miss Mattie Hoffman came home from Chicago today, where she and her aunt, Mrs. C. C. Hoffman have spent the winter. They will again occupy the old home farm north of town. Luther Hoffman has been at Chicago also, where he is studying, at the University. The olderst son, P. V. Hoffman has been a practicing attorney several years in that city.

—M. L. Yocum, Cameron, Pa., says "I was a sufferer for ten years trying most all kinds of pile remedies, but without success. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me. I used one box. It has effected a permanent cure." As a permanent cure for piles DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has no equal. H. B. McCord sells it.

—After thirteen years of hard work as editor and publisher of the Albion, Neb., Argus, Dr. C. G. Barns steps down and out, having sold the plant to D. J. Poynter of same place. He has made a success of the business, we have reason to believe, and at all events has made the Argus an excellent and able paper.

—Rev. W. D. Trover is in town getting his household goods back into their residence ready for Mrs. Trover and Maud who are at present visiting in Allen county. They will be here in a few days and our people will all be glad to see them here again. Mr Trover is at present preaching to a congregation near Toledo.

—Hicksville had a new experience in the game of confidence the other day. The Independent says a well dressed fellow went from store to store in each place asking for a quarter as he was temporarily out of money. About every man gave him the quarter, for such a gentlemanly individual must be the real thing. The editor says the fellow got money at the rate of $9 an hour.

—Mr. Boland started on the 9 a. m. Wabash train today to meet he folks as he could not make the right connection by going last evening. He thinks he will meet them at LaFayette. They will reach here this evening and the funeral will be Sunday afternoon. The hour will be determined tomorrow. James H. Rose accompanied Mr. Boland on the trip.

—There will be a big auction sale April 15, at the late residence of Samuel Grill in Springfield township, Allen, Co. at which the Administrator, Wm. Nelson, will sell a large amount of personal property, including stock, farm tools, carpenter tools, household goods, steam planer, lumber and many other things. Phil Car, of Ligonier, will be the auctioneer. Remember the date.

—H. D. Weaver, agent of National Life Insurance Co, sent check of $1,000 to Mrs. Wood, New York City, widow of Dr. Fred B. Wood payment of insurance carried by her husband Mrs. Wood has returned to her home which was originally in that city, Dr. Wood had only carried this insurance for fourteen months. This was certainly a wise investment for the Doctor and his widow. Speaking of her it may be of interest to our readers to state that the Doctor and this second wife had been lovers in their youth, but both afterwards married another. Later, the Doctor lost his wife and she lost her husband. Then the old acquaintance was renewed and they were married, only to be separated by his death after a brief time.

—An actress in a Chicago theater was cheered wildly the other evening, and called back, then cheered and called back again, till the poor girl was nearly dead with exhaustion. But she was tickled to see how popular she was, when it was discovered that her little brother had pinned onto her dress a card that read: "To h——l with Spain." Then she knew what made her so popular.

Friday's Daily.

—Blodgett now delivers fish every Friday, to all parts of town. Wait for the wagon

—The annual enumeration of the school children will be taken in about two weeks.

—Electric railway lines are being pushed in all available directions about Elkhart and South Bend.

—Elwood Wagner of the COURIER boys came home today after a visit with his people at Hudson.

—Ashley is working to get a cutlery establishment. The necessary bonus can be secured, says the Times.

—Mrs C. M. Brown came back from Hamilton today and was accompanied by Mr. Brown's mother.

The Straits of Mackinaw are said to be free from ice. It is said this has not been so early before for over 90 years.

—Calfax, Ind., G. A. R. passed resolutions that the law should be so changed that all ex-soldiers should be given $1 a day pension.

—John Adams of Columbia City is in town to purchase a lot of buggies. This is just the town to come to for that purpose.

—Word comes from George Henderson that his father's funeral will be Saturday. Leave the home at 1 p. m. and services at the Lutheran church in Spencerville.

—A LaGrange man recently took two drinks of LaGrange whisky and it so paralyzed him that he become helpless. He should get his whisky elswhere or else quit altogether.

—The editor of the Hicksville News, M. J. Schell is a candidate for Mayor at the coming village election. A newspaper man is "some punkins" over in the Buckeye state.

—Dogs are to be taxed now. Have money ready when the assessor comes around. You pay it to him, or you might kill the dog. The most of them are not worth keeping.

—Word came today that Mrs. Barton, mother of Mrs. J. Y. W. McClellan whose sickness we mentioned yesterday is dead. Mrs. McClellan was with her at the old home at Ashland, Ohio.

—J. D. Leighty has been back at St. Joe for a few days. He is the man who has been drawing Spencer's pay as State Pension agent since last fall about six months. Spencer's time did not expire till this March.

—Hicksville mud is said to be several degrees worse than Auburn mud. And now the citizens are bound to have the main street paved with bricks They are also going to have the electric light plant owned by the town.

—It is a great leap from the old fashioned doses of blue-mass and nauseous physics to the pleasant little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure constipation, sick headache and biliousness. H. B. McCord's sells it.

—James E. Rose was up town yesterday for the first time since he was taksick. about a month ago, and today attended the office, while his son, J. H. Rose went with Mr. Boland. Mr. Rose is still weak but we are glad to see him out again.

—It appears that Michael Seiler, whose tragic death we announced the other day fell as he was standing on a chair and turning off the gas in his house as he was getting ready to go to bed. The first dispatches did not make this very clear.

—Herman Brown has been having lots of fun today, shooting birds with a gun and a stock of blank cartridges. It took him quite a while to find out why he, a fine marksman, should miss so many birds. Some one had put up an April one-time job on him —Hicksville is in the throes of a newspaper war. Keep cool boys. Better dwell together in unity and brotherly love, like the ten newspapers of DeKalb county, who are trying hard to follow the good examples of politeness and forbearance set them by the OLD RELIABLE COURIER.

—Some "traveling agents" worked a nice game over at Hicksville. They bought several cans of cheap baking powder, went to the woods, tore off the labels, put on new labels showing the contents to be of ten fold strength and sold them for 50 cents a can. One man who had recently "stopped his paper because he could not afford to take it," was among those who were bitten. The fellows were arrested and fined.

—H C. Shull of this place paid $1 to the fellow who had stolen the subscription list of the Silver Dawn. We have not heard of any others. It will be remembered that a short time ago a man was in the Dawn office and looked over the subscription book. After he left, the editor discovered that several pages of names were missing. The fellow came here and told he was collecting subscriptions for the Dawn, Shull's bill was $1 and he paid it.

—We have received Mr. Lochner's first issue of his paper, the Argos Reflector. It is a nice paper of the size called 5 column quarto and well filled with news and advertising. It is evidently on a good paying basis, and popular with the people there. This issue we presume, was all made up by Mr. Lochner and his assistant Ed. Scott, both of whom are rapid and skillful workmen. We hope to see the Argos Reflector prosper under the new management, and feel certain that it will.

Misconceived.

Benson—I see somebody says it would be impossible to break the bank at Monte Carlo. Adams—Then why do they call it a bank?

Saturday's Daily.

—M. A. High's horse died at Dr. Adams' barn today.

—Taxes are coming in now as May 1 closes the time.

—The new bridge is being painted white, a good, peaceful color.

—Dr. Stamets reports a son born last night to Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Myers.

—Young men go the trains to buy papers to get the war news.

—In the New England states they are enlisting men at many points

—Dust blew in clouds on Maine St today at times. May be you don't believe it.

—Ed. Ostrander, G. H. Yesbera's manager of the Ashley store was in the city yesterday.

– L. J. Gengler, candidate for nomination for Mayor of Garrett was in town yesterday afternoon.

—Mr. and Mrs. Guild came home last evening cutting short their stay a little by having to be here for the funeral of Mrs. Frank Eckhart.

A man in Elkhart fell from a roof to the ground, 25 feet yesterday, breaking his arm and otherwise injuring him. He was fixing his chimney.

—R. S. S. Reed was the first man to break our wood famine yesterday by responding to the call we made. The roads are fairly good out his way.

—A barber in Elkhart has bet his shop against $100 with another man that there would be war with Spain The other man is for peace.

—George Shugers is down from Coldwater to meet his wife who came home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eckhart and also to attend the funeral of Mrs. Frank Eckhart.

—If what is said in print leads you to try Fox's Square Wafer Butter Crackers, that's enough the deliciousness of the crackers will argue their own way to your table. *

—Several papers in the large cities of Chicago, Cincinnati and Indianapolis have given flattering and prominent notices of the Auburn Carnival. No better advertising could be asked for.

—W. S. Shoup and J. F. Manley have got the run of the town at present. They have taken orders for over 50 copies of Cuba and her struggles for liberty in 4 days; everybody wants it.

—Thirty-five years make a generation. That is how long Adolph Fisher of Zanesville, O., suffered from piles. He was cured by using three boxes of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Elkhart had a fire yesterday and while the fire department an people were fighting the flames a gang of theieves went through the nearby dwellings, securing a lot of money and valuables.

—At Madrid, the war spirit runs high. They want to fight the miserable Yankees. A spirit of patriotism is commendable enough, but it does not give them the right to blow up the ships and seamen of a nation with which they are at peace.

—Rev. J. M. Driver is to be sent to Minnesota where it is expected he will be given the charge of the town that is now the home of Mrs. J. R. Moody and Mr. and Mrs E. E. Zent. The COURIER may give them the first news of this important event.

—Charles A. Bindhammer and wife (formerly Nora Saxton) will move from Chicago to Auburn and live with Mr. T. J. Saxton. Mr. Bindhammer will continue his work in Chicago, returning to Auburn once a week to spend Sunday.

—The present date of the Hicksville Fair is the same as our Carnival. There is no date open for us except last week in August or earlier. We hope Hicksville will change her date. The date we have is the best that could be selected.

—Kendallville democrats have selected the city ticket. Hon. Norman Teal, is for mayor, Henry Blum for clerk; George Helwig, for treasurer; W. F. Hammer for marshal. Dr. Teal gave notice that he accepted the nomination only on the understanding, that if elected he would favor a pavement on the Main street from the Lake Shore tracks on the north to the south as far as they though advisable.

—A letter from C. P. Houser says that Nicholas Ensley and C. S. Stoy at Indianapolis, are on the sick list. Mr Ensley has not been able to work for a week or so. We hope nothing serious with either. Mr. Houser's family and all the other DeKalb folks there, are well. Virgil Houser is clerking in the restaurant in the Union Station, and we are pleased to hear is doing well and likes his work.

—The rumor that a lot of Spaniard's and Mexicans will invade Texas, by crossing the Rio Grande, need not worry anyone. Mexico will not permit it. And even if they do get across, that is just where we want them We have regular troops so near that various railroads would get them to the front in short order. Texas alone can take care of more enemies than are likely to cross the border.

—Several irate parents, the mothers of pupils appeared at the school house at Edgerton over east of Ft. Wayne the other day, and doubled teams on a teacher they thought had been cruel to their children. They pounded him with brooms etc, till he "hollered." Then he had them arrested and fined Now they have had him arrested for cruelty to the pupils, and the war fever there is as high as in Cuba.

One good turn always leads us to hope for a few more revolutions.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Grafting done, either fruit or ornamental trees. All work warranted.
C. ASHELMAN, Auburn.

—Old papers, clean exchanges, can be had at this office. Get ready for the spring house cleaning.

—Come to the COURIER office for horse bills and horse photos. We've got the pictures to do good work.

—I have a buyer for a $500 or $600 house, in southwest part. Will pay $300 down. What have you to sell? Must be a bargain. d&wtf
WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—Thousands of sufferers from grippe have been restored to health by One Minute Cough Cure. It quickly cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe, asthma, and all throat and lung diseases. At H. B. McCord's drugstore.

—A torpid liver robs you of ambition and ruins your health. DeWitt's Little Early Risers cleanse the liver, cure constipation and all stomach and liver troubles. By H. B. McCord.

Tuesday's Daily.

—A meeting to talk up better protection for birds will be held at Indianapolis April 26.

—R. Blum was over from Garrett yesterday, and reports his people well.

—Solomon Deetz of Fairfield came in this forenoon and paid his subscription up in '99. He has thanks.

—If war comes, Gov. Mount will call the legislature together to see about the equipment of the militia and such things.

Jim Chapman Ex-postmaster at Rome City has invented a new mail sack, which is likely to be adopted by the government.

—Willis Bishop, of Spencerville, and I. B. Brandon, of this place, have thanks for cash favors.

—The COURIER extends thanks to Dora Berringer for subscription paid for John T. Shunk last Saturday.

—Hard freeze last night and early flowers were nipped and killed. It no doubt killed the swelling peach buds —Stephen Brown was here today. He had begun sowing oats, but found the ground too hard frozen this morning to plow. It appears that but little oats has been sown so far.

—Some little boys on a farm near Goshen went up into the barn loft to gather eggs, when one fell twenty feet to the hard floor, and was seriously hurt.

—D. D. Snyder, at Danville Ill., writes that they have missed several COURIERS. We will try and get it to them in better shape, as they are among our most appreciative patrons.

—"A man in Stripes" will be used by the lecturer at M. E. church tonight. Saloon keepers cordially invited.

—Miss Emma Gfeller, of Waterloo, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. McEntarfer for a few days, has returned home

—The hardware store of A. L. Brown at Milford was burglarized Friday night. They removed a panel in the rear door with a sharp case knife. They got $75 worth of knives and razors.

—B. F. Myers went this week up to Bankers, where he is to be section foreman on the Lake Shore Branch. As he has been a faithful section man here for ten years, this comes as a deserved promotion. We are glad he gets it, but we never like to lose that kind of a citizen here.

—M. H. Elson, of Fairfield, a son of the late Hiram Elson called yesterday to bring his mother here on some business. He reports the roads in Fairfield pretty good, but this side of there the roads were very bad, the mud being pretty stiff.

—The Dispatch feels very sorry that the democrats and populists are going to fuse in this county. It trembles fairly, to see the great danger the populists run of losing their identity by fusion. It says fusion may ruin that party. It even advises the populists to run an independent ticket. It don't think the populists are doing right to grab for two offices and in that way "may lose their identity."

—A slick fellow got a number of business men at South Bend to give him an ad to put on a card, he agreeing to print and put up 5000 of them. As a matter of fact he put up only 100. It is about always this way. A man got a lot printed in Auburn a few years ago, and went of off leaving them in the printing office and never put them out, or least but few of them. Business men should not give these men an ad, unless it is to go into the paper where it can be seen that copies will be in the hands of the people.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Laporte parties are going to build a trolley line from that place to Michigan City. But they needn't to do it on purpose to accommodate DeKalb county. Our people get there easy enough as it is.

—J. C. Leeters writes from Berea, Ky., that the intelligent postmaster down there wants to make him pay postage at that office on his paper from Auburn. As the postage is always paid here at the office of publication, we would advise the Kentucky P. M. to buy a book of instructions.

—Dr. Nusbaum and C. M. Brown and their wives went to Indianapolis to day. They go to attend the state meeting of the Bi-metallic League, which meets there to-morrow. It will be a great outpouring of the people who favor a more liberal financial policy.

– Over in Whitley county some political genius has a plan, by which he hopes to have every caudidate for county office make a solemn promise to give half his salary back to the county in case he is elected It will be safe enough to take a strong bond in addition to the officer's word.

THE story of Cuba is a tragedy, a tragedy so black that the pages of history, not excepting those upon which is written the diabolical doings of the Spanish Inquisition, contain no counterpart. It is a narrative which had its beginning in the discovery of America; it was rooted in Spanish tyranny, transplanted into centuries of treachery and oppression, reared in internecine strife, and matured in this revolting war and its attendant horrors, which have wrested from Cuba the proud title, "Pearl of the Antilles," and earned for her the name of "Isle of Blood." The contest which over three years ago was begun by the Cuban patriots as a strike for freedom, afterwards became, on the part of Spain, a game of death to the helpless old men, the women and the children who, compelled by the Spanish to leave their homes in the country, were huddled in the cities and towns where starvation and disease made such inroads on their numbers that the graveyards are congested with their bodies, and flocks of ravenous vultures have fed on their half-covered corpses. As for the war, the insurgents have commanded four-fifths of the island. The Spaniards held the cities and principal towns, but no battles of importance have been fought for six months. On the part of the insurgents it became a game of waiting. With the Spaniards it has been a contest of extermination among the women and children—the wives and offspring of the men who comprise the insurgent armies.

The revolution was organized by Jose Marti, a Cuban exile in this country and a man of genius and courage. He organized here what is called the Cuban Revolutionary Party, an association of clubs of Cuban political exiles, for the purpose of raising money to free their country. Poor as were the majority of the few Cubans who lived in the United States before the beginning of the revolution, they listened to the eloquent appeals of Marti and gave him all they had on earth to liberate Cuba from Spain. Marti was appointed delegate of the party, and his faithful friend, Benjamin J. Guerra, was made treasurer. There was not much money then in the safes of the afterward famous Junta and their funds were soon exhausted by an unsuccessful attempt to start an expedition from the South. But Marti had obtained the co-operation of Gen. Maximo Gomez and Gen. Antonio Maceo, two veterans of the last war. He knew that the discontent against Spain was deep throughout the island. He had important connections with conspirators in all the provinces. He gave without hesitation the orders for the uprising and went to Santo Domingo to join Gen. Gomez and take, with him, the field.

At that grave and decisive moment the total funds of the patriots amounted to not more than $70,000. It is wonderful that with a sum, comparatively speaking, so paltry for so great a purpose, a war should have been raised which cost Spain up to February, 1898, besides the sacrifice of so many of her soldiers, $250,000,000 and caused to the United States a net loss in trade and business of $300,000,000.

On May 19, 1895, Marti was killed in the engagement at Dos Rios, but his work had already been done. He had landed on April 11 with Gen. Gomez at Sabana la Mar, on the southern coast of Cuba, after issuing at Monte Cristi a revolutionary manifesto, and had had time before his death to convoke the representatives of all the Cuban provinces to a general assembly to elect a provisional government and frame a constitution. If this was not done until later, in September of the same year, at the town of Jimaguayu, it was not the less true that from the first days of the revolution the desire of Marti, as of all the patriots, was to organize a republic with popular institutions.

Two months before Marti's death Gen. Antonio Maceo had landed at Duava, near Baracoa, Santiago de Cuba province. With a handful of men and a few rifles and cartridges, a small open boat brought him to Cuba from Jamaica. But his name and his presence were enough to make Spain tremble. He and his heroic brother, Jose Maceo, were surrounded by superior Spanish forces on the day of their landing. They broke through the Spanish lines and made their way into the country. In a few days, as soon as the news spread of their arrival, the province of Santiago de Cuba rose in arms and Antonio Maceo had around him more than 10,000 Cuban soldiers.

The revolution was saved. The few patriots who took up arms on Feb. 24 at Baire and Manzanillo had courageously resisted under Gen. Bartolome Maso, now Cuba's president, the attacks of the columns of the Spanish Gen. Lachambre, as well as the proposals of peace from the captain general of the island, Don Emilio Calleja. The envoys of the captain general told Maso that the revolution was a failure. The provinces of Pinar del Rio and Havana were entirely quiet. A few unimportant bands in Matanzas and Santa Clara had been dispersed or had surrendered. Puerto Principe was unanimously in favor of peace. But Maso, knowing well how to receive such reports, refused to yield. He had confidence in the landing of Maceo, Marti and Gomez. He knew the great moral effect that the presence of those leaders in the field was going to have on the Cuban people; and Spain knew it also. The news that Maceo was in Cuba reached Madrid shortly after the overthrow of the Sagasta cabinet. Canovas, then in power, resolved to fight the revolution with the first of the Spanish generals and with all the resources of the nation. Gen. Calleja was recalled and Gen. Martinez Campos was sent to Cuba with 25,000 soldiers.

Martinez Campos landed in Guantanoma, Santiago de Cuba, on April 16, 1895. His first impression was pessimistic and the long chain of defeats inflicted upon his command until December of the same year proved how right he was in believing from the first day of his arrival that this war was to be more important than the previous one of 1868. He wasted a great deal of time in useless trips by sea to Havana and again to the East. Maceo was preparing in the meantime his men and Gomez was formulating the plan of the great invasion of the West in order to carry the revolution to all the provinces and establish in each one a regular body of the Cuban army.

July 13, 1895, is the memorable date of the battle of Peralejo. The war had been until then confined almost to the province of Santiago de Cuba, with some small bands of patriots roaming through Puerto Principe and keeping up only an unimportant guerrilla warfare. But Maceo had already obtained some notable triumphs, and Martinez Campos decided to carry reenforcements to the Spanish towns in the interior which were in great danger of attack by the insurgents. While Martinez Campos was on the way to Bayamo, Maceo offered him battle near Peralejo.

The engagement was a pitched battle, and the Cubans, not numbering 6,000, carried the day. Gen. Stantocildes fell dead near Gen. Martinez Campos. The Spaniards lost all their ammunition and their horses. Completely routed, a body of them, availing themselves of the darkness of the evening, fled to Bayamo, carrying Martinez Campos on a stretcher borne by four soldiers. He was exhausted by fatigue and filled with despair. More than 300 Spanish soldiers were left dead on the field. With the splendid booty secured by him, Maceo completed the arming of his patriots.

From April to October Gomez successfully carried the war through Puerto Principe province and laid his plans for the invasion of the west. On Oct. 22 Maceo, having received orders from Gomez, who was appointed commander-in-chief of the army, in September, by the assembly of representatives, started for the east with 2,000 of his men. On Oct. 30 Gomez invaded Las Villas. Maceo joined him on Nov. 29 near a place called Los Guayos.

FLAG OF FREE CUBA.

From there they began their triumphant march. On Dec. 3 the Spanish Col. Segura was defeated by the insurgents at Iguara and had to leave his dead on the field, together with a great supply of arms and ammunition. On Dec. 15 the Spanish battalions of Canarias and Trevino were routed by Maceo at Mal Tiempo, after the most gallant charge with machetes of the Cuban cavalry, led by Maceo himself, that has ever been seen in the Cuban wars. On Dec. 21 the victory of El Desquite cleared the way for the invaders to the province of Matanzas. Martinez Campos then made a desperate effort to check the two Cuban leaders. Until that moment he had been recoiling before the invaders with his columns, hoping that they would stop. But he saw that each step of the patriots to the west was a decisive triumph for their cause. The enthusiasm of the revolution was growing day by day throughout the country. The Cuban ranks were filled by volunteers from all the cities and towns by which Gomez and Maceo passed. Martinez Campos rallied his almost dispersed men and presented battle at El Coliseo on Dec. 23.

The action was sharp and decisive. Martinez Campos behaved bravely, leading one of his wings in a charge against Gomez, but Maceo, falling on the Spanish, won the day for Cuba and compelled Martinez Campos to retire. The captain general hurriedly entered Havana, making preparations to defend the city, and he confessed his defeat to the astonished Spanish volunteers and residents of the capital.

Spain Sends Weyler.

On the night of Dec. 27 the captain general made that avowal. A few days later the rabid Spaniards of the city compelled him to tender his resignation to Madrid. They demanded from Canovas a captain general framed in the old iron cast of the Spanish conquerors, not to fight battles and risk his life on the field, but to exterminate the native population. In their belief, women, children, every one born in Cuba, should be held responsible for the situation. They did not like a soldier with a gallant career and personal courage. They wanted an executioner. Canovas satisfied them and appointed Don Valeriano Weyler y Nicolau to succeed Martinez Campos.

The question may be asked why the patriots, after so many victories, did not invest the city of Havana and end therewith the Spanish dominion. The answer is very clear. After the battle of Coliseo Gen. Gomez reviewed his troops and found that each soldier had only three cartridges. The Cubans in the United States were making vain efforts to send a big expedition to the patriots. But if the Spanish army was defeated in the fields of Cuba, Spanish diplomacy was triumphant at Washington. At Guira de Melena on Jan. 4, 1896, the patriots had to fight with their machetes to enter the province of Havana. For such a state of affairs Gen. Gomez considered his best plan to be to organize armies in all the provinces invaded, so far as his resources permitted him to do, and try to raise the war in Pinar del Rio province. At Garro Jan. 8 the patriots routed a Spanish column and entered Pinar del Rio. Gen. Gomez then withdrew to the east while Maceo proceeded to the west. On Jan. 17 he obtained another victory at the very gates of Pinar del Rio city and on Jan. 22 he took the town of Banes at the western extremity of the island, three months after his departure from Baragua in Santiago de Cuba. On Feb. 12 Maceo returned to Havana province. Gen. Weyler publicly declared Pinar del Rio pacified, and the gallant Cuban leader returned to that province on March 15.

Before this Weyler had already shown his sanguinary spirit and plans of murder. Prisoners of war and innocent persons unjustly charged with aiding the rebellion were shot every day in Havana. The most summary court martial preceded the executions as a mere formality. In other cases the victims were murdered in cold blood in their dungeons or thrown alive into the sea during the night at the entrance to the harbor to feed the sharks. The horrors of the Council of Blood under Alva look pale when compared to the crimes of Weyler. In the country his troops had orders to kill every non-combatant without regard to age. In the cities he appointed as inspectors of police the most infamous murderers and thieves from the Spanish penal colonies in Africa. In a short time more than 100,000 persons emigrated from Cuba panic-stricken.

But Weyler was not satisfied. He intended to destroy the country and to exterminate the natives. Seeing that the executions in the forts were too slow a method and that the destruction wrought by his columns was not enough to ruin the island, he conceived one of the most monstrous crimes ever committed against humanity. On Feb. 16, 1896, he issued his two famous decrees of concentration. By them every human being in the country districts was compelled to leave his home, after it had been destroyed by the Spanish columns, and go to one of the fortified towns under the vigilance of the Spanish soldiery. With the homes of the reconcentrados their cultivated lands were to be devastated and around the towns where they had to live not a piece of bread was to be given to them. In this manner, under pretext of a military operation, half a million people, most of them women and children, were condemned to die from hunger.

Wholesale Slaughter.

From the date of those decrees until November, 1896, 300,000 people were murdered thus in Cuba. Since November, as a result of Weyler's sanguinary orders, the number has been increased to 400,000. What monster in history ever did so much against humanity and civilization? Nero, Caligula, Tameriane, Torquemada, Alva, when compared with Weyler, appear mild and humane. A poltroon, besides being an assassin, he never offered battle to the Cubans or took the field to fight. In his time Spain sent 200,000 soldiers to Cuba. He kept them inactive guarding the trocha from Mariel to Majana in Pinar del Rio province or from Jucaro to Moron in Puerto Principe. At other times from his palace in Havana, following on a map the imaginary positions of his enemies, he ordered his columns to make combined movements that always resulted in defeats.

One instance of the stupidity and cowardice of Weyler occurred on May 1, 1896. He ordered one of his favorite combinations of columns against Maceo at a place called Cacarajicara in the province of Pinar del Rio. The result was that the forces of the Spanish Colonels Inclan and Gelabert were shattered by the Cuban leader, and the havoc made in the Spanish lines was so great that the Spanish soldiers, panic-stricken, threw themselves into the sea to escape the Cuban machete. Weyler, as in all other cases, accused his subordinates of not having obeyed his orders exactly.

On Dec. 7, 1896, Maceo, after having crossed Weyler's famous trocha and entered Havana province, was assassinated in an ambush near Punta Brava. The revolution lost in him a great patriot and a heroic soldier. But Weyler soon understood that the murder of Maceo was not the death of Cuba's cause. In March, 1896, Gen. Calixto Garcia landed in Santiago de Cuba. He soon replaced Maceo as a dashing fighter and a brilliant commander. At the same time Gomez in Santa Clara had won the important battle of Saratoga and controlled the whole province. The battle of Juan Criollo in February, 1897, was another of Gomez's important victories, and in Santiago de Cuba the latter part of the year was made conspicuous by the triumph of Gen. Garcia at Victoria de las Tunas.

Weyler was recalled in November, when, after the death of Canovas and the fall of the short-lived Azcarraga cabinet, Senor Sagasta was selected as prime minister by the queen regent. It is a well-known fact that Weyler's recall was imposed upon Spain by this country.

Gen. Don Ramon Blanco, who was to change the sanguinary methods of warfare of his predecessor, entered Havana Nov. 29, 1897. Spain granted to Cuba an autonomist system, which has been declared a mockery by all impartial judges. The Cubans rejected it, and the new regime inaugurated in Havana on the first day of this year by Gen. Blanco was as a complete failure. The patriots declared the acceptance of autonomy an act of treachery to their flag. They hanged as spies all the Spanish agents sent to them to propose such a scheme. They rejected with scorn the offers of money made to them by Blanco. The death of the Cuban Gen. Aranguren, near Havana, did not discourage the patriots in the least. They kept up the war as enthusiastically as ever, adopting as their motto "Independence or Death."

...ing his official life in Havana he has conducted himself as a soldier and an American gentleman, and has crept into the confidence and esteem of the people of the United States.

The home of Gen. Lee is in Richmond, and the people generally call him "Fitz." Everyone in the city seems to know him, and everyone is proud of him. Almost every day the Lee family receives letters from all over the country recording words of praise for the ex-Confederate cavalry leader. His own family idolizes him, and his eldest daughter, Miss Ellen Lee, is enthusiastic in admiration of her distinguished father.

Miss Lee is a dainty young woman, slight of form, with a wealth of auburn tresses, flashing eyes and the unmistakable Lee chin, bespeaking courage and determination. She is every inch the daughter of a soldier, and for her own worth as well as on account of her father and the family name she is popular in Richmond.

SPANISH SOLDIER A SLOUCH.

He Lacks in Martial Ardor and Is Listless and Untidy.

The average Spanish officer or soldier would not impress an American favorably. As a rule they are not well set up, and they are generally undersized. They all lack the West Point cut which is so much admired by Americans. They may understand the theory and practice of war, but the true martial ardor does not reach down into their backbone and legs. None of the officers would ever be accused of wearing corsets, as some of our fledglings in the military service are. The uniform of officers and men seems to be of the same material—a fine green and white stripe gingham, or some similar fabric, for both coat and trousers. The officers wear a few gilt stars on their coat sleeves and a white canvas cap; the enlisted men a Panama straw hat, with one side folded up and fastened with a rosette.

The volunteers, corresponding to our National Guard, who have been doing duty in Havana as an adjunct to the police, have an inspection and guard mount every morning on the Prado. I twice saw this ceremony, says a correspondent, and never saw anything so slovenly done before. There was no sizing up of the men; a boy 5 feet 2 inches would be between men six or eight inches taller. Talking in the ranks seemed to be allowed at all times. At the inspection the man became immovable only when the officer approached him, and relaxed into sociability immediately after the officer had passed. Some had leggings, many had not. They were a job lot of misfits, assorted sizes and colors, from 15 to 40.

The regulars have had a hard time of it. In summer about 50 per cent sicken and die. Some of them have had to beg on the streets, not having received their pay for more than six months. This refers to the enlisted men. The officers are paid, and, apparently, enjoy themselves. Although their bullets might have as much penetration, they are no match for the American soldiers in intelligence.

BERNARDO O'HIGGINS.

Chilian Dictator After Whom a War Vessel Was Named.

Bernardo O'Higgins, after whom the Chilian war vessel was named, was the son of an Irishman named Ambrose O'Higgins, who, as Ambrosio O'Higgins, became captain general of Chili in 1788. Bernardo was born in Chili in 1776, and, after taking part in a number of kaleidoscopic revolutionary movements, he became supreme dictator in 1817. He governed that country for six years, during which the last of the Spaniards were driven from Chili. As the result of a revolution which occurred in 1823, he was forced to resign.

He went to Peru, and died at Lima in 1842. The Spanish pronunciation of his name is O-ee-geens, the second syllable being accented.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

An American, Two Japanese, and a Dish of Potatoes.

Even those who desire to be strictly accurate sometimes erect their story from a single instance, as a geologist conceives the framework of a long-extinct animal from one bone. The fallacy of so doing is well illustrated by the following story told to the writer by one of the participants: A few years ago two Japanese gentlemen of high standing were traveling in the United States, and, among other places, visited a large and widely known manufactory. They were afterward invited by the senior member of the firm to lunch with him. Colonel M. was also of the party. It happened that the first food placed on the table was a dish of fried potatoes, and as the manufacturer enthusiastically explained his business to his guests he unthinkingly took a piece of potato from the dish with his fingers and ate it. A second and third piece followed. The Japanese listened politely, but Colonel M. observed that they were closely watching their host's method of eating. The colonel has a keen sense of humor, and he at once decided that he would follow his friend's example and see what the others would do. He did so, and instantly both Japanese made a dive for the dish, and thus they sat eating potatoes with their fingers, presenting, it is to be feared, the appearance of four men who had had nothing to eat for a long while, and expected never to get anything again. Will it be surprising if in a future Japanese book on America this breach of good manners shall find a place as an American custom?

Friend—I've read a number of your magazine articles, but I must confess that I have failed to see any merit in them.

Author—Thanks, old man; I'm glad to hear you say so.

Friend—What! Do you mean to tell me you are proud of their lack of merit?

Author—No, not exactly; but you see it's more profitable to cater to the magazine editors than to the public.

A Trolley Coach.

The people of Greenwich, Conn., are riding in a trolley stage coach that needs no rails for its operation. The wires are at one side instead of being overhead. The coach can be turned around or moved in any direction without interfering in the least with the ordinary traffic of the highway. Certain property owners would not permit the operation of a regulation trolley over a road, and this trolley stage coach was devised as a means of overcoming their objections.

Great Benevolences.

In large cities of the United States the condition of the poor is constantly being improved by the benevolences of wealthy people. Sanitary reforms are suggested and carried out with earnestness, but those produced by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in disordered liver, bowels or nervous system are very conspicuous.

The American Girl Misunderstood Abroad.

Miss Lilian Bell, who is visiting Europe for the first time, recording her impressions and observations in The Ladies' Home Journal, writes from Berlin to the April number of that magazine, that "it would be utterly impossible for the American girl to be more exquisitely misunderstood than she is by the French and Germans." To be "exquisitely misunderstood, one can readily believe, is a rare experience.

OVERWORKED WOMEN.

Letters to Mrs. Pinkham From Women Who Have Been Helped From Sickness or Health.

The ordinary every-day life of most of our women is a ceaseless treadmill of work.

How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system unstrung!

The following letter from Mrs. WALTER S. BANTA, Sparkill, N. Y., tells the story of many women, and shows them how to get relief:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot thank you enough for all Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to you I had suffered for years with falling, inflammation and ulceration of the womb; my back ached, and I was so much distressed I could scarcely walk. I was a burden to myself and did not care whether I lived or died.

"I have taken five bottles of your medicine and it has done wonders for me as all my friends can testify. I can now do my own work, and do not know how to express my gratitude to you for the good your medicine and advice have done me. I owe my life to Mrs. Pinkham."

Mrs. Pinkham's counsel is offered free to all women who need advice about their health. Her address is Lynn, Mass. MRS. P. H. HUTCHCROFT, Kellerton, Iowa, tells here in her own words how Mrs. Pinkham helped her:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was in a very bad condition before I wrote to you and began the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did not know what to do. I suffered terribly every month, when on my feet would have such a bearing-down feeling, was very weak, womb was swollen, back ached, appetite was very poor, also had trouble with my head. I have taken several bottles of your Compound and cannot say enough in its favor. It helped more than all the doctors."

Reports of Delegates Who Have Visited Western Canada.

The following letters have been selected from a large number of those sent by delegates to report on Western Canada to their friends in Michigan, and as a result of which hundreds of people expect to leave this spring for the Free Grant Lands of Western Canada.

Ludington, Mich., Nov. 1, 1897.

M. V. McInnes, Esq., Colonization Agent, Detroit, Mich.:

Dear Sir—We have just returned from the West, and were exceedingly well pleased with the country. We are going back to take up our homesteads in early spring. We received $35 per month and board, working for farmers, and the board was the best we ever had—the beef and mutton especially were excellent. The fine flavor is owing to the fine grasses which the cattle and sheep feed upon. The people are very hospitable, and treat their hired help with much kindness.

The grain is much heavier than here, wheat being 62 lbs to the bushel, oats 48 lbs, and barley often 55 lbs.

Any man with a good team and money enough to buy provisions and seed for six months can become rich there in five years. Many people who arrived there five years ago with little or nothing are well off now. One man I met held his wheat from last year and was offered $16,000 for this year's crop and what he had held over from last year, and is holding it at $1.00 per bushel. We are going back in the spring to work for this same farmer until seeding, after which we will homestead between seeding and harvest. We think we will settle on the Manitoba and Northwestern Railroad.

You can refer any one to us for this part of the country, while we are here, and we will cheerfully answer any questions which anyone may wish to ask. Yours truly,

(Signed) CHAS. HAWLEY, JOSEPH DOLA.

Alameda, N. W. T., Aug. 31, 1897.

Dear Friends of Saginaw: Those desiring to secure a good and sure home will do well to take our advice and examine the land in the neighborhood of Alameda, as we know that everyone who sees this land will be agreeably surprised. Before seeing this land we were partly in doubt as to moving here, but after looking it over we at once decided to make our home here, and we beg those of our friends who are desirous of securing farms not to let this chance slip by, as the soil is of the best and the water cannot be excelled. The finest wheat we ever saw is also raised here.

We shall return home in haste, straighten out our affairs and move here at once. Yours truly, (Signed) WILLIAM GOTTOWSKI. ALBERT MAI. WILLIAM RIEDEL. Of Saginaw.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 10, 1897.

Mr. M. V. McInnes, Chief Colonization Agent, Detroit, Mich.:

Dear Sir—We are pleased to state to you that we have found the country in the vicinity of Alameda fully up to what you and Mr. Keller had represented it to be. It is, in fact, an ideal location for mixed farming. The soil is the best we ever saw, and as the farmers were all busy at threshing, we had an excellent chance to see its productive quality, which cannot be surpassed anywhere. The cattle could not be in better condition. We saw two-year-old steers equal to three-year-old raised in most places, and these, as all others are about Alameda, were fed on native hay in winter and herded in summer. As we had previous to this visited the Northwestern States in behalf of a large number of farmers, to locate suitable land for mixed farming, we are now in a position to say that the Alameda district of Western Canada surpasses them all. The country is equal to that about Thuringen in Germany. We were rather sceptic before starting, and our intentions to settle in spring, if we were suited, but we have now decided to move at once; that is, as early this fall as we possibly can. We left Mr. Riedel at Alameda, and take back his report, and we will take his family and effects with us when we go.

Yours sincerely.

(Signed) ALBERT MAI. FRED GOTTOWSKI.

Women's Doings.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE.

She's little and modest and purty,
As fresh as a rose, and as sweet;
Her children don't ever look dirty,
Her kitchen ain't no way but neat.
She's the kind of a woman to cherish,
A help to a feller through life,
Yet every old hen in the parish
Is down on the minister's wife.

'Twas Mrs. 'Lige Hawkins begun it;
She allers hez had the idee
That the church was built so's she could run it,
'Cause Hawkins is deacon, you see.
She thought that the hull congregation
Jest marched to the tune of her fife,
But she found 'twas a wrong calkerlation
Applied to the minister's wife.

Then Mrs. Jedge Jenks got excited,
She thinks she's the hull upper crust—
When she heerd the Smiths was invited
To meetin' she quit in disgust.
"You may have all the paupers you choose to,"
Sez she, jest as sharp as a knife,
"But if they go to church, I refuse to."
"Good-by!" sez the minister's wife.

And then Mrs. Jackson got stuffy
At her not comin' sooner to call,
And old Miss MacGregor is huffy
'Cause she went up to Jackson's at all.
Each one of the crowd hates the other,
The church hez bin full of their strife;
But now they're all hatin' another,
And that one's the minister's wife.

But still, all the cackle unheedin',
She goes in her ladylike way,
A givin' the poor what they're needin',
And helpin' the church every day.
Our numbers each Sunday is swellin',
And real true religion is rife,
And sometimes I feel like a-yellin',
"Three cheers for the minister's wife!"
—New York Press.

Types of Nebraska Beauty.

The selection of the two Nebraska girls, whose faces shall be a part of the composite photograph to adorn the trans-Mississippi Exposition medal, proved to be a greater task than anything yet undertaken by the directors. After three months' delay the selections have been made, and Miss Maye O'Shea, of Lincoln, and Miss Netta Harmer, of Syracuse, are the young women thus honored. According to the test, the facial expression of these two young women is supposed to be the best type of the female beauty of the State. They were selected from a group of several hundred. The whole number of photographs selected will be sent to New York, where a composite photograph will be made. This picture, typical of Western beauty in the best sense, will adorn one side of the trans-Mississippi Exposition medal.

NEBRASKA'S TWO FAIREST DAUGHTERS.

Fashionable Stays Costly.

An American authority on woman's dress, commenting on the fact that a London court recently expressed amused astonishment because a woman had paid $25 for a pair of corsets, says that, as an actual fact, considerably more than this sum is constantly paid for stays made to order. Then, again, a pair of corsets are often but part of a regular costume, owing to the fact that the brocade of which they are made matches exactly the material of which is composed the underskirts to be worn with them. The very plainest corsets made to order at any good house cost between $10 and $15, and they are worth the money paid for them, for they last a great deal longer than ready-made stays, being composed, down to the thread with which they are stitched, of the very best materials.

Keeping Clothes Smart.

It is the tumbling about on chairs and bedposts that ruins quantities of clothes, and thus dresses are often "worn out" while not being worn in the actual sense. A Philadelphia authority advises women to hang all dress waists and skirts, but suspend them on "coat hangers," not on hooks or nails. The way shopkeepers care for ready-made garments is an excellent object lesson. If you can't get the ready-made article, manufacture it. Half a barrel hoop, with a loop of string in the middle, makes a satisfactory substitute. Hanging only serves for heavy fabrics, not when they are of thin goods. In that case, garments are apt to become stringy. Light materials must be folded, sleeves and bows stuffed out with tissue paper and all given plenty of room. Skirts should be brushed when taken off and then put away at once.

Owned by a Woman.

The system of electric street railways in Tampa, Fla., is practically owned and operated by a Mrs. Chapin, who is said to be thoroughly familiar with every detail of railroading, and to be the general manager of her road, which is a belt line, passing every place and point of interest in Tampa.

As Agriculturists.

The Countess of Warwick is advocating a settlement of women agriculturists. She does not propose that they should actually follow the plow, but thinks they might find both profit and pleasure in making butter and raising poultry.

A Hint for Busy Women.

If a woman with only a little time for reading has an ambition to be really well read in some one direction, it is imperative that she should select a specialty. It may be a broad specialty or a narrow specialty—French history or bumble-bees—but whatever it is, if she is really interested in the subject, and is able to obtain the books she needs, she can accomplish much even in half-hour snatches. Somebody learned French while waiting for dinner, and almost everybody has time for a little reading every day, and many a mickle makes a muckle.

How Women Earn Money.

The cleaning of bicycles is, says the Household, comparatively speaking, a modern occupation, usually taken up by a man in connection with some other business. A clever Englishwoman has conceived the idea that it might become a lucrative employment, for one who could go about to the different houses daily, or at stated times, and make a business of cleaning bicycles. The greater majority of the riders are young people, and such are inclined to shirk the proper care that should be given a machine, or are sometimes too tired from the exercise to attend to it, but are often willing to devote some of their spending money to get rid of the work.

This woman has started in the business, and goes from house to house, so that one need not take the cycle to a shop. She soaks the chain in kerosene oil and, after drying, rubs it with graphite. She carries an assortment of rags, cheese-cloth, free from lint. These, well permeated with oil, are used upon the intricate and working parts of the wheel. A bit of flannel polishes the trimmings after there has been applied to them a paste such as is used on harness trappings. The cleaner also adjusts the saddle and handlebars, tests everything to see that it is firm, tightening nuts when necessary. She pumps up and fills tires, cleans, trims, and fills the lamp, and puts it securely in place.

A New York society woman has added a novel venture to the business enterprises of women. She has opened a dainty office, which she calls "a bureau of social requirements." She offers to supply ideas and original designs for entertainments on established lines, relieving the hostess of all weariness and anxiety. To manage and order luncheons, teas, receptions, and other social affairs, and to supply menus or recipes. To give information on social matters, where any knotty point is vexing the uninitiated.

Must Supply Bath Money.

Among the Turks bath money forms an item in every marriage contract, the husband engaging to allow his wife a certain sum for bathing purposes. If it be withheld, she has only to go before the cadi and turn her slipper upside down. If the complaint be not then redressed it is a sufficient ground for divorce.

Goes to a Convent.

Queen Natalie of Servia is about to say farewell to the world and hide herself and her troubled life in a convent. Her husband, ex-King Milan, is a moral monstrosity, and her son, for whom the father, having made himself totally unbearable, abdicated his throne, has shown decided traits of imbecility.

Briefs About Women.

The Queen of Greece is the only woman Admiral in the world.

Ouida never shakes hands. She declares it to be the most vulgar form of salutation.

The little town of Nasso, in Sweden, has a female contingent, 150 strong, in its fire brigade.

The Queen of Italy is enthusiastically following the fad of collecting old boots and shoes of celebrated persons.

Since the college doors were opened to women in Scotland the female students have shown a pardonable patriotism.

New Zealand women have full suffrage, the native or Maori women being allowed to vote as well as their European sisters.

Mme. Payer, a Swiss woman who has taken the degree of doctor of medicine, is strongly opposed to tight boots and gloves, corsets, and long skirts.

Mrs. Zerisah Gould Mitchell, who died recently, was the last Indian princess in Massachusetts, and was a lineal descendant of the famous Massasoit.

Mrs. Campbell Copeman of Washington has made over 500 mountain ascensions, and is the only woman who ever succeeded in reaching the summit of Mount Rainier.

Japanese theaters have their boxes so arranged that the ladies can change their dresses, as it is not considered stylish for a lady to appear an entire evening in one dress and with the same ornaments.

Sacred Fires of India.

The sacred fires of India have not all been extinguished. The most ancient which still exists was consecrated twelve centuries ago in commemoration of the voyage made by the Parsees when they emigrated from Persia to India. The fire is fed five times every twenty-four hours with sandal wood and other fragrant materials, combined with very dry fuel. This fire, in the village of Oodwada, near Bulsar, is visited by Parsees in large numbers during the months allotted to the presiding genius of fire.

AN AFFLICTED MOTHER.

From the Times, Paw Paw, Ill.

A resident of this town who has lost two children during the past six years by violent deaths has been utterly prostrated by the shock, and seriously sick as a result of it. One child (aged 9) was killed by a cyclone in '90 while at school; another, three years later, was run over by a Burlington R. R. train. That griefs and misfortunes may so prey on the mind as to lead to serious physical disorders has been well demonstrated in this case. As a result of them, her health was shattered and she has been a constant sufferer since 1890. Her principal trouble has been neuralgia of the stomach, which was very painful, and exhibited all the symptoms of ordinary neuralgia, nervousness and indigestion. Physicians did her no good whatever. She was discouraged and abandoned all hope of getting well. Finally, however, a certain well-known pill was recommended (Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People).

She supplied herself with a quantity of them, and had not taken them two weeks when she noticed a marked improvement in her condition. She continued taking the pills until seven or eight boxes had been consumed and she considered herself entirely cured. She can now eat all kinds of food, which is something she has not been able to do for years, and is not troubled in the least with nervousness.

If any one would like to hear more of the details of her suffering and relief gained by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People they may be obtained probably, by writing the lady direct. She is one of our well-known residents, Mrs. Ellen A. Oderkirk, Paw Paw, Ill.

There are on the earth 1,000,000,000 inhabitants. Of these 33,033,033 die every year, 91,824 every day, 3,730 every hour, 60 every minute, or one every second.

A CHEAP TRIP.

Semi-Monthly Excursions to the Sunny South.

The opportunity to visit the Southern States afforded by the semi-monthly excursions of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad is one that should be taken advantage of by every one interested. These excursions are arranged for the first and Third Tuesdays in April. The tickets are good on the regular trains of those dates leaving Northern terminals, and can also be purchased through from agents of connecting lines. Tickets are sold to many points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, the Carolinas, Mississippi, Georgia and the western portion of Florida. They are good for return passage on any Tuesday or Friday within twenty-one days, and allow fifteen days on the going trip to stop off and examine the country. The cost for the round trip is about the regular one-way rate, and on same dates one-way tickets are sold at about two-thirds of the regular rates.

For further particulars, write to C. P. Atmore, G. P. A., Louisville, Ky., or Jackson Smith, D. P. A., Cincinnati, O.

Cheap Rates to the West and South.

On April 5 and 19, the North-Western Line will sell Home Seekers' excursion tickets, with favorable time limits, to numerous points in the West and South at exceptionally low rates. For tickets and full information apply to agents Chicago & North-Western Railway.

OBITUARY

Last Saturday morning as the 8:48 Wabash passenger train was approaching the long bridge that spans the Big Run on Dr. Madden's farm just east of Butler, it overtook James Cather, an old and highly respected citizen, and just as he had reached the end of the bridge and stepped off the track the engine passed him but he did not get away far enough and the steps of a coach struck him in the side and knocked him down the embankment. The train stopped, picked him up and brought him to Butler where he died within an hour.

The funeral of the unfortunate old gentleman took place from Big Run Chapel last Sunday, Rev. Disbro, of Butler, officiating. His funeral was very largely attended, as he was well known in this part of the county.

James Cather was born in Gurnsey county, O., Aug. 20, 1819, where he grew to young manhood. He was educated at Gettysburg college, Pa., for the ministery in the Lutheran church. He came to Indiana in the fall of 1840 and began his ministry in the then sparcely settled country, riding or walking long distances to his several appointments, receiving but meager support from the poor settlers. In January, 1848, he was married to Ludia Norris, daughter of Charles Norris, after whom Butler received its first name—Norrestown. To them were born six children, four daughters and two sons, one daughter, Mrs. J. B. Hawkins, and the sons, Pitt and Charles, and the aged mother, surviving him.

Mr. Cather was a man of more than ordinary ability, well educated and a preacher of much note in his day. There ran through his whole life a vein of humor that could not be suppressed, but bubbled out on almost any occasion, and wherever you found him in town a little group of earnest listeners were sure to be gathered about him and laughter was heard. He had been often and earnestly warned to keep off the railroad track as his hearing was poor and fear was felt for his safety, but all in vain; he feared nothing day nor night. Mr. Cather gave twenty-five or more of the best years of his life to the cause his church espoused, yet his funeral took place in a U. B. church and a M. E. minister officiated at his funeral. He was loved and respected by all who knew him, and the high esteem in which he was held was manifested by the large number who paid these last respects to his mortal remains last Sunday.

Consumption

Will SCOTT'S EMULSION cure consumption? Yes and no. Will it cure every case? No. What cases will it cure then? Those in their earlier stages, especially in young people. We make no exaggerated claims, but we have positive evidence that the early use of

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda in these cases results in a positive cure to a large number. In advanced cases, however, where a cure is impossible, this well-known remedy should be relied upon to prolong life surprisingly.

FOUR RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

Saturday was an unlucky day for the Lake Shore road. They had no less than four accidents that afternoon. At Waterloo at 5:15 a freight train was switching when one part of the train was turning in on the switch just west of the crossing when the rest of the train backed against it striking some cars of wheat and smashing them. The wheat poured out and ran down the high embankment. But most of it was gathered up, the men working at it today.

There was also a wreck at Goshen when a stock train broke an axel and the cars were knocked off the track. It caused a delay of about an hour. There was a similar accident at Corunna and one at Swanton towards Toledo.

DAY OF DISASTER

(Columbia City Post)

Thursday was one of the unlucky days in the history of our neighboring village of Pierceton. On this day there occurred two deaths in and near town, and two serious accidents.

The deaths were of two well known and respected men, a Mr. Klingel, who lives in Pierceton, and a farmer named John Brown, living a short distance north of town.

Some time the same day Isaac Slocum took his double barreled shot gun and went to the wood to shoot squirrels. Coming to a fence he first set the gun over and was in the act of following, when in some unknown manner the gun was discharged, both loads entering his right arm at the wrist, shattering the bones so badly that amputation was necessary.

Upon the school grounds the children were amusing themselves at the time honored but hazardous game of "whip crack" when one little girl named Dudley was thrown violently to the ground, resulting in the fracture of one of the bones of the forearm.

J. T. HAYDEN RESIGNS.

J. T. Hayden, who was been here seriously ill for some time, is somewhat better, but feeling that at his advanced age, 72, he should retire from active business, he has resigned his two offices with the Lake Shore road. For thirty-eight years he has been auditor of the entire Lake Shore system, and has also for some years been superintendent of their insurance department. Now he resigns both. His daughter and her husband Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Bond of Cleveland are here with him now. His two sons, F. W and C. J. Hayden, who have been here for a week or two have gone to their home in Chicago.

OBITUARY.

Died at his resident, in northwest Fairfield, this County Friday March 27, 1898 In the 67st year of his age, Isaac Helwig. Mr. Helwig was born at Sherodsville Carroll Co., Ohio, June 24, 1832, came with his fathers family to DeKalb Co. In the spring of 1841 settling on the Daniel Knisely farm, in Troy township. In 1854, his father, Jacob Helwig, well known in the early history of DeKalb Co., as a representative citizen, occupying responsible position of honor and trust in county and state removed to Fairfield township In 1858 he was married to Emma Clinesmith of that place. In this union was born six children, two sons and four daughters. His wife and two sons surviving him. His funeral took place at Fairfield Center March 29, Rev. Wattman of Albion a veteral Lutheran minister officiating. Not withstanding the rainy day his funeral was largely attended.

Mr. Helwig was a man of unquestioned integrity, a member long standing in the Lutheran church. Had occupied responsible offices in his township—was a kind husband and father and hospitable to a fault. His death, though long eqpected has cast a gloom over his neighborhood and his good deeds will live long in the memories of those that knew him best.

WORTHY TRIBUTE

To Dr. Wheeler and the Product of His Life's Labor and Research.

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

If you seek for a reason for the unquestionable popularity of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, you learn that it is due wholly to the merit of the preparation in making sick nerves strong and vigorous and through them the organs active and healthy.

It has reached the pinnacle of success in the science of medicine and is without a rival This fact is proven by the thousands who have regained health by it after thorough tests, and failures of other Nervines, Compounds and Sarsaparillas

No claim is made for Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer that is not accompanied by convincing evidence. In this case Geo. S. Beck, River Styx, O., furnishes the proof. He says: "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is certainly a wonderful remedy. Less than one bottle cured my wife of sleeplessness and nervousness of a very serious nature. I, myself, had a very uncomfortable time from the effect of LaGripp, which was an aggravating nervous trouble. Sometimes I felt as if I would rather be dead than alive to endure it. One bottle of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured me and I gained twenty-five pounds in a very short time. I could add several pages to this stating the merits of the remedy from my own observation. I would not be without it in my house if possible to get it."

It is a specific for sick nerves.

HOME AGAIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eckhart are once more at home and in their pleasant residence here, and of course glad to get back. Next Tuesday would have made five months since they left. Their residence at Los Angeles was pleasant, if we except, of course, the sad circumstances of the last few weeks that ended in the death of Mrs. Frank Eckhart. They all started home together Tuesday morning. At Danville Ill, they were met yesterday by Mr. Boland and J. H. Rose. At Logansport, J. M. Hook, I. N. Cool and W. H. McQuiston, came to see them, and at Peru, Mr and Mrs. Guild joined them. They all came home on the 6 p. m. train on the Wabash those already named, including, Mrs. Mich and Boland, Mrs George Shugers and Frank Eckhart, these three having gone out there with Mrs. Frank Eckhart in the vain hope that her health might improve. We are all glad to see their home-coming, but there are sadness and tears for the one whose young life went out amid the orange groves and flowers of the Pacific coast

A Life Saved.

Marvelous cures of throat and lung affections are made daily by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Miss Annie Swan, Petersburg, Va., writes: "My brother was attacked by a bad cough and cold, and it was thought he had consumption. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup was used, and to our great surprise it made him well and hearty. There is no better cure in the world than this Syrup." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

ELDER BLANCHARD DEAD.

The Kendallville Sun of Saturday April 2, says:

Elder C. H. Blanchard died at his residence at Wolcottville at 11:30 a. m. today, after a protracted illness. He had been pastor of the Baptist church at Wolcottville for forty years or over. He resided at Albion prior to his residence at Wolcottville. His name has been a household word in Northern Indiana for nearly or quite a half century and no minister has ever lived in Noble or LaGrange counties, perhaps, who has performed more ministerial labor in either or both counties. He completed his eightieth year on the 11th of last December. A more extended notice will appear later. The funeral will take place on Tuesday at 11 a. m. from the Baptist church at Wolcottville, and will no doubt be attended by a very large concourse of people.

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

W. L. ADDISON, M.D., Cary, Miss., says: "I use Wine of Cardui extensively in my practice and find it a most excellent preparation for female troubles."

COURT.

The court has been occupied several days with the case between W. H. Lees and the Sherwoods, Lees being his own attorney, assisted by J. H. Rose and Baxter & Brown. C. M. Phillips was for Sherwood. The case was not finished for some reason, but waits a few days.

Following that case came the one in which Prosper J. Goumond of Ashley sues Lieberenz & Forney to have returned to him, money he had paid on a house in Ashley. Goumond is a barber of that town, and when he first went there a few years ago from Butler, he had a little money, enough to make a small payment on a home. This he did, buying a house of defendants and after the first payment, he was to pay $12 50 a month, which he did for some time. Then hard times struck him, and he asked to have it reduced to $10 a month. But he still found he could not keep up the payment So now he sues to have the money refunded to him. He claims he was under age at the time the bargain was made, and so cannot be held to the contract. A. J. & J. W. Baxter are attorneys for Goumond, and Wickwire & Link for Lieberenz.

A Timely Friend.

With perfect propriety may we call that excellent remedy, Salvation Oil, a timely friend. This liniment rapidly cures rheumatism, neuralgia and pains, when other remedies fail. Mr. Jno. M. Hall, Ashland, Va., writes: "I suffered with rheumatism in the ankle and the muscles connected therewith. Salvation Oil at once relieved the soreness, reduced the swelling, and cured the pain. No other liniment that I ever used did me so much good."

Bad for Bronchitis

but extremely good for the sufferer from that harassing disease is Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. No medicine can compare with this great remedy in the prompt and permanent aid it gives in all bronchial affections. It stops the cough, soothes the irritated throat, and induces refreshing sleep.

DWELLING BURNED.

Samuel Widney one of the jurors, came up on the noon train over the B. & O. yesterday and saw while on the train the dwelling of Alex Culbertson burning. TREE STRUCK HIM.

Byron E. Walters, son of Lewis Walters has a badly injured arm in a sling. Wednesday afternoon about three o'clock as he and Wallie Schutt were cutting timber near Swan, they got hold of a tree that had another one leaning against it. When their tree fell, the lodged one broke loose and came down suddenly. Schutt says as the tree fell he jumped aside and looked for young Walters. He found him lying by the stump unconscious. The lodged tree had struck him, knocking him to the ground. He dragged him away and finally brought him back to consciousness. He found the tree had struck his body, and bruised him considerably, one bone of the right forearm was broken. He was cared for and Dr. Baxter set the broken bone, and he is geting along all right now, though it will be some time before he can work again. Mr. Schutt is the same man who was working with Wm Ice, when a tree fell on him and killed him. He begins to think that timber cutting is dangerous.

HE WAS AN EARLY PIONEER.

Charley Comesky is not the spring chichen some would take him to be, to see him go flying about the streets He came to this county in 1842, in September of that year, and settled on the farm where he now lives, and has all these years. He has never been away from there over a week at a time. When he first came here, he came on a canal boat from Ottawa county, Ohio, to Ft. Wayne. There was not at that time a regular wagon road in DeKalb County, and every man had to follow the trail he could cut for himself. If he started out with a team he took an ax along with him, for he might have to cut a new road. When any part of the track was found impassable, a man would take his ax and clear another track around it, among the trees. He has seen men at the old Auburn House on north Main st, shooting black and gray squirrels, which were then thick in the woods across the street to the west. Squirrels were abundant ever where in the woods that then covered the present town site He remembers when the prisoner at the old jail got hold of the keys and locked the sheriff in, while he himself took a visit to the stores in town. And Charley is still a pretty sound man.

INTERESTING TRAINS

All Roads Lead to Auburn and Most Notable Trains Run On Our Lines

Three trains over the Wabash passed through Auburn Saturday, that readers of the COURIER will expect to hear about.

The first was the big train of ordnance material that went west at about noon. It was a fast freight and went flying across the continent, being loaded with gun carriages, carriage tracks and steel disappearing apparatus to be used in placing big seacoast defense guns in position, on the fortifications of San Francisco. It started from the national arsenal and gun factory at Watervliet near Troy, N. Y., where for several years, the goverment has been making guns, gun carriages, shells, shot etc, etc, for the use of land defenses and the army. The great Watervliet plant was started in 1813, at first as a mere arsenal to store arms, great and small, but it has been expanding all these years till in 1887, when they began to make cannon. To-day they are working on a 16-inch gun, the largest in the world. The big Krupp gun in Chicago weighed 120 tons. This one will weigh 126 tons, is 49.1 feet long, 16 inch bore, its charge of powder will be 1000 pounds, the solid conical shot weigh 2000 pounds, and total cost of the one gun and its carriage will be $400,000. Its range is fifteen miles, and it will take a year to make a gun that size.

The second train was the special of George Gould, that went east about 5 p. m carrying the railroad magnate to the east after an extensive tour of inspection of the various lines that under the control of the Gould interest.

The third notable train went through going east, at nearly 11 p. m. It was composed of twenty-two fast freight cars, all loaded with provisions clothing, and medicines and other needed supplies for the relief of the starving Cubans. It was the big relief train sent through the influence of the Omaha World-Herald one of the leading papers of Omaha. The World-Herald, notified the COURIER of the approach of its big train and inquires indicated it would be through Auburn about midnight. But it made better time through the plains of Indiana, than had been expected. So when the reporter reached the station, at 11 o'clock the rear lights were just flying out of sight to the east. Going through just at this crisis of Cuban affairs it was of double interest to our people. Our government has been feeding and clothing over 300 Americans and naturalized Americans in Cuba, since last May, by an appropriation by congress. But lately, free gifts from the people of the United States, have been sent by train load flying across the continent, which have been landed on the island and brought hope, life and health to starving thousands. Such a spectacle of national and individual charity and humanity for the people in an enemy country the world has never seen and whatever may be the out come of the present troubles, war or peace, this country will have earned the high regard of all the nations of earth.

COURT

As we had intimated the trial now on is in regard to a race horse, the owner of which claims was injured while on a car of the Wabash road.

This mare Non Parole, was bought in 1892 by Ott & McCormick of Churubusco. They had seen her pace, for she was a pacer, and believed that she could be trained so as to make a fast record. So they bought her and trained her. That summer, '93, she was in twenty races, winning three, was 2nd in five and 3d in four, thus earning money in twelve of the twenty races. In '94 she was in thirteen races; won six; was 3d in five and 4th in one earning money in twelve of the thirteen. In 1895 she was entered in fifteen races went in fourteen; won six; was 2nd in three, 4th in two. So they claim she was a valuable horse because she earned so much money, and they claim a damage of $5,000 Toward the close of the season of '95 they brought her up from Logansport to North Manchester, on a Saturday. But next day, Sunday, finding that the free-for all, in which they had intended to enter her, contained much faster horses, concluded to take her home. They went to the station, paid her fare, took a receipt which says the risk is to be the owner's, got in the car and waited for a train. She was tied near the door at the side of the car. A rope was drawn around inside the car, so as to keep her from getting hurt against the sides and she was provided with blankets. But when the train came along, the engine in switching, struck this car so hard, the mare was thrown down, as was also McCormick who was in the car. When taking her out at Busco, it was noticed there was a grating sound in her left hip and she could not use it. It turned out that a bone was broken and she has been valueless since. This statement was made by the younger Ninde. He also said that a letter of notice had been sent to St. Louis at once when it was found a serious injury.

On the other hand the defence, by one of its attorneys, Mr. Stuart insists that the mare was injured at Logansport, and that he can prove that she was so lame there that she had to be taken off the track and that she was brought to North Manchester, on purpose for a trick to be played on the railroad and that the whole thing is a fake put up by Ott & McCormick. He will also try to get out of paying damages, through the contract in the shipping bill, which stated that the mare was to be shipped at owner's risk. He will try also to show that when Ott & McCormick found the horse was hurt they did not notify the general office at St. Louis within the five days stated in the contract. It will be fought over inch by inch.

The case of Jackson township vs ex trustee Walter is finished. The terms of settlement are that Walter pay the township $900 which with interest on the orders at stake makes about $1,025. This is probably as fair a settlement as could be made under the circumstances and we are glad for all concerned that it is over.

Friday's Daily.

Work on the horse case went on all the afternoon and evening. Mr, Otto one of the owners of Non Parole, testified in the afternoon, and in the evening, Mr. McCormick, the man who had the horse in charge and knew most about her, gave a detailed account of how she had done, and where taken to in the summers of '93, '94 and '95. She had been to all the chief trotting centers, Terre Haute, Mansfield, Sandusky, Toledo, Ravenna, Coldwater, Kendallville, Waterloo, Ligonier, Elkhart, Hicksville and all over Southern Indiana, Southern Michigan and over in Ohio. She had earned them a good deal of money and witness gave a list of the heats she had run in the different places stating in which she had been first, second and so on. She had secured a record of 2:16 but had been in races with faster horses and got 2nd and 3rd, etc. His testimony was very clear for his side of the case, but like too many witnesses he adressed too many remarks to his shirt bosom and very few could hear it fully. Even his attorneys had to keep telling him to speak louder and Judge Watkins confessed he could not understand him. If we had a witness with such a poor voice we would make him sit over in the clerk's desk and if he wanted the jury to help him out, he would have to put into his words, wind enough so the jury could hear him. A witness ought to know that a jury cannot decide in his favor unless they hear his side of the case.

Saturday's Daily.

The race horse case was not finished but is to come up again next Tuesday and may take two days yet.

Young Decker, accused of stealing horse blankets from D. C. Caruth and A. Lewis is being tried now. Pomeroy is for the state and Moody for the defense.

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

LEE LEAVES HAVANA.

THE AMERICAN FLAG ON THE CONSULATE DOWN.

Governor General Blanco Too Busy to Say Good Bye to the American Representative—Spain Proclaims an Armistice on the Island of Cuba.

Lee Quits Havana.

Havana special: United States Consul General Lee and his staff with Consuls Springer and Barker, left Havana at 6 o'clock Saturday night, on the lighthouse tender Fern. The wharf was crowded but no discourtesy was shown.

In the morning Consul General Lee, accompanied by British Consul General Gollon, called on General Blanco to bid him good-bye. The Governor General was very busy and could not receive General Lee. The American flag upon the consulate building has been taken down by consular employes. News of the American Consuls leaving their posts spread rapidly about the city and produced considerable surprise. The matter was talked about generally, and the remark, "Let them go," was heard. The Spaniards say that the fact of the Consuls leaving has not produced the effect which friends of the insurgents expected. The Spanish patriots also claim that they are awaiting future events with serenity. They quote many prominent people as saying there is no importance in the action of the Consuls.

Armistice in Cuba.

Washington special: The Department of State at midnight Saturday reports that it has been advised that an armistice proclamation has been authorized by the Government at Madrid to be issued at Havana. This has greatly complicated matters in diplomatic circles, especially with the powers. It caused much excitement here.

Madrid special: General Correa, Minister of War, after a council which lasted two hours, said: "We yield to the prayer of the great powers, granting what we had refused to the United States."

Fatal Dynamite Explosion.

There was a wreck on the Mountain Central in which three persons were killed. A west-bound freight arrived at Dry Forks bridge, sixty miles from Grand Forks, Mont., and proceeded to cross. The train was composed of sixteen loads, one car of dynamite and fifteen empties. When within twenty-five feet of the bridge the dynamite exploded, wrecking the bridge, tearing ten cars to kindling wood. The bodies of two of the trainmen were hurled from the wreck which immediately caught fire and was consumed. It is supposed that the car containing dynamite was derailed on the bridge and the jolting caused it to explode.

Out Forever.

George Stout of Philadelphia, who was knocked out by Oscar Gardner, the Omaha kid, at Columbus, Ohio, Friday night, died from the effects of the blow at the St. Francis Hospital at 8:10 Saturday morning. It was in the twelfth round that the fatal blow was delivered, Stout falling heavily and never regaining consciousness. He was ordered taken to the hospital by a physician, but nothing could be done for him.

Victory Complete.

A special from Cairo, Egypt, says: The British brigade, in the great defeat of the dervishes at Atbara, and the capture of Mahmoud, the dervish commander, and 4,000 of his followers, lost ten rank and file killed and had ninety men wounded.

The Egyptians lost fifty-one men killed and had fourteen officers and 319 men wounded. The dervishes lost about 2,000 men killed.

A Triple Murder in Tennessee.

Near McGhee Station, Monroe County, Tenn., John McGhee and his son, Joe, shot and killed Henry and Ernest Howard and James Murrand, and mortally wounded Tom Howard. The Howards were brothers-in-law and sons-in-law of McGhee. The killing was the result of a family feud. The McGhees are prominent people and highly connected.

Pingree's Bill Lost.

Governor Pingree's bill for increasing the taxes upon railroads failed to pass the Michigan Senate by two votes. This is the eighteenth day of the special session called by the Governor for the express purpose of passing this measure. It passed the House by almost a unanimous vote.

Drank Extract of Lemon.

Parkersburg (W. Va.) special: Joseph Collins, a respectable citizen of Elizabeth, drank twenty-four bottles of extract of lemon to satisfy a craving for whisky, which he could not get, and died in a short time in terrible agony.

Another Trial for Zola.

Paris special: It is decided that the second trial of M. Emile Zola shall begin May 23 in the Assizes Court of Versailles, after the elections, thus relieving the Government from the affair becoming a political issue.

Gave Up Its Dead.

The dead body of an unknown man was found lying on the river bank at Hammett's Landing, a few miles above Marietta, Ohio. His throat had been cut from ear to ear and his pockets rifled. The body is supposed to have been cast up by the flood.

General Hardin Dead.

Gen. William P. Hardin, one of the leaders of the Confederate Army, and Superintendent of the Confederate Home in Austin, Texas, died recently of Bright's disease, in his 82nd year.

Ohio Miners Back at Work.

At a conference of committees representing the coal operators and miners of the Massillon, Ohio, district, an agreement was reached, and most of the miners resume work at the operators' terms. The action of their officials in ordering a strike was condemned by the miners.

Dreyfus Is Reported Dead.

A rumor was current in Paris that Albert Dreyfus, the former captain of artillery, who was sentenced to imprisonment for life for betraying important military secrets to a foreign power, is dead. He was undergoing imprisonment on Devil's Island.

MESSAGE IS HELD BACK

General Lee Given Time to Get Americans Out of Cuba.

GREAT EXODUS FROM HAVANA

Departing Ships All Crowded Beyond Their Safe Capacity.

VAGUE SITUATION IN MADRID

Stories of Certain Peace and Hints of Inevitable War.

Postponement of the Communication to Congress Occasioned by Notice from Havana that Americans Would Be Massacred by Enraged Spaniards—Reports Circulated that the Queen Regent Is Anxious to Promise Concessions to Keep Peace—Representatives of the Powers of Europe Active in Their Efforts to Prevent the Threatened War.

Washington correspondence:

President McKinley's message on the Cuban question did not go to Congress Wednesday, as had been expected. It was withheld in order to give Gen. Lee and the other Americans in Cuba a chance to leave the island and reach the United States before the crisis was precipitated. The President's communication to Congress was ready for transmission at noon. Assistant Secretary Pruden had his carriage at the door and the carefully written document was in his hands. But before sending him to the capitol the President had come to witness a scene that promised to form an important page in American history. They were there to hear a message from the President, which would carry the fortunes of the American people, but the message did not come.

The suddenness of the announcement stunned the public, which heard the news in distorted forms, and amazed veteran members of Congress. Ultimately it became known that not only would there be no message that day, but no message during the week, and that it was a possibility that the message written and approved might never go to Congress at all.

The first reason for the delay was the administration had received advices from

QUEEN REGENT OF SPAIN.

Gen. Lee at Havana intimating that all Americans could not be gotten off the island in time and would be in great peril if the message preceded their departure. The second reason, and perhaps equally potent with the other, slowly drifted into public comprehension late in the day. This was that the Spanish Government, after what plainly had been most exciting times in inner Spanish circles at Madrid, had decided to reopen the case, closed, so far as this Government was concerned, by the refusal of Spain to make satisfactory response to the representations made by the United States last week, and, in order to avert impending war, had decided to make concessions heretofore refused.

Leaders at the White House.

While the message was awaited there came a hurried summons of leaders of the Senate and House to the White House, and they were there informed that the message was to be withheld upon the information received from Consul General Lee. The reasons he gave were deemed entirely satisfactory by all, and Senator Davis informed the Senate, while the House leaders carried the news to that body. That the danger to American life was considered sufficient reason for nonaction appeared in the postponement of all proposed meetings to consider the situation.

The proposed armistice by Spain injected another feature into the discussion of the situation, and, while some were very hopeful that a satisfactory solution of the problem might eventuate from it, the general feeling was that the conditions in Cuba, the determination of the insurgents to continue fighting until independence was recognized, and the sentiment of this country in favor of Cuba's independence of Spain possibly made overtures on this line too late. It has been said, and probably is true, that at Madrid the authorities, and especially the queen regent and her immediate sympathizers, have been moving heaven and earth to avert the blow about to fall upon Spanish sovereignty in the western hemisphere. There have been indications that Spain was walking the floor. It is true, too, that Gen. Woodford repeatedly wired the State Department that there seemed a disposition at Madrid to yield everything the United States had asked or could ask, except the independence of Cuba.

In administration circles at this time there is very little hope Spain will be able to make a proposal which will satisfy the United States. It would be foolish to stay the action of this Government, now that a definite policy has been agreed upon, for the purpose of considering suggestions by Spain which do not go to the heart of the question, and which there is little indication will rise to the dignity of offering a real solution of the problems. Though the State Department is naturally secretive as to the nature of the communications which have been received from Gen. Woodford, enough is known to warrant the conclusion that Spain is willing to concede everything but the actual freedom of Cuba from Spanish sovereignty. Spain is willing to do everything but pull down her flag at Havana, and there are no indications whatever that she is willing to do that.

The truth is that there has arisen in both the United States and Spain a condition which may be described as political, and to which apparently both Governments are compelled to bow submission. If the queen and the cabinet at Madrid were able to settle the Cuban question as they would like to settle it they could be depended upon to grant Cuba freedom. If President McKinley and his cabinet were able to deal with the problem without interference from Congress or the pressure of an aroused public opinion, they might be able, in time, to secure the freedom of Cuba without going to war with Spain about it. But as matters now stand, neither Government is powerful enough to stand before the storm of public opinion. The people of Spain demand that Cuba shall be retained; the people of the United States demand that Cuba shall be freed from Spanish dominion. The irresistible force is coming in collision with the immovable body. There is serious danger that Congress will break away from the policy outlined by the President, and either declare war outright upon the issue of the Maine or recognize the independence of Cuba.

ERRATUM.

Notwithstanding President McKinley's Delay, There Are Some Americans Who Will Not Leave Cuba.

wished to hear from Gen. Lee that the consul general and other Americans at Havana had sailed for Key West. At 12:30 a cablegram from Gen. Lee to the State Department brought the information that he could not get the Americans out of Havana till Saturday or Sunday. Then the message was ordered withheld.

At the capitol a great crowd had gathered to witness scenes attendant upon the reception and reading of the momentous document. The galleries of both houses were crowded, and among the Senators and Representatives on the floors there was an air of most eager expectation. When it became known that the message was not coming there was witnessed a manifestation of human nature which might be described either as a tragedy or a comedy, according to the point of view. Disappointment, disgust, anger, dejection reigned everywhere. This was not confined to the occupants of the galleries, who had gathered in holiday attire to witness the beginning of the slaughter of Spanish sovereignty in America and who had been cheated out of their promised show. Down among the statesmen upon the two floors the bitterness and anger were unparalleled in the recent history of our Government. Men who have for a score of years been in almost daily observation of affairs in Washington have never before seen such a state of feeling as that engendered by the failure of the President to send in his message.

No more inspiring scene could be witnessed than was presented by the great hall of the House of Representatives. Tier upon tier of people, from gallery rail to wall, stretched in an unbroken line, the gay colors of the gowns and hats and flowers of the ladies relieving the somber black of the garments of the men. Above the Speaker's desk the festooned silk flag of the American republic was to the eye the symbol of patriotism which throbbed in the breast. And opposite the Speaker's chair the great clock, with its guarding warriors, ticked away the minutes as the vast assemblage waited. A memorable scene was also presented in the Senate. An audience that tested the full capacity of the accommodations had filled the galleries hours before the Senate convened. It was by no means an ordinary crowd of gallery habitues. Members of the families of most distinguished men in American public life were there, prominent representatives of the several foreign legations occupied the diplomatic gallery and persons distinguished in all walks of life

WORK OF THE WATER

REVIEW OF THE DESOLATION AT SHAWNEETOWN.

Exaggerated as First Reports Were, the Truth Shows that the Disaster Was Frightful—Submerged Homes Are Pillaged.

Many Absolutely Destitute.

Pillage and plunder have been added to the horrors of the Shawneetown flood. It became necessary to call out armed men to guard the salvage. Hundreds of houses were entered by vandals and money, jewelry and other property stolen Monday night. Men armed with loaded Winchester rifles and shotguns have patrolled the levee, on foot and scoured the town in skiffs. The mayor had almost decided to call for militia, but was dissuaded from his purpose. A lynching was narrowly averted Tuesday afternoon by the prospective victim's fright. He had been accused of attempting to break open a flood sufferer's trunk. Constable F. O. Minter ordered the man, a negro, Tom Hancock, to leave town at once on pain of death. "I'll string the rope around your neck myself," the constable declared, and fifty voices yelled approval. Hancock fled down the levee.

Mayor Carney, at the request of the citizens' committee, detailed special officers along the levee, and to scout in skiffs. The citizens' executive committee is composed of Charles Carroll, chairman; Karl Roedell, treasurer; Rev. Fred Bueckman, secretary, and Mayor Carney. Chairman Carroll's apprehensiveness that armed militia might tend to additionally demoralize the situation deterred the mayor from appealing to the Governor for the declaration of martial law.

The revised list shows twenty-five dead beside two unknown negroes, the bodies of whom were recovered Tuesday afternoon. Unofficial estimates place the dead at from thirty-five to sixty. The fatalities are expected to reach this number, as many persons are unaccounted for, as in the case of a wagon and team containing three persons which is reported to have been blown off the rock road into the flood waters. The work of the forces engaged has been almost exclusively of rescue and relief. No effort had been made up to Wednesday to recover bodies, most of which were supposed to be imprisoned in collapsed houses. The entire time and energies of the relief committee have been devoted to the survivors. Twelve hundred persons are absolutely dependent on the charity of the public. Every man, woman and child in Shawneetown, rich or poor, must receive provisions through the relief committee until the property buried in the stores of the city is recovered.

A careful estimate of the damage to property places the amount at $150,000, divided equally between business houses and residences. Relief boats from Evansville and Cairo brought in additional provisions Tuesday. The homeless were sheltered from the cold, cutting rain Tuesday night for the first time since the town was inundated. Tuesday afternoon 500 tents arrived from Springfield by direction of Governor Tanner, and fifty more were sent by the citizens of Harrisburg. The only dry spot in the city is the levee, an apparently solid embankment about ten feet above the water's edge and fifteen feet wide. On either side as far as the eye can reach is a desolate, watery waste.

System of Relief Work.

The work of caring for the survivors has progressed rapidly and good results have been accomplished. The relief committee inaugurated a systematic plan of extending help. In addition to food and clothing received, a large barge of coal came from Caseyville by way of Evansville, Ind. The arrival was a Godsend, for the weather is cold and the lack of clothing, next to hunger, has been the greatest want of the survivors. An appeal was issued to the public asking for money contributions to enable the population to survive. Money is to be sent to Charles Carroll, chairman of the relief committee. Funds will be required to replace the wrecked houses and to repair the damaged dwellings of the poorer inhabitants, and unless outside help is extended the future of the town is doomed.

Two hundred sufferers were sent to Mount Vernon, Ind., Tuesday, in a body, and an equal number went there in a small craft. Hundreds of others have gone to relatives in neighboring towns or sought refuge in the hills to the northwest of the flood. But scores of suffering householders cling with desperate stubbornness to their wrecked homes. Hundreds of persons who have not already removed their remaining all to other places announce they will live in Shawneetown no longer. In fact, it is conservatively predicted that when the flood subsides the town will have lost more than three-fifths of its population, chiefly by removal to other points.

Of the 500 houses in the town at least 100, mostly small frame structures, in the poorer portion of town, south of the break, were destroyed. Every other building in the city was damaged from $5 to $5,000. Following is a list of some of the heaviest sufferers among the business men:

Frank Armstrong, hardware, $800; Lowe Brothers, general store, $1,500; Krebs & Shaw, grocery, $1,500; Goetz

The colored Baptist church was swept away. It was a small frame building. The electric light plant was almost destroyed. KLONDIKERS FREEZE TO DEATH.

Disaster Follows Stampede from Dawson to Swedish Creek.

Death and suffering have followed the most remarkable stampede yet made from Dawson. It was to Swedish creek, reports of the richness of which reached Dawson on Feb. 16, when thermometers registered 60 below zero. In their haste the stampeders left their blankets behind, depending on camp fires to keep them warm. Many were frozen and helped back to Dawson by friends and the Canadian police. Three died shortly after returning. Two others had legs amputated and died from the shock.

Curiously enough, the cry "On to Morro!" does not imply any delay in making the attack.

McKINLEY IS FIRM.

Tells Europe United States Has a Humane Duty to Fulfill.

The representatives of the six powers of Europe seeking to avert war between Spain and the United States called on President McKinley at noon Thursday. The Governments of Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Russia and Italy were represented. The call of the representatives of the powers on the President was quite brief and at 12:20 p. m. they went over to the State Department and made an official visit. They were headed by Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, and dean of the corps. The others included the French and German ambassadors, the Austrian minister and the charge d'affaires of Italy and Russia. They were at once shown into the diplomatic room of the State Department, where they were joined by Secretary Sherman and Assistant Secretary Day.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, as representative of the powers, presented the following to the President:

The representatives of Germany, Austria-Hungary, France, Great Britain, Italy and Russia, duly authorized in that behalf, address, in the name of their respective governments, a pressing appeal to the feelings of humanity and moderation of the President and of the American people, in their existing differences with Spain. They earnestly hope that further negotiations will lead to an agreement which, while securing the maintenance of peace, will afford all necessary guarantees for the re-establishment of order in Cuba.

The powers do not doubt that the humanitarian and purely disinterested character of this representation will be fully recognized and appreciated by the American nation.

President McKinley replied as follows:

The Government of the United States recognizes the good will which has prompted the friendly communication of the representatives of Germany, Austria-Hungary, France, Great Britain, Italy and Russia, as set forth in the address of your excellencies, and shares the hope therein expressed that the outcome of the situation in Cuba may be the maintenance of peace between the United States and Spain by affording the necessary guarantees for the re-establishment of order in the island, so terminating the chronic condition of disturbance, which so deeply injures the interests and menaces the tranquillity of the American nation by the character and consequences of the struggle thus kept up at our doors, besides shocking its sentiment of humanity.

The Government of the United States appreciates the humanitarian and disinterested character of the communication now made on behalf of the powers named, and for its part is confident that equal appreciation will be shown for its own earnest and unselfish endeavors to fulfill a duty to humanity by ending a situation, the indefinite prolongation of which has become insufferable.

MANY STATES REPRESENTED.

Rapid Erection of Buildings at Trans-Mississippi Exposition.

Plans for State buildings at the trans-Mississippi exposition in Omaha are coming in rapidly. The department of publicity has just received the architect's drawings for the Minnesota building, the Montana building, the Arkansas building, the Denver building and the Missouri building.

The plans for the proposed Iowa building met the hearty approval of the experts of the exposition. The Illinois building is nearly completed, with the exception of an additional wing made necessary for the accommodation of the fine art exhibit which Illinois will bring to the exposition. The Wisconsin building is well under way and is one of the most complete State buildings on the grounds.

The Nebraska building is practically completed. The plans for the Denver, or Colorado, building have been accepted and the contract will be let in a day or two. Plans for the Georgia pine palace have been submitted. It will be constructed wholly of pine donated by the people of Georgia. It is a handsome structure. The Minnesota building will be constructed on similar lines of unhewn Minnesota logs.

Plans for the Oregon building are now being drawn and will be submitted next week. Members of State commissions of other States send assurances that plans for their State buildings will be forthcoming within a short time. It is highly probable that the States of New York and New Jersey will construct handsome buildings at the exposition.

Thirty-five States have to date decided to participate in the exposition. In thirty of these commissions have been appointed and reports from agents in the field are to the effect that at least five more States will be organized within the next ten days. The winter weather having been more favorable, construction work is fast advancing and is progressing in the main court, the bluff tract and the Midway with great rapidity.

The Government building, 500 feet long, and the pinnacle of whose dome is nearly 200 feet high, is nearly done. The management finds it necessary to build several annexes to accommodate the extraordinary demand for exhibit space.

Sisseton Indians Indignant.

The Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians have been advised that they will receive from Washington 2,000 cows and some seed wheat, to the value of $100,000. The report spread like wildfire; and a council has been called at Sisseton agency, in South Dakota, to protest against the Government issuing rations to them. They say they are full American citizens, and their contract with the Government called for cash when they sold their lands.

New Army Uniform.

One hundred sample canvas uniforms have been ordered by the War Department, with a view to their general introduction as a light and serviceable field uniform by the United States army. It is a marked departure in uniforming the army, and one in the interest of preserving the health of the men while in active service. The color is a gray brown, said to be particularly desirable in time of hostilities, as it is difficult to distinguish it from the earth, grass, corn fields or dead leaves. It is light and cool in summer and is very serviceable in winter.

Friday was to have been private bill day in the House, but the rules were suspended and private bills will be heard Tuesday. The naval bill was then taken up. After several hours of wrangling, during which all sorts of amendments were offered and voted down and many speeches were made, the vote was taken upon the Cannon substitute to reduce the number of battleships to one and to increase the torpedo-boats and torpedo-boat destroyers to twelve each. It was defeated, 78—124. Mr. Underwood (Dem.) of Alabama offered an amendment appropriating $4,000,000 for the establishment of a government armor plate factory. The amendment was ruled out on a point of order. An amendment to reduce the price of armor plate to $300 per ton was defeated. This completed the bill and it was reported to the House and passed. Then, at 6 p. m., the House adjourned until Monday. The Senate spent almost the entire day in the discussion of the resolution reported Thursday from the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations for the acquisition of the West India islands owned by Denmark and the session was closed by the practical withdrawal of the resolution by Senator Lodge, its author.

While there was no attempt to force consideration for a resolution regarding the Cuban situation in the House on Monday, there was one brief outbreak in which the warlike temper of the galleries was manifest. It came over a bill to authorize the President to erect temporary fortifications in case of emergency upon land when the written consent of the owners was obtained. The bill was passed. The remainder of the day was spent in the transaction of District of Columbia business. In the Senate prepared speeches upon the Cuban situation were delivered by Messrs. Perkins of California, Clay of Georgia, Mantle of Montana and Rawlins of Utah. The sundry civil appropriation bill was then taken up.

The whole of Tuesday in the House was spent on the private calendar, with the result that several bills were passed, among them one to pay the heirs of John Roach, the shipbuilder, $330,000 on a claim which has been pending a dozen years, and another to pay O. C. Bosbyshell, superintendent of the Philadelphia mint, $17,000 extracted from the gold vaults by a weigh clerk. At 5 o'clock the House recessed till 8 p. m. The evening session was devoted to private pension bills. In the Senate speeches upon the Cuban crisis were delivered by Senator Chandler (N. H.), Mr. Turpie (Ind.), Mr. Harris (Kan.), and Mr. Kenney (Del.), all of whom took strong grounds for vigorous and instant action by the United States.

The House on Wednesday took up the consideration of the army reorganization bill. The request of the President that action on the Cuban question be delayed until after receipt of his message the next Monday was granted. Ten minutes after the Senate convened consideration of the sundry civil bill was resumed, and, with the exception of eight minutes consumed by the executive session, in which Senator Davis announced that no message would be sent in, almost the entire session was consumed by the appropriation committee.

Almost no routine business whatever was transacted by either branch of Congress on Thursday. Congressmen and Senators alike devoted most of their time and attention to Cuban affairs. Efforts were made in both houses to decide upon some plan of action when President McKinley's message should have been sent to Congress on the next Monday. The bill for the reorganization of the army was under consideration in the House. It was opposed by Mr. Sulzer (N. Y.), and Mr. Lenz (Ohio), the latter making a severe onslaught upon the administration on account of its course in Cuban affairs. The administration was defended by Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio.

EASTER FLOWERS.

Bring ye white lilies
With never a stain,
Nurtured by sunshine
And soft-dripping rain;
Bring ye deep pansies,
As sweet as Faith's hope,
Hyacinths, heart's-ease,
And heliotrope.

Bring ye white blossoms
As pure as the flakes
That float in the air
When the winter-storm breaks;
The lilac-tree blooms
And the jonquils unfold,
So bring ye their treasures
Of purple and gold.

Clear fell the sunshine
At morning and noon,
And dripped the warm rain
With a musical croon,
Till out of earth's darkness
And out of the gloom
Came forth the bright buds
In the rapture of bloom.

The almond-tree blossoms,
The world is awake,
So sing ye glad anthems
For sympathy's sake.
And every sweet flower
In thankfulness bring
To bloom on the shrine
Of the new-risen King.

HATTIE WHITNEY.

Easter Wooding's Dream.

An Easter Story.

Who has not heard of Devon County? Devon, bonnie Devon, with its almost Italian skies, its hazy stretches of rolling "tors," its crystal streams, its coast-combes, through which the sea foam rushes white as carded wool, and those deep, winding lanes, almost overarched with honeysuckle and wild-brier, the delicious windings of which seemed designed by Cupid for his devotees alone.

Charles Kingsley tells how Grenvil, cousin of William the Conqueror, drew around him to these sequested spots his trusty Saxon serfs and free Norse rovers and dark Silurian Britons, whose mingled blood still gives to Devonians their brave men and beauteous women.

Certainly John Maddock and Esther Wooding fully sustained their native country's reputation. Sweethearts they had ever been since the days when they went, hand in hand, to the white stone school-house on the hill above Bideford. And now John was first mate on an Indian ship, and he and Esther had met to bid farewell ere he sailed away on his long, perilous voyage.

It was the Easter Eve of 1832. Spring's sweet breath filled all that southern clime; and as the lovers nestled in one last, passionate embrace, Esther felt as she had never felt before—a strange reluctance to let her affianced one go.

"I know you will come back again, John; but do you know I have an oppressive dread of some foreboding evil?"

"Cheer up, my dearie, for I come back I surely shall, and, maybe, with enough of this world's goods to settle our home in Bideford."

He kissed her with a caress which drew the whole soul through their lips and hurried to the distant street to catch the stage to Plymouth.

Across the heathery hills he rode, whence had flamed the beacon light that told of proud Spain's dread Armada's defeat. But John Maddock dreamed that Easter Eve of love and peace, not war; of life yet to come, when he and Esther should walk its flowery pilgrimage together.

His ship, the Serapis, conveyed a British regiment to India. When he reached Plymouth the quaint old streets were filled with a crowd, gathered to see the redcoats pass to the beach.

"A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the bounding deep—"

So ran the refrain of the band, and the men strode lustily along, their steps and voices keeping time and tune.

The vessel sailed away amid women's sobs and men's hurrahs, and that Sunday morning they watched her drift until the highest peak faded against an opalescent sky and she disappeared below the dip of the sea.

The Serapis raced before the wind like a bird past the Gambian Coast and lay in the doldrums in the Gulf of Guinea, while soldiers sweltered and swore and sailors whistled for a breeze. They moved again, and when off Port Nolloth, South Africa, a great Atlantic gale struck her, and for two days they rode at the mercy of the elements. Crash went the foretopmast, then the bowsprit, and afterward a jury mast rigged by John Maddock and the gallant crew, who toiled in vain to save the ship.

The captain stood with John on the poop that night, and heard the distant breakers on the shore.

"No hope for her, Maddock," said he, sadly, with a shake of his grizzly head. "We have done all—"

The remainder John never heard. Just then she struck. He was thrown clear off the poop, overboard. He looked around. There reared the stern almost perpendicularly. She had run into the jaws of a rock-riven chasm, which gripped her like a vice.

The mainmast snapped with a crack; the breakers lashed her sides; and, with a dash, one great wave flooded her waist.

Oh, that cry of despair, how it haunted John's ears! He caught a falling spar and floated clear of timbers and cordage.

The nose of the vessel was high up in the rocks, dotted here and there with black figures. They had nothing to hold to, and one after another fell into the seething caldron beneath into full twenty fathoms of foaming water, which dashed its spray upward until it sprinkled the feathery palms along the bank a hundred feet above.

"None can live in such a sea as this," muttered John to himself, clutching his spar the tighter.

On came another braker as the lion leaps upon its prey. The Serapis parted as if severed by a knife. She dived down, and the next wave rolled over her with a hissing surge of triumph. A great sea-chest floated out; he grasped it in the nick of time and spun out with it from the deadly embrasure which was the grave of the vessel.

How long John Maddock floated that horrible night he could not remember. The tide had set toward the shore again, and he neared a small inlet, where the current ran like a millrace. Dead bodies were strewn along the beach, and huge, lazy cormorants floated in the morning twilight above his head, looking like specter vampires.

He had almost reached the shore when a voice hailed him:

"Is it you, Mr. Maddock?"

"Yes," replied John, feebly, for he was worn out. "Who are you?"

"Three of us, sailors all, sir. We managed to scramble on some rigging. Look out for sharks. They're having a fine time this morning," added the man, with a groan.

They dragged him from the chest, fainting with exposure and fatigue. There stood, or rather knelt, the four solitary survivors of the wreck of the Serapis."

"Men," said John, when he had recovered somewhat; "let us thank God and commit our comrades to His mercy."

And he repeated the words of resurrection faith, mingled with thanks for their deliverance, with a fervor such as only men of their experience can appreciate.

The day had fully dawned. The castaways spent it in burying the dead and building a fire to dry their sodden garments.

"Keep a sharp lookout for a vessel, while I go and hoist a signal," said Maddock.

Hard by the sand stretch where they landed was a small cave in shaly rock. That night they slept there, barring its entrance with timbers. And here we must leave the four companions to go back to Devon once more.

The women left weeping on Plymouth shores were destined to weep again. The Serapis never reported at Calcutta and hope deferred made many loving hearts sick with apprehension. Easter of 1833 came, but with it came no joy, rather the confirmation of the worst fears.

The captain of a homeward-bound vessel had sighted some derelict wreckage of the Serapis. He brought the news to Plymouth, and the day afterward, just as the church bells summoned the worshipers to the joyful adoration of the Eastertide, all Bideford knew that Esther Wooding had lost her stalwart, noble sweetheart. Many an eye was moist and many a heart hot as the thoughts of his kindness were recalled with gratitude and tears.

Meanwhile, poor Esther, sad with unutterable sorrow, wandered down to the bar and watched the smiling sea, so treacherous and calm, as though at any moment it may yield up her dead.

"Oh, John! My own John! Why had I not kept you here! I knew evil would befall you!"

So she moaned, while the man of the wind answered her across the rustling reeds of Bideford Pool.

"Really, darter, beent y'u grivin' tu much?" said her querulous and wayworn old father. "John Maddock is gone, sure enow, but don't maze yoursel' with tr'uble, child."

Truth to tell, the old man had already found John's successor, did he dare but name him.

"I want tu see y'u in some good man's home before I die," he added, peering up into her face.

"Don't talk of dying, father, nor of my having to leave you. I hope both are equally distant events," replied Esther, with her sad eyes looking surprisedly upon him.

The old man shuffled before that clear, melancholy gaze, and turned to some other subject of discussion.

Her womanly instincts had told her that Ralph Colwell loved her. Ralph was rich, and though of middle age, a man of goodly presence and fortune. He had watched Esther's winsome face and trim figure glide past his office and over the bridge with a sigh of reconciled disappointment. To him the prospect of having Esther as his wife was, indeed, a tempting one, for he loved her with the quiet, deep, strength of a mature man, who had not hitherto known the love of woman.

Now John was lost at sea, as all supposed, and Ralph Colwell's aspirations revived. He had been her father's generous friend, but he never presumed upon it; and when the Serapis had lain beneath that terrible rock of the African coast for over a twelvemonth, he timidly and thoughtfully urged his suit upon Esther, only to be met with refusal.

But men of Ralph's temperament are not easily turned aside from their purposes, and he could afford to wait. Her father died in June of 1833, and the house was left unto her desolate, Ralph proved, lover, friend, phisolopher and financial resource all in one. He never intruded his rejected suit. His constant love by thoughtful watching vise won the day without this.

"I have little to give you in return for your devotion, Mr. Colwell," said Esther, gently, "but I am deeply sensible of all your goodness to me and mine."

"I only ask you to let me love you until you can love me in return, Esther. Grant me your hand, and I shall be the happiest of men."

She did so, and the wedding was fixed to take place on March 27, 1831; Easter Sunday followed on the 30th. The idea that John could have survived never occurred to her. That was an impossibility, as she thought, so unmistakably had the record of the vessel's loss been given. And yet Esther Wooding felt her depression in greater degree as her nuptials drew near.

The 24th of March came. She was sleeping alone in her father's and her own home. For none would have interferred with her in those quiet days of honest neighborhood. When she retired to rest a fierce storm tossed the branches of the trees before her window, and the thunder of the surf as it sent the pebbles flying up the beach was distinctly audible.

No wonder hse dreamt of John! She saw the shutter of rock, her lover's form hurled from the poop, and the doomed vessel gorged to pieces on the shore. John's white face was distinctly visible, floating over bounding billows, and she awoke in terror.

The next night her depression was deeper than before. And, stranger still, she dreamt of John again. But this time the storm had ceased, and there was a great calm. She could see the beach where her lover had landed in safety, and he seemed to wave his neckerchief, her parting gift, as though signaling a passing ship. When morning's dewy light stole in through her casement, Esther arose, and felt that most unreasonably and yet effectually had her sorrow left her.

She reproached herself for this lightsome mind, but it was in vain she did so.

"Tomorrow is the wedding day," she murmured, with ashen lips.

The thought disturbed her as it had never done before. And that last night she lay down to sleep and dream again. This third time she stood on Plymouth Quay, and, from the spot where Drake and Hawkins played their game of bowls, she looked, with a crowd, at an incoming ship, which fired her gun and saluted the colors.

"What vessel is that?" asked Esther in her dream, of the harbor-master.

"The Vulture, Indiaman, young lady," he responded, gallantly doffing his glazed hat.

John, her John, the one she deemed dead and buried in the Atlantic off the African coast, stood on the stern and waved his handkerchief.

The dream ended, and Esther once more arose, to find herself humming a tune, the first thrill of her once merry voice for two years.

"But this is my wedding day!" And at the returning thought her face blanched and her music ceased. "Oh, I cannot go to the altar today!" declared she to herself. And through the early hours she stole quietly away, with a borrowed team, to Plymouth.

Why to Plymouth? Esther did not know, or said she did not. An indefinable motive power had led her away from her plighted word. And, surely enough, she was on the quay that afternoon, not in her dream, but in reality.

Now where was John? The reader knows more than Esther did as yet. John and his three companions stayed on the island for many long days and nights, watching for some passing vessel, hunting, fishing and cheering each other with words of hope.

The four survivors had need of patience, for more than one vessel bore down, but they did not see their frantic signalling, or, if they did, heeded it not.

At last the neckerchief which Esther had thrown around John Maddock's neck was floating to the breeze at the top of a lofty palm tree. A vessel bound for Australia caught sight of it shortly afterward and took the four mariners of the Serapis from their solitary state.

Then followed the voyage onward to Calcutta and John's immediate return on board the first packet leaving for England.

With this brief interlude, we can resume our place by Esther's side upon the quay at Plymouth. She dreaded being followed, but none had put in an appearance from Bideford as yet. The western sea was all aflame with the glory of the setting sun when a ship sailed in the cove. It was strangely familiar to her. Now, it was the vessel she had seen in her dream!

She turned around. Was she dreaming again? There stood the harbormaster, glazed hat and all.

"What ship is that?" queried Esther, in a low, strained voice.

"The Vulture, Indiaman, young lady," he replied, and touched his hat.

"Why should he not? He did so last night," thought Esther. "Then John is on that ship," she said.

"John? Who's John?" queried the master.

Esther heeded not. She ran alongside the nearing vessel. A bronzed figure stood on the stern. It was John.

"I knew you would come,' she remarked, very quietly, five minutes later, and then fainted in his arms.

The next afternoon they were married. All Biderford gave them an Easter welcome; for was not this a resurrection of the dead? And Ralph Coldwell winced, but bore his trouble bravely, as he gave the bride away, saying:

"She is yours, John, but now her father is dead, I claim the right to stand in his place to you both."

Today the aged John and Esther Maddock live in the home left them by Ralph, and this Eastertide their grandchildren gather to listen to this, my story, told annually by their adored grandfather.

Lioness Owned the Car.

Among the freight placed in the baggage car of train No. 6 on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad leaving Chicago recently, was a lioness in a wooden cage, shipped by Francis Ferrier and intended for a local show.

After the train had left Cayuga, G. C. Lapham, baggage master, who was checking his way bills, saw the lioness crouching on the top of some baggage. Looking the animal straight in the eye he backed toward the door at the other end of the car, and as he threw open the door and rushed out the lioness jumped, but he escaped.

When the train arrived at Pittsburg an iron cage was wheeled against the side of the car, the door opened and the lioness driven into the cage. In the eighteen hours she was in possession of the car, she tore open nearly every piece of baggage.

Olive Oil for the Hair.

When the hair shows a tendency to fall out the very best thing to stop its coming out and promote growth is the abundant use of genuine olive oil. Saturate the hair thoroughly, and keep it saturated for a week, until the dry scalp has absorbed all it will, then wash with pure soap and water. If this operation is repeated every two or three months, the effect is said to be marvelous.

The front end of the great glacier of Alaska presents a wall five hundred feet thick, and its area varies from three to ten miles, while its length is 150 miles.

SOUTHERN BLOODHOUNDS.

They Are the Descendants of the Fierce Man-Eating Cuban Dog.

The first Cuban bloodhounds landed upon this continent were imported 200 years ago by Spanish planters of Louisiana, then Spanish territory, writes H. S. Canfield in the Chicago Times-Herald. We all know what the dons were about 1700. Negroes were cheaper then, and if a slave gave trouble it did not much matter that the bloodhound's hold upon his throat was broken only by the tearing of the flesh and tendons. Many times in those days the fugitive negro did not live after his capture. If he succeeded in gaining a tree, his olive-skinned masters shot him out as they would a squirrel. If on the ground when caught the dogs killed him, sometimes before the arrival of the horsemen who had ridden hard to be in at the death.

The Cuban hound was a valuable dog and he was well treated. In some of the old court records of Louisiana are bills of sale of him. In instances the price ran as high as $800 a pair. The breed spread all through the South, although I have never heard of the dogs being used as man hunters in the upper tier of Southern States. I doubt that one has ever been laid upon the trail of a negro in Virginia, North Carolina or Maryland.

As a matter of course the planters of this century were careful to protect their slaves as far as possible from attacks by the animals. This was generally easy. The runaway slave invariably made for the swamp at the back of the plantation. It contained many streams and lagoons, which aided him in throwing the dogs off the scent. If the worst came to the worst he could always climb a tree. I have no doubt that the ancient anecdote of the coon which remarked to the man with the gun, "Don't shoot, mister; I'm going to come down," had its origin in some runaway "hand" perched in a cypress and gazing down at his irate master, but preserving always the negro's sense of humor. Indeed, the story is loved and venerated in every "quarters" south of Mason and Dixon's line, and is always good for a laugh. The planter's care in this matter was dictated more by policy than humanity. It did not pay to have a $1,000 negro chewed up by a $50 dog.

The bloodhound is now used only in the pursuit of criminals. Every southern penitentiary has a brace or more of them. They are not infrequently a part of the sheriff's outfit. The breed is not always pure, but the dogs serve their purpose. Their keenness of scent is one of the most remarkable things in nature, though it is of value principally in the more thinly-settled region. It seems incredible that the mere temporary pressure of a man's boot or shoe upon the ground should leave a traceable scent for twenty-four hours, providing that there has been no rain, but there is no doubt that it does. Sometimes in the South a murderer breaks jail. Until the universal introduction of chilled steel cages this was not a difficult matter. Dogs are telegraphed for at a distance probably of 150 miles. They arrive a day after the escape. They are led in leash to the point where the criminal is supposed to have made his exit and uncoupled. They take up the scent instantly and follow it rapidly. The man must have crossed much water or confused his trail with the hurrying footsteps of dozens of others to throw them off. Always supposing that twenty-four hours is the extreme limit of "law" allowed the fugitive, the bloodhounds are the best means of effecting his capture. Having far to travel, they do not bay. They have no breath to waste.

CHANCES OF MARRIAGE.

A Diagram Which Shows the Result of Statistical Research.

This interesting diagram almost explains itself. It shows the chances of marriage of spinsters and widows and whom they are most likely to marry. It is claimed by statisticians that spinsters from 15 to 44 have best chance with bachelors and after that should direct their attention to widowers. The diagram shows the result of statistical research and is authentic. With wid-

A Comparison of Sea and Land.

The triviality of the sea compared with the land is the theme of a recent article by John Holt Schooling. A bucket 743 miles deep and 743 miles from sides to side would hold every drop of the ocean. This bucket could rest quite firmly on the British Isles. To fill the bucket one would need to work 10,000 steam pumps, each sucking up 1,000 tons of sea per second, for 422 years. So if any one wants to be rid of the sea, the way is plain. But to get rid of the earth would be 4,555 times more difficult, requiring 2,000 great guns, each firing 1,000 projectiles a second, each projectile consisting of 100,000 tons of earth. At the end of 1,000 years this mundane sphere would be all shot away.

Drink Man Needs.

An average man requires fifty-nine ounces of food per diem. He needs thirty-seven ounces of water for drinking, and in breathing he absorbs thirty ounces of oxygen. He eats as much water as he drinks, so much of that fluid being contained in various foods. In order to supply fuel for running the body machine and make up for waste tissue he ought to swallow daily the equivalent of twenty ounces of bread, three ounces of potatoes, one ounce of butter and one quart of water. The body is mostly water. The body of a man weighing 154 pounds contains ninety-six pounds, or forty-six quarts, of water.

It Was a Strange Month.

February, 1866, was in one way the most wonderful month in the world's history. It had no full moon. January and March each had two full moons, but February had none. Astronomers say this is the only instance on record.

Meaning of the Word Squirrel.

The word squirrel is from two Greek words which mean shadow tail.

TO THAW THE GROUND.

dering access practicable to such face, is shown in the accompanying illustration, and has been patented by William E. Harris, of Chicago. The cone-shaped firebox of the furnace is formed by a coil of pipe covered by a layer of clay inside the shell, there being a suitable outlet at the top for the escape of the smoke and gases, and through which the upper end of the coil extends, to connect with a blower, by which air is forced through the pipe to be heated by the burning fuel, says the Scientific American. The lower end of the coil is extended through a box or conduit, where it is surrounded by sand or other non-conducting material to the ground to be thawed, where it connects with a sleeve held on a shield set against the ground at the end of the tunnel. The shield consists of a hollow frame, with central hollow door, there being apertures in the walls of the frame and door, allowing the heated air to pass directly in contact with the frozen ground against which the shield is placed. A jack holds the shield in position as the thawing proceeds, the door being opened from time to time to remove the ground, and the shield being moved forward accordingly, the pipe connecting with the coil being lengthened as the work progresses.

Had Several Alibis.

"Sir Francis Lockwood, of England, whose death was announced recently from London, was one of the best story tellers I ever heard," said Attorney Henry Wollman recently. "He was at Saratoga in 1896 with Baron Russell, lord chief justice of England, and won great prominence and popularity during his stay there. He could tell a story better than Chauncey Depew, and that is saying a great deal.

"At a dinner party one evening he was relating anecdotes of some of his early experiences, and told of once defending a man for murder. One of the strong points he made was an alibi, which he thought was a good one. After the case went to the jury, in a conversation with the judge he asked him what he thought of the alibi. The judge said he thought it doubtful if the jury accepted it, and then Sir Francis replied:

"'That's too bad, for I had half a dozen other alibis just as good that I could have used.'

"Every one laughed at the remark, and it found its way into the newspapers the following morning. Baron Russell intimated to Sir Francis that he had made an error, and if the printed story got back to England it might cause harsh comments, as the British idea of jesting might not catch the point."—Kansas City Journal

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Lake Shore Suffers from Four Wrecks in a Single Day—Bloodhounds Attack a Man—Alleged Juvenile Murderer in Jail—Fell on a Saw.

Four Wrecks All in One Day.

Four wrecks occurred in one day on the main line of the Lake Shore Railroad. The most disastrous one was at Waterloo, where the Fort Wayne and Jackson branch joins the main line. A freight train loaded with grain and cattle was being switched, when the rear section ran into the front, throwing several cars off the track. Five tramps, who were stealing a ride, were hurt, probably none fatally. The other wrecks were at Swanton, Corunna and near Elkhart. All of these were freight trains, and, so far as can be learned, none was fatally injured.

Hunted Like a Wild Beast.

Robbers entered the blacksmith shop of James H. Winters at Atwood. They secured about $500 from the safe. The next morning bloodhounds were brought from Fort Wayne and placed on the scent. In about two hours they ran down Charles Cartright in the woods east of Atwood. Before the searching party could catch up the dogs had torn him quite badly. A sum of money was found upon him, and he is under arrest.

Twelve-Year-Old Murderer.

Eddie Wein, aged 12, of Schererville, has been arrested for murder and placed in jail without bond. He shot and instantly killed John Van Milligan with a target rifle, and at the time it was thought it was accidental, but it is now claimed he had a grudge against the boy and shot him purposely. The trial will come up next month.

Mullany Jury Disagrees.

At Laporte, the jury in the case of James Mullaney, charged with manslaughter, informed the court that no agreement could be reached and was discharged. The crime for which Mullaney was tried was the alleged killing of Oscar Christensen, a South Bend policeman, on the night of May 11, 1897.

Fell on a Circular Saw.

Frederick Goddard, aged 16, of near Sandusky, while voluntarily assisting one of the mill hands at a portable sawmill, fell on a circular saw sustaining serious injuries. The saw cut him across the back from shoulder to shoulder, severing the point of each shoulder blade.

Within Our Borders.

A 2-year-old child of Perry Rodgers was burned to death at Upland.

At Milford, burglars robbed Arnold Bros.' safe of $300 and took $200 in gods.

At Shelbyville, Alonzo Barrett was acquitted of attempt to murder Edward Skotski.

The board of pardons paroled Winnie B. Smith, who killed Weston B. Thomas of Anderson.

Howard County has five women assessors this year. The engaging of women in this official work is an innovation.

The Elkhart County and the LaGrange Telephone companies, which will be consolidated, will make a complete line from Toledo and Detroit to Chicago.

Solomon F. Hines of Nashville, who was shot by Charles Henderson, is dead. The trouble arose over a political discussion. Henderson is held on a charge of murder.

Principal O. J. Lamb of the Ingalls schools has been appointed to a position as superintendent in the Government Indian schools at the Pine Root (Dakota) agency.

A special election was held in Vienna and Finley townships on the proposition to build about twenty-six miles of free gravel roads. The contest was quite hot, and the roads carried by a majority of eighteen.

Edward Wilson, while working in the basement of a business building in course of construction at Kokomo, was struck on the head with a keg of nails that fell from the second story. Only a slight scalp wound was inflicted.

The Ringgold Band of Terre Haute will probably take the place of the Warren Band of Evansville, as the regimental band of the First Regiment, Indiana Legion. The Evansville men have withdrawn from the service.

The remains of Commodore Brown, a wealthy farmer of Burrows who died suddenly Jan. 19, were exhumed by direction of Prosecutor Odell of Carroll County. It is suspected that Brown's death was due to poisoning.

About five years ago a natural gas well in Prairie township, failing to produce gas in paying quantities, was abandoned and the pipes pulled. During the last few months gas was noticed issuing from the ground thirty rods from the well in such quantities that it could be ignited. A five-foot hole was sunk, a match applied and there was a four-foot blaze. Farm houses near by are threatened with fire and explosions. Several abandoned wells in what is known as the Kempton field are acting likewise. Several wells that have been dead for four or five years are now producing gas in paying quantities.

The trouble which has resulted in shutting down many gas belt glass plants during the past month and threatened a national sympathetic strike which would close all plants was compromised at Anderson by President Burns, acting for the Workers' National Association, making concessions and lifting the boycott against certain workers. The trouble is a national one, and has reached such a point that although this settlement apparently removes all obstacles there is little hope that the season will be run without a general shut-down. The trouble arises from the fact that two rival unions are endeavoring to dictate working terms.

The trouble among the glass workers at the Enterprise window glass factory at Dunkirk, where there was to have been a walkout of the blowers and gatherers, has been declared off.

It required 264 ballots to make a nomination at the fifth Indiana congressional district convention of the Republicans at Martinsburg. George W. Faris of Vigo County at last drew the prize.

At Sullivan, the jury in the Bates murder trial returned a verdict of not guilty. Ella Bates was charged with murdering her illegitimate child, which was found in a creek one morning in February, 1897.

Harry Wilson died at Michigan City as the result of a blow on the head from a club in the hands of Patrolman Barnerd Dolan. Wilson was arrested on a charge of intoxication and resisted, when the officer attempted to take him prisoner. The policeman used his club.

About 600 employes in the machine mines of Clay County met at Brazil to consider the proposition made by the operators, which was 2½ cents a ton for shooting and loading coal. The miners demanded 38 cents. They decided to suspend work and placed their grievance in the hands of the executive board to settle, with the understanding that the board will hold out for the advanced price.

DISAPPOINTING.

The message sent to congress yesterday was disappointing, to say the least. It was quite long and quoted extensively the opinions and course of action of former presidents, much of which has but little bearing on the present question. At the close, he asks of congress, the power to intervene and stop the war. These are his words:

"I ask the congress to authorize and empower the president to take measures to secure a full and final termination of hostilities between the government of Spain and the people of Cuba and to secure in the island the establishment of a stable government capable of maintaining order and observing its international obligations, ensuring peace and tranquillity and the security of its citizens as well as our own, and to use the military and naval forces of the United States as may be necessary for these purposes."

It will be seen that the language used, is such that should congress give him the right to use the army and navy, he could go to Cuba and tell both Spaniads and Cubans to stop fighting. This looks fair enough on its face although it might not be wise. Suppose the Spaniards should refuse to stop fighting. Then we would have to fight them and compel them to do so. In the meantime, the Cuban rebels keep up their warfare and when we had compelled the Spaniards to stop we would have to turn around and fight the rebels, and as the rebels are the ones most likely to refuse to stop fighting, it looks as if the President's plan, would necessarily result in a war against the Cuban rebels only. Let us hope the President has not got us into an awkward position in which Spanish diplomats may have the advantage of us. Congress may take some action to let us out of trouble. Again we must wait and see.

BLADDER TROUBLES

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such it is not liabla to any form of disease except by one of two ways The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

SAMPLE SENT FREE.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief of cause of bladder troubles. It is comforting to know that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root fulfills every wish in quickly curing bladder and urinary troubles. It corrects frequent call, inability to hold urine and scalding or stinging pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample, bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail on receipt of three 2-cent stamps. Mention Auburn Courier and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

BOTH LEGS CRUSHED.

Ed. Dausman, a brakeman on the B & O, came in on his run this morning a little after three o'clock, and leaving his engine in the yard, went to get a pail of water, and was run over by the yard engine. Both legs were crushed and cut so nearly off that they had to be amputated. He felt he could not live, and had his wife and little child called, kissed them good by and then asked the the docter to give him something to relieve the pain. This was done, and he said "Good by Mollie, I am going to sleep now, and will never wake". It was a sad scene.

EIGHTH GRADE ORGANIZES.

The eighth grade of the Auburn, schools which this year closes its common school course, on Friday of last week and effected the usual organization. Miss Nona McBride was made president and Lee Fischler, secretary. The class colors chosen are purple and white. This is the class that will enter the high school next year.

BUTLER.

The W. C. T. U. held a very interesting and successful meeting here Friday and Saturday. There were many delegates from abroad. The sessions were very instructing, and showed what this noble band of workers have done for the cause of temperance. The attendance from the men of our place was almost zero, not even an editor was there taking notes, and our ministers were very conspicuous by their absence nearly all the time. In short they received but little encouragement from those that should have aided them by holding up their hands and cheered them by their presence.

R. C. Campbell, wife and daughter Sundayed with friends near Angola.

—A Mr. Baughman from near Auburn has bought and opened the Tyson meat market. Success to him.

J. A. Campbell received a hurry call by telegraph last Sunday to go to Hamilton on account of their big fire.

The new M. E. minister Rev. Treh (Troy) has taken up the lines of his work. He had a very good house last Sunday, and we think he will succeed admirably in his work. He has a family of a wife and small boys.

A disastrous fire occurred at Hamilton last Sunday. It started in the back business room owned by Mr. R. Sawvel of Auburn, from causes not clearly disclosed. It was occupied by E. J. Zimmerman as a dwelling and hardware store. Mr. Zimmerman and family were away from home, left on Saturday. The fire started in the second story and had gained much headway when discovered, nothing whatever was saved. It communicated to the G. A. R. hall occupied on first floor by Fred L. Hoch as a drugstore; not a dollars worth of stock saved. On the south was the two story brick building owned by Silas Gray and occupied by John Dargue as a dwelling and general store, Everything in this building was destroyed. The next building in the course of the fire was the large frame building owned by O. P. Learned, and occupied by himself and Thaddeus Thomas as a general store. Mr. Thomas lived up stairs, and had not yet awakened when the rapid flight of the fire had enveloped the building. He had a very close call, he escaped with two or three articles of clothing. His wife an invalid, was hastily carried from the building in her night clothes; all perished here also. The next building was a small frame dwelling, and by heroic efforts was torn down and the further spread of the fire stayed. Stopping at the old store building, that formerly stood where the G. A. R. hall recently stood. This building was built 50 years ago and has outlived nearly every other building in town. This is the first fire of any magnitude that Hamilton nas suffered for about forty years.

L. L. C. DELEGATES.

At the regular meeting of the Ladies' Literary Club last Saturday the following delegates were elected to represent the club at the National and State conventions this year. The club is allowed two delegates to each as the President by virtue of her office is a delegate only one and her alternate to each convention was elected. The election resulted as follows: Mrs. Swinford as deligate, for the National Meeting at Denver to be held the last of June and Miss Stella Hague as alternate. Mrs. Emanuel is delegate to the State-Union which is to be held at Bloomington the 11th, 12th and 13th of May, Mrs. Mollie Rose as alternate, with Mrs. Abby Sprott as alternate for the president.

CHICKEN PASSENGER.

Railroad men have queer experiences. This morning as the south bound Jackson train came whirling into the Auburn station, on approaching the grain elevator they scared up the usual lot of chickens that pick up grain along there. In there hasty flight a big rooster happened to get in the way of the engine and was thrown down on the level part in front of the head and above the cowcatcher. He was evidently a little surprised to find how easy it was to steal a ride and at once sat down, straightened his ruffled fethers, and calmly awaited a safe chance to get off. The crowd waiting at the station saw the whole affair and cheered him as he came down the track and passed them. He blinked knowingly, but did not attempt to get off till the train had fully stopped and conductor Fitch attracted by the attention given his strange passenger, started forward. The chicken appearing afraid he would have to pay for his ride quietly got up and went over west where he was soon strutting about among his feathered friends, evidently the hero of the hour. Conductor and engineer expressed their disappointment at not keeping the chicken so as to entertain the preacher next Sunday. They declare that the "new hen" is getting altogether to smart.

THE NEW ORGAN

The trustees of the Presbyterian church have closed the contract with Lyon & Healey of Chicago for a large pipe organ to be built by July 15. This will be one of the most complete and modern organs in this part of the state. Its cost will be about $1850. The church people contemplate adding a gallery to the east end of the church for the use of choir. The organ will be built there also.

An opening recital will be given by Dr. Louis Faulk or Clarence Eddy of Chicago. These gentlemen as well as organists in Fort Wayne assisted in the selection of stops, etc. for the organ. The session of the church will select a person to take instruction at once and play the organ when services begin.

OFF TO THE KLONDIKE.

Special to the Daily Courier.

Angola, Ind., April 12, 1898.-There was a demonstration in Angola this morning that stirred the town from center to circumference, occasioned by the departure of four brave men for the Klondike country. They were: Gary N. Wickwire, dentist; Edward Freygang, harness maker; Arthur Welch, of the Angola Woolen Mills and Charles Tasker, a farmer. As a token of best wishes for their future welfare, and as a tribute of respect for their valuable service as members the Angola City Cornet Ban,d and the city fire department turned out and escorted them to to the morning southbound train, where the good-byes and farwell words with wives and friends were witnessed by about 400 of our citizens. It was an impressive scene.

OBITUARY.

Died at his home in Butler Indiana, April 5, 1898, after an illness of many days, in the eighty-second year of his age, Phillip B. Nimmons.

Mr. Nimmons was born in Broome county New York, March 24, 1817. He was a son of Samuel E. Nimmons, who came to that county from New Jersey. In 1832, he came west with his father's family and settled in Richland county Ohio. On Nov. 14, 1840, he was united in marriage with Mary A. Brink, of Richland county, Ohio, To them were born five children, Louisa, Sarah, Mary, Emlin and Allie. His wife died March 30, 1860, on the farm where his son Emlin now lives.

In 1844, Mr. Nimmons came to De Kalb county settling in Wilmington township, on land entered by his brother James, in 1837, where he has resided until he recently came to Butler.

A few acres of land was cleared but there was no house. He erected a small sound log house and started to make a home in the wilderness. When he left Ohio, he had a wife and two small children, forty sheep, a cow and calf and $37 in money. He paid out his last dollar for fruit trees, traded his sheep for provisions and this made a start. In the mean time he had purchased the land, but was taken sick and was obliged to sell 40 acres of his land to get land cleared. He afterward bought it back.

In May 18, '61, Mr. Nimmons married to Mrs. Mary A. Nimmons, widow of his oldest brother, who was yet a young woman. To them were born one child Frank. All of Mr. Nimmons' children together with his wife survive him. Mr. Nimmons was a thoroughgoing farmer and easily gained on his slower going neighbors, an industrious and hard working man, who always used his head as well as his hands. Quiet and unassuming, yet possessing great mental and physical force, he never sought office or other preferment, yet held the office of justice of the peace and township trustee,

He was a member of the Presbyterian church, and not only professed religion, but lived it in all his intercourse with men. His funeral took place from the M. E. church at Butler March 7, Rev. Disbro officiating. This was by special arrangement before he died. The funeral was very largely attended by old neighbors and friends. In honor of his memory all the business houses of town were closed. We learn that there are only four persons living in the county that moved into it prior to his coming. J. A. C.

OBITUARY

John William Muhn, of Kendallville Ind., was born in 1816 at Caden, Germany, In 1838 he was united in holy matrimony with Anna B. Kircher, to which union six children, three sons and three daughters were born In 1848 he emigranted to America and made his home for about ten years at SenecaCounty, Ohio. After this he bought a farm about twelve miles south of Auburn and lived there until his wife died. Since that time he made his home with his children of Auburn and Kendallville, Ind. At the former place he was a faithful member of the reformed church. He died at the residence of Mr. Joseph and Lydia Herburger, at Kendallville, Thursday evening. April 7th 1898. He was buried in the cemetary of the Reformed church at Cedar Creek about 12 miles south of Auburn, Ind., at which church he was a member while making his home there. He was 81 years, nine months and 14 days old. Geo. Engelmann, pastor of the Reformed church at Auburn Ind., officiated at the funeral which was Saturday April 9th.

INDIANA'S HEALTH.

Diseases Prevalent in Indiana During March.

Reports to the State Board of Health concerning disease prevalent in the State during March, show some improvement over February. Consumption continued its ravages, but other diseases of the lungs and air passages diminish in area of prevalent. Influenze decreased 22 per cent. and pneumonia, tonsilitis and bronchitis decreased 38 per cent. Typhoid fever and diarrhœa held there own and testify to the free use of polluted drinking water. Diptheria and scarlet fever decreased 20 per cent. but meningitis shows the usual increase which attends the latter end of the school year. Puerperal fever doubled its area of prevalence. This emphasizes the necessity of greater cleanliness with better antiseptics. Hog cholera was reported from four counties, Howard, Orange, Monroe and Putnam.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

At the request of many friends in Concord township, the name of David W. Wasson is announced as a candidate for sheriff subject to the decis on of the Democratic County Convention.

ATHLETIC CARNIVAL.

The Athletic Carnival held here last evening was a decided success. Master Burt Bordner the contortionist gave a exhibition with the ring. The bout between Ray VanAuken and Cal Refner wa a draw. Andy Yates and Kid Cramer sparred for points. Cramer was declared out in two minutes. The fourth round contest between Buck Ewing and Happy Jack Sauders was exciting, but the referee did not render a decision. The wrestling match in which Henry West was to throw Herbert Hale twice in one hour was the principal event. Hale was down in eight minutes. Hale is considered the Champion of Indiana. Hale's frienps are trying to arrange another contest with West. This would decide the state championship.

THE L. L. C. ANNUAL.

The Sixteenth Annual Meeting of this justly, popular club was held last evening at the Swineford House, and it is no flattery to say it was one of the most successful and enjoyable of the many enjoyable annuals these ladies have have held. They began to assemble at about eight o'clock at Mrs. Swinford's rooms in the south wing of the hotel where the members and their guests were received by Mrs. Swineford Mrs. M. B. Willis, Mrs. E. Zimmerman and Mrs. H. B. McCord who were the reception committee. When all had assembled Mrs. Geo. Schaab and Mrs. A. J. Ralston passed to each gentleman, an assortment of ancient photos ambrotypes and daguerreotypes, allowing each to take one at random. By comparing this with the faces of ladies present, he was to select the right one and take her to supper. This was no easy task as many of the pictures showed the owners as little girls and the ancient way of making them also helped to make the conundrum more puzzling. An hour of intense interest and merriment was the result and when all were happily mated-some only by the aid of a "key" containing the number of each picture and the name—then all were invited to march to the dining room where after being arranged grace was said by Rev. T. M. Guild. Here was spread the finest banquet we recall in Auburn, six courses in all, all dainty and delicious. And it was served so skillfully by the neatly attired waiters, that nothing was left to be desired. At its close the president, Mrs. Barns, who was ex-officio toastmistress, after a short address of welcome, called attention to the literary part of the program. The first toast was "The Root of all Evil" reponse by Mrs. T. C. Ford; the second "Our Husbands," by Mrs. James H. Rose; the third, "The Ladies' Literary Club," by Hon. E. D. Hartman. All these responses were able, thoughtful, witty, well delivered and called out hearty applause. Mr. Guild was also called up and made a brief and witty impromptu speech. And all came away with the exsression that no more enjoyable evening could be had, and were generous in compliments to the L. L. C. and the Swinford House. The only drawback was that sickness in the families of some of the members had kept some of them at their homes. Mrs. Swineford's rooms were decorated with green vines and yellow daffodils, these being the club colors. while the banquet tables were decorated with carnations.

SIXTEEN YEARS

His Wife Had Been a Chronic Invalid—Cured at Last.

Mr. J. T. Scott, Cherokee, Texas, in writing to Dr. Hartman, stated: "I had kidney disease for about fifteen years and had got so bad that I could hardly get about and could not perform any kind of labor. I had tried quite a number of doctors and had taken nearly a wagon-load of patent and proprietary medicines, but continued to gradually grow worse. Also, my wife had been an invalid for about sixteen years, add you doubtless remember when I wrote you about her, there was hardly ever a day that she could sit up all day. We tried a great many remedies, but neither of us was ever benefited only temporarily, till we began taking your Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin, as instructed in your letters to us. It has made a healthy man of me; I never felt better in my life, my wife is almost like a different person, she is so much better. The Pe-ru-na is the most wonderful medicine I ever saw; for lagrippe it is a sure cure. I know this and have had my neighbor to try it."

Hundreds of similar testimonials may be found in little book entitled "Facts and Faces;" which will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

NABBED AGAIN

Angola, Ind, April 12, 1898.

Special to the Courier

About three and one-half years ago, Charles Wright, a shoemaker at Hamilton, this county, commenced his checkered career by alienating the affections of the wife of Riley Hager, a butcher of the same place. The episode resulted in a divorce between Hager and his wife. Wright was then charged with breaking into a box car standing on the Wabash railroad at Hamilton, and robbing it of a case of boots. He fled the country, went to Ohio and stole a quantity of wool, for which he was sent to the Columbus, Ohio, penitentiary for a term of three years. Yesterday morning at 7:30, he stepped out of the prison, supposing he was a free man, but stepped right into the hands of Deputy Sheriff Harry Snyder, of this county, who placed the handcuffs upon him, and in just eleven hours he had his man in the Angola jail, where he will have to answer to the charge of the theft of a case of boots, and also breaking into railway cars. Wright's chances to serve another term in prison are equally as good as they were to destroy the happiness of a Hamilton home.

Dr. B. A. Stockdale

will on his coming visit to Auburn, Thursday, April 21st, at Swineford House, give FREE treatment to the afflicted.

The Patient only required to pay cost of medicine used.

Consultation and Examination Free.

Dr. Stockdale is a graduate of the best medical colleges in the United States He has had years of training in the great hospitals, and as he has demonstrated, his work has surpassed the expectations of everybody. He treats all

Chronic Diseases

Eyes, Ears, Nose, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Liver, Bowels and Kidneys. All diseases of women treated by new methods. Quick, positive cures.

Working for a Principle, Not a Fee.

No pains will be spared to make this demonstration complete in every individual case. Every patient who receives the treatment will receive, if possible, more earnest, careful and expensive care and treatment than if he were paying the usual fee. It is the success of the principle that this doctor has been trying to impress that he can, and does cure chronic diseases. He will take genuine pride in taking the care and treatment in every case under this free offer, if it could be possible, even better than the regular fee. No matter, from what form of chronic disease you suffer, consult him.

A Genuine Offer Bear in mind this is a genuine offer, inspired by right, with the hope that the many who need special treatment will avail themselves of this great offering and rid themselves of the diseases that have troubled them for years.

Men Young and middle aged men suffering from weakness, impaired memory, dizziness, loss of power, unpleasant dreams, blood poisoning, losses, etc., should not let this opportunity pass, as a trial treatment will satisfy the most skeptical of his wonderful curative powers in these cases. Not one failure in over 400 cases treated last year.

All treatment free.

No charge for professional service.

The patient required to pay nothing except cost of medicine used.

This applies to all who call, no matter what the nature of the malady.

To Help All Any chronic sufferer what ever the nature of the disease, may call upon this doctor, and get the best aid known to enlighten medicine at the actual cost of the medicines. It is the purpose of his visit to bring to the treatment and cure of chronic diseases generally the great advantage he possesses in successfully handling these stubborn disorders, so prolific of human misery, and so destructive of human life.

Remember the Day and Date,

Swineford House, April 21st.

Hours: 8 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Returning Every Four Weeks.

MESSAGE BY M'KINLEY.

Executive Asks Discretionary Power to Intervene.

DOES NOT CALL CUBA FREE.

He Opposes Recognition of the Present Government.

EXHAUSTIVE REVIEW OF FACTS

Whole Perplexing Situation Is Laid Before Congress.

President Asks Authority to Take Measures for the Termination of Hostilities in Cuba—Would Use Army and Navy If Necessary—Only Hope of Relief from a Condition Which Can No Longer Be Endured Is Enforced Pacification of the Island—Maine Disaster Showed that Spain Cannot Protect Neutrals in Her Own Ports.

President McKinley on Monday sent his Cuban message to Congress. He favors intervention to terminate hostilities in the island and asks discretionary authority, but opposes recognition of present Cuban government. The full text of the message follows:

Obedient to that precept of the constitution which commands the President to give from time to time the Congress information of the state of the Union and to recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient, it becomes my duty now to address your body with regard to the grave crisis that has arisen in the relations of the United States to Spain by reason of the warfare that for more than three years has raged in the neighboring island of Cuba. I do so because of the intimate connection of the Cuban question with the state of our own Union and the grave relation the course which it is now incumbent upon the nation to adopt must needs bear to the traditional policy of our Government if it is to accord with the precepts laid down by the founders of the republic and religiously observed by succeeding administrations to the present day.

The present revolution is but the successor of other similar insurrections which have occurred in Cuba against the dominion of Spain, extending over a period of nearly half a century, each of which, during its progress, has subjected the United States to great effort and expense in enforcing its neutrality laws, caused enormous losses to American trade and commerce, caused irritation, annoyance and disturbance among our citizens and by the exercise of cruel, barbarous and uncivilized practices of warfare, shocked the sensibilities and offended the humane sympathies of our people.

Ravaged by Fire and Sword.

Since the present revolution began in February, 1895, this country has seen the fertile domain at our threshold ravaged by fire and sword in the course of a struggle unequaled in the history of the island and rarely paralleled as to the number of the combatants and the bitterness of the contest by any revolution of modern times where a dependent people, striving to be free, have been opposed by the power of the sovereign state. Our people have beheld a once prosperous community reduced to comparative want, its commerce virtually paralyzed, its exceptional productiveness diminished, its fields laid waste, its mills in ruins and its people perishing by tens of thousands from hunger and destitution. We have found ourselves constrained, in the observance of that strict neutrality which our laws enjoin and which the law of nations commands, to police our own waters and watch our own seaports in prevention of any unlawful act in aid of the Cubans. Our trade has suffered, the capital invested by our citizens in Cuba has been largely lost and the temper and forbearance of our people have been so sorely tried as to beget a perilous unrest among our own citizens, which has inevitably found its expression from time to time in the national legislature, so that issues wholly external to our own body politic engross attention and stand in the way of that close devotion to domestic advancement that becomes a self-contented commonwealth whose primal maxim has been the avoidance of all foreign entanglements. All this must needs awaken, and has, indeed, aroused the utmost concern on the part of this Government as well during my predecessor's term as my own.

Evils of Reconcentration.

In April, 1896, the evils from which our country suffered through the Cuban war became so onerous that my predecessor made an effort to bring about a peace through the mediation of this Government in any way that might tend to an honorable adjustment of the contest between Spain and her revolted colony on the basis of some effective scheme of self-government for Cuba under the flag and sovereignty of Spain. It failed through the refusal of the Spanish Government then in power to consider any form of mediation, or, indeed, any plan of settlement which did not begin with the actual submission of the insurgents to the mother country, and then only on such terms as Spain herself might see fit to grant.

The war continued unabated. The resistance of the insurgents was in no wise diminished. The efforts of Spain were increased, both by the dispatch of fresh levies to Cuba and by the addition to the horrors of the strife of a new and inhuman phase, happily unprecedented in the modern history of civilized Christian peoples. The policy of devastation and concentration inaugurated by the captain general's bando of Oct. 21, 1896, in the province of Pinar del Rio, was thence extended to embrace all of the island which the power of the Spanish arms was able to reach by occupation or by military operations. The peasantry, including all dwelling in the open agricultural interior, were driven into the garrison towns or isolated places held by the troops. The raising and movement of provisions of all kinds were interdicted. The fields were laid waste, dwellings unroofed and fired, mills destroyed, and, in short, everything that could desolate the land and render it unfit for human habitation or support was commanded by one or the other of the contending parties and executed by all the powers at their disposal.

Herded in the Towns.

By the time the present administration took office a year ago reconcentration—so called—had been made effective over the better part of the four central and western provinces—Santa Clara, Matanzas, Havana and Pinar del Rio. The agricultural population, to the estimated number of 300,000 or more, was herded within the towns and their immediate vicinage, deprived of the means of support, rendered destitute of shelter, left poorly clad and exposed to the most unsanitary conditions.

As the scarcity of food increased with the devastation of the depopulated areas of production, destitution and want became misery and starvation. Month by month the death rate increased in an alarming ratio. By March, 1897, according to conservative estimates from official Spanish sources, the mortality among the reconcentrados from starvation and the disease thereto incident exceeded 50 per centum of their total number. No practical relief was accorded to the destitute. The overburdened towns, already suffering from the general dearth, could give no aid. So-called zones of cultivation, established within the immediate area of effective military control about the cities and fortified camps, proved illusory as a remedy for the suffering. The unfortunates, being for the most part women and children, with aged and helpless men, enfeebled by disease and hunger, could not have tilled the soil without tools, seed or shelter for their own support or for the supply of the cities. Reconcentration, adopted avowedly as a war measure in order to cut off the resources of the insurgents, worked its predestined result. As I said in my message of last December, it was not civilized warfare; it was extermination. The only peace it could beget was that of the wilderness and the grave.

Meanwhile the military situation in the island had undergone a noticeable change. The extraordinary activity that characterized the second year of the war, when the insurgents invaded even the hitherto unharmed fields of Pinar del Rio, and carried havoc and destitution up to the walls of the city of Havana itself, had relapsed into a dogged struggle in the central and eastern provinces. The Spanish arms regained a measure of control in Pinar del Rio and parts of Havana, but under the existing conditions of the rural country, without immediate improvement of their productive situation. Even thus partially restricted the revolutionists held their own, and their submission, put forward by Spain as the essential and sole basis of peace, seemed as far distant as at the outset.

Promise of Autonomy.

In this state of affairs my administration found itself confronted with the grave problem of its duty. My message of last December reviewed the situation and detailed the steps taken with a view of relieving its acuteness and opening the way to some form of honorable settlement. The assassination of the prime minister, Canovas, led to a change of government in Spain. The former administration, pledged to subjugation without concession, gave place to that of a more liberal party, committed long in advance to a policy of reform involving the wider principle of home rule for Cuba and Puerto Rico. The overtures of this government, made through its new envoy, General Woodford, and looking to an immediate and effective amelioration of the condition of the island, although not accepted to the extent of admitted mediation in any shape, were met by assurances that home rule, in an advanced phase, would be forthwith offered to Cuba, without waiting for the war to end, and that more humane methods should thenceforth prevail in the conduct of hostilities. Incidentally with these declarations the new government of Spain continued and completed the policy already begun by its predecessor of testifying friendly regard for this nation by releasing American citizens held under one charge or another connected with the insurrection, so that by the end of November not a single person entitled in any way to our national protection remained in a Spanish prison.

While these negotiations were in progress the increasing destitution of the unfortunate reconcentrados and the alarming mortality among them claimed earnest attention. The success which had attended the limited measure of relief among them by the judicious expenditure through the consular agencies of the money appropriated expressly for their succor by the joint resolution approved May 24, 1897, prompted the humane extension of a similar scheme of aid to the great body of sufferers. A suggestion to this end was acquiesced in by the Spanish authorities.

On the 24th of December last I caused to be issued an appeal to the American people, inviting contributions in money or in kind for the succor of the starving sufferers in Cuba, following this on the 8th of January by a similar public announcement of the formation of a central Cuban relief committee, with headquarters in New York City, composed of three members representing the American National Red Cross and the religious and business elements of the community. The efforts of that committee have been untiring and accomplished much. Arrangements for free transportation to Cuba have greatly aided the charitable work. The president of the American Red Cross and representatives of other contributory organizations have generously visited Cuba and co-operated with the Consul General and the local authorities to make effective distribution of the relief collected through the efforts of the central committee. Nearly $200,000 in money and supplies has already reached the sufferers, and more is forthcoming. The supplies are admitted duty free, and transportation to the interior has been arranged, so that the relief, at first necessarily confined to Havana and the larger cities, is now extended through most, if not all, of the towns where suffering exists. Thousands of lives have already been saved.

Reconcentrado Order Revoked.

The necessity for a change in the condition of the reconcentrados is recognized by the Spanish government. Within a few days past the orders of General Weyler have been revoked, the reconcentrados are, it is said, to be permitted to return to their homes and aided to resume the self-supporting pursuits of peace; public works have been ordered to give them employment, and a sum of $600,000 has been appropriated for their relief.

The war in Cuba is of such a nature that, short of subjugation or extermination, a final military victory for either side seems impracticable. The alternative lies in the physical exhaustion of the one or the other party, or perhaps of both—a condition which in effect ended the ten years' war by the truce of Zanjon. The prospect of such a protraction and conclusion of the present strife is a contingent hardly to be contemplated with equanimity by the civilized world, and least of all by the United States, affected and injured as we are deeply and intimately by its very existence.

Realizing this, it appeared to be my duty, in a spirit of true friendliness, no less to Spain than to the Cubans, who have so much to lose by the prolongation of the struggle, to seek to bring about an immediate termination of the war. To this end, I submitted, on the 27th ultimo, as a result of much representation and correspondence, through the United States minister at Madrid, propositions to the Spanish government looking to an armistice until Oct. 1 for the negotiation of peace with the good offices of the President.

In addition I asked the immediate revocation of the order of reconcentration, so as to permit the people to return to their farms and the needy to be relieved with provisions and supplies from the United States, co-operating with the Spanish authorities so as to afford full relief.

The reply of the Spanish cabinet was received on the night of the 31st ultimo. It offers, as the means to bring about peace in Cuba, to confide the preparation thereof to the insular department, inasmuch as the concurrence of that body would be necessary to reach a final result, it being, however, understood, that the powers reserved by the constitution to the central government are not lessened or diminished. As the Cuban parliament does not meet until the 4th of May next, the Spanish government would not object, for its part, to accept at once a suspension of hostilities, if asked for by the insurgents from the general in chief, to whom it would pertain, in such case, to determine the duration and conditions of the armistice.

The propositions submitted by General Woodford and the reply of the Spanish government were both in the form of brief memoranda, the texts of which are before me, and are substantially in the language above given. The function of the Cuban parliament in the matter of "preparing" peace and the manner of its doing so are not expressed in the Spanish memorandum; but from General Woodford's explanatory reports of preliminary discussions preceding the final conference it is understood that the Spanish government stands ready to give the insular congress full powers to settle the terms of peace with the insurgents, whether by direct negotiation or indirectly by means of legislation does not appear.

With this last overture in the direction of immediate peace and its disappointing reception by Spain the executive was brought to the end of his effort.

Three Measures Left.

In my annual message of December last I said:

"Of the untried measures three remain: Recognition of the insurgents as belligerents; recognition of the independence of Cuba; neutral intervention to end the war by imposing a rational compromise between the contestants and intervention in favor of one or the other party. I speak not of forcible annexation, for that cannot be thought of. That, by our code of morality, would be criminal aggression."

Thereupon I reviewed these alternatives, in the light of President Grant's measured words, uttered in 1875, when, after seven years of sanguinary, destructive and cruel barbarities in Cuba, he reached the conclusion that the recognition of the independence of Cuba was impracticable and indefensible; and that the recognition of belligerence was not warranted by the facts, according to the tests of public law. I commented especially upon the latter aspect of the question, pointing out the inconveniences and positive dangers of a recognition of belligerency which, while adding to the already onerous burdens of neutrality within our own jurisdiction, could not in any way extend our influence or effective offices in the territory of hostilities.

Nothing has since occurred to change my view in this regard—and I recognize as fully now as then that the issue of a proclamation of neutrality, by which process the so-called recognition of belligerence is published could, of itself and unattended by other action, accomplish nothing toward the one end for which we labor, the instant pacification of Cuba and the cessation of the misery that afflicts the island.

Jackson on Recognition.

Turning to the question of recognizing at this time the independence of the present insurgent government in Cuba, we find safe precedents in our history from an early day. They are well summed up in President Jackson's message to Congress Dec. 31, 1836, on the subject of the recognition of the independence of Texas. He said: "In all the contests that have arisen out of the revolutions of France, out of the disputes relating to the crowns of Portugal and Spain, out of the separation of the American possessions of both from the European governments and out of the numerous and constantly occurring struggles for dominion in Spanish America, so wisely consistent with our just principles has been the action of our government that we have, under the most critical circumstances, avoided all censure and encountered no other evil than that produced by a transient estrangement of good will in those against whom we have been by force of evidence compelled to decide.

"It has thus made known to the world that the uniform policy and practice of the United States is to avoid all interference in disputes which merely relate to the internal government of other nations, and eventually to recognize the authority of the prevailing party without reference to our particular interests and views as to the merits of the original controversy.

"But on this, as on every other trying occasion, safety is to be found in a rigid adherence to principle.

"In the contest between Spain and the revolted colonies we stood aloof and waited, not only until the ability of the new States to protect themselves was fully established, but until the danger of their being again subjugated had entirely passed away. Then, and not until then, were they recognized. Such was our course in regard to Mexico herself.

Case of Texas.

"It is true that with regard to Texas the civil authority of Mexico has been expelled, its invading army defeated, the chief of the republic himself captured and all present power to control the newly-organized government annihilated within its confines. But, on the other hand, there is, in appearance at least, an immense disparity of physical force on the side of Texas. The Mexican republic, under another executive, is rallying its forces under a new leader and menacing a fresh invasion to recover its lost dominion.

"Upon the issue of this threatened invasion the independence of Texas may be considered as suspended; and were there nothing peculiar in the situation of the United States and Texas, our acknowledgment of its independence at such a crisis could scarcely be regarded as consistent with that prudent reserve with which we have hitherto held ourselves bound to treat all similar questions."

Thereupon Andrew Jackson proceeded to consider the risk that there might be imputed to the United States motives of selfish interest in view of the former claim on our part to the territory of Texas and of the avowed purpose of the Texans in seeking recognition of independence as an incident to the incorporation of Texas in the Union, concluding thus:

"Prudence, therefore, seems to dictate that we should still stand aloof and maintain our present attitude, if not until Mexico itself, or one of the great foreign powers, shall recognize the independence of the new government, at least until the lapse of time or the course of events shall have proved beyond cavil or dispute the ability of the people of that country to maintain their separate sovereignty and to uphold the government constituted by them. Neither of the contending parties can justly complain of this course. By pursuing it we are but carrying out the long-established policy of our government, a policy which has secured to us respect and influence abroad and inspired confidence at home."

Test of Independence.

These are the words of the resolute and patriotic Jackson. They are evidence that the United States, in addition to the test imposed by public law as the condition of the recognition of independence by a neutral state (to wit, that the revolted states shall "constitute in fact a body politic, having a government in substance as well as in name, possessed of the elements of stability," and forming de facto, "if left to itself, a state among the nations, reasonably capable of discharging the duties of state") has imposed for its own grievance in dealing with cases like these the further condition that recognition of independent statehood is not due to a revolted dependency until the danger of its being again subjugated by the parent state has entirely passed away. This extreme test was in fact applied in the case of Texas. The Congress to whom President Jackson referred the question as one "probably leading to war," and therefore a proper subject for a "previous understanding with that body by whom war can alone be declared, and by whom all the provisions for sustaining its perils must be furnished," left the matter of the recognition of Texas to the discretion of the executive, providing merely for the sending of a diplomatic agent when the President should be satisfied that the republic of Texas had become "an independent state."

It was so recognized by President Van Buren, who commissioned a charge d'affaires March 7, 1837, after Mexico had abandoned an attempt to reconquer the Texan territory, and when there was at the time no bona fide contest going on between the insurgent province and its former sovereign.

Recognition Not Necessary.

I said in my message of December last:

"It is to be seriously considered whether the Cuban insurrection possesses beyond dispute the attributes of statehood which alone can demand the recognition of belligerency in its favor." The same requirement must certainly be no less seriously considered when the graver issue of recognizing independence is in question, for no less positive test can be applied to the greater act than to the lesser, while on the other hand, the influence and consequences of the struggle upon the internal policy of the recognizing state, which form important factors when the recognition of belligerency is concerned, are secondary, if not rightly eliminable factors when the real question is whether the community claiming recognition is or is not independent beyond peradventure.

Nor from the standpoint of expediency do I think it would be wise or prudent for this government to recognize at the present time the independence of the so-called Cuban republic. Such recognition is not necessary in [illegible] To commit this country now to the question of any particular government in Cuba might subject us to embarrassing conditions of international obligation toward the organization so recognized. In case of intervention our conduct would be subject to the approval or disapproval of such governments; we would be required to submit to its direction and to assume to it the mere relation of a friendly ally. When it shall appear hereafter that there is within the island a government capable of performing the duties and discharging the functions of a separate nation, and having as a matter of fact the proper forms and attributes of nationality, such government can be promptly and readily recognized and the relations and interests of the United States with such nations adjusted.

There remain the alternative forms of intervention to end the war, either as an impartial neutral, by imposing a rational compromise between the contestants or as the active ally of the one party or the other. As to the first, it is not to be forgotten that during the last few months the relations of the United States have virtually been one of friendly intervention in many ways, each not of itself conclusive, but all tending to the exertion of a potential influence toward an ultimate pacific result, just and honorable to all interests concerned. The spirit of all our acts hitherto has been an earnest, unselfish desire for peace and prosperity in Cuba, untarnished by differences between us and Spain and unstained by the blood of American citizens.

Grounds for Intervention.

The forcible intervention of the United States as a neutral to stop the war, according to the large dictates of humanity and following many historical precedents where neighboring states have interfered to check the hopeless sacrifice of life by internecine conflicts beyond their borders, is justifiable on rational grounds. It involves, however, hostile constraint upon both the parties to the contest, as well to enforce a truce as to guide the eventful settlement.

The grounds for such intervention may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. In the cause of humanity and to put an end to the barbarities, bloodshed, starvation and horrible miseries now existing there, and which the parties to the conflict are either unable or unwilling to stop or mitigate. It is no answer to say this is all in another country, belonging to another nation, and is, therefore, none of our business. It is specially our duty, for it is right at our door.

2. We owe it to our citizens in Cuba to afford them that protection and indemnity for life and property which no government there can or will afford, and to that end to terminate the conditions that deprive them of legal protection.

3. The right to intervene may be justified by the very serious injury to the commerce, trade and business of our people and by the wanton destruction of property and devastation of the island.

Fourth.—And which is of the utmost importance. The present condition of affairs in Cuba is a constant menace to our peace, and entails upon this government an enormous expense. With such a conflict, waged for years in an island so near us, and with which our people have such trade and business relations—when the lives and liberty of our citizens are in constant danger, and their property destroyed and themselves ruined—where our trading vessels are liable to seizure and are seized at our very door, by war ships of a foreign nation, the expeditions of filibustering that we are powerless to prevent altogether, and the irritating questions and entanglements thus arising—all those, and others that I need not mention, with the resulting strained relations, are a constant menace to our peace and compel us to keep on a semi-war footing with a nation with which we are at peace.

Destruction of the Maine.

These elements of danger and disorder already pointed out have been strikingly illustrated by a tragic event which has deeply and justly moved the American people. I have already transmitted to Congress the report of the naval court of inquiry on the destruction of the battle ship Maine in the harbor of Havana during the night of the 15th of February. The destruction of that noble vessel has filled the national heart with inexpressible horror. Two hundred and fifty-eight brave sailors and marines and two officers of our navy, reposing in the fancied security of a friendly harbor, have been hurled to death—grief and want brought to their homes and sorrow to the nation.

The naval court of inquiry which, it is needless to say, commands the unqualified confidence of the government, was unanimous in its conclusion that the destruction of the Maine was caused by an exterior explosion, that of a submarine mine. It did not assume to place the responsibility. That remains to be fixed.

In any event the destruction of the Maine, by whatever exterior cause, is a patent and impressive proof of a state of things in Cuba that is intolerable. That condition is thus shown to be such that the Spanish government cannot assure safety and security to a vessel of the American navy in the harbor of Havana on a mission of peace and rightfully there.

Further referring in this connection to recent diplomatic correspondence, a dispatch from our minister to Spain of the 26th ultimo contained the statement that the Spanish minister for foreign affairs assured him positively that Spain will do all that the highest honor and justice require in the matter of the Maine. The reply above referred to of the 31st ultimo also contained an expression of the readiness of Spain to submit to an arbitration of all the differences which can arise in this matter, which is subsequently explained by the note of the Spanish minister at Washington of the 10th inst., as follows:

"As to the question of fact which springs from the diversity of views between the report of the American and Spanish boards, Spain proposes that the fact be ascertained by an impartial investigation by experts, which decision Spain accepts in advance." To this I have made no reply.

COAL OUTPUT FOR THE YEAR.

Statistics for 1897 Show Increased Tonnage and Value.

From a preliminary statement compiled by E. W. Parker, statistician of the United States geological survey, it is shown that the total output of coal in the United States in 1897 amounted approximately to 198,250,000 short tons, with an aggregate value of $198,100,000, a fraction less than $1 per ton.

Compared with 1896 this shows an increase in tonnage of 6,270,000 tons or about 3.3 per cent. The increase in the value of the product was only $1,700,000, a little less than .9 per cent. In twenty out of the twenty-nine States producing bituminous coal, the average price per ton in 1897 was less than it was in 1896, the general average for the United States being 83 cents in 1896 and 81.6 in 1897.

The decline of 1.4 cents on a total product in 1897 of 146,000,000 tons represents a decrease of something over $2,000,000 from what would have been the value if the price had been the same as it was in 1896.

Considering the industry by States, Pennsylvania holds her usual position. The combined product of anthracite and bituminous coals from the Keystone State amounted to 106,000,000 short tons, nearly 54 per cent of the total output. Pennsylvania's percentage of the total bituminous output was 37 per cent, her output of soft coal being 54,000,000 tons.

Illinois remains in second place, with a total of over 20,000,000 short tons. West Virginia comes third, having increased her output nearly 7,000,000 tons over 1896 and leading Ohio, which comes fourth, by nearly 1,250,000 tons. Alabama reached her maximum output of 5,893,770 tons and stands fifth. Iowa, sixth, lacked only 85,000 tons of reaching 5,000,000 tons. Maryland produced 4,442,000 tons and Indiana a little over 4,000,000 tons.

COVETS PART OF CHINA.

Sweeping Demand of France for Four Provinces.

Although the French Government has made such sweeping demands for an extension of French influence in China, it is believed in Paris that the ministry does not expect that its request will be granted entire by any means. If France gets all he asks for, she will acquire the dominant power over a territory half the size of France herself, and that territory is one in which England has already acquired large interests. The four provinces which France desires a lien upon comprise an area of 378,000 square miles, and are situated directly south of the Yang-tse-Kiang valley. The English already have an agreement with China, restraining her from alienating to another power any part of this valley. The total population of the coveted territory is 58,000,000.

At the annual Methodist conference in [illegible] predicted that Europe would be quarreling over the division of Africa within a year.

—See the new 1898, right hand cut, McCormick Binder and Big 4 Mowers at Culbertson & Boland's cheap hardware Store, Auburn, Ind.

—City elections this week all over the country generally show democratic gains. In Chicago they gave a heavy majority for democratic reform members of the council.

—When you want to buy Hardware or Farm Machinery cheap, don't fail to call at Culbertson & Boland's cheap hardware store, Auburn, Ind.

—The trial of Everett of Ft. Wayne is going on at Decatur. It will be remembered he was accused of getting a loan of money on the strength of a false pretense.

—John H. Reinœhl of Fairfield was here yesterday and paid up the subscription of his father, Peter Reinœhl. Both have thanks.

—Judge James I. Best, was at Waterloo today. We suppose he was called here for the funeral of his father-in-law, Mr. Nimmons.

—John Keeran was up from Ligonier today. He is looking well and says business is good. He was here over night and returned on the noon train.

—Ex-commissioner Joseph Sewell was in town today to settle taxes and do other business. We are sorry to hear that Mrs. Sewell is still in poor health owing to a cancerous trouble.

—Farmers are finding their land to dry now for plowing. We suppose the rainy season soaked the ground so hard, it will need rain now to loosen it up. So it goes.

—Phillip Hess a Ft. Wayne young man has been appointed electrician in the navy. Each ship has to have one or more electrician, to manage their electric lights and search lights.

—You can go to no better place for Binders, Mowers, Rakes and Threshing Machines, than to J. C. Weeks' in the Kruger Block, the block south of the National Block, Auburn.

—P. A. Shurtz of Concord township, one of the regular jury, is stopping with his sister, Mrs. H R. Culbertson. He is one of our old fellow teachers and of course calls on the COURIER while here.

—Dr. W. H. Nusbaum has just put in his office the latest improved instruments for the treatment of all diseases of Nose and Throat. Also a modern Electrical Instrument for diseases of Lungs. tf

—If you want to see a complete and convienient new store room, look in at Jones & Son's. Everything begins to take shape now. Brandon & Long have pushed the work nicely.

—Mrs. J. C Lochner went to Argos today on the morning train, her goods having gone already. She leaves the whole town as her friends who regret to lose her and her husband, but whose good wishes follow both to their new home.

—Two blind lovers eloped at St. Louis one night recently, and were married. They could elope as well in the day time, as far as they were concerned, but it may be they went in the night out of regard to the feelings of the old folks.

—Charles E. Miller writes to his father in Albion some of his experience on board a man-of-war. He is the young man the COURIER recently spoke of as having secured a position as druggist in charge of the medical stores on the "Columbia," belonging to the North Atlantic squadron.

—A little boy asked for a bottle of "get up in the morning as fast as you can," the druggist recognized a household name for "DeWitt's Little Early Risers," and gave him a bottle of those famous liver pills for constipation, sick headache, liver and stomach troubles. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Frank Rush and Bert Casebeer are making a new generator for the gas machine at the Swineford House. The old one had become injured by rust. It had been in use 26 years and yet the cloth and wood were as good as ever.

—Children like it, it saves their lives. We mean One Minute Cough Cure, the infallible remedy for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, grippe, and all throat and lung troubles. At H. B McCord's drugstore.

—Dr. Nusbaum and wife and C. M. Brown and wife have returned from Indianapolis reaching Auburn on the early train over the Wabash this morning. They had a splendid time and the meeting called out an immense attendance. The representatives of the various bi-metallic leagues all over this state and Ohio were there in force. The speeches were grand and inspiring, while the enthusiasm was unbounded. It was a great outpouring of the people.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

LEVI W. TRESH,
President.

—M. L Yocum, Cameron, Pa., says "I was a sufferer for ten years trying most all kinds of pile remedies, but without success. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me. I used one box. It has effected a permanent cure." As a permanent cure for piles DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has no equal. H. B. McCord sells it.

—Thirty-five years make a generation That is how long Adolph Fisher of Zanesville, O., suffered from piles. He was cured by using three boxes of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Thursday's Daily.

—Fred Shaffer is now located in his business at Delphos and believes he has a good point. He bought to a good advantage and as there is but one other establishment of the kind in the town, which has 6,000 inhabitants, he will do well. Fred is a deserving young man and we feel sure he will succeed.

—Some of the republican members of congress talk of uniting with the democratic side, and overrule Speaker Reed and insist on having some definite action taken on matter. Of course congress can take the reins out the boss speaker's hands if they can unite to do it. The fact that Reed has them tied up like slaves is because they are weak enough to let him do it

Saturday's Daily.

—Commissioners were settling up the Seventh-st bridge matter today.

—Miss Libbie Hoesler, who has been wrestling with the grip a few days is improving.

—Billy Stimely in talking to Fort Wayne yesterday learned that Scott Shoemaker seems to be improving.

—Thousands of sufferers from grippe have been restored to health by One Minute Cough Cure. It quickly cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe, asthma, and all throat and lung diseases. At H. B. McCord's drugstore.

—Church of God Sunday School, 9:30 a. m., Preaching, 10:45 a. m., Christian Endeavor, 6:30 p. m., Subject "Conquering the Fear of Death," leader, Mrs. Anna Pooler, preaching, 7:30 p. m. by Rev. I. M. Thomas.

—The Old Noble County Agricultural Association is having the troubles so common to the old-style fairs. It got into debt, had bad seasons, and now the sheriff is likely to sell it out. A judgment for $2,289 has just been rendered against it in the court on a claim of E. J. Johnson.

—We are glad to see that the Butler Herald under its new management approves the action of the commissioners in trying to get some work out of idle prisoners. The former editor got quite cute in his opposition to the plan.

—J. Y. W. McClellan went to Ashland county Ohio last week to attend the burial of his mother-in-law who was buried Monday. During his absence his neighbors turned out and sowed twenty-five acres of oats for him That's the kind of neighbors to have —Grafting done, either fruit or ornamental trees. All work warranted.

C. ASHELMAN, Auburn.

—There is a plan on foot for the school children over the state to contribute a cent apiece to relieve the sufferings of the poor people in Cuba. It would produce quite a handsome sum.

—Roger Houlton, the music teacher came up from Ft. Wayne today. He stops off at Waterloo, to see some pupils and then goes to Hamilton to see Mrs. Hiram Oberlin, mother of his wife, who is quite sick. Mr. H. is son of the first settler of this county, but though his people were pioneers. he is a leading music teacher of Ft Wayne.

—The Dispatch is now industriously employed in pushing and advocating that old gag, that the more taxes like tariff duties you can put on an article the cheaper it becomes. But it does not take a very sensible way to prove this absurd proposition. We had supposed that every thinking man had abandoned this old and often exploded theory.

—Our friend, W. S. Maxwell is asking original conundrums in the Butler papers. We find this; "Why buy old beans when you can get new ones just as cheap at Maxwell's?" Well, Walter we give it up, and trust that Butler families take your view of it. Our own opinion and yours coincide that a new bean beats an old one.

—Joseph Shaum, a wealthy farmer of Elkhard county is also somewhat eccentric. He was arrested the other day for refusing to keep his children in school as required by the new truancy law: He was fined $10, but refused to pay it and the costs, all being $14. So he went to jail. He had money with him but didn't want to spend it. But later on his wife came, paid the money and took the old man home.

—It is a great leap from the old fashioned doses of blue-mass and nauseous physics to the pleasant little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure constipation, sick headache and biliousness. H. B. McCord's sells it.

—Millersburg Grit:—While cutting wood on George W. Rink's farm, Frank Redman and Frank Thiele discovered a large place of petrified poplar. A small portion of it was exposed and on digging around it was discovered to be quite larger. The end surface showed plainly that the log had been chopped and the side was quite smooth and hewn to a point not unlik the shape of a pyramid

Monday's Daily.

—A LaPorte man has invented a machine to harvest potato bugs.

—H. C. Hanna, of Terre Haute is shipping large numbers of mules to Cuba.

—Born Sunday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rush a girl. Dr. Baxter was the attending physician.

—Geo. Lanning and C. M. Brown were at Hamilton yesterday having been called there by the big fire.

—A Lake Shore train was photographed at Ligonier the other day while running a mile a minute.

—Prisoners at Jeffersonville who are over thirty years old, are to be sent to Michigan City.

—W. E. Sherwood, chipped in to help the COURIER again last Saturday.

—J. Giradot has thanks for a cash payment Saturday.

—Mrs. E. Snyder, has thanks for substantial assistance to the printer on Saturday.

—Lloyd Obenchain spent Sunday at his home in Columbia City.

—There is a rumor that Mrs. Ed. Webb and three children were among those who lost their lives in the flood at Shawneetown last week. It is not known where she went to and such a family is reported lost.

—A girl near Muncie swallowed a needle many years ago, and long since had forgotton the matter. The other day she felt something hurting in her shoulder and the doctor was called and soon dug out the needle.

—Dr. Buchtel's father and mother drove over from Ligonier Saturday, and staid over Sunday here with the Doctor's family. They found roads fairly good. They went home to-day. They are old time friends of the COURIER folks, and we are always pleased to meet them.

—A cute little device was that at the Bazar in the Bank Block. They showed the effects of their Easter dyes by getting a fine old mother hen and her brood of chicks, and then having dyed them various bright hues, fixed their show window as a coop and kept them there. The cute little birds drew admirers in great numbers.

—John Jacob Astor has formed a syndicate which has purchased a large tract of land in Honduras, and they have also got control of the little railroad used in bringing bananas to the coast and as they also own the line of steamers that run back and forth to this country and have got control of the customs, it looks as if they would about own the country. It would be a good thing if Americans could control it.

—Rev. Fred Keller and C. F. Bartels of the German Lutheran church went to Ft. Wayne this afternoon, and after a stay there over night go on to Indianapolis to attend the synod of that church, which is held there this week Mr. Bartels is a delegate. They expect to return next Tuesday. They were accompanied by Bertha Sheets, daughter of Charles Sheets the tailor. The girl goes to visit her grandfather, Charles Aichele, formerly of Kendallville, but now a clerk in the state pension office at Indianapolis.

—Quite a number of our attorneys went to Angola at noon to attend the funeral of the late A. Eugene Davis. Among them were E. D. Hartman, J. W. Baxter, Clerk Long, F. L. Welshimer and J. H. Rose. Mr. Davis had proved a good and faithful officer and his untimely death will be sincerely mourned.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Geo. Kiester of Concord, was here Monday, and gave the COURIER a lift.

—A short, sharp little shower, accompanied by hail, surprised our people about noon yesterday.

—Who was it said Auburn had not seen a strawberry this spring? M. E. Garrett had a stock of them two or three weeks ago, and sold them, too.

—Gen. Blair drove down from Waterloo this morning, on some business at court, we suppose.

—Hicksville town election last week went republican on Mayor, the defeated man being Editor Shell.

—There is report that at the Dispatch office today, the picture of McKinley that has had honored place there so long, had turned its face to the wall. We wait for particulars.

—Mr. and Mrs. Trover are now settled in their cosy home again, where their old neighbors can call on them and welcome their return.

—Mrs. Harry Scott came down from Angola this afternoon to be present at the L.L.C. Meeting, of which club she is an honnary member.

—Dr. Stamets went to Fort Wayne today, to see Scott Shoemaker, who does not seem to improve much. He may be brought home.

—The state legislature now in session generally appropiate money for war expenses that may be needed. Ohio and New York voted a million each and Michigan half a million.

—The first bird's nest full of young birds was reported Saturday by Samuel Miller on the Ralston farm east of town. The young birds were quite large, and will soon fly.

—Mrs. C. M. Hunt and daughter, wife of Mr. Hunt who is delivering potatoes, returned to her home at Eaton Rapids, Mich., today noon. She has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Griswold, the ladies being sisters.

—Mrs. M. E. Olds of St. Joe is here, a guest of her sister, Mrs. E. Zimmerman, and will be a guest of the L. L. C. meeting this evening.

—We have received a finely engraved invitation to attend the commencement exercises of the Southern Homeopathic Medical College at Baltimore, Ma. A card accompanied the invitation on which we read, "Amy E. Plumb, M. D." It is the DeKalb girl. this time, that is coming into prominence and success.

—The Rochester Sentinel says: "Will Taylor and Tom Wright sold Bill Boyer load of wood yesterday and the chunks were so large when one was thrown off a small coon ran out of it and into a box near by. It had been hauled in the chunk from Tiosa."

—Charlie Pommert has a fancy for wild game, and everyone who gets a rare bird or animal sends it to him. This time it is a horned owl, the largest we ever saw, and was brought in by Mr Brady from the Stimely farm. It had been killing their chickens and they set a trap for it.

—Ft. Wayne Journal:—Major Siver returned yesterday from Indianapolis, where he went on business connected with the hospital department of the National Guard. He brought instructions to Dr. Crull, who has lately been added to the hospital corps, and who will proceed to drill a detachment of the guard for hospital duties at once.

Wednesday's Daily.

—WANTED:—A girl to do general housework. Call on Charls Eckhart.

—Argument in the horse case now on has closed, and the jury has it now.

—Dr. Stamets called on Sam. Hanna yesterday and found him doing well.

—The St. Joe Hoop factory came through here today taken by teams to Leonidas, Mich. The new location is in St. Joseph county.

National League Bass Ball Schedules can be procured by sending 4 cents in stamps to A. J. Smith, G, P, A., L, S, & M. S. Ry., Cleveland, O. 16

—Dr. B. A. Stockdale of Ft. Wayne, Ind., announces that he will visit our city next Thursday, 21st inst., at Swineford Hotel, returning regularly each month thereafter.

—D. N. Myers will keep on sale at his feed barn in Auburn, a full line of the leading makes of Buggies, Surreys, Road Wagons, etc. Call and examine his stock when you want to buy. He can and will suit you.

—D. N. Myres will keep his fine imported Cleveland Bay Stallion at his feed barn in Auburn every day in the week this season. All interested in good horses, are invited to call. tf

Dr. Stockdale's reputation for curing chronic diseases is not equaled by any other specialist in this state. This city is indeed fortunate, in that we are to have a specialist, who is so eminently reliable, favor us with his regular visits. Dr. Stockdale is too well known, though out the state of Indiana, to need any introduction, other than the announcement of his coming visit. Many of the doctor's friends and patients and those desiring to become patients will doubtless call and take advantage of his very generous offer--free treatment for one month.

—Mr. Hunt had a carload of potatoes arrive this afternoon, and will have them on sale at once.

Lovers of the National game cannot afford to be without our vest pocket Schedule of National Base Ball Games for 1898. Four cents in postage sent A. J. Smith, G. P. A., L. S. & M. S. Ry., Cleveland, O., will procure you a copy.

—Wm. B. Conrad of Warsaw was a caller on the editor yesterday. He was on a business tour, being a large manufacturer and dealer in carriages and wagons and has an extensive acquaintance all over northern Indiana.

—Dr. Stamets brought Scott Shoemaker north on the evening train yesterday, and took him to Waterloo. He was quite weak and tired then, but this morning when the Doctor left him he seemed stronger again. While he is in a critical condition he has hope he may be pulled through.

—John Kruse has bought J. J. Latson's farm of 5 acres north of Auburn and will move in the house as soon as repairs can be made on the house. Mr. Latson will live with Phil Plum at Waterloo.

—The Lake Shore Ry.'s Schedule of all National League Base Ball Games for 1898. An interesting little book. Fits the vest pocket. Keeps account of all games. Copy for 4 cents in postage. Apply to A. J. Smith, G. P. A., Cleveland, O. 16

—Walter Hartman notified the Fort Wayne Carnival association that it would be impossible for him to take the management of their celebration in any way since there would be more or less conflict with ours. His interests being here he prefers to keep the position in perference to giving it up and assisting Ft. Wayne.

SEDAN

Sowing oats and making garden is the order of the day at present.

John Schrœder starts for the west this week to work on telephone line.

The storks called at George Schuster's one day last week and left a fine boy. We think it a pretty sure indication of war as they have left a goodly number of boys in this place this winter. And still the blessed bird hovers over other homes.

Rev. Campbell and wife celebrated their tin wedding Monday.

S. W. Guthrie has been laid up with rheumatism the most of the time for the past six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rohrabaugh of Waterloo, visited at O. L. Wheaton's last Saturday.

Charles Graham, our township assessor was in this place last week trying to find out how much we were worth. He reports some people as making quite a gain in the last year. Perhaps they dont care to go before the Board again

S. W. Guthrie has a fine young Jersey cow which he offers to sell at a bargan.

O. L. Wheaton has the job of graveling for the L. S. & M. S in this township.

Rene McDowell of Auburn was in this place Monday.

Easter Sunday was a beautiful day and a great many people were out enjoying themselves.

THEIR SILVER DAY.

EDITOR COURER:—One of the most enjoyable events of the season occured last Saturday April 2nd, to occasion being the 25th Anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Treesh of Richland township, About 75 of the neighbors and friends gathered at their home and helped to celebrate the event by having a jolly social time.

There was a short address by Rev. James Barton who performed the marriage ceremony 25 years ago, also short speech by Rev. Campbell who presented the worthy couple with a beautiful present; then there were remarks made by several of the friends. Supper being announced some of the speakers were quieted down, all repaired to the dining room and partook of the necessaries of life to the fullest The time was enlivened by some music and some of the choicest of Instrumental music by Prof. A. Ober. All went as merry as a marriage bell. About 9 o'clock the guests took there departure for their homes wishing their host many happy anniversaries.

WORKED THE PRISONERS.

Yesterday, Marshal Potter had his first inning, or rather his first outing, with the prisoners confined in jail. It will be remembered, that the Board of Commissioners made an order, which was published in the COURIER, giving the marshal, as well as sveral county officers the right to make the prisoners work on the street, on ditches; etc. He had four of them out yesterday cleaning the gutters and helping to haul the stuff away. He expects to give them more work as soon as the balls and chains arrive, as there are some who need to be restrained. For many years, the COURIER has asked to have such a plan tried,

THE PEOPLE'S MONEY

Free Silver sentiment.

When the election of 1896 made William McKinley President of the United States, the gold clique announced that free silver sentiment had been killed. Acting on this theory the advocates of gold monometallism scrambled eagerly for the honor of proposing a plan to put this country on the gold basis. The self-appointed monetary commission, the Indianapolis convention representing the "best business interests," the House Committee on Banking and Currency, Secretary of the Treasury Gage, and even President McKinley rushed out plans and specifications designed to please the money power.

But there has been a serious hitch in the proceedings. Free silver sentiment arose from the tomb and danced triumphantly through the United States Senate, while the people applauded. Now it looks as though the House of Representatives would be captured by the silver forces in next fall's elections, and then, instead of a bill "to more firmly establish the gold standard," President McKinley may have presented to him a bill for the remonetization of silver. Co-operation on the part of Democrats, Populists and free silver Republicans appears to be in a fair way for accomplishment on a just and broad basis, and with such an alliance the gold clique's hopes of retaining control of the house will assuredly be disappointed.

Under the circumstances the chances for "monetary reform" along the lines suggested by the precipitate enthusiasts under the direction of Wall street are exceedingly limited. It would be a good idea for the advocates of gold whenever they get an idea that silver sentiment is dead to remember the motto which is impressed upon the people now: "It is better to know than to think."

Money and Agriculture.

In 1887, when the wheat area of Argentina began to be increased moderately, one hundred dollars' worth of gold was worth one hundred and thirty-five of paper; by 1890 the latter number had increased to 261, in 1891 it was 377, and in 1894, after a slight reaction, it was still as high as 357.

It is abundantly proved by the evidence of Argentina witnesses that the paper dollar is worth nearly, if not quite, as much as ever for almost all the wheat growers' requirements; and, therefore, it is clear that the gold premium is, as it has been for years past, equivalent to an enormous bonus upon the production of wheat for export.

In reference to the evidence adverse to bimetallism, the curious denial of the appreciation of gold by Lord Farrar is mentioned, while it is noticed that Sir Robert Giffen, the other principal monometallist witness, admitted the appreciation.

As to Lord Farrar's declaration that the abandonment of the gold standard would be a cruel and a wicked robbery of labor, and that it would be little less than wicked to persuade poor farmers that they would be better off with "more counters," the commissioners remark that if, as Lord Farrar had maintained, prices had not been affected by changes in the standard, it is not clear how the reversal of those changes could rob labor; while if the changes would tend toward a rise in prices, they fail to perceive the wickedness of persuading farmers that they would benefit thereby.

Moreover, they point out that some of the allegations of Lord Farrar are in conflict with statements in the report of the gold and silver commission signed by him.

Gold Standard Effects.

The efforts of Great Britain to depress the bullion value of silver were fruitless for nearly seventy years because France kept her mints open for free coinage, thus demonstrating the ability of a single country to maintain the parity of the two metals against the world. The United States is much stronger financially than was France at that time.

It was greatly to the interests of the money lenders to have silver demonetized and gold made the only standard, because there is not gold enough in circulation in the whole world to pay one dollar in a hundred of the debts.

It is therefore easily cornered and gives the banks the power at pleasure to squeeze debtors, create panics, reduce values and rake in the wreckage they have caused to the extent of hundreds of millions at a time.

The shrinkage of values in the United States alone since the demonetization of silver in 1873 is estimated by Senator Chandler as not less than sixteen billions of dollars, or five times the cost of the civil war, but this does not include the loss of wealth by curtailment of production, in consequence of under consumption, due to the pauperization of the laboring classes and their consequent inability to purchase, very frequently, even the food required to sustain life.

Why was silver demonetized if such serious consequences were known to be the probable results?

The story of the demonetization of silver discloses one of the most stupendous crimes ever perpetrated in the history of nations. The demonetization in the United States was the result of fraud and without the knowledge or approval of Congress or the President.

Fortune Spent in Unique Fashion

One of the wealthiest and loveliest society women of New York has a yearly income of $25,000 above her most extravagant needs and she feels she must get rid of it and benefit her fellow men, so she spends it all on hothouse grapes at $5 a pound, which she sends to hospitals and slums. Ministers and social reformers have pleaded in vain with her, but she argues keenly. Besides the surprise and pleasure the grapes give the ill and dying she calculates the enormous amount of employment given to gardeners, clerks and messengers, who otherwise would be out of work.

Arthur Nikisch, the symphony conductor whom Boston did not appreciate, has just concluded an engagement for life as conductor of the Wewandifaus concerts. He celebrated it by giving a concert with Paderewski.

SILVER SENTIMENT.

It Still Has a Strong Hold on the People who Think for Themselves.

War talk has not diverted the attention of the people from the consideration of the political battle which was fought between the forces of gold monometallism and bitmetallism in the autumn of 1896. William J. Bryan has been given a most enthusiastic reception in the south, and has demonstrated, to the dismay of the gold clique, that silver sentiment is deeper and broader and wider, more enthusiastic and more earnest than ever before.

In discussing the triumphant tour of Bryan, the Washington Post, a newspaper devoted to the gold cause and opposed to the Democratic candidate for President in 1896, says: "Those eminent mugwumps and cuckoos who are trying to make themselves believe that Mr. Bryan is a dead issue will do well to take careful note of the manner in which the people receive him everywhere along the route of his present journey. There can be no sort of doubt that Mr. Bryan received in New Orleans a welcome of unparalleled warmth and enthusiasm. Those Democrats who refused to accept the Chicago platform in 1896 were as zealous and as cordial in their attentions as the other Democrats—a vast majority—who stood by the party and its candidate." Under the circumstances it would, perhaps, be just as well for the gold clique journals to restudy the theory that "silver sentiment is dead." Differences of opinion among Democrats are being harmonized, and Secretary Gage has been forced to admit that the battle of standards will have to be fought over again in 1900. This is not a propitious time to discuss political questions, but it is just as well to call attention to the fact that rumors of war, or even war itself, cannot divert the thoughts of the people from the vital question of bimetallism.—Chicago Dispatch.

Michigan and Lumber Duties.

The furniture manufacturers of Michigan are turning against the Dingley law. They point to the disappearing forests of that State and then to the new $2 duty on lumber, which shuts out the Canadian product, upon which they are coming to depend. It is a duty excellently designed to stimulate forest slaughter in the United States, but the trouble in this case is that there are few more forests left to slaughter. So a united protest against the Dingley duty goes to Washington from the very State which, next to Maine, was supposed to be a chief beneficiary of the imposition.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Ingalls as a Populist.

It would be a sight for gods and men to see ex-Senator John J. Ingalls of Kansas running for Congress as a Populist candidate for the purpose of overcoming a big Republican majority in the first Kansas district. If Ingalls can really down his former party in such a struggle—and is willing to do so—the opportunity should certainly be given. And whether he can or not, it might be well to encourage the effort. The example would be valuable to many persons not yet fully awake to the versatility of politicians of the Ingalls type or to the wild and weird possibilities of Kansas politics.—St. Louis Republic.

he Boodler's Pet Stronghold.

Republican and mugwump spouters love to talk of the depravity of New York under Tweed and other Tammany bosses, but they never refer to Philadelphia, where boodleism and all sorts of knavery have flourished for years, and where the people are worse governed and more shamefully plundered than those of any other great city in the country. The developments now making of rascality in the Council of Philadelphia are only in line with similar revelations which have been made from time to time for many years past. In Philadelphia boodling has been a fine art for more than a generation.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Sordid Commercialism Scored.

Boss Hanna's insolence was fittingly rebuked by Senator Thurston. The high priest of sordid commercialism, ready to sacrifice every thing to gain, stands for a group which is struggling to make itself a class and a caste, a group already laden with iniquity, and which is now bent upon turning an ignoble penny out of national perplexity. Senator Thurston did well to rebuke these men, and his words will be cheered by every honest heart, by every true patriot, by every man who hates wickedness and loves the light.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Begun Under Democratic Auspices.

The Philadelphia Press speaks of "the development of the modern navy as begun under President Harrison." These are times when even party organs can afford to be fair. The "development of the modern navy" was begun under the first Cleveland administration, and the credit for the inauguration of the good work is due to William C. Whitney.—Washington Post.

Disgusted Republican Organ.

The persistent interference of the pro-Spanish party, represented in Washington chiefly by Secretaries Bliss and Gage, is having a disturbing effect both on Congress and on the people. American citizenship cannot endure the thought that a question of principle and duty can be determined or considered by the profits or loss of stock speculators or of anybody else.—New York Press.

Patriotism of the Highest Order.

The attitude of the Democratic party, from the inception of the Cuban crisis to the present moment has been in the highest degree patriotic. Mere considerations of partisan advantage have been utterly lost sight of, and the Democratic party has stood as one man in favor of a policy which would maintain the national honor and be worthy of the best traditions of the American people.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

John Handicapped by His Record

The general public will find it hard to forget that the John Wanamaker who is today so vehemently denouncing political corruption in Pennsylvania is the same John Wanamaker who, ten years ago, fried that $400,000 out of Keystone State manufacturers for the Harrison campaign fund.—Manchester (N. H.) Union.

Hanna Always Un-American.

The American people are very tired of Marcus Alonzo Hanna. They have tolerated him for years. They will not stand him much longer. He has never said or done a thing which was not un-American.—Washington Times.

THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER.

O SAY, can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?—
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming!
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there;
O say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On that shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, now conceals, now discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected, now shines on the stream;
'Tis the star-spangled banner! O, long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
'Mid the havoc of war and the battle's confusion,
A home and a country they'd leave us no more?
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave;
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

O, thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just,
And this be our motto: "In God is our trust;"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

"BEFORE AND AFTER."

Trips to Thibet's Holy City Not Conducive to Good Looks.

Last summer Mr. Henry Savage Landor, artist, author and traveler, and grandson of the celebrated Walter Savage Landor, undertook an exploring expedition through Thibet. His objective point was the sacred city of Lhassa, to which entrance is forbidden on pain of death to strangers, and especially to Europeans. It was a most daring enterprise, but one that appealed strongly to Mr. Landor's adventurous spirit.

Mr. Landor had almost succeeded in getting within the gates of Lhassa when his disguise was discovered and he was taken prisoner. All his companions, except two faithful coolies, deserted him and fled. The Thibetans inflicted the most horrible torture upon him. His body was seared with red-hot irons until he was almost lifeless. Then he was condemned to be beheaded, and was actually taken to the place of execution.

The grand lama, who appeared on the scene, however, decided to commute Mr. Landor's sentence. His life was spared, but for over a week he was subjected to the agony of the rack. How he survived can only be explained by his marvelous fortitude and iron constitution. The torture concluded, he was bade to leave the country at once, and it goes without saying that he did not tarry.

LANDOR BEFORE AND AFTER HIS VISIT TO THIBET.

When Mr. Landor left for Thibet he was in the best of health, the picture above on the left showing him to be both youthful and handsome. The picture on the right was taken after his return. It shows a man seemingly aged and a physical wreck. Of the twenty-two scars of wounds he bears, many are on his face.

Took Two Telephones.

"We used to have the best fellow in our employ that I ever knew," declared the head of one of the biggest telephone exchanges in the country. In fact, he was too good for us to be able to keep him, and now he's a promoter making barrels of money. He could place more telephones than any other half dozen men in our employ, and I'll give you just one sample of his shrewdness.

"There was a wealthy old Frenchman with large interests that we wanted as a patron. After all the rest of our solicitors had called upon him we sent our best man. He learned that the Frenchman thought the telephone a great invention and a great money saver, but he could not be made to understand that they were adapted to any other language than English. He had to converse in French with many of his business friends and employes.

"All the others had tried to convert him, but 'Olly Slick,' as we had dubbed him, took the other tack and humored the old gentleman. He at once assured him that we had French receivers and transmitters, and immediately put up a temporary line to show that he was not misrepresenting goods. When French was sent and received over the wire, the result delighted the man of wealth, and 'Olly' actually sold two sets of telephones for a dozen places where they could be made useful in the old man's business, charging $5 apiece more for the French than for the English. It was six months before he discovered that he had a superfluous lot of telephones on hand. Then he laughed as heartily as any one and tried to hire 'Olly' to go on the road."—Detroit Free Press.

LOCKED IN A SULPHUR ROOM.

Imprisoned for Four Hours a Man Dies of His Injuries.

Edgar Allen Poe's description of the sufferings of a person under the effects of slow suffocation has been verified to some extent by an incident which has just been inquired into at the Leeds City coroner's court. A blanket stover, named Pickard, employed by a local firm of manufacturers, had himself locked into a sulphur room, and lighted the stoves in the belief that he could leave by another door, which was usually open.

No sooner had he done so than he remembered that this door had been locked on the outside earlier in the day by his own order. The man who had shut him in was deaf, and had gone away disregarding his knocks and cries; and he was thereupon overcome by panic. He could easily have extinguished the sulphur stoves, and might have remained in the room without danger till relieved, but such was the state of his mind that instead of doing so he still spent his time in endeavoring to attract attention.

The sulphur fumes soon filled the place, but even then it did not occur to him that he could put out the stoves by means of one of the blankets in the room. He next tried to reach an aperture above the door by means of a rope and a plank, but it was only a small one, about four inches or six inches in width, and was covered on the outside by a strip of wood.

Then he became quite exhausted, and fell against one of the doors, which had resisted his utmost strength. There was air enough coming in beneath the sill to keep him alive and conscious; and in that plight, expecting death and clinging to life, he lay for four hours. In the end his whereabouts was discovered by his son and a watchman.

Pickard could see the flicker of the watchman's lamp under the door, and knocking with the little strength remaining to him, was released. He died however, eleven days later as the result of sulphur poisoning.

It is related that after being released from his terrible imprisonment he remembered he had not lighted the stoves in the other bleaching houses, and actually went into each of them and completed his day's work.—London Mail.

Idea of Eternity.

A Salvation Army preacher, in one of his talks, exclaimed to his hearers: "Eternity! why, don't you know the meaning of that word? Nor I, either, hardly. It is for ever and ever, and five or six everlastings a-top of that. You might place a row of figures from here to sunset, and cipher them all up, and it wouldn't begin to tell how many ages long eternity is. Why, my friends, after millions and trillions of years had rolled away in eternity, it would be a hundred thousand years to breakfast-time."

It has been our luck through life to find that those who would defend us when we are assailed, never have any warships.

Never say pants; speak of them as pantaloons, or pantalettes.

SIR HENRY BESSEMER,

Whose Inventive Genius Ranked Him with the World's Greatest Men.

Sir Henry Bessemer, whose death occurred in England not long since, will forever be known to fame as the inventor of the process for converting cast iron into steel without the use of fuel. But, even had he never made that great discovery, which makes possible an annual saving to the world of $200,000,000, he would be ranked among the world's greatest men because of his other inventions.

Sir Henry was born in Hertfordshire, England, in 1813. His father was a mechanical genius and invented many useful contrivances, with which he built up a fortune. The son inherited all his father's genius and even added to his heritage. His first invention was a stamp for the cancellation of letters, which is in use in every post-office and which has saved millions of dollars to many governments. He received no monetary compensation for his discovery, but the British government conferred upon him the rank of knight. Some of his other inventions were a machine to produce figured velvet, a machine to make type, the apparatus used to make bronze powder, a centrifugal pump and a plate glass polishing machine.

It was thirty years ago that his fertile brain gave birth to its greatest invention. While seeking for a new gun metal he made the discovery that carbon could be removed from cast iron by simply forcing a current of air through the molten mass. It took some years to develop his discovery, but the result is written in the history of every industry in which steel is used. Once that the liquid metal is poured into the converter and the air blast turned on, no fuel is needed. As the oxygen comes in contact with the carbon and silicon, combustion is produced and the metal is kept in a molten condition until all impurities are consumed. The product is pure steel that can be bent and twisted, cold, and used for any purpose to which steel can be put. Were it not for Sir Henry's invention it is probable that there would be no steel rails in the world to-day.

SIR HENRY BESSEMER.

BICYCLE YACHT.

Wheelmen Can Scorch Without On Touching the Pedals.

L. E. Hudson of Ellesburg, N. Y., has invented a bicycle sail, with which he can scorch, without once touching the pedals, faster than any racer living. His sail was a spruce mast about ten feet high, fastened to the wheel about four inches back of the handle bars by means of two bolts and a cleat. The sail itself is made of heavy cotton cloth, with a light boom at the bottom, to which a strong cord is attached and passed through a light pulley block at the rear of the saddle post, and thence through a second pulley attached to the center of the handle bars. This enables the wheelman-sailor to manage his sail without interfering with the steering of the wheel. Mr. Hudson tells the Philadelphia Times that he had a hard time learning to operate the sail, but when once it was mastered it worked beautifully. No doubt many of our clever boys could rig up a bicycle sail with which they could go like the wind.

SAILING ON A BICYCLE.

TELLING TIME IN THE DARK.

Small Electric Light Which Is Carried on the Watch Chain.

The electric scarf-pin, which many up-to-date young men have been wearing, now has a rival. A design similar to the pin is now hung on the watch-chain. It is charged in the same manner. It can be taken off at will, the wire being intact, and enables one to tell the time no matter how dark the surroundings. When not in use it hangs on the chain. Being incased in a gold or silver reflector, it looks quite presentable.

THE ELECTRIC WATCH CHARM.

Deepest Well.

Gallagher township Clinton County, Pa., is likely to have the deepest well in the State. The oil and gas company has decided to sink its experimental well to a depth of 3,500 feet.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

Official Figures Showing Exactly What It Costs in Indiana.

State Statistician John B. Conner has recently issued a bulletin concerning the administration of the business of the various counties of the State for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1897. The most interesting information is with reference to the total receipts of the counties, the net debt of each, and the cost of county administration, total and per capita. Below is given a table showing the cost of administration, total and per capita, the total receipts and the net debt:

Counties.	Total cost.	Receipts.	Net debt.

HOOSIER TEACHERS.

Sixteenth Annual Meeting of North Indiana Association.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the North Indiana Teachers' Association was held at Kokomo. The attendance broke all previous records. The united sessions are held at Grace Methodist Church, which seats 2,500 people, and the hall was packed at the opening session. Mayor Kirkpatrick delivered the address of welcome. The response was by Emma Montcrae of Purdue University. The address by retiring President Snyder of Muncie and the inaugural of Superintendent Stratford of Peru were delivered Thursday evening. At the later sessions addresses were made by Dr. John Dewey of the University of Chicago, Dr. McClellan of the Ontario Normal School and Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis of Chicago.

Short State Items.

John Bowman, his wife and three small children were injured in a runaway accident at Bethlehem.

The Hagerstown Town Council has awarded the contract for building twenty thousand feet of cement sidewalks.

Amiel Franklin of Covington, advance agent for La Pearl's circus, was crushed by a passenger train at the Danville, Ill., junction and seriously injured.

Judgments aggregating over $12,000 were taken against the Steel Casting Company of Montpelier, in the Blackford Circuit Court. The largest of the judgments was that of the Fort Wayne Smelting and Refining Company for $10,858.15.

Tony George, a policeman, on trial for murder in the first degree, was acquitted at Marion. George killed John Boyd in an attempt to arrest him last August. The police board decided that George was justified, and kept him on the force, but the grand jury found an indictment against him.

The announcement has just been made of the marriage of Prof. Charles E. Spaulding of the Hagerstown High School and Miss Nora A. Faucett of West Baden. The wedding took place Dec. 29 and the announcement caused great surprise in Hagerstown, where Prof. Spaulding has been teaching for two years.

The woodwork department of the A. W. Charles buggy works at Tipton was destroyed by fire. The wind was blowing a gale and several houses caught fire in the neighborhood. A great deal of seasoned material that had been on hand for one and two years was consumed, together with a large amount of work partially completed. Loss, $3,000, with only $500 insurance. Mr. Charles will rebuild at once.

During the recent high waters the high-pressure pipe line of the Southern Indiana Natural Gas Company broke in two in the middle of Big Blue river, near Shelbyville. A few days before, the low-pressure line of the same company parted. Since the waters subsided an investigation was made and it was found that some one had cut the line. The cut had been made with a cold chisel and a diamond point and in a diagonal direction nearly around the pipe, but at no place did the chisel penetrate the pipe, showing that it was done by an expert machinist. A large stump lodged and completed the break.

A freight wreck on the Pennsylvania occurred between Cambridge City and East Germantown. A long stretch of track was torn up, the bridge at East Germantown damaged and eleven cars demolished.

His Rule.

Boardhunter—What are your rates?

Landlady—Seven dollars a week, in advance.

Boardhunter—Good-day.

Landlady—Is the price too high?

Boardhunter—Oh, no, the price is all right, but I make it a rule never to pay toll before I get to the gate.

SHOULD BE PREPARED.

Rheumatism and La Grippe Prevalent and Prompt Treatment Necessary.

Every family should have a bottle of "5 Drops" on hand, especially at this season of the year. Changes in the weather are so liable to cause rheumatism, la grippe and many other diseases that the "5 Drops" cure.

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago: "5 Drops" promptly received. That is the medicine we want. My wife would undoubtedly have been a cripple if it had not been for your "5 Drops." We would not be without it. Yours truly, John G. Martin, Wellsville, Mo. Feb. 16, 1898.

This is one of many testimonials which the manufacturers of "5 Drops" have received.

During the next thirty days they will send out 100,000 of their sample bottles for 25 cents a bottle. Write to-day to the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., 167 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill. This company is reliable and promptly fill every order.

Lynch Law.

Having traced the barbarous custom of tarring and feathering to England, the writer began an investigation as to the origin of lynching, hoping to "father" this upon the "mother country." Charles Bonaparte, in a recent lecture in Boston, favors lynching as helpful to the restraining of crime in unsettled portions, since it gives speedy justice. We fail to find that Napoleon, a relative of Charles, employed this method, though he did take many things into his own hands, and was not averse to executing a duke or two on his own responsibility. The term "lynch law" has a purely American derivation, whether we are proud of it or not. A Virginian farmer named Lynch once caught a thief, and being far removed from courts of justice, and not wishing to subject himself to expense and delay, thought it advisable to tie the fellow to a tree and then to flog him with his own hands. The word stands now not only as something substituted for the regular operations of the law; but usually "lynching" means hanging, or the summary killing of the culprit.

A Boy Choir.

There is not one female voice in the choir at St. Peter's, in Rome, and yet the most difficult oratories and sacred music written are rendered in such a manner as to make one think that Adelina Patti's high soprano is leading. The choir is composed of sixty boys.

Before and After Taking.

Meeker—I could never quite understand my wife during our courtship.

Weeker—And do you now?

Meeker—You bet! She never lets up until I do.

Blood is Life
Pure Blood
is Health.

Without blood circulating through your veins you could not live. Without pure blood you cannot be well. The healthy action of every organ depends upon the purity and richness of the blood by which it is nourished and sustained. If you have salt rheum, scrofula sores, pimples, boils or any kind of humor, your blood is not pure. If you take Hood's Sarsaparilla it will make your blood pure and promptly relieve all these troubles. In the spring the blood is loaded with impurities. Hence, all those unsightly eruptions, that languor and depression, and the danger of serious illness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is needed to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood and protect and fortify the system.

WINDMILLS AND ELECTRICITY.

The New Way to Secure House Lighting.

If we mistake not Dr. Fridtjof Nansen in his last attempt to reach the north pole had the Fram equipped with a specially designed windmill, which when operating drove a dynamo and furnished the necessary current for lighting purposes. An aermotor erected on the roof of a building in Park Place in this city has been for some time successfully driving a dynamo in connection with a storage battery plant, the current from which has been utilized for incandescent lighting. From this it will be seen that there is nothing very new in the application of windmills to the driving of dynamos. There are probably several reasons why the windmill or aermotor has not been more universally adopted for the above purpose. In the first place, such a motive power is always more or less uncertain and cannot always be depended upon. There may be a claim just at the time it is found necessary to recharge the batteries, or the batteries may be in use when a breeze springs up. This would necessitate having two sets of batteries at a considerable cost. Another reason why aermotors have not been more extensively adopted is probably due to the fact that current can now be generated with steam as a motive power very economically, especially in large quantities. The erecting of an aermotor and the installation of a number of storage batteries with a dynamo means a considerable outlay of money, especially when the cost of maintenance and renewals is taken into account. In certain cases it may be found that the interest on the batteries, generator and windmill, with the labor item figured in, will cost as much in the long run as the current could be purchased for on the outside. But probably the chief reason why the power of the wind is allowed to go to waste when it could be employed for generating electricity is the same as that which prevents the use of the immense power derivable from the tides in both the Hudson and East rivers from being utilized, namely, conservatism, or, if not lack of progress, a slowness in availing ourselves of opportunities.—Electricity.

A Long Look Ahead.

Politicians are even now weighing the possibilities involved in the next presidential election. The papers are full of predictions as to the future which are somewhat too self-confident. But it is safe to say that a systematic course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will renew health in the bilious, rheumatic or nervous.

An Historic Desk.

Charles Loeffler, the veteran doorkeeper to the President's room, has a new desk. The old one has served him over twenty-eight years. It was an old desk when it was first turned over to Loeffler. It had been an intimate acquaintance of President Lincoln, and in stirring times would have absorbed many things had it been human. At the old desk thousands of prominent men have sat to write cards to send in to the President. Cabinet members have sat at the desk and written their names for autograph seekers. Great men have congregated around it and talked over matters of the highest importance. It is an old flat-top desk, with a single row of pigeon holes, the lower part containing drawers. It is probable that the desk will be preserved. Loeffler would like to keep it for himself as a companion which has faithfully served him so many years.—Washington special to the New York Tribune.

Catarrh Can't Be Cured

TIFFANY GRAVITY CLOCK.

Imported from Paris, and a Triumph of Mechanical Accuracy.

The gravity clock is one of Tiffany & Co.'s recent importations from Paris, and a very ingenious affair. It is made of brass and gilt. The dial and clock case are entirely of glass, showing the mecahnism in whole of its most interesting features.

In appearance the clock suggests a finely finished model of a machine or hoisting apparatus, rather than a timepiece. The dial is secured to an upright brass (A) structure; this latter is surmounted by a round aneroid barometer, which suggests the familiar steam gauge; around the dial is a large fly wheel, with sprockets, and to the left there is an endless bucket-chain lift, constructed upon the principle of a grain elevator, with a thermometer on the post of the lift, suggesting a steam valve. Forty-one little weighted balls, about as large as a good-sized pea, are employed to operate the clock. They are drawn up on this bucket chain and dropped at intervals of a minute into a conduit over the fly wheel, from which they roll into the sockets of the wheel. The wheel carries twenty-one of the balls at one time, and their weight revolves the wheel, the power thus produced swings the pendulum and governs the hands on the dial. The wheel carries the balls about a third of the way around, and then they drop into another conduit, a triple incline, which finally lands the balls at the foot of the elevator again, where the endless chain gathers them up for another "swing around the circuit." There is some fine mathematical work on this clock, as everything depends upon accurate calculations. The balls must weigh precisely alike, and the momentum of each must be the same. If one of the balls were to lose a fraction of a second in descending the triple incline, it would miss its proper pocket on the lift, and stop the clock. Each of the little spheres travels 209 feet 5 inches every day, and in the course of a year makes a journey of over fourteen miles. Of course, the problem of perpetual motion has not been solved, and so there must be a hidden mechanism.

TOO BIG TO ROLL.

German Soldiers Make a Snowball So Big They Couldn't Move It.

This may be called a military snowball, for it was begun by a German officer who afterward ordered two soldiers to go on rolling it. As the ball grew larger and larger, the number of soldiers was increased until at length a whole company of German infantry had been turned out and keenly enjoyed the fun. At last operations had to be suspended for the reason that there was not room on the surface of the ball for enough hands to push it. The snowball was then six feet high, but so heavy it was immovable.

Horace Greeley's Eccentric Ideas.

Even his eccentric ideas were made plausible by his treatment. I heard him say once that what was then thought to be the Great American Desert ought to be planted with Canada thistles, so as to give nature some sort of a green start, when other vegetation might be made to follow. But the trouble is, Canada thistles, like any other thing inspired by "pure cussedness," will only grow and thrive where they ought not to. Find a place where their presence would do some good, and, as in the Humpty Dumpty case, "all the king's horses and all the king's men" could not fasten them there. This perverseness suggests, in a certain way, the small boy's conception of good and bad—his enchiridion of nature and life. "What's fun," he said, "is always wicked; what we don't want to do is pious." Mr. Greeley would cut down his alders in the spring. When I mildly suggested to him that our agricultural authorities preferred the autumn for that work, when nature could not so well aid their struggle for existence, he thought this reason was a mere excuse for not cutting them at all.

New Use for Lawyers.

Etievant, the anarchist who recently murdered a Paris policeman and wounded two others, has found out a use for lawyers. Having refused to defend himself or employ a lawyer, the court assigned one to take charge of the defense. Etievant would have nothing to do with him, declaring that he wished to be condemned to death, till the lawyer explained that no jury could bring in a verdict involving capital punishment unless a defense was made; whereupon Etievant accepted his services.

The Terrier's Mistake.

An incident that pointed a strong moral took place on Chestnut street on Saturday afternoon. The street was thronged with promenaders, and the magnificent St. Bernard dog which a young woman was leading attracted much attention. Near 13th street the woman entered a store, leaving the dog outside. The dog was such a magnificent beast that several people stopped in admiration, and the dog actually seemed to smile at the attention he was receiving. About this time two giddy youths, who were followed by a mischievous fox terrier, came along and paused to see what was attracting the throng. The terrier, which was but a mite beside the St. Bernard, rushed in and began snarling at the big dog. The noble-looking beast paid not the slightest attentnon, and the youths audibly commented on the big one's cowardice. When the terrier began snapping at his feet, however, the big one gravely raised one paw and pushed his tormentor away. This angered the terrier, and its anger was fed by the youths, who told "Jip," as they called him, to go in and "shake the big coward." "Jip" went in and set his teeth in the St. Bernard's leg. Suddenly the big dog lost its forbearance, and in a trice Jip was in its massive jaws. There was a crunching sound, a couple of shakes and "Jip" was cast aside dead. The St. Bernard then resumed his place unconcernedly, and the young men gathered up their dead terrier and went off to make complaint at the city hall.—Philadelphia Record.

A Daring Joke.

The celebrated Handel had such sensitive nerves that he could not bear to hear the tuning of instruments, and so this was always done before he arrived at the theater. A musical wag wishing to make mirth from Handel's irascibility of temper, stole into the orchestra on a night when the Prince of Wales was to be present and untuned all the instruments. As soon as the prince arrived, Handel gave the signal for beginning con spirito; but such was the horrible discord that the enraged master started up from his seat, and overturning a double-bass which stood in his way, he seized a kettle-drum and threw it with such violence at the head of the leader of the band that he lost his wig in the effort. Without waiting to replace it, he advanced bareheaded to the front of the orchestra, breathing vengeance, but so choked with passion that he could not speak. In his ridiculous attitude he stood stamping and staring for some moments, amid a convulsion of laughter. Nor could he be prevailed upon to resume his seat until the prince went in person and with much difficulty appeased his wrath.

Offended a Squaw.

A sleeping car passenger on a train running into Portland, Ore., strolled into the smoking car and took a seat just ahead of a squaw. He was puffing vigorously at a cigar, and the Indian woman got more of the smoke than she liked. She protested in pantomime to the conductor, who, being something of a wag, indicated that she should make use of a large umbrella she had by bringing it down on the man's head. She naturally presumed that the conductor's authority was all-sufficient, and forthwith acted on his suggestion with native vigor. The man's hat was knocked down over his eyes and all but ruined, and the cigar was sent spinning galley west. When he got out of his hat he turned with not inexplicable ferocity upon his assailant, but the squaw merely looked at him with aboriginal immobility of countenance and wouldn't understand either English or sign language, and while the other passengers were convulsed with merriment he had to retreat to another car.—New Orleans Sun.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

From St. Lawrence Plaindealer, Canton, N.Y.

To suffer for years with a prevailing painful ailment, which baffled skillful medical treatment, yet which was cured by a simple household remedy, is the lot which befell Mrs. George L. Rogers, of West Main street, Canton, N. Y.

"Thirteen years ago," said Mrs. Rogers to a reporter, "I was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism and a complication of diseases. You can judge somewhat of what I endured, when you look at these hands. They were distorted, twisted and swollen. My foot, too, is so much out of shape that the big toe lies across the others, the end touching the little toe.

Goes to Church

"Notwithstanding I am sixty-five years old, have a pleasant home and other comforts, life to me was far from enjoyable, for all other things pale into insignificance when you are without good health. I tried different doctors and many proprietary remedies, but was not benefited.

"Last March I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and before I had finished the first box I began to feel that they were doing me good. I continued using them and steadily grew better.

"I have used thirteen boxes of the pills and to-day feel better than for the past fifteen years. My appetite is good, I feel bright, cheerful, and have a desire to live and enjoy society.

"I have been a member of the Methodist Church for many years, but for six years was unable to attend. I am able now to attend the church services regularly and certainly appreciate that privilege. I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a wonderful medicine." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are composed of vegetable remedies that exert a powerful influence in purifying and enriching the blood, thus curing many diseases.

Honesty.

"Of course," said the coal dealer, soothingly, "we don't expect to satisfy everybody. You don't expect perfection in this world, do you?"

"No. I don't expect perfection. But I do expect a full ton of coal when I pay for it."

"That's human nature for you. You insist upon referring to one slight shortcoming and fail to give us credit for our scrupulous honesty in other respects. While there may have been a few pounds short on the ton, you cannot deny, sir, that every pound we delivered was full weight. And you must admit that in this age of deception that is doing very well."

HE LIKES WESTERN CANADA.

Has a Splendid Farm, Lots of Stock and Pays Scarcely Any Taxes.

Dominion City, Man., Jan. 17, 1898.

At the request of the Immigration Department of the Canadian Government I give the following information:

I immigrated to Manitoba in October, 1892, from Luverne, Rock County, Minn., and took land in Dominion City, Manitoba, where I now reside. I have been very successful in Manitoba, and have more than doubled my capital since I went to Canada. I took about $2,500 worth of wheat, 200 bushels of flax and 600 bushels of oats. I do mixed farming. I milk as much as ten cows. Dairying and stock raising has paid me well. I have on the farm now 44 head of cattle and 18 head of horses, and sold during the past year, 1897, $425 worth of fat cattle. I have good buildings and a comfortable house and good stable. My children have had better school advantages in Manitoba than they had in Minnesota. The district schools are very thorough and good. My son, now 16 years of age, is teaching the public school in our district and receives a salary of $420 per year. All my children have done well at school. I have $1,700 insurance on my buildings on the farm. I also own my personal warehouse and ship all my grain through it to the railway station at Dominion City. It is free of debt.

I have no prejudice against the State of Minnesota, as I made a living and a little more while in the State, but would not take a farm as a gift in Minnesota and leave Manitoba. The taxation in Minnesota was too great. I paid taxes on my stock and chattels; no such taxes have ever been exacted in Manitoba from me and my land taxes are about one-half or less than it was in Minnesota. I am delighted with my new home and expect in a few years to be in circumstances that will enable me to take life easy.

Yours very truly,
S. G. MAYNES.

P. S.—Any person that may take exception to the foregoing letter will kindly investigate, for I can back up every word it contains. I am not an immigration agent, nor the agent of any corporation, but simply a farmer.

S. G. MAYNES.

The above letter was written at the request of C. W. Speers in the State of Minnesota, where I am at present with my wife, visiting my friends in my old home. It is my intention to do what I can to have them remove to Canada, where I have done so well.

Having called upon Mr. Davies of St. Paul, Minn., I was received with every courtesy and got some valuable information as well as literature pertaining to Western Canada.

SAMUEL G. MAYNES.

Wealthy, but Died at Her Washtub.

Mrs. John Conley, of Bound Brook, N. Y., 50 years old, supposed to be very poor, died at her washtub the other day. The family lived in squalor and destitution and charitable persons often helped them. After the woman's death several large sums of money were found secreted in different parts of the hut and it was discovered that she had $3,618 on deposit in the local bank.

It Will Pay.

It will pay to carefully read the descriptive advertisement of Alabastine appearing in this paper, explaining the difference between these goods and kalsomines.

Consumers should bear in mind that Alabastine is unlike all the various kalsomines sold on the market under different names. Alabastine stands preeminent and alone as a durable wall coating. All consumers in buying should see that the goods are in packages and properly labeled.

The Russian Government has ordered that all sardine boxes be opened by the customs officers, because nihilistic tracts were often sent into the country packed in fish tins.

Coughing Leads to Consumption.

Kemp's Balsam will stop the cough at once. Go to your druggist to-day and get a sample bottle free. Sold in 25 and 50 cent bottles. Go at once; delays are dangerous.

THE SECRET OF A GOOD DISPOSITION.

Mrs. Pinkham Says a Careful Regard for Bodily Health Makes Women Sweet and Attractive to All.

The world is filled with sweet women who are held back from usefulness by some trouble of the female organs.

Fretfulness and nervousness rapidly destroy sweet dispositions.

Sickly all-worn-out women cannot live happy lives. Nearly every woman may be well and happy if she will follow Mrs. Pinkham's advice. See what Mrs. Craig says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think it is the best medicine for women in the world. I was so weak and nervous that I thought I could not live from one day to the next. I had prolapsus uteri and leucorrhœa, and thought that I would die. I had dragging pains in my back, burning sensation down to my feet, and so many miserable feelings. People said that I looked like a dead woman. Doctors tried to cure me, but failed. I had given up when I heard of the Pinkham medicine. I got a bottle. I did not have much faith in it, but thought I would try it, and it made a new woman of me. I wish I could get every lady in the land to try it, for it did for me what doctors could not do."

—MRS. SALLIE CRAIG, Baker's Landing, Pa.

That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safeguard of woman's health is clearly proven by the thousands of letters constantly being received. Here is one from Mrs. W. P. VALENTINE, 566 Ferry Ave., Camden, N. J.:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before writing to you I felt very bad, had terrible sick headaches, no appetite, gnawing pain in stomach, pain in my back and right side; was tired and nervous, and so weak I could scarcely stand. I was not able to do anything, had sharp pains all through my body. Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I found myself improving. I continued its use until I had taken four bottles, and felt so well that I did not need to take any more. I am like a new person."

ALABASTINE

IT IS EASY.

It is easy for any one to understand that Alabastine, the base of which is a cement that when applied to any clean solid surface goes through a process of setting and grows hard with age, should be durable, that is, not rub and scale off, but admit of recoating from time to time without having to wash and scrape off its old coats before renewing. It is equally plain that all kalsomines are the reverse of this, being manufactured from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., for a base, and being stuck on the wall with glue, which, when exposed to the air, moisture, etc., soon decays, and the rubbing and scaling then commences, leaving the wall in a terrible condition.

On account of this bad repute, most manufacturers of kalsomines brand their products with some arbitrary name, but the contents of the package still remain a kalsomine.

MUCH SICKNESS

Particularly throat and lung difficulties, ignorantly attributed to other causes, is the result of unsanitary conditions of walls and ceilings. Think of having bed-rooms covered with layers of molding flour paste to feed vermin, with paper to hide them and to absorb the moisture of respiration, and an animal glue culture ground on its face for disease germs; this having strong colors added, like a colored shirt, to hide the dirt; then think of "the nasty practice" of repeating this papering, without removing the old, and a number of times, at that, as many do. Then think of a room coated with pure, porous, permanent Alabastine, which is retinted with but little trouble or expense, and is purifying and sweet-smelling and fills cracks. Wall paper free would be dearer than Alabastine if cost of removing paper is considered.

TO DEALERS.

Don't buy a lawsuit or injunction with cheap kalsomines—imitations of Alabastine. No dealer is justified in risking a suit and heavy damages while trying to introduce and sell a direct infringement on Alabastine. The right to manufacture and sell wall coating adapted to be mixed with cold water is covered by letters patent owned by the Alabastine Co.

Alabastine is for sale by druggists and paint dealers everywhere.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE AS AN AID TO INSANITY.

Imagine yourself a foreigner striving to master the construction of the English language. Perhaps you may be gazing at a number of vessels on the water, and exclaim, "See what a flock of ships!" You are at once told that a flock of ships is called a fleet, and that a fleet of sheep is called flock. It might also be added for future guidance that a flock of girls is called a bevy, while a bevy of wolves is called a pack; yet a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host; but a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffalos is called a herd. Still, a herd of children is called a troop, but a troop of partridges is called a covey; a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, while a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde; further, a horde of rubbish is called a heap, yet a heap of oxen is called a drove; a drove of blackguards is called a mob, but a mob of whales is called a school; a school of worshipers is called congregation, while a congregation of engineers is called a corps; a corps of robbers is called a band, though a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd; a crowd of pictures is called a collection, but a collection of money is called a hoard, but a hoard of people is called a company; a company of ministers, however is called an assembly, and an assembly of soldiers is called a muster. "Stop, stop!" methinks I hear year you cry, "I cannot remember half of it."—From "The English Language," in Demorest's Family Magazine for April.

FORGOT TO VOTE.

Lacrosse, Wis., like the whole state, had a right ot vote on Tuesday, on the one office on a state ticket, that of Supreme judge of the state. She is the second city in the state, says an exchange, but she played a funny joke on herself and as a result of it did not participate in the election of Charles V. Bardeen to a place on the supreme bench. Save the judicial election, there was no other candidate to vote for nor issue to settle, and with the Spanish war scare, the excitement of raising regiments to go to Cuba and Dr. Powell's acceptance of the Spanish editor's challenge, the matter was entirely forgotton. When it was discovered that the election booths had not been erected it was too late to under take the work. The city will save about $1,500 by this forgetfulness.

"Just as Good"

as Scott's and we sell it much cheaper," is a statement sometimes made by the druggist when Scott's Emulsion is called for. This shows that the druggists themselves regard of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the standard, and the purchaser who desires to procure the "standard" because he knows it has been of untold benefit, should not for one instant think of taking the risk of using some untried preparation. The substitution of something said to be "just as good" for a standard preparation twenty-five years on the market, should not be permitted by the intelligent purchaser.

Scott's Emulsion

IT LOOKS SERIOUS

The war clouds have not really looked serious till within the past few days People thought because the President kept putting off his message, that the whole matter would be settled in a friendly way. But it now appears that he was waiting so that all Americans could get safely out of Cuba, evidently believing they would be in danger if they remained till after his message was made public. All the principal seacoast towns have a few Americans in them and all this week and to-day the various lines of steamers have been making it a point to stop at every port they pass whether it is their regular stopping place or not, and get the Americans they find there. The consuls who represent us at these towns are also coming away and today or else Sunday morning it is said Gen. Lee, our Consul-general will leave Havana. He is expected to be the last American on the island. All these precautions, seem to indicate that the President expects war as the result of what he has written in the message, though the public does not know as yet what he has written. It now seems certain that the message will be read on Monday. It may take more advanced ground than any one expects. Of course if the Spanish were a different sort of people there would be no danger to Americans even after war was declared, for modern nations generally give a certain number of days for the enemy's citizens to get out in safety. And non-combatants are not generally in danger any way, although it is desirable to have them get out of the way. So, altogether it looks dark for peace. The message on Monday may bring war. On the other hand it may be of such a character as to compel Spain to do what is right and so avoid war. Let us wait in patience till Monday.

HOW TO LOOK GOOD.

Good looks are really more than skin deep, depending entirely on a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver is inactive, you have a bilious look; if your stomach is disordered, you have a dyspeptic look; if your kidneys are affected, you have a pinched look. Secure good health, and you will surely have good looks. "Electric Bitters" is a good Alterative and Tonic Acts directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys, purifies the blood, cures pimples, blotches and boils, and gives a good complexion. Every bottle guaranteed. Sold at H. B. McCords Drug Store. 50 cents per bottle.

ON HE PACIFIC

The Veteran Correspondent Now Steaming Over Old Ocean Blue.

He Goes to Seek a Home and Fortune in the far Islands of Samoa.

SAN FRANCI CO. CAL.
March 29, '98.

Readers of the COURIER, my regards to you. It is now more than twenty years since I penned my first words for publication in the COURIER. First as items from Richland township; then as descriptive letters from the states of Washington, Oregon and California; next as articles of general information descriptive of Central America and the West Indies, after which I helped to eat a political pie in old DeKalb, after which I decided that politics was a failure and forthwith hied myself to the orange and lemon groves of Southern California where for more than three years I have lain dormant so far as Newspaperdom is concerned. I am once more to emerge from the Rip Van Winkle sleep and spread my wings on the blue and balmy air of the vast Pacific. I love the wild and tangled forests and the perfect clime of my beautiful Honduras But it lacks Saxon blood, school and stable government. I love the calm and sunny land of Southern California, it's cultured people and its grand educational establishment. But they charge too much for climate. It is the land of the capitalist and land barons. So the man of limited means should never venture there So we now start anew to seek the Adamless Eden. We shall again heed the advice of good old Horace Greely when he said, "Young man go west." We embark today for a tropical isle in the Great South Sea, where we hope to find some beautiful spot which we can call our own. And on some future day we hope to again visit the good people of my beloved DeKalb and then I shall finish my book which is entitled "Around the World in Twenty Years." In seven days we shall reach Honolulu where I shall write you again, then south to Samoa where I hope to write often. In one hour more we shall bid adieu to America, which has been my home for almost forty years. So to you and your readers a kindly goodby.

JOSEPH A. SHADE.

WE ARE ALL RIGHT.

Every few days a rumor gets afloat that Auburn is bankrupt and has no money, or cannot get money to carry on the proposed improvements. There is nothing in this. The town has money and can get more. All the money it is likely to need for waterworks etc., is ready for it and from parties right at home. So this kind of talk should cease. Only a few days ago a man who wants to sell us the big engines came here from New York state. He was informed we had no money and he felt pretty blue at losing his expenses in coming here. He felt better after he found out the truth. Our improvements should be pushed through. Our working men need the employment it will give them. We have the electric lights and these alone would not be very profitable. But with the water works, the same engine would run both and after a year or so the two combined plants would be making money and begin to pay our debt, principal and interest. Don't let us turn about now and waste all we have done. That is not business. We want the improvements. Let no one misrepesent our interests.

The Range Stove Men

As noted in the COURIER, the St. Louis men, follow up and try to prevent the Marion men from making sales. In the edge of Michigan just north of us, this week, the St. Louis men blocked a gate so that the Marion men should not get through to reach a house. But the Marion men drove over it, forcing their way through. The St. Louis men fired on them, several shots being exchanged, but no one hurt.

BRIDGES LET.

The Massillon Company Gets It At a Fair Price.

It will be remembered by readers of the COURIER that the 35-foot bridge near the Auburn and Newville road east of here several miles, was not let at the time the Goodwin bridge was because the Board thought all the bids were too high. So they tried it again and yesterday was the day. There were several bids as follows:

The Newcastle Bridge Co.	$185 00
The Brackett Bridge Co.	398 00
The Bellfontaine Bridge Co.	450 00
The Massillon Bridge Co.	409 00
Wabash Bridge Co. Lattice	423 28
" " " Plate Girder	393 73
A. Wheelock	617 00

There were several things to be considered besides the price. The Board wanted a bridge of a certain kind and made in a certain way. They had changed the plans a good deal since the last bidding, for they felt the county could not afford so expensive a bridge as the one planned at that time as the road does not have as heavy travel as other roads. So they made plans for a lighter bridge. And instead of stone backing they now have wood. The bids at the other time were from $800 to $900. Now the Massillon Co. get it at $409, and though it is to be a cheaper job they think it is a better bargain.

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

To be healthy, strong nervous action must be well supplied to the organs. There is no activity in the body except by and through the nerves. The heart, liver, kidneys and everything are inactive from lack of nerve power. Poisons remain in the body because there is no nerve power to expel them. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cures by its action on the nerves; it is at once food and medicine for them. It sustains and nourishes by its soothing effect; produces refreshing sleep, which enables them to recuperate. It regulates so that no waste occurs; it cures the cause, goes to the root and restores health. C. N. Pace, Roseville, Ohio, tells in the following words what it did for him:

"I was prostrated about a year ago and kept growing worse under treatment of my physician until I could not sleep or hold a small object safely. I was reduced to 110 pounds and to a state of absolute hopelessness. I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Improvement was noticeable from first dose, was able to sleep, regained muscular control, nervousness abated; I continued to improve, and from the use of seven bottles I am today in perfect health, weighing 152 pounds, a gain of 42 pounds in a few weeks."

When his nerves were restored to healthy action, his food made good, rich blood; the blood made flesh, strength and health.

OMAHA EXPOSITION.

A mammoth reproduction of the historical New England colony of Plymouth, Mass., as it appeared in 1621 is being prepared by W. L. Williams, a Plymouth artest, for exhibition at the Trans Missis-ippi Exposition. The scene is laid in Puritan days and shows the style of habitations in which the pilgrim fathers lived, and the quaint dress worn in the sturdy figure of bold Captain Miles Standish and his men in fighting trim Indians and other characters will help to make the production of still deeper interest. The work will be exhibited in a building erected expressly for the purpose on the amusement section of the Exposition grounds and similar to the cyclorama of "The Battle of Gettysburg."

A. EUGENE DAVIS DEAD.

Special to the DAILY COURIER.

ANGOLA, IND., APRIL 9, '98.—Ex-Prosecuting Attorney, A. Eugene Davis, died at his home here this morning at 2 o'clock. The funeral will probably occur Sunday under the auspices of the K. of P. order of which he was a member.

NICKUM LIGHTS.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., April 6.—S. B Nickum, the inventor of the much advertised and long-expected perpetual light is still in daily receipt of letters from all parts of the country asking that the writers be granted territory for the sale of the new lights when they shall have been put on the market. Mr. Nickum now says that it is but a matter of a few days until he will have all his machinery ready to turn out lights sufficient to supply the demand, and when he has his machinery in place he will be prepared to convince the doubtful ones that he really has such a light as he has claimed. The following schedule of prices for perpetual lights has been prepared by Mr. Nickum and given out for publication

10 candle power, per lamp	$1 00
16 candle power, per lamp	1 50
32 candle power, per lamp	2 50
50 candle power, per lamp	3 50
100 candle power, per lamp	5 00

Each lamp is guaranteed for five years, but is supposed to be as good then as it was at the time it was purchased.

A Recent Instance In Cuba.

Cases innumerable can be quoted where men have asked in vain to be allowed to return to the country. In a certain town sixteen men were seeking permission to go out and begin work on their farms. After three weeks' delay this permission was granted to one of the sixteen applicants, an American citizen. This man borrowed fifty dollars to buy tools and provisions, took eight men with him, and repaired to his old farm, some ten miles away, and began to make charcoal. He personally brought down his first load for sale. Upon finishing this business he started to return, but was stopped. No explanation was given; he was simply told he could not go back. His workmen waited for him until their food was exhausted, and then made their way back into town as best they could This was the end or his effort to provide for his family.—Harper's Weekly.

USEFUL TO FRUIT GROWERS.

The Purdue University Agricultural Experiment station has been making experiments with new varieties of blackberries and raspberries. They recommend the Miller, London, Columbian and Shaffer as being the most desirable varieties of rasberries to plant. They also speak highly of the Conrath, Kansas and Black Diamond as being excellent new black caps and the Golden Queen among the yellow or cream colored varieties, and for general planting the Eureka, Hilborn, Johnston's Sweet, Nemaha and Progress. The following varieties of blackberries are recommended for general use; Agawam, Ancient Briton, Early Harvest, Eldorado, Erie, Snyder and Taylor.

HAMILTON BURNED.

A Terrible Calamity Overtakes the Lively Town on the Border.

Word came to Auburn by a dispatch to Geo. Lanning yesterday that a large portion of Hamilton had been destroyed by fire The alarm was given at about five in the morning when some of the sufferes were awakened from sleep by the heat and roar of the approaching fire. They had to jump for their lives for the property in some cases, was already past saving. The total loss as near as can now be estimated is not far from $20,000 with about half that amount covered by insurance. The following list gives an approximate showing of the losses and insurance:

	LOSS.	INSURANCE
O. P Learned, store building	$1500	$ 500
Learned Thomas and Co., Gen. stock of goods & Bank	7000	3000
Silas Gray, building	1000	900
Wm. Dargue grocery	2000	1400
R. Sawvel, store building	1000	1000
J. Zimmerman, stock of furniture	1000	750
G. A. R. Building	1500	1000
G. A. R. Furniture	400	00
K. of P. Furniture	400	00
F. L. Hoch, Drugs	3000	2000
Thad Thomas, furniture	1000	250
Mr. Dard, furniture	500	00

It is understood that the fire originated in the Sawvel building. There is also a rumor that help was asked from Ashley, but that a bond to cover expenses was asked by Ashley, and no help was given. We hope this last rumor will prove unfounded, as help should be given in such cases and let the expense be an after consideration.

Quite a number of narrow escapes are reported as the fire had made such swift advances while the people were yet asleep. Several persons who lived over stores found the fire so close, they were glad to get out alive leaving a lot clothing behind. Thomas and Dargue, also had a close call for their lives.

KILLED AT HIS POST.

Word came yesterday, that the night before, a telegraph operator, was killed at his post in a Wisconsin town It was Lona Culler a step-brother of Mrs Alvin Baker. The particulars are not at hand, but Mr. Baker and family go to Hicksville to day to attend the funeral as the body is expected to reach there this evening. It is supposed he was attacked by the class of tramps now becoming too common.

MAY HAVE TO GO.

As noticed elsewhere in todays COURIER, it looks like war. In that case, about seventy young men in Auburn are liable to be taken out in some what of a hurry and carried across the country to the seaboard and there held in readiness for whatever may be necessary to do. As far as we are personally acquainted with these young men, the members of Co. K, we believe they will make intelligent and valuable soldiers and we have no doubt, will be an honor to the town that sends them. It may not be a pleasant thing to some, to go, but every duty should be cheerfulle performed, whether agreeable or not. We sincerely believe that the young men of Co. K are in all ways, equal to any similar body of men who ever left DeKalb county to offer themselves for the service of their country.

A Peerless Liniment.

As a pain destroyer and cure for rheumatism, Salvation Oil is the peer of all liniments. Mr. Wm. H. Brown, proprietor of Striebinger House, Cleveland, O., writes: "I suffered from rheumatism for twelve years and my last attack kept me in bed, unable to walk. I used Salvation Oil and soon was up and about. As a pain destroyer this liniment has no equal." Salvation Oil is sold everywhere for 25 cents. Try it and be convinced.

Scrofula is Snake-Like in its subtlety. It lies hidden for years in the ambush of the blood, and when it strikes it voids its venom alike on strength and beauty, disfiguring the one and undermining the other.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is a specific for scrofula in its worst and most malignant forms. Scrofula is a blood disease. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifying medicine. Mineral medicines only drive scrofula below the surface. Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a vegetable remedy and it eradicates the disease. There is no remedy for scrofula equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"I was cured of a long-standing case of scrofula by Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The disease first manifested itself when I was a child, by breaking out in red blotches all over my body. I was not free from the trouble until I took several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. That effected a permanent cure."—MRS. E. H. SNYDER, Lehighton, Pa.

JUMBO LICKEE BILLEE

While the five bears were performing on 7th-st., yesterday evening a purse was raised to pay for a fight between the largest two. Of course they were muzzled but the combat was severe. At the end of one round the large cinnamon bear charged on its trainer, threw him to the ground and lay down over him. One of the other keepers quietly pulled the big fellow off. The man was frightened and his hand was bleeding but did not appear to be otherwise injured. Instead of chastising the bear, as was expected, the injured man went to him quietly at once, began to sing and set the huge beast to dancing again. Had the animal not been muzzled, he would perhaps have killed the man. The spectators fairly held their breath while the contest was going on. The man had sense enough to lie face down while the bear was on him, clawing him. It was a clear case of "Jumbo Lickee Billie." They soon stopped the show and men and animals walked off to the track of the Jackson railway and on up Waterloo.

Lincoln's Lost Speech.

The famous "Lost Speech" of Abraham Lincoln, which was published in McCLURE'S MAGAZINE a few years ago, has now been added to Professor Bliss Perry's volume devoted to Lincoln in the "Little Masterpieces" series. This is the first time that this famous speech has been available outside of the back numbers of McCLURE'S MAGAZINE. Professor Perry has had remarkable success in editing these "Little Masterpieces", the Lincoln volume, just ready, and the volume devoted to the best writings of Benjamin Franklin are models of inspiring reading for young men who are earnest in their endeavor to make a success of life.

FROM HONOLULU.

Mr. Shade, The Courier Correspondent Writes another Interesting Letter.

HONOLULU, H. I, Mar. 30, '98.

EDITOR COURIER:—

As I write secluded in the deep shade of of a bread fruit tree cheered by the joyful songs of birds in the foliage overhead, lulled by the rushing of a cataract near by, I realize we are in another world. At San Francisco we met a wild rush of gold seekers all headed north. I was glad we were headed the other way. From Australia, New Zealand and the other Islands, they are coming to meet misery and death in their search for gold. The incoming boats are crowded while those outward bound carry away but few. So we were quite alone so far as fellow passengers were concerned. There was an old grey bearded Englishman who said he was governor of a cannibal island. Three young missionaries sent out by the Mormon church to spred the light as Joe Smith saw it, and five Catholic Sisters going to some convent in the colonies. Then there were several aristocratic individuals of whom we took no notice. Two Chinamen and my own family, which now consists of two daughters aged respectively nine and one years, my wife and myself. As we speed out of the Golden Gate, cold mist and fog come rolling in and a rough sea prevailed. But this steamship the Moana is the largest vessel engaged in the Pacific trade, being 4,000 tons burden and is newly built, clean and trim. There was but little sea sickness experienced except among aforesaid aristocratic individuals who did not share our sympathy. Day by day the sun grew warmer and the air more balmy. The sea animals and birds more numerous until the morning of seventh day. When we arose from our berths the sun was shedding his glad light over a tropic sea. Wife and daughters on deck enjoying the fresh air with me when we saw far to the west a bank of ice and snow rising out of the tropic sea. It was our first glimps of land since leaving San Francisco and strange it should be ice as we were now within the tropics. It was the lofty peak of Mauana Kea and Mauana Loa on the Island of Haiwaii. On nearer approach trees appeared until finally we were coasting islands clothed with luxurious tropical vegitation. Swiftly by the dreaded island of Molokua where is banished the 2,000 unfortunate lepers of the Island of the Republic of Hawaii. Through the channel and around to the leeward side of the island of Oahua and we were boarded by a pilot who took us safely in the harbor of Honolulu. The city is a grandly beautiful sight viewed from the sea, sloping gently from a background of mountains to the sea. This place contains a mixed population of about 30,000 of whom about 4,000 are white, the remainder Chinese, Japs and Natives. It has macadamized streets, street railways, electric lights water works, telephones and all the modern conveniences. Almost every house has its flower garden and trees. The whole aspect is one of quiet beauty and would require a lengthy communication to give anything like a fair description of the place which space forbids. Our boat stops here six hours during which time we visit some of the most interesting places about town among which is the Pallor precipice where we look down on a quiet valley below to the windward side of the island, an inspiring scene. But the hour draws nigh when we must reembark for Apia. So biding the readers of the COURIER, a pleasant good morning. I remain yours truly,

JOSEPH A. SHADE.

COURT

The long drawn out horse case between McCormick and the Wabash road, is still hanging fire. It was given to the jury yesterday and today they are still wrestling with it. It is really a case of unusual difficulty, and besides the conflicting mass of evidence, there is a great demand for care and prudence, as on the decision will depend many future similar cases, in which the responsibility of a railroad may be at stake. The owner of the horse wants $5000, as he claims the horse would have been worth that, had she not been rendered unable to race again. The company, on the other hand are not willing to pay more than they have to. Our opinion is that the jury will give a verdict for McCormick and against the Company, but not for any sum like $5000. It is likely they are trying to get gether as to the amount. LATER:—At 2:30 they had agreed on a verdict of $250 for McCormick for the value of that horse. At first nine of them favored $1500, but finally came down to $250.

Overleas, the other Elkhart lad gets 120 days in jail and a fine of $15. He is one of those now engaged in working on the streets, under the guiding hand of Marshal Potter. It will be remembered that he was not one of the original three who were caught in the Lake Shore, car at Kendallville. But since the escape of the Eash boy from the jail here, one of the others, Gemberling told on Overleas, saying that he had been one of the gang also. He was arrested, brought here, and plead guilty.

Wm Drake who was hauled up for disturbing a meeting was let off.

Bert Girard from Angola, was fined $5 for gambling.

IN THEIR OWN HOME.

Mr. Ora Knisely and Miss Flora Jones were married at their home in Butler last evening. The ceremony way by the M. E. Minister of that place the guests being only the immediate relatives of both parties. It was in their own home, recently bought and nicely fitted up. So they are starting out in a sensible way. The Herald in speaking of them says:

Mr. Knisely is a young man well and favorably known to all our readers and his addition to the ranks of the benedicts will reflect honor and credit upon the fraternity.

Miss Jones is an accomplished young lady who has resided in Butler for six years. She has a large circle of admiring friends all of whom join the Herald in well wishes. They will be at home in this city after Thursday April 21, 1898.

WHAT SPANIARDS SAY

Our people may like to read what the Spanish papers say of us and of the president's message. Late advices by cable from Madrid brings their editorial. The "Imparcial" says:

Our government must see that each act of weakness will beget a fresh American insult. President McKinley scarcely notices the armistice except to tell the inurgents that in case peace should not result from it intervention will follow. In words, "Don't yield, I am here." Let Spain send her fleet to Cuba. Let the truce end so soon as it is known the insurgents will not surrender. Honor and common sense demand this course.

The "Liberal" says:

There is only one road for Spain. We agree with Senor Silvia as to the necessity of proceeding without delay and fearlessly towards a definite decision. The Liberal always supported peace, but we think affairs have arrived at a point when true patriotism demands an immediate solution.

"The "Globo" says if McKinley is not satisfied with the sacrifice already made by Spain to please him, they will publish an official list of the concessions made by Spain in the interest of peace.

Several papers speak of McKinley's message as "stale news," except his threat to intervene, and all say he insults Spain in about every line.

MOVING TROOPS.

Will Concentrate Them at the Most Convenient Points.

For the benefit of those ho have not time to read the big dailies we give this in brief.

Orders were issued yesterday to move 22 regiments of regulars of the infantry 6 of cavalry and 3 of artillery besides several light field batteries They are to concentrate at four points in the south as follows:

At Chickamauga battlefield six regiments of cavalry with light batteries and five regiments of artilery. Under command of Major Gen. J. R. Brooke.

At New Orleans eight regiments of infantry under Brig. Gen. W. B. Shafter.

At Tampa Florida, seven regiments of infantry, under Brig. Gen. J. F. Wade.

At Mobile, seven regiments of infantry under Brig. Gen. J. J. Clippinger.

All these divisions will be under the command of Major Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who is the highest officer in the army.

CLOSE TO WAR

Yesterday was an exciting one in both Houses of Congress, and as was to be expected, both offered resolutions of a more or less warlike character. In the House the resolutions were stronger and more to the point, for after a good deal of buncombe the following, was passed.

Resolved. That the president is hereby authorized and directed to intervene at once to stop the war in Cuba to the end and with the purpose of securing permanent peace and order there, and establishing by the free action of the people thereof, a stable and independent government of their own in the island of Cuba; and the president is hereby authorized and empowered to use the land and naval forces of the United States to execute the purpose of this resolution.

There were several preambles, etc, with this, but this paragraph is the main one.

The senate was not nearly as well agreed, they being greatly divided, and seemingly anxious to go slow. And the resolutions they talked over, were not finished up.

In both Houses, the democrats offered minority reports; much stronger in favor of Cuba, but minority reports are seldom or never considered or allowed to come to a vote.

Today, the debates will likely be continued in both Houses.

In the meantime, the preparations on land and sea, go steadily on both in the United States and Spain. Spain refuses to consider the question of giving up Cuba, and if the United States intervenes there will no doubt be a short, sharp, war. If so, the result will be to free Cuba.

In case of war, it is not believed that all the militia will be called out at once. Indiana is likely to be called on for enough to make up one regiment, and if the war continues, will later on, be called on for more. The other states will be called on in the same way.

At present there seems to be no danger that other nations will have much to say for either side.

LATE LICENSES.

Since our last report, we find that the county clerk has issued marriage licenses to these:

Norman C. Browand and Grace M. Thomas, Guy Hardenbrook and Effie Broughton, John Rettlemund and Rowena Gall, Arthur A. Armstrong and Mary Lung, Wm. E. Devore and Caroline A. Green, Conrad Ream and Catharine Shaffer, Ora F. Knisely and Flora E. Jones.

FREEDOM FOR CUBA.

SENATE VOTES RECOGNITION TO THE ISLAND REPUBLIC.

Ringing Declaration of Independence Passed by the Great House of Congress—A Practical Declaration of War.

Senate Resolutions.

The United States Senate has spoken. Its voice is for war—war until the saffron flag of Spain shall have been furled in the western hemisphere and furled forever. The following resolutions were passed last Saturday night by a vote o 61 to 21:

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled,

1. That the people of the island of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent, and that the Government of the United States hereby recognizes the Republic of Cuba as the true and lawful Government of that island.

2. That it is the duty of the United States to demand, and the Government of the United States does hereby demand, that the Government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the Island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

3. That the President of the United States be, and hereby is directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States, and to call into service of the United States militia of the several states, to such extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect.

4. That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof; and assert its determination when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

THE BOOM IS WEST.

The Great Middle Region of the Country Is Free from War Scare.

Bradstreet's Commercial Report says:

The effect of the prevailing uncertainty in foreign affairs was reflected in a further perceptible quieting down of general trade, as far as future engagements are concerned, in nearly all parts of the country, and while there is a little more activity to be noted in the demand for seasonable staples at the West and Northwest where better weather helped the retail and wholesale trade alike, rather more quiet is reported at the East and at south Atlantic and the gulf ports, where interruption to business has become particularly serious. The disposition to buy the actual necessities developed a hand to mouth demand in the latter sections, but the chief effect was found in the indisposition to embark in new enterprises or contract new obligations pending a definite settlement of the foreign controversy. The least notable effects yet exhibited are in the central west, where the distributive demand movement is reported seasonable, the only changes noted being the strengthening of money rates and discouragement to new enterprises, such as railroad building.

For Identifying Dead.

The War Department will adopt a system of identification of those who fall in battle in Cuba. The experience of the late war showed that many men who were killed were subsequently buried by men of other organizations and that the means of identification were oftentimes lacking. The suggestion likely to be adopted is the issue of an aluminum tag to each man, which will be suspended about the neck under the clothing. This tag will bear the numeral of which each name on the rolls will be assigned and will also bear the company and regiment to which the wearer belongs. This will make identification a simple matter.

Abandon All Hope.

London special: The members of the diplomatic corps in this city have now abandoned all hope of effectual mediation upon the part of the powers between the United States and Spain. The Spanish and Austrian Ambassadors, however, cling tenaciously to the delusion that they will be able to arrange at the last moment a compromise which will avert war. They have haunted the British Foreign Office for a week past, calling in daily, and occasionally more often. Their efforts were seemingly rewarded with little encouragement.

Riots in Cadiz Threaten the American Consulate.

Cadiz (Spain) special: The students of the school of medicine, carrying a flag, attempted to make a manifestation here the other evening, but the police interfered and arrested two of the students. As a result, the United States Consulate has been placed under guard.

Through a Trestle.

A Columbus, Sandusky and Hocking engine was backing down on a switch south of Delaware, Ohio, when a trestle gave way and the engine was thrown down into the ravine. The high water had undermined the structure. The engineer and firemen both jumped and saved their lives.

Two Deaths Follow a Fight.

Eau Claire (Wis.) special: During a quarrel over some tomato plants, Christian Miller split William Taylor's head open with an ax and then fled. Taylor is dead and it is believed that Miller has killed himself.

China Won't Sell.

The Shanghai correspondent says: "China has declined to sell to the United States three cruisers that are being built in Germany, although the American agents offered to replace them with four vessels."

Auxiliary Naval Force.

Senator Hale has introduced a joint resolution at the instance of the Navy Department providing for an auxiliary naval force for coast defense to be enrolled in such numbers as the President may direct, and to serve for one year.

The resolution provides for officers for the force to be selected from merchant vessels.

Our Fruit Shut Out of Switzerland.

The Government of Switzerland prohibited the importation of American fresh fruits. This action was taken owing to the alleged presence of the San Jose scale in the fruit imported recently.

"Country Will Go to War."

The Washington Post, an administration paper, prints the following editorial:

The die is cast. The country will go to war. There is no longer any question of supporting the President or of upholding Congress. The situation is reduced to a simple duty—that of standing by the country—the Union flag. Rightly or wrongly—rightly, we believe—the die is cast. The House of Representatives has spoken by an overwhelming majority. The Senate will not interpose frivolous delays and obstacles. It must meet its duty promptly, courageously. We have passed the point of cavil, or parliamentary finesse. No sane man would now seek to stem the passionate current of American thought and purpose. There can be no further argument, no more assertion of personal opinion. The House of Representatives is the most authoritative and the most accurate index of popular feeling.

Only Two of a Crew of Seventeen Saved.

Two emaciated and exhausted men, the survivors of the seventeen who composed the crew of the British ship Marlborough, were brought to New York by the North German Lloyd steamer Saale, which picked them up Easter Sunday. They had drifted for five days without food and drink, sitting most of the time waist deep in water in a life-boat submerged in the gunwales. The life-boat was a poor craft. On the day that the Marlborough left St. Johns, N. B., with her cargo of squared timbers bound for England, the authorities condemned it as a worthless piece of marine junk. The inspectors said it was old, and that it would be suicide for any man to brave the sea in it. The sides were rotten under the paint.

Gold and Valuables Shipped from Havana.

The banking firm of Muller, Schall & Co., New York, has received $400,000 in gold, which arrived from Havana on the steamship Orizaba. It was sent here for safe keeping and makes $1,000,000 of gold thus received by the firm. Gold, however, is not the only thing being sent from Cuba to get it away from danger from theft and destruction by bombardment, burning and pillage in case of war. Every steamship from Cuba has lately been bringing boxes containing valuables, including heirlooms, silverware and paintings, and these have gone to safe deposit vaults or other places of safe keeping.

Government Crop Report.

The report of the Department of Agriculture for April 1 makes the average condition of winter wheat 86 per cent., against 81.4 last April and 77.1 April 1, 1897. The leading winter wheat States report averages as follows:

Pennsylvania, 92; Ohio, 89; Michigan, 92; Indiana, 85; Illinois, 75; Missouri, 81; Kansas, 101; California, 62. The average condition of winter rye is 92.1, against 88.9 on April 1, 1897, and 82.9 on the corresponding date in 1895. There are a few sections of the country from which a very satisfactory report as to the condition of winter grain has not been received.

War Is Certain.

Madrid special: The newspapers here regard war inevitable. The last dispatches from Washington have created profound excitement throughout Spain. The Spaniards protest against the "odious imputation" that Spanish officers were responsible for the loss of the Maine. It is asserted here that proof can be furnished to show that no torpedoes have been laid in Havana harbor. The Official Gazette will publish a decree organizing a national subscription to increase the strength of the Spanish fleet.

Carnival Feature.

Des Moines (Iowa) special: No State fair will be held here this year, as the Legislature failed to make its usual appropriation for the society. There has been considerable feeling in the State against holding the fair, because of the Omaha exposition. The business men will, nevertheless, hold the Seni-Om-Sed (Des Moines) carnival, which usually has been held fair week. Their present plan is to have a representation of the Maine's destruction as the feature of the carnival.

See of Indianapolis.

Rome special: The pope has appointed the Rev. Alexander Christie, rector of St. Stephens church at Minneapolis, to the bishopric of Van Couver. His holiness has approved the transfer of the See of Vincennes to Indianapolis, from which it will take its name.

Will Not Arbitrate.

A special from Berne, Switzerland, says: The suggestion made by the National Council that the bundesrath consider whether it could not offer to mediate between the United States and Spain was brought before the bundesrath and was unanimously rejected.

Positions Kept Open.

The Postmaster General has decided that postal employes may enlist in the army or go to the front with the militia and not lose their positions. While away, however, their salaries will cease. This includes clerks, carriers, postmasters and other employes.

Millions for Defense.

Senator Thurston has introduced a bill making a permanent annual appropriation of $2,500,000 for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the National Guard and of $300,000 for the improvement of the naval reserve.

TALK IN THE SENATE.

CUBA'S FREEDOM THE SUBJECT OF A HOT DEBATE.

Some Plead for Peace, While Others Urge Vengeance on Spain, and Declare It is Time to End the Conflict on the Island.

Proceedings in Upper House.

The action of the House of Representatives Wednesday in adopting its declaration upon the Hispano-American situation, made the Senate Thursday the storm center of the war elements. The galleries were packed and thousands were turned away. By unanimous consent, at the request of Senator Davis, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, the resolution as reported by the Foreign Relations Committee was laid before the Senate and debate began.

The debate was not particularly interesting, although there were some spicy dialogues and two or three dramatic scenes. An attack was made upon the President by Mr. Turner of Washington, which was very bitter in tone. He described the policy of Mr. McKinley on the Cuban question as "effervescent and iridescent promises accompanied by a mysterious reserve that was awe inspiring." During the progress of the debate there was a large attendance and a number of chairs were brought in to accommodate a number of Representatives who came to hear the speeches.

Senator Hoar replied to Mr. Turner. He spoke in a low tone of voice, with great earnestness and solemnity, and every word he uttered was distinctly heard by every person in the chamber. Mr. Hoar recited many incidents in our earlier history that bear directly upon the present situation, and urged the Senate "to practice that self-restraint which is more sublime than to yield to a tempest of excitement and indignation." No one felt more deeply the awful horrors of the Maine, no one was more jealous of the national honor than he, no one feared war less; but he pleaded with his colleagues not to plunge the country into hostilities without being certain they were on the right side. He defended the President with eloquent zeal.

Senator Gray, a Democrat, made an earnest speech in defense of a Republican President. Senator Fairbanks of Indiana also spoke. The Cuban resolutions, however, were not a party question in the Senate. Both the Republicans and the Democrats were very sharply divided. Among the most earnest supporters of the President were Messrs. Caffery, Faulkner, Gorman, Gray and other Democrats, while the most radical sympathizers of the insurgents were found on the Republican side—Messrs. Chandler, Thurston, Proctor, Foraker and Mason.

During Senator Fairbanks' speech Mr. Davis, the chairman of that committee, made repeated efforts to reach an agreement for an adjournment, and after Senator Fairbanks had concluded Senator Davis moved that the Senate adjourn until 10 o'clock Friday, and upon that motion the test of the strength of forces came. The roll call showed it to be defeated by two majority, the vote being 32 in the negative and 30 in the affirmative.

Senator Cullom took the floor, but yielded to Mr. Davis to renew his efforts to reach an understanding limiting debate. This precipitated a scene. The Senators forgot their dignity, and proceeded in an informal way to discuss the proposition. They crowded in the main aisle in front of the Vice-President in heated discussion, and for a while it was feared the disgraceful scenes in the House Wednesday would be repeated. Mr. Cockrell pleaded with Mr. Davis for a motion to adjourn, leaving the Senate to set an hour for the final vote at Friday's session. Senator Carter opposed deliberation and demanded action. He said twenty-three Senators had announced their intention to make speeches, and yet every one knew not a vote on the floor would be changed should the debate continue for a week. He was liberally applauded, and when the galleries were censured by the Vice-President Senator Pettus of Alabama took up their defense and claimed they voiced the sentiment of the American people. The applause, he said, commenced on the floor, and Mr. Mason, with apparent satisfaction, announced that he had started it.

One of the great speeches of the day was delivered late in the afternoon by David Turpie, Democratic Senator from Indiana, who is generally regarded as one of the ablest lawyers in the United States. Mr. Turpie, in a speech of less than thirty minutes, attempted to demonstrate that if this Government intervened in the Cuban situation without first recognizing the independence of the insurgent republic it would thereby become liable for the Spanish-Cuban war debt, amounting to about $400,000,000.

After a six-hour session the Senate adjourned with the Cuban question unsettled, and no arrangement made for taking a vote.

War Speech by Cullom.

The Senate met at 10 o'clock Friday, and it was announced that an adjournment would not be taken until a vote had been reached on the Cuban question. Despite the lowering clouds which threatened to pour out their suspended torrents at any moment, and despite, too, the unusually early hour of convention, the galleries were thronged when the Vice-President's gavel fell. At the suggestion of Mr. Davis the ordinary morning business was set aside and the Foreign Relations Committee Cuban resolutions were laid before the Senate.

Senator Cullom of Illinois was the first speaker. In referring to Spain's appeal to the European powers he said:

"Spain, in her appeal to the European powers, appealed to the 'divine right of kings,' but America appeals to the divine right of the people. We propose to do our duty to God and humanity, to liberty and ourselves, by saying to Spain: 'Hold your hand; you shall not outrage liberty and humanity in Cuba any longer.'" The speaker also said the hour for action was about to strike, and that it was the duty of the Senate to face the crisis boldly and loyally. "And if Spain shall see proper to resent our action when we tell her to withdraw, we shall not hesitate to take up the gauntlet and appeal to the god of battles and to the judgment of mankind to justify our cause," concluded Mr. Cullom.

Mr. Berry of Arkansas was the next speaker. He said a great responsibility rested upon the President, and while he should be supported in this crisis the Senator himself believed the Senate should go further and pass a resolution recognizing the independence of Cuba. The language should be so plain, he said, that no one could fail to understand its meaning. The whole world a week ago believed this Government would take such a step. The belief had since been spread that we intend to put upon the Cubans obligations they could not and would not assume. Mr. Berry said that after he heard Senator Proctor's speech on Cuba, he (Berry) remarked to Mr. Vest of Missouri: "That speech means war." Mr. Berry added that the Proctor speech touched the hearts of the American people from one end of the land to the other. "If we fail to respond," he continued, "we will be regarded as sneaks and cowards."

The speech of Senator Berry was applauded, which moved Senator Cockrell to demand silence from the galleries and an enforcement of rules. Accordingly the presiding officer impressively informed the immense concourse of people present that they would have to observe the dignity of the Senate or the galleries would be cleared.

Senator Daniel of Virginia followed Mr. Berry. Mr. Daniel said that he had been an advocate of peace, but the time for war seemed now at hand. "We stand upon the edge of war. This nation is one with the sword in its hand, and if the word that now hesitates upon the lips be spoken and the command 'Forward' be given, upon some proud day the Stars and Stripes will be waving over Morro Castle and Cabanas prison."

Mr. Daniel said he was content neither with the House resolution nor with the Senate committee's resolution, and served what he termed a warning to the country that if the resolutions reported by the Foreign Relations Committee were "adopted" it would mean that American guns would be turned in the faces of Maximo Gomez and his liberty-loving followers. Senator Daniel's speech was a bitter arraignment of the President. He openly charged that the President meant to use the forces of the army and navy to suppress the insurgents.

The sharp criticism of the President's action and message induced a heated colloquy between Senators Daniel and Gray. Senator Gray said the insinuation was false and that the Senator from Virginia (Daniel) was the only one in the United States who would dare to make such a charge against the President. A sensation followed this charge. Senator Daniel proceeded in a sensational manner. He said: "I speak plainly. We do not speak Spanish in this chamber and then stab our brother under the fifth rib. I am glad to get into the open air of the discussion permitted in a free country."

There was great indignation among radical Senators who were convinced that war was inevitable at the lack of vigor in the resolutions passed by the House, and particularly in the omission of the clause compelling Spain to at once withdraw from Cuba.

UPHOLDS THE MINE THEORY.

Lee Believes Spanish Officials Blew Up the Battleship Maine.

The testimony taken before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in connection with the investigation into the relations between the United States and Cuba was made public Thursday. It constitutes a book of about 650 pages and includes not only the testimony taken since the disaster to the Maine but also much that was taken before and running back for a year or more.

The statement which contains the greatest current interest is that made by Consul General Lee, on the 12th instant. In this statement Gen. Lee said that he was informed on good authority that the Spaniards had placed two rows of torpedoes just at the mouth of the Havana harbor by Morro Castle within the last two months, or subsequent to the Maine disaster, and that the switchboard is in a room in the castle. He said, however, that he had no information of the placing of any torpedoes before the Maine was destroyed, and none in regard to the purchase abroad by the Spanish authorities.

"Have you any reason to suppose that the harbor was mined before the blowing up of the Maine?" asked Senator Frye.

"No, sir; I had no reason to suspect anything of that sort up to that time." He then went on to say that Gen. Weyler's letter to Santos Guzman had led him to believe that mines might have been placed there previous to the Maine incident, and he said that this supposition was strengthened by a telegram from Gen. Weyler of which he had cognizance. Upon the whole he thought the Weyler letter (the Laine letter) was a correct copy of the genuine letter.

The telegram to which he referred was addressed to Eva Canel, a noted Spanish woman and an admirer of Weyler's, and to Senor Guzman, and it read as follows:

"Grave circumstances cause me to ask you to destroy the last letter of Feb. 12."

Gen. Lee said that this telegram had never before been published and he found in it strong confirmatory evidence of the genuineness of the Weyler letter.

With reference to the responsibility for the destruction of the Maine, Gen. Lee said: "I am satisfied the explosion was from the outside. I cabled the state department a few days after the board assembled that it was almost certain that the explosion was from the exterior. I have always had an idea about the Maine that, of course, it was not blown up by any private individual or by any private citizen, but it was blown up by some of the officers who had charge of the mines and electrical wires and torpedoes in the arsenal there, who thoroughly understood their business, for it was done remarkably well."

Gen. Lee said that he had seen a copy of a telegram from Admiral Manterolla, dated in Havana, prior to the explosion of the Maine, to the Spanish commission in London, asking the commission to "hurry up the electrical cables." "Whether that referred to wire for submarine mines or torpedoes I do not know," he continued. "I tried to ascertain if any of the wire or electrical cables had arrived there, but they came on Spanish ships and I could not find out."

WEYLER'S LETTER.

"Butcher" Intimates What He Would Do to an American Ship.

The letter referred to by Consul General Lee in his testimony before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations as showing that Gen. Weyler was probably cognizant of the fact that submarine mines had been laid in the harbor of Havana, and that probably it was the explosion of one of these by Spanish officials that caused the Maine disaster, bears the date of Jan. 8, 1898, and was written to "His Excellency Don Francisco de los Santos Guzman" at Havana. The part pointed to as referring to the existence of submarine mines in the Havana harbor is as follows:

By the way, I have read these days that the Americans are pondering about sending one of their war ships to that city. During my command in Cuba they did not even dare to dream about it. They knew the terrible punishment that awaited them.

I had Havana harbor well prepared for such an emergency. I rapidly finished the work that Martinez Campos carelessly abandoned.

If the insult is made I hope that there will be a Spanish hand to punish it as terribly as it deserves.

HOSTILE TO UNITED STATES.

Berlin, Paris, and Vienna Papers Denounce Congress.

The reports from the European capitals, especially Berlin, Vienna and Paris, record a strong anti-American bias on the part of a majority of the press and politicians. The newspapers address to the Americans such severe homilies as British readers are constantly accustomed to hearing, upbraiding them for being nearly as bad as their world-grabbing cousins. This is especially the case since the introduction of the warlike resolutions in Congress. The opinion is becoming general that the United States aims to annex Cuba, and President McKinley and Congress are held responsible for forcing a war on Spain. A Paris paper compares Mr. McKinley with Pilate, and accuses Congress of buccaneering.

HOUSE IS FOR WAR.

INTERVENTION RESOLUTIONS PASSED WITH A RUSH.

They Demand Immediate Intervention—President Directed to Use the Army, Navy and Volunteers to Carry Decision of Congress Into Effect

Liberty for the Island.

The American House of Representatives on Wednesday declared for intervention in Cuba. After one of the most exciting and memorable days in its history, the House, by a vote of 322 to 19, adopted a resolution which nine-tenths of its members believed made war with Spain inevitable. By nearly unanimous vote the President of the United States was authorized to intervene for the purpose of securing a free Cuba. Thunderous applause on both sides of the hall and in the galleries greeted the announcement of the result of this momentous roll call.

All the afternoon the House had been in a state of intense excitement, and the day was marked by a number of sensational scenes. On account of internal explosions in the House the sergeant-at-arms was twice compelled to intervene with his mace to stop what bade fair to be a devastating war among the members.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations late Tuesday afternoon agreed by unanimous vote on resolutions recognizing the right of the Cubans to independence and empowering the President to compel Spain to withdraw from the island.

These resolutions are preceded by a stirring preamble which declares that the horrible condition of affairs which has prevailed for two years in the island of Cuba, so near to our borders, has shocked mankind, and is a disgrace to Christian civilization. It is further set forth that this condition of anarchy culminated in the destruction of a United States battleship and 266 of its officers and crew while they were on a friendly visit in the harbor of Havana. This state of affairs, it is said, can no longer be endured, and therefore, according to the facts set forth in the President's message, in which Congress was requested to act, the Senate committee adopts the resolutions which are as follows:

"Resolved, first—That the people of the island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

"Second—That the war Spain is waging against Cuba is so destructive of the commercial and property interests of the United States, and so cruel, barbarous, and inhuman in its character, as to make it the duty of the United States to demand, and the government of the United States hereby does demand, that she at once withdraw her land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

"Third—That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized, empowered, and directed to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States, and to call into the service of the United States the militia of the several States, to such an extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect."

The scene in the Senate chamber Wednesday when Senator Davis, chairman of the foreign relations committee, presented the resolution declaring Cuba free and independent was dramatic. The report came in much sooner than expected—immediately after the morning hour. The resolutions went to the limit of the pro-Cuban sentiment. The report accompanying the resolutions, which was also presented by Senator Davis, was a very thorough review of the entire situation.

The reading of the report occupied forty-seven minutes. Senator Hoar demanded that the resolution lie over under the rules until Thursday. The Vice President reserved his decision upon the point of order and recognized Senator Foraker, who yielded the floor to Senator Turpie. The latter presented the report of the minority of the committee on foreign relations, as follows:

The undersigned members of the Committee on Foreign Relations cordially concur in the report made upon the Cuban resolutions, but we favor the immediate recognition of the republic of Cuba, as organized in that island, as a free, independent and sovereign power among the nations of the world.

The minority report was signed by Senators Turpie, Mills, Daniel and Foraker. Conservative Senators showed a disposition to delay action on the resolutions by debate. Senator Davis said there was no disposition to unduly press the question, though it would be pressed as rapidly as possible. The chair decided Senator Hoar's point of order well taken.

Two Reports in House.

Late Tuesday night the Republican members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs agreed to report the following:

The President is authorized, directed, and empowered to intervene at once to restore peace on the island of Cuba and secure to the people thereof a firm, stable and independent government of their own, and is authorized to use the army and navy forces of the United States to secure this end.

The House committee on foreign affairs went into session about 10:20 o'clock Wednesday morning. At 11:15 the committee took a recess until 1 o'clock. Republicans were agreed and the recess was taken to allow the Democrats to consult the leaders with the hope that unanimous action might be had.

The Republican majority of the foreign affairs committee at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon agreed to report a resolution in substance the same as that decided upon Tuesday night. The Democratic members of the committee, however, agreed upon a resolution as a substitute for the majority report in which the recognition of the present Cuban government is demanded.

At exactly 3 o'clock the Speaker recognized Mr. Adams, acting chairman of the foreign affairs committee. He asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolutions which he submitted.

Mr. Bailey objected to the consideration of the resolutions. Charges and counter charges were bandied across the floor, and a fist fight on the floor of the House almost followed. The Speaker ordered the sergeant-at-arms to use the silver mace, the emblem of the House's authority.

LEE IS LIONIZED.

Wild Enthusiasm When the Consul General Reached Washington.

The journey of Consul General Lee from Key West to Washington was a continuous ovation. It was like the return of a victorious general from a hard-fought campaign. The people gathered by the thousands at the railway stations along his route, cheered him, embraced him, and overwhelmed him with flowers.

When the special train which carried him from Tampa to the capital pulled into the Pennsylvania station at 2:15 p. m., Tuesday, there was a great crowd, numbering from 3,000 to 5,000 people, waiting to see him and shout a welcome. There went up a wild shout from the people, and they crowded forward to greet him. Assistant Secretary Michael of the State Department and Colonel R. I. Fleming, president of the Confederate Veterans' Association, were there to meet him, and he was hurried away in a carriage to the State Department. The crowd rushed to the street and men on foot, on wheels, and in carriages followed the carriage of General Lee up Pennsylvania avenue, while the crowds on the street joined in the enthusiastic welcome to him. It was not an organized movement, but the enthusiastic outpouring of the spirit of patriotism looking for an idol.

At the State Department there was another large crowd, and the clerks in the big State, War and Navy buildings poured out into the corridors and upon the steps to add their voices to the cheering over the consul general. After a short conference with Secretary Sherman and Assistant Secretary Day these two officials escorted General Lee to the White House. From the White House General Lee went to the Shoreham Hotel, and half an hour later slipped out unobserved, boarded a street car and rode to the capitol, without being recognized until he entered the Senate wing, where another crowd waited outside the room of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Believes Spaniards Guilty.

Consul General Lee was before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations for an hour. He talked freely with the Committee in regard to the conditions in Cuba, and especially with reference to the destruction of the Main. He said that in his opinion there was no room to doubt that the destruction of the vessel was due to Spanish agencies.

TELL OF WOE IN CUBA.

Facts from Reports of United States Consuls on Spanish Brutality.

On Jan. 8 of the present year Consul Lee reported: "The reconcentrado order of Gen. Weyler transformed 400,000 self-supporting people, principally women and children, into a multitude. Their homes were burned, their fields destroyed, and their live stock driven away or killed. I estimate that probably 200,000 of the rural population of the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana, Matanzas and Santa Clara have died of starvation. In some parts of the island I am told there is scarcely any food for soldiers and citizens, and that even cats are used for food, selling for 30 cents apiece."

On Dec. 7 Consul Lee reported: "I see no effect of the governmental distribution to the reconcentrados. Reports from all parts of the province show 50 per cent have died, and most of these are women and children."

In his letter of Nov. 23 Gen. Lee said: "If any young girl came in (to Los Fosos) who was nice looking she was infallibly condemned to the most abominable of traffics."

On Nov. 27 Consul General Lee reported: "In Los Fosos (the ditches), in Havana, 460 women and children were thrown on the ground heaped pell-mell as animals, some in a dying condition, others sick, others dead." Deaths averaged forty or fifty daily, and on the average there were two births, one being born alive to every forty dead. The mothers, with stitches—obviously of all ages—had undergone the ordeal of childbirth without the care of an unpracticed hand, since the latter remaining was very coarse. This had apparently been preceded by an unsuccessful attempt to extract the long, erectile, needle-like fangs, for one of these was twisted half round with its bony base, and had penetrated the lower lip when the jaws were forcibly closed. It is hardly possible that the duct was not occluded, but enough venom must have remained within the tube of the tiny gland to fill a delicate syringe to inflict a deep scratch.

Adelina Patti's Plea.

When quite in addition, he said, there are hands of families of the better Adelina Patti living on one meal a day. The daughter of a former Governor is begging in the streets.

Consul Hyatt of Santiago de Cuba said: "The census of the island taken to-day, as compared with the one taken three years ago, I feel confident, would show that two-thirds of the residents are missing, and if the Spanish army would make no better showing."

In Sagua la Grande province, according to the advices of Consul Barker sent to the State Department on March 24, 1898, within sixty days 90 per cent of the remaining population will reach a state of craving hunger. In this estimate he includes the Spanish soldiers as well as the pacificos and reconcentrados.

On Dec. 21, 1897, Consul Hyatt reported that in the city of Santiago de Cuba from 30 to 40 per cent of the inhabitants were afflicted with paludal fever. Out of the total of 16,000 soldiers at Manzanillo nearly 5,000 were in hospitals. The United States sanitary inspector reported 12,000 people sick in bed.

In the six principal cities of Sagua la Grande province the death roll from Jan. 1, 1897, to Nov. 15, 1897, was 80,851. This, says Consul Barker, is official, and fully 25 per cent should be added to cover deaths of which no record was kept.

ARMY MOVES SOUTH.

UNITED STATES REGULARS ADVANCE TOWARD CUBA.

Federal Troops from Every Post in the United States Concentrated at Chickamauga Battle-field, Tennessee, New Orleans, Mobile and Tampa.

Action by War Department.

General orders were issued from the War Department late Friday afternoon directing the immediate movement of nearly the whole standing army to the Department of the Gulf. The orders applied to every regiment of regulars in the country, except the Fourth, Fifth, Seventh and Eighth Cavalry, and the Fourteenth Infantry stationed in Alaska, and such heavy artillery as are on duty at the several fortifications of the seaboard.

Since the civil war no such proportion of the army has been mobilized, and the movement itself was the best evidence of the gravity of the situation, as looked upon by the president and his advisers. The determination to rendezvous the troops in the South, where they can be acclimated to the conditions of a more tropical climate, and be within striking distance of Cuba, has been under consideration by the President and his cabinet for some time. It was until Friday, however, that the President, in view of the enormous expense which would be entailed, felt justified in taking this step.

When Secretary Alger returned from the cabinet meeting he at once called into conference Gen. Miles and Adjt.-Gen. Corbin, and acquainted them with the result of the cabinet's deliverations. There were hurried consultations, in which the quartermaster general, who has charge of the transportation of the troops; the commissary general, who looks after their subsistence, and representatives in Washington of various railroads running to the South participated.

The orders as finally given directed the movements of troops to the places indicated as follows:

To Chickamauga battlefield: The 1st, 2d, 3d, 6th, 9th and 10th regiments of cavalry and the light batteries of five regiments of artillery.

To New Orleans: The 1st, 7th, 8th, 12th, 16th, 18th, 23d and 24th regiments of infantry.

To Mobile: The 2d, 3d, 10th, 11th, 19th, 20th and 22d regiments of infantry.

To Tampa: The 4th, 5th, 6th, 9th, 13th, 17th and 21st regiments of infantry.

The department has so distributed the twenty-two regiments of infantry at convenient places on the gulf that they will be accessible for transportation to Cuba. At Chickamauga there will be six regiments of cavalry and the light batteries of five regiments of artillery, at New Orleans eight regiments of infantry, at Tampa seven regiments of infantry and at Mobile seven regiments of infantry.

TO RAISE FUNDS.

Committee Agrees Upon a Plan for War Revenue.

The Ways and Means Committee agreed upon a plan for raising revenue in case of need, to carry on war with Spain. The plan will raise more than $100,000,000 additional revenue annually, and is thus distributed:

An additional tax on beer of $1 a barrel, estimated to yield $35,000,000; a bank stamp tax, on the lines of the law of 1866, estimated to yield $30,000,000; a duty of 3 cents a pound on coffee and 10 cents a pound on tea, and a like amount of internal tax on stocks of coffee and tea on hand in the United States, estimated to yield $28,000,000; additional tax on tobacco, expected to yield $15,000,000.

The committee also agreed to authorize the issuing of $500,000,000 bonds. These bonds are to be offered for sale at all post-offices in the United States in amounts of $50 each, making a great popular loan to be absorbed by the people.

To tide over emergencies, the Secretary of the Treasury will be authorized to issue treasury certificates. These certificates or debentures are to be used to pay running expenses when the revenues do not meet the expenditures. These preparations are distinctly war measures and would be put in operation only should war occur.

FORTY-EIGHT VESSELS BOUGHT

Government Has Expended Nearly $9,000,000 in This Direction.

Since the war preparations were begun, forty-eight vessels of all types and classes have been added to the naval strength. They range from tiny harbor defense torpedo-boats to the fast cruisers New Orleans and Albany, and include steam yachts, ocean-going tugs, colliers, an ambulance ship, auxiliary cruisers, the vessels of the revenue-cutter service, and the lighthouse tenders, which have lately been transferred to the navy department. Of the total number of vessels, one is the Abyssinia, and in addition to the orders of the Brazilian government, which is subject to the orders of the Brazilian government, only five to six can be put into service without thirty have been purchased.

A legend says that the Angel Gabriel gave, once, when Mohammed was ill, brought him a cup of coffee. Another legend says that a Mohammedan who offered that not been announced, but approximately it is understood that the newly purchased vessels have cost the navy so far nearly $9,000,000, of which one-third was paid for the ships bought abroad.

War Order Issued by Long.

Secretary Long Thursday morning issued the first war order, which was to the effect that the bureau of navigation, until further orders, should give out no information touching the movements of vessels, etc. A circular letter was sent to all the clerks in the department forbidding them to talk to outsiders or give any information to newspaper men.

News of Minor Note.

Diphtheria at Waverly, Mo.,

FORGIVENESS.

If I should die tonight,
And you should come to my cold bier and weep
While I lay there asleep,
With my whole face and lips death's purple white,
Like some silent marble statue expressive of great might;

My heart would yearn for you
With such unutterable tenderness
If I should die tonight,
With longing for an olden-time caress,
And you would bend o'er me in tears, my far-off soul to bless!

DR. T. W. WILDES.

An Incriminating Pin.

"Aubrey, it's getting late; put away your book, dear, and talk."

My wife came across the room to where I sat, and laid her hand lovingly on my shoulder. Then she glanced at the ponderous volume before me and said, with a laugh:

"Oh, those awful Latin names! Whatever does 'curare' mean, Aubrey?"

"It isn't Latin, darling; it's an adaptation of the native name of a deadly poison used by the South American Indians to smear on their arrows. Curare, though, is an antidote as well as a poison, and in minute quantities is used medicinally. I've got some in the surgery at this moment. But now," I added, closing the book, "what is it you want to talk about, dear? Something more cheerful than poisons, I dare say?"

"Yes," she said, as she sat down by my side. "What do you think? Lena is going to be married to Mr. Wilmot Ravensdale."

"H'm; that tall, rather sallow-looking man we met at the boarding house at Barmouth last year?"

"Yes. I remember thinking he was smitten with Lena at the time, and now it seems they've been corresponding ever since, though this is the first I've heard of it. My sister never was particularly communicative."

"What is Mr. Ravensdale by profession?"

"I am not quite sure. I believe he owns some land in the North. Anyhow, just before Arthur left Liverpool on his present voyage, Mr. Ravensdale saw him and asked his permission to become engaged to Lena; and Arthur must have thought everything satisfactory, for he assented, willingly."

"Ah! Well, of course, Arthur—your brother—is head of your family now, and his approval is final."

"You—you—don't approve, Aubrey?"

"I have no voice in the matter, my dear, and, if I had, I know nothing against Mr. Ravensdale. Still, a girl with £5,000 ought to be careful whom she selects for a husband, so I hope Lena has chosen well."

I was silent a short while; I felt certain ilidefined misgivings. Ravensdale's manner and conversation had not impressed me favorably when in Wales. However, it was scarcely fair, perhaps, to judge a man on a brief holiday acquaintanceship.

During the next few days my wife spent a good deal of time with Lena, who lived with their only brother, Arthur, in a small house not far from our own; Arthur Vernon, who was an engineer on a steamship engaged in the Canadian cattle trade, being at present away from home.

Ella felt herself largely responsible for the arrangements for the coming wedding. She threw herself into the matter with an enthusiasm which she endeavored, not altogether without success, to impart to me. I resolved to receive Ravensdale when he arrived in London. I liked him, however, no better than before, though I left my doubts unexpressed.

Then came a surprise: Ravensdale suddenly informed Lena that he had a sister of whose existence he had not hitherto spoken, and suggested that it would be a good plan for her to take up her abode with his financee until the wedding. Lena could refuse him nothing, and, to my wife's evident annoyance, Mildred Ravensdale arrived next day. A week passed without anything particular happening, and we sat at dinner one evening. Ella startled me by saying, hotly:

"I dare say Mildred Ravensdale, and I could almost kill Lena. I won't go near either of them till Arthur comes home. They don't want me and their wishes shall be respected."

"Have you been offended so deeply as all that, dear?" I asked, after a brief pause.

"Yes," she replied; "my advice is ignored by Lena and scorned by Miss Ravensdale."

"When is your brother Arthur expected?"

"Not till a day or two before the wedding."

"Oh! Have you heard anything more precise about Ravensdale's property yet?"

"Not a word."

"Nor where he proposes to live?"

"He talks about leaving that question till after they return from their honeymoon, which it seems to be a long one."

I said no more then. I felt instinctively that Eda had not told me all that she knew or suspected, though she had revealed enough to render me profoundly dissatisfied with the position of affairs. But Lena was no longer a child; she was 27, and her proud and headstrong temperament would, I was aware, lead her to resent any intervention on my part.

The wedding day was fixed to take place on a Thursday, and, on the morning of the previous Tuesday, Ella asked me to inspect the present which, despite their disagreement, she had purchased for her sister. This consisted of a very handsome Russia leather lady's toilet case, containing a hand mirror, a pair of brushes, two combs and requisites, all in ivory. Then she mentioned that her brother's ship was not expected to arrive till next day, but that she would depart from her resolve not to visit Lena before his return, so far as personally to take her the present in the course of the afternoon.

My wife looked pale and tired when early in the evening, I again saw her, so that I was hardly surprised when she told me that her interview with her sister had been far from pleasant. "I—I never gave her the present, after all," she explained; "I put it down on the hallstand, and forgot about it. We both got angry, and I—I said things about Mr. Ravensdale and his sister Lena declared she'd never forgive. Perhaps I was wrong, but I have every cause to distruss them, and so has Lena, but he won't see it. Oh, she is mad, mad!"

"Are all arrangements made for the wedding?"

"I think so. They don't want us there, though. It's fixed for 8 o'clock in the morning, and they're going to drive straight to the railway station from the church."

"Well, dearest, we mustn't intrude upon them. It's certainly strange, however, that your sister should slight you in this way."

Ella's hands twitched nervously. Then she burst into tears. "I—I don't mind for myself," she sobbed, "but it's dreadful that Lena should have let that horrid woman get such an influence over."

"Why do you dislike Miss Ravensdale so intensely, dearest?" I asked soothingly.

"Why? Oh, for one thing, because I believe in her heart she hates Lena, and, for another, because—because of something she's done to me."

"I suppose you won't mind telling me what that is?"

"I—I cannot, I have promised to be silent."

I said nothing. She seemed greatly agitated. Then she cried suddenly:

"And, yet, I am not sure. I think I'm justified in breaking my word; yes, I'll tell you, Aubrey; you ought to know. The day after that woman came, before I grew to distrust her, she asked me if I could get her some poison."

"What!" I exclaimed.

"Some poison," she continued, "that would kill a dog. She had a favorite terrier, she said, that had grown old and blind, and was suffering greatly, and she wanted it poisened, but couldn't bear that it should meet its death at the hands of any one but herself."

"Well, well—"

"When she asked for the poison I suddenly thought of the stuff you had spoken of on the night I first heard of Lena's engagement."

"Curare?"

"Yes. I found some in your surgery, and I—I gave it to her. I read up about it, too, and told her all she had to do was to smear some on a needle and prick the poor animal with it."

"Oh, you should have told me, dearest; bgut what happened afterward?"

"What happened?"—my wife gave a low, mirthless laugh—"why, a week later, when she said she'd killed the dog, and I asked her to give me back what remained of the poison, she declined to do so; and now today, when I repeated the request, she——"

But at this moment there came a ring at the bell, followed by the entrance of a servant to tell me that a lady wished to see me immediately.

My visitor, a handsome, well-dressed woman of 30, was pacing excitedly up and down my counting room as I entered.

"Doctor Cranleigh," she cried, "excuse my abruptness, but you must come with me at once. Your wife's sister, Miss Lena Vernon, is suddenly taken ill. She is unconscious—in a fit, I think. There is not a moment to lose. Don't stop to tell your wife now, it would only alarm her. She can be summoned later on, if necessary."

"Are you," I gasped, "Miss Ravensdale?"

"Yes—but come, come!"

Mechanically, I put on my hat, and followed her into the street.

"Now," I said, briefly, "you can give me any additional particulars?"

"Not many," she replied. "I had been out, and, returning to the house, went into Lena's bedroom, where I found her on the sofa, as I have said, unconscious. She seemed to have been seized with faintness while dressing; at all events her hair was disheveled. I tried to bring her round, but my efforts were quite furtile. So I called the servant to remain with her, and came for you, and afterwards his widow asked me one or two further questions, but she added nothing of importance, and a few minutes more brought us to the house.

"The girl who opened the door said there was no change in the condition of her mistress, and we made our way immediately to the bedroom.

Lena, her luxuriant hair away, and her eyes closed, lay on a couch by the window, so still that at first I feared she was dead. But even as I feared it the room her whole frame shook in a sudden, convulsive movement, which, however, only lasted a moment. I bent down to examine her more closely, pushing back some of the loose tresses which strayed over her white forehead. My hand coming in contact with something moist, caused me to withdraw it quickly. Then I started violently. My fingers were smeared with blood!

Without a word, I hastily raised the half-lowered gas, and, with the aid of the stronger light thus afforded, I saw for the first time beneath the hair just above Lena's brow, a long, irregular scratch. I trembled involuntarily.

Lena's symptoms were those of curare poisoning.

I pushed the electric bell, wrote a few words on a sheet of paper, torn from my note book, and, giving it to the servant who answered my summons, told her to take it immediately to my surgery, hand it to my assistant, and wait a reply. Then, uncertain what to say or do, I turned toward Mildred Ravensdale, who sat silent and composed on the chair near the couch.

"This faintness," I ventured, at last, "seems serious, alarming even."

"Indeed? I am so sorry. What can it be? Failure of the heart?"

"No," I rejoined, looking fixedly at her; "I should rather say it is a case of poisoning."

She met my eyes with a cold, incredulous stare, but gave no reply.

"Did you ever hear of a poison called curare?" I went on.

"Never," she answered, calmly.

I reflected a moment. Should I tell her what Ella had revealed to me, and challenge her to deny it? No, not yet, I decided.

All this while I had been chafing Lena's hands, but now I let them go, and walked uneasily round the room. At the dressing table I stopped; on it I noticed, abstractedly, a toilet case—my wife's present—and beside the case an ivory comb. There was something about the latter which caused me to look again, and with trembling hands to open the case. Ah! I could hardly repress a cry—the comb belonged to it; and on the comb, tightly fastened to one of the teeth by a piece of thin wire, was a pin with a discolored point. I had discovered the explanation of the scarlet!

Yes, this woman was acting a part; she must be unmasked! A means—not perfect, but still worth trying—suggested itself to me, even as beads of perspiration broke out on my brow, and my heart began to beat with painful rapidity.

"Miss Ravensdale," I said slowly, "will you please let me pull this comb through your hair?"

She sprang to her feet. "What an extraordinary request!"

"Then you decline?" I asked, excitedly.

"No," she said, with a grim smile; "Oh, no. Do as you will." She removed the hat she had been wearing and came and stood by my side. "Come," she added. "I am ready."

"I—I have changed my mind," I murmered, weakly.

She turned, and, before I could stop her, wrenched the comb from my hand, drew it through her hair several times, and flung it on the ground. Then she said, in a fierce, low voice:

"If death does occur, if I were you, I should certify it as due to failure of the heart's action. That would avoid an inquest, which, under the circumstances, is most undesirable. For your wife's sake, you know."

"My wife! How dare you suggest——"

"How dare I? Well, you shall hear. Your wife is angry because Lena saw fit to make a will, leaving her property to my brother—her future husband. Your wife was pleased to utter disgraceful innuendoes about him and about me. Even this afternoon she and Lena quarrelled bitterly. I heard them; so did my brother, who happened to be in the house; so did the servant. Your wife," she went on with a harsh laugh, "wanted to keep Lena's money in the family, and if this is a case of poisoning she must have administered it. She thought the will was not to be signed until tomorrow, but she was wrong. It was signed yesterday. She was too late, too late!"

There was a loud ring at the front door. In a dream, a nightmare, rather, I ran downstairs, and, admitting the servant-maid, took from her the syringe furnished with an injection of strychnine, which I had demanded from my assistant.

I returned to the bedroom, and, avoiding Miss Ravensdale's inquiring look, made an incision in the patient's arm. A little while, and I noticed a slight, natural movement of her muscles.

"Thank Heaven!" I exclaimed. "The strychnine has proved the antidote I hoped. Lena will live now."

"She—will—live? Mildred Ravensdale ran from the room.

She and her so-called brother—it was not till long afterward I found out he was her husband—I never saw again. For Lena's sake, no steps were taken to bring them to justice. But I was soon in possession of enough information to enable me to form a pretty definite notion of the ingenuity of the scheme which my superior knowledge of toxicology had fortunately enabled me to frustrate.

The fact that she did not hesitate to draw through her own hair the poisened comb she had in pretended playfulness drawn trough Lena's an hour earlier, was explained by the fact that she wore a wig.—Tit-Bits.

Raising Hares for the Market.

What appears to be a very important industry for Kansas City, Kan., according to the Star, and one in which many people will soon be engaged, is the raising of the Belgian hare, a species of the hare family, larger than the Kansas jack rabbit, whose meat is even finer than that of the chicken or turkey. George Lamphier, an employe of the Memphis Railway Company, and W. W. Simons, a pressman, are the originators of the industry in Kansas City. They have built a rabbit barn on a lot adjoining Mr. Lamphier's home at Kansas City, Kan., and from thirteen fine pedigreed hares, which they purchased in the East from imported breeding stock last fall, they now have more than 100 hares to start with. Several other Kansas City people are now purchasing breeding stock and it is predicted that in a year or two more rabbits will be raised in and about Kansas City than are running wild in some of the big prairie counties in Kansas.

But there is a good demand for the meat of the Belgian hare, which sells as high as twenty-five cents a pound in the Eastern cities, and some of the packers at Kansas City say if the industry is well developed they can dispose of all the meat that can be produced at fancy prices.

The hares are killed when four months old, when they will weigh from four to five pounds, although they frequently grow much larger, some even weighing ten or twelve pounds. The fur of the Belgian hare is valuable and each pelt will bring twenty-five cents.

Greatest Monument to Man's Handiwork.

"The greatest structure ever raised by the hand of man," writes William George Jordan of "The Greatest Things in the World," in the Ladies' Home Journal, "is the Great Pyramid of Cheops, founded 4000 years ago, and measuring 746 feet square on the base and 449 feet high. It took twenty years in construction; 100,000 men working for three months and being then relieved, were succeeded by an equally large corps. The massive stones were brought from Arabia, 700 miles away. The cost of the work is estimated at $145,000,000."

The annual production of salt in the United States, according to the most recent figures, is about 14,000,000 barrels of 280 pounds each.

INDIAN SWEAT BATHS.

Natives of British Columbia Parboil Themselves.

The N'hla-Kapmuh Indians of the interior of British Columbia have sweathouses and indulge in a treat somewhat similar to our Turkish bath.

By the side of streams of melted snow, at some distance from the village, among the pines and firs, are two curious structures. One is made of small poles set up like the roof of a house. These are covered with fir boughs, and finally with earth, the door, facing the setting sun, has a blanket hanging over it. Within, on the south side, is a circular hole (in the ground) about two feet in diameter and one foot deep, filled with burned and crackled stones. The remainder of the floor is covered deep with a soft bed of fir twigs. In front of the door one will see traces of a good-sized fire, and many stones, both those that have been burned and blackened in the fire and those brought near, but still unused. This is the men's sweathouse, or part of the bathing outfit of the village.

The other structure is similar to this in essentials, but at this particular village it is not covered with soil. It is roofed with blanket mats or skins when in use. This is the sweathouse for the women.

When the N'hla-Kapmuh wants to take a bath he builds a fire and heats a number of stones. These he rolls into the hole in the floor of the village sweat house. He then enters, closes the door with his blanket, and reclines on the new bed of fir boughs. Here he lies until in the close small hut, with no opening for ventilation, and close to the roasted rocks, he perspires as freely as do the stokers in the hold of an ocean liner. He then rushes from the house and leaps into the melted snow of the mountain torrent. Returning to the sweathouse, he repeats the operation until satisfied that every pore of his skin has been cleansed by this vigorous treatment.

These Indians say they take this bath about once a month, and one may well imagine that that is sufficient, for it is not hard to believe that the absence of sick people at the village is due to this trying custom.

TO WASH FRUIT.

A Machine Adapted to Clean the Rinds of Oranges, Lemons, Etc.

A machine especially adapted to thoroughly clean the rinds of oranges, lemons, etc., without, in the slightest degree, injuring such fruit, is represented in the illustration, the fruit being fed into the machine at one end and delivered at the opposite end in a thoroughly cleansed condition, says the Scientific American. The improvement has been patented by Benjamin B. and James H. Wright, of Riverside, Cal. The fruit is first placed in a water trough at one end of the machine, to loosen any foreign adhering matter and is then passed down the feed trough beneath the brushes of a wheel revolved by a crank handle, the lower portion of the wheel passing through a rinsing tank. In this tank is a series of segmentally arranged brushes, between which and the brushes on the periphery of the wheel the fruit is passed, as indicated in the sectional view, figure 2. The brushes on the periphery of the wheel are supported by spring rods, whereby their pressure upon the fruit may be a yielding and flexible one, not liable to injure the rinds, and the fruit is passed out through a delivery at the oposite end of the machine.

The Interior of Patagonia.

Professor J. B. Hatcher, of Princeton University, has newly returned from a remarkable trip of exploration in a hitherto unknown region of South Africa—namely, the wild interior of Patagonia. He visited Washington a few days ago for the purpose of depositing with the Bureau of Ethnology a rich collection of objects illustrating the mode of life of the various tribes of aborigines in that part of the world. These natives are among the strangest and most picturesque savages in existence, some of them being described as representing almost the lowest stage in the scale of human development. Their country, too, is more than ordinarily interesting, being associated since the earliest times with rumors of gigantic human inhabitants and an astonishing fauna. Quite recently some skeletons of birds that had heads as big as those of horses have actually been dug up. They stood at least nine feet high, and had short wings, claws like an eagle's and a beak like a condor's. It is likely that they attacked with success the largest mammals contemporary with them, being the biggest fowls of prey that ever lived; but they became extinct long ago, and so there was no opportunity for Professor Hatcher to secure a living specimen.

Ethnology of Kissing.

The kiss was unknown among the aboriginal tribes of America and of Central Africa. From the most ancient times, however, it has been familiar to the Asiatic and European races. The Latins divided it into three forms—the osculum, the basium and the suaviolum—the first being the kiss of friendship and respect, the second of ceremony and the third of love. The Semites always employed the kiss, and Job speaks of it as part of their sacred rites, as it is to-day in the Roman Catholic Church.

The Mongolian kiss is not the same as that which prevails with us. In it the lips do not come into actual contact with those of the person kissed. The nose is brought into light contact with the cheek, forehead or hand; the breath is drawn slowly through the nostrils, and the act ends with a slight smack of the lips. The Chinese consider our mode of kissing most detestable. We on our part regard their method with equal disdain.

Darwin and other naturalists have attempted to trace back the kiss to the act of the lower animals who seize their prey with their teeth. The average man does not take a great deal of interest in the ethnology of the subject, however.—London Mail.

Thibet and Its Inhabitants.

The immense territory of Thibet is almost completely surrounded by mountain ranges of appalling magniture, which, especially along the southern, western and northern frontiers, constitute formidable barriers against ingress. From the Pamir Plateau, in the extreme west—"the world's backbone"—radiate the great natural ramparts which shut out India on the one hand and the Tartar countries of Bokhara and Turkestan on the other. No Asiatic or Western conqueror has ever dared to penetrate this mountain world; and even Genghis Khan, the scourge of Asia, whose ravages extended from Pekin in the East to Moscow in the West, was obliged, when invading Northern India, to take the circuitous route, via Kashghar and Afghanistan, instead of crossing Thibet. Secure on their lofty plateau, and practically isolated from the rest of the world, the people of Thibet have remained undisturbed for ages, and have developed characteristics for which we might vainly search in any other race on the globe. The Chinese "conquest" has not produced the slightest change in their mode of life, or exercised any appreciable influence upon their peculiar culture.

As Fatal as War.

The sudden changes of climate encountered by soldiers when troops are moved from one quarter of the world to another are estimated as increasing the annual mortality of Europe by 50,000 men.

THE OLDEST BANKER.

Truman P. Handy, Distinguished Financier and Philanthropist.

Truman P. Handy, who died recently at his magnificent Euclid avenue home in Cleveland, Ohio, was the oldest active banker in the United States. He was also a great philanthropist, a supporter of charities, churches and schools and, withal one of the best citizens of Cleveland. He began life on a farm—born at Paris Hill, Oneida County, N. Y. After the years of his boyhood were over and he had completed a common school education he went to the city of Buffalo and secured employment in a bank. His promotion was steady. From the position of teller in the Buffalo bank he was called to the position of cashier of the Commercial Bank of Lake Erie in 1832. This took him to Cleveland. He helped to organize the bank and remained with the institution until the expiration of its charter, in 1847. For a number of years he engaged in private banking. In 1861 he became president of the old Ohio State Bank, where he remained for four years. His ability and energy had by this time made him conspicuous among the foremost financiers of the State. In 1884 he organized the Mercantile National Bank, of which he was the president until six years ago.

Besides his career as a banker he had made a reputation as a railroad manager. Among the lines with which he was connected is the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and St. Louis. He was a member of the Cleveland Board of Education, a trustee of the Lane Theological Seminary, of Adelbert College and of Oberlin College. The Children's Aid Society of Cleveland was one of the many objects of his charity, and Sunday school work ever found in him a ready friend.

TRUMAN P. HANDY.

Sewing the Lips of Cobras.

A large cobra de capello, says a writer in Chambers' Journal, was sent home several years ago to Sir Joseph Fayrer, who wanted a supply of venom for analysis. It bit the spoon repeatedly without yielding any, and on examination was found to have none to yield, not only its fangs, but the poisonous glands having been extirpated. A protective operation still more cruel is sometimes practiced by novices in the art of charming, and consists in securing the mouth with a stitch of silk passed through the lips in front. To perform this the poor beast's head is held tightly pressed to the ground by a short stick, on which the foot rests, while the other foot restrains the writhing body, leaving both hands at liberty for the needle. Eleven apparently healthy cobras were on one occasion received at the London Zoological Gardens. They refused to feed, and grew thin. When one died it was discovered that its mouth was sewed up with stitches so fine as to be invisible to any but the closest scrutiny. The rest of them did quite well when they were restored to their normal condition.

In connection with this subject I may mention that a rattlesnake was sent to me from up country when I was in Demerara, with the history that it had killed a coolie on one of the plantations. It had been badly injured about the spine, probably in capture, so that on reaching me it was not only dead, but decomposed, and I was not able to make any very complete dissection, but I found that its lips were tied together with stitches—obviously the effort of an unpracticed hand, since the work was very coarse. This had apparently been preceded by an unsuccessful attempt to extract the long, erectile, needle-like fangs, for one of these was twisted half round with its bony base, and had penetrated the lower lip when the jaws were forcibly closed. It is hardly possible that the duct was not occluded, but enough venom must have remained within the tube of the tiny, delicate syringe to inflict a fatal scratch.

Adelina Patti's Bravery.

When quite a little girl Madame Adelina Patti once saved a companion's life. She was living in New York at the time, and when out on a country excursion with some young friends, one of the party, slipping on the edge of a river, fell into a deep pool. The future queen of song at once sprang in after her, succeeded in reaching the drowning girl and clung with her to a floating log. Buoyed up in this way, the two girls floated down stream, and were saved.

Stove Pipe Cleaner.

Soot cannot accumulate in the elbows of stovepipes to clog the pipe if a new arrangement is used, which is attached to the section of pipe nearest the elbow, and has perforations to admit air, which it discharges into the elbow to change the current of the smoke inside the pipe and drive it around the elbow.

Peculiar Hindoo Custom.

The Hindoos consider their dead as sacred, and do not allow them to be handled by alien hands, the nearest male relative—son, father, or brother—preparing the body for burial; and if there be none of their relatives, a son is adopted by the family for the purpose.

The Mikado's Favorite Sport.

The favorite sport of the Mikado is horse-racing, but he allows no betting, and the price of admission to the races is placed so high that only the upper classes can attend. The Mikado's stables accommodate about 3,000 animals.

Sailors say the bounding billows are to be found at the three-mile limit.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Morality.—Morality is not policy or pretense or learning, but the doing of good in obedience to the will of God.—Rev. Silverman, Hebrew, New York City.

Heaven and Hell.—The divine constitution of our nature put it into our power to have a heaven or hell on earth in our own heart.—Rev. M. C. Peters, Independent, New York City.

Little Sins.—Be careful of your daily conduct and avoid all little sins. Choose between God and mammon, and let God be the choice of you and your children.—Rev. Dr. Millspaugh, Episcopalian, Omaha, Neb.

Superiority.—Real superiority does not come from the class to which we belong, but from ourselves. That which most truly makes one a gentleman is repose of character.—Rev. Frank Crane, Methodist, Chicago, Ill.

War and History.—Wars do not make history; they are only the electric clarifying of the atmosphere, so that the better and gentler influences can do their work.—Rev. W. T. Hutchins, Evangelist, Indian Orchard, Mass.

Capital and Labor.—The obligation upon capital to preserve the rights of labor is higher and graver than any obligation resting upon labor to concern itself about the rights of capital.—Rev. S. F. Hershey, Presbyterian, Boston, Massachusetts.

Duels.—Men used to settle all their private differences by private combat. We boast that we have done away with settling things by duels. But we have not got so far along that we don't boast of our war spirit.—Rev. William Anderson, Methodist, New York City.

The Next World.—Light and joy are not shut up to the next world. Its heavenly camp fires send beams to earth. The two worlds are not so far apart. The call to life reaches us. We need the fellowship of the higher to guide us in the lower.—Rev. J. E. Bushnell, Presbyterian, New York City.

Business and Religion.—It is the serious-minded, thoughtful men who retire from the noise and excitement of the market and exchange who find religion precious. Not while the thoughts are given over to business or society does one come upon the "treasure hid in a field."—Rev. H. Jenkins, Presbyterian, Kansas City, Mo.

The Laboring Classes.—Give the laboring classes habitable homes, comfortable clothing, healthy and sufficient food and leisure enough to increase their store of knowledge and recreate their minds and bodies, and you take away nearly all the grounds for just complaint and discontent.—Rev. Wm. Byrne, Catholic, Boston, Mass.

Materialism.—Materialism is what all the people, high and low, need to be saved from—the materialism which makes the good of life consist in getting things and not in being men and women, made not to strive against one another, and prey upon one another, but to help and serve one another.—Rev. Dr. Gladden, Congregationalist, Columbus, Ohio.

Indifference.—There is entirely too much worldliness and indifference in our churches to-day. Church members do just as sinners do. They take part in worldly pleasures and sins. God will not prosper any church that is not trying to save souls, and to bring the world into a saving knowledge of Christ as a Redeemer.—Rev. P. C. Curnick, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Who Drank the First Cup of Coffee?

In the Bibliotheque Nationale there is a manuscript (near the end of the sixteenth century), written by an Arab, Abdelcader, who declares that coffee was drunk for the first time in Arabia in the middle of the fifteenth century. Others think that certain remarks in Persian writings imply that coffee was used in Persia as early as the ninth century, but most authors dispute these texts. It is commonly supposed that the use of coffee in its earliest home, Abyssinia, and in its second home, Arabia, is only five to six centuries old.

A legend says that the Angel Gabriel once, when Mohammed was ill, brought him a cup of coffee. Another legend says that a Mohammedan monk discovered that his goats became very lively and full of fun after they had eaten the fruit of the coffee tree. This observation caused him to make the first cup of coffee. His dervishes enjoyed the coffee, and ever afterward drank it at night to produce wakefulness when they kept vigils. Cautious historians laugh at these traditions and prefer to stand by Abdelcader's manuscript. This writer mentions an Arab, Gemaleddin, a judge in Aden, who, while traveling to Persia, or, as historians correct the manuscript, to Abyssinia, saw people use coffee as medicine. He used it and was cured of a sickness. Later, becoming a monk, he taught his brethren the use of coffee. It was, then, in Aden that coffee-drinking originated. The fakirs even made coffee-drinking compulsory upon their neophytes. Public coffee-houses originated in Aden, and very early in history.—Saturday Evening Post.

Thoughts on Temper.

Temper is nine-tenths of Christianity. —Jeremy Taylor.

He who has overcome one evil temper, has acquired moral force to overcome another.—Henry Wayland.

The difficult part of a good temper consists in forbearance and accommodation to the ill-humors of others.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

He is happy whose circumstances suit his temper, but he is more happy who can suit his temper to any circumstances.—David Hume.

There is no obstacle to advancement or happiness so great as an undisciplined temper—a temper subject to pique or uncertainty.—David Moir.

Cannibalism Among Lobsters.

Lobsters cannot be persuaded to grow up together peaceably. If a dozen newly hatched specimens are put into an aquarium, within a few days there will be only one—a large, fat and promising youngster.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....April 21 1898

NOT THE FIRST TIME.

Spain Has Made Us Wait and Wait and Wait, Before.

The way Spain has been waiting, delaying and putting us off, reminds us of the natural gait that Spanish diplomacy seems to have. As long ago as in the time of President Monroe, we had a taste of the same quality.

There had been trouble between the United States and Spain in regard to Florida. When Spain owned Florida all the bad characters, whites, Indians and negroes in the extreme south, would run over into the Spanish territory of Florida whenever they had to flee from justice. The Spanish garrisons seemed pleased to annoy us. Gen. Jackson marched over the border captured the two chief Spanish forts, St. Marks at San Augustine and Barancas at Pensacola and put a stop to the trouble. Spain had been for some years, also, owing us damages for preying on our commerce, and a treaty had been made by which she agreed to pay and finally in 1819, she agreed to give us Florida for the five millions she owed us, but she still kept her soldiers there. For six years she delayed on one excuse or another. Seven messages were sent by President Monroe, to Congress, before the matter was finally settled After the treaty had been fully agreed on, it lay in the pigeon holes of the Spanish cabinet at Madrid for a year or two before they would take the trouble to sign it, although Monroe repeatedly asked them to do so, Then they sent over a special envoy to see about some point they claimed they did not quite understand, but he did nothing and asked no questions and finally went home. When the treaty was at last signed it was sent to the captain-general at Havana, who was also governor of Florida, and he was to see that the treaty was delivered to the United States and the Spanish troops moved out of Florida and the Americans given possession. Spain was even then, so poor she could not pay us in money so after all these years of diplomatic delay, we conquered Florida in the spring of 1818, bought it in 1819, but did not get possession till two or three years later. And the debt they owed us for damages, they had agreed in 1802 to pay. They are noted for delays and trickery.

BLADDER TROUBLES

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such it is not liable to any form of disease except by one of two ways The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

SAMPLE SENT FREE.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief of cause of bladder troubles. It is comforting to know that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root fulfills every wish in quickly curing bladder and urinary troubles. It corrects frequent call, inability to hold urine and scalding or stinging pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample, bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail on receipt of three 2-cent stamps. Mention Auburn COURIER and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

SAME AS SOLDIERS.

DeKalb county is the natural home of genius and ability. This is exemplified in the COURIER and its force. But to a greater extent even is this shown in the case of Hugh Belknap, late of Garrett but now a member of congress from Chicago. He is father of a scheme to have telegraph operators who are along with the army, organized in regular companies, same as soldiers, with their own officers, and then be sworn into the service of the government in the same way. He shows the injustice with which the telegraph operators of the rebellion were treated, as no matter what dangers and hardships they endured, or how great their services, they can never get a pension.

The Coffee Swindle.

The Elkhart Review, says the Goshen Democrat, tells of a new swindle which is being worked in Elkhart. Here is the plan of procedure: "Here is some Mocha-Java coffee Mrs. Smith, your neighbor, ordered from the Chicago house I represent. When I came to deliver it I found she was not at home. It is worth 33 cents a pound. If you wan it for 20 cents I'd rather dispose of it that way than send it back or call on Mrs. Smith again." This is said to be the proposition that a couple of fellows now in Elkhart make to housewives and invariably the housewife seizes the bargin. It is wholly foreign to feminine nature to succesfully resist a "bargain." It is claimed the Mocha-Java thus disposed of is ten-cent coffee bought at local groceries, ground and put into other packages by the strangers.

Patersons' Magazine Stops

Peterson's Magazine, which was founded in 1843, ceases its publication with the April number. Too sharp competition in magazine business is the cause. For many years, it was the chief literary magazine of the country and the only one in which people of marked literary ability gave their writings to the public. One of best known of these literary contributors, was Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, an aunt of Mrs. Julia E. M. Hodge. Mrs. Stevens was a sister of the late Mrs. Mary Mott.

Patriotic Words.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, a republican, said in the debate Thursday: "We cannot take money for the dead of the Maine. There is only one reparation. There is only one monument to raise over that grave and that is free Cuba and peace in the island." When Senator Lodge spoke he voiced the sentiments of patriotic Americans. Spain humiliated, punished and Cuba free will be a lasting monument to our dead sailors.—Indianapolis Journal.

EAST AUBURN.

Our wide awake addition "East of the Creek", is becoming a lively factor in our city's growth and business. They have already, one councilman, Mr. Lewis and now have two more city candidates, Mr. Imhoff for councilman and Mr Brown for marshal, the former, a democrat and the latter a republican. But aside from muncipal officers, they are coming out this spring in great shape over there. They are planting trees cleaning up, and repairing, at least as well as in any part of the town. Charlie Bolton has planted a full set of nice maples on the fronts of his residence lot, and is going to stand by them all summer, and make them grow; if possible And he very properly wants to see the other property owners over there do the same. Then these two chief streets will be lovely. Charlie Falke has been adding to his already comfortable home by extensive additions and will when completed, have a nice residence. He has got a nice lot of fruit coming into bearing, among them being two fine, healthy appricot trees, now in full bloom. Many of our people never saw one of these trees, and it would be a curiosity to take a look at these. S P. Imhoff and and Cory Shugers have slicked up things for summer, and the other property owners along there have cleaned and beautified their grounds. M B. Masters, has the earliest garden so far. Perry Long; councilmen Lewis, Mr. Maranville and James McClellan are interested in getting a good sidewalk over the new bridge, and we hope they will get it. Some time we hope to say more of this little suberb.

OBITUARY

James Henderson was born in Richland, and now Ashland, county, Ohio, June 2nd, 1831, and was in his sixth year when his parents moved to DeKalb county, Ind. He lived with them till manhood, receiving such education as the common schools of that day afforded. He was reared a farmer and has made that vocation his life work. October 5th, 1856, he was united in marriage to Mary Jane Sanders, a native of Wayne county, Ohio, a daughter of Henry and Mary Sanders. The first three years of his married life he worked his father's farm, after which he moved to his own home, where he has ever since resided, until his death, which occurred March 30th, 1898, aged 66 years, 9 months and 28 days. He leaves to mourn their loss a companion, three sons, two grand children, five brothers and three sisters, one brother and three sisters having preceeded him to the spirit world. He united with the Lutheran church at Spencerville in the year 1860, under the pastorate of Rev. Caska and ever since remained a faithful consistent Christian. He was a kind husband, a loving father and a generous neighbor. His house was always the home of the wayfaring man; none ever appealed to him for aid in time of need that was turned away. He will be missed most by those who were intimately associated with him No idle word ever escaped his lips and those who knew him best can testify as to his sterling worth as a citizen, a neighbor and friend When a young man the frivolities of life had no charms for him, and as he advanced in years his love for his family, his home and neighbors seemed to be his highest ambition. He had few if any enemies, and as he frequently expressed himself he harbored no ill will toward anyone. In the commencement of his last sickness he apprised those closely connected to him that it would be his last sickness. Although every means known to medical skill, a loving wife, dutiful sons and kind neighbors were resorted to, but alas! his own predictions proved too true. He bore his sickness with true Christian courage, expressing a desire to get well if it was God's will, but if not that he was willing and prepared to go.

The funeral services were held at the Lutheran church on Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. E. W. Erick assisted by Rev. Dunlap.

John H. Gill

John H. Gill died at his home in Concord township this morning and will be buried tomorrow, April 19, at 10 a. m. Mr. Gill had long been a sufferer, his disease being a form of diabetes. As long ago, as during the carnival here last year he informed the writer, that he could live but a few months at most. But he was cheerful and showed a resignation that was remarkable. He was a man highly respected.

LICENSE NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the incorporated town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the Board of Commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, to be held at the court house in said county, commencing on the 6th day of June 1898, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantities than a quart at a time, with the privilege of having the same drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows:

A one-story brick building containing but one room and occupying the south fifty (50) feet of the following described lot:

Commencing at the southeast corner of lot number twenty-seven (27) in the original plat of the town at Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, and running thence west twenty-two and two-thirds (22⅔) feet thence north to Sixth street thence east twenty-two and two thirds (22⅔) feet thence south along the line of said lot number 27 to the place of beginning.

And in the same application for license I will ask permission of the Board of County Commissioners to run a lunch room and pool or billiard tables in the same room in which the liquors are to be sold; and which is described above containing but one room situated on the premises hereinbefore described, and north of and adjoining the building in which I desire to sell.

POLITICAL FUSION

When it is Proper, Desirable and Honest

The COURIER has decided convictions on the subject of political fusion. If two parties are not agreed as to the main articles of their faith, fusion generally is injurious to both, as a fusion in such cases is made for personal or pecuniary advantage. But when two or more parties have their several chief articles of faith the same, or nearly so, then fusion is right and is desirable. These two proposions are are so plain that no further discussion is needed.

And this brings us to the present propositon for a fusion between democrats and populists. In this instance fusion is right and desirable for the two parties agree fully as to the chief principles. Both believe in a moderate tariff duty, so levied as to produce revenue to support the goverment, but not high enough to foster monopolies or to enrich the wealthy at the expense of the poor. Both believe in the important plan of taxing incomes, so that wealthy men like, the Goulds and Vanderbilts who get large incomes from stocks that are quoted low, and are consequently taxed but a trifle, may have to share the burdens at least in part with their less fortunate neighbors. Both parties, also believe we should have a larger supply of money in circulation, and that there should be an annual increase of circulating money as much greater than the annual increase of population, as there are dollars per capita. And in this connection, which is the most important of all, it should be said that both parties are in favor of having this increase of circulating money, made to a great extent of silver, and made on equal terms with money made of gold.

The above points are the only really important political issues now before the people. Then why should those who believe alike on them, go and divide their forces, and so give the victory to the republicans who take an opposite view of all these questions? So we say plainly, there should be fusion between these parties everywhere. And there should be fusion in DeKalb county. A republican legislature has made it impossible for voters of the same faith to unite in a free ballot in any other way. Let the voters of DeKalb county get together on a common basis, and not listen to the howls of those whose only interest in any campaign is the money to be got out of it. The COURIER is for fusion and has been all the time. But we have preferred to let those in authority proceed to settle the details untrammeled by any opinion we might hold. We still have faith enough in them to feel sure they will do this.

FOUND UP A TREE.

The readers of the COURIER will remember we published a "lost" notice yesterday. It said that Charles Emanuel had lost a pocket book Saturday As soon as the COURIER was in the hands of its readers, the pocket book was reported found. Al Sebring's little boy Jay, in coming across the public square Sunday morning saw something in the branches of one of the trees, and got it down, and took it home. The notice last evening showed who the owner was and the lad at once returned it. The bank check and other valuable papers were all there but the cash was gone. It appears that Mr. Emanuel must have left it lying on the table in the sheriff's office as that is the last place he remembers having it. He was settling some matters for a client. After he left, it is supposed some one came in while the employes of the office were absent, and got the pocket book took out the money and that evening put it up into the tree where it would be seen and returned to the owner. There was some where between $10 and $15, but Mr. Emanuel is glad to get back the papers anyway.

CUBAN INDEPENDENCE.

A Resolution Passed Both Houses About 1:30 This Morning.

Tuesday's Daily.

Last night the two Houses of Congress wrestled with the Cuban question but failed to agree at first. They finally struck out that part of the resolutions that recognized the present insurgent government but left all that part that declared that Cuba is and ought to be independent. Both Houses agreed to this at about 1:30.

The following are the resolutions, the most important that have passed both Houses for many years.

Whereas, The abhorrent conditions which have existed for more than three years in the island of Cuba, so near our own borders, have shocked the moral sense of the people of the United States, have been a disgrace to Christian civilization, culminating as they have, in the destruction of a United States battleship with 266 of its officers and crew, while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Havana, and cannot longer be endured, as has been set forth by the president of the United States in his message to congress on April 11, 1898, upon which the action of congress was invited; therefore,

Resolved, First—That the people of the island of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent.

Second—That it is the duty of the United States to demand and the government of the United States does hereby demand that the government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

Third—That the president of the United States be and he hereby is, directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several states, to such an extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect.

Fourth—The United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

QUEER WELL.

(Laporte Argus.)

While drilling a well Saturday near Teegarden, about 20 miles southwest of this city, a wind pocket was struck at a depth of 45 feet. The wind rushes through the pipe at a terrific rate. Those who thought it might be natural gas endeavored to ignite it but did not succeed. It has no odor.

The Truth of It.

The Dispatch makes a furious onslaught on this paper and says its editor is "unpatriotic" for claiming that Senator Hanna is leading McKinley in the Cuban matter. Well, nine-tenths of the republicans are saying the same thing and unfortunately for the reputation of the United States, the assertion is too true. We are ashamed to own that it is so, but Hanna is to a great extent, president. What other president, democratic or republican ever allowed a political boss to dictate to him? to come and stay at the white house on occasions of great political moves: to give out in advance, "There will be no war?" And so of many other things that makes Americans blush. If, to resent such a state of things is "unpatriotic", then the editor of this paper is unpatriotic indeed, for it is a condition of things that makes every honest man blush for shame.

As to Scoops.

The COURIER last week got a lovely "scoop" on all the other county papers, by publishing in full, the message of the president on Cuban matters. This is the second time within a few weeks that this has occurred. And when we remember that the DAILY and WEEKLY COURIER are the only papers in the county that publish full and detailed reports of cases in court it will be seen that we lead the procession. Tell your neighbors about this. The truth should be known.

NO PAY—NO CURE

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price 50c. For sale by H. B. & McCord.

FIRE AT GARRETT.

At 8:30 this forenoon word was received at the COURIER office that a house was burning at Garrett. It is located in the east part of the city. Later reports proved that it was only a bad case of chimney burning out.

NO MEETING.

The Hicksville Business Men's Meeting, that was to be held April 21, Will not take place owing to the sudden death of C B. Brown the secretary, J. S. Hull of that place writes this.

"A HOWLING SUCCESS"

Wherever properly introduced Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as a cure for constipation, has met with a phenomenal sale. Many druggists cannot say enough in praise of its merits, as well as its great popularity with the people In 10c trial size and also in 50c and $1 sizes of F. E Davenport.

LET THERE BE PEACE

The world is weary of this strife,
Of wars, contention taking life;
Shall evil triumph over right?
Or justice reign in all its might?
Oh God on high, let this strife cease!
O'er all this earth may there be peace.

In times like these of war and strife,
Where heroes brave have lost their life,
Ye sons of men dare right to do!
Might yield to right, and all be true.
Oh God on high, bid this strife cease
O'er all this earth let there be peace.

Oppression might be subdued,
The broken pledges be renewed,
And malice hate could be suppressed
If kindness dwelt in every breast
Oh God on high, bid this strife to cease,
O'er all this world let there be peace.

And shall this bitter warefare last,
And lives go out with sweeping blast?
Or is the day approaching near
When of this strife we shall not hear?
Oh God on high, bid this strife cease
O'er all this earth let there be peace.

MRS. E. M. SNYDER.

OBITUARY.

Henry Stark was born in Lancaster Co. Penn, Jan. 21, 1812 and died in Corunna April, 15, 1898, aged 86 years 3 months 24 days.

Mr. Stark moved to Corunna about a year ago. He was a shoemaker by trade and worked at that business whenever his health would permit. His wife died about eleven years ago, leaving six children. One son and one brother who lives near Kendallville were the only relatives present: the other children being in Ohio. The funeral services were conducted in the United Brethren church at Corunna, Rev. Campbell officiating.

—Look over the new advts. of G. H. Yesbera. He has opened the spring campaign in fine style and will devote the rest of the season to providing good bargains in seasonable goods, for all who come —Lew Treesh of Chicago is visiting his parents here. He came yesterday and will stay couple of weeks.

ROBERT McDOUGALL.

Passes Peacefully Away After Long Suffering.

Soon after midnight last night Robert McDougall breathed his last. He had been growing weaker for long time his disease at last assuming the form of consumption. He died without a struggle like one passing into slumber.

Mr. McDougall has been for many years a citizen of Auburn. He was a teacher years ago, and later was operator for the Postal line, till he resigned to go to Denver, Colo. After leaving here, his health which had begun to decline, broke down and he became helpless and returned to Auburn. His troubles soon took the form of temporary mental derangement and he was placed in the asylum at Logansport, where in a year or two he was cured. Since his return to Auburn, he has been employed in various ways, till failing health again confined him to his home. The funeral will be on Friday at 2 p. m. from the home.

WILD FIGURES.

The Dispatch is still busy trying to prove that putting a duty on an article makes it cheaper. It says leather is no higher and shoes no higher since a tariff was laid on leather. Quite possible. But wages must have gone lower, else boots and shoes would be higher. For example, the Dispatch figures like this: "If we buy $1 of leather abroad, and pay 50 cents duty on it, it will be made cheaper, by the addition of that 50 cents, than it would have been had the 50 cents not been added." Our awful question is that if to the $1 you add 50 cents the sum will be $1.50. The Dispatch's figures are that if to $1 you add 50 cents the sum will be $1 or perhaps 90 cent. Queer arithmetic, isn't it?

OBITUARY.

Died, after a long illness, at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bacher on South Cedar St. Auburn, Ind., Mrs. Ellen Gulich.

Ruth Ellen Shepard was born, Jan 6, 1827, and died February 26, 1898, at at the age of 61 years, 1 month and 20 days. She was married to John Gulich, Aug. 11, 1853, who died over nine years ago. Their union was blessed with two sons and one daughter, besides a niece whom she raised from childhood and was married at the bedside of Mother Gulich, Feb. 15, 1898. These and and many other relatives and friends, are left to mourn the death of a kind relative and good woman. Her funeral was at the church of God. March 1, at 10 A. M., services by Rev. Joseph Niel of Montpelier, and was laid to rest in beautiful Evergreen.

The children and other relatives of the late Mrs. Ellen Gulich, wish to thank sincerly all the kind friends and neighbors who did so much to lighten their sorrow and cares. They will also be held in grateful memory.

NOT A TABLET.

A young Lawrence, Ind. doctor took his best girl to the opera not long since. The curtain was late in rising, and the young lady complained of feeling faint. The doctor smiled sweetly upon her, took something out of his vest pocket and whispered to her to keep "the tablet" in her mouth, but not to swallow it. She shyly placed it on her tongue and rolled it over and over, but it would not dissolve; she felt better however. So when the show was over she slipped the tablet in her glove, being curious to examine at home this tasteless, indissoluable little substance which had given her so much relief in the opera house. When alone in her room she pulled off her glove and out came a—pants button.

FUSION ACCOMPLISHED.

For some time it has been known that the democrats and populists desired to unite on a county ticket, so that all could vote one ballot this fall. After consulting among themselves and agreeing to form some sort of fusion the two parties by their committees met in Auburn yesterday and reached an agreement. In substance it is:

That each party hold its own convention but on the same day and in the same town. The democrats are to choose and nominate from among themselves a candidate for clerk, auditor, treasurer, sheriff, surveyor and coroner, while the populists in their convention are to nominate a candidate to succeed Mr. Gunsenhouser as commissioner from the southeast district and a candidate for recorder. After each convention has finished its work so far, the two conventions meet in the same hall and by a vote ratify the entire set of nominations made. These candidates are then the combined ticket of the two parties, but as the law compels all to be on one ticket, they will be headed with the name and device of the stronger party, the democratic ticket and democratic device, and will be supported by the combined vote of both. This plan looks like a good one and is certainly fair and open so no one will have cause to complain.

WENT THROUGH.

The train load of troops from Detroit went through at about 11 30 last night going west via St. Louis to take their place in the division that is being massed at Mobile. It was a long, heavy train drawn by two engines. There were a number of flat cars containing artillery and their fixtures, several baggage cars with the property of the men, and the rest of the train was made of coaches and sleepers. While stopping here to take water our citizens had a chance to talk a little with some of the men of the artillery. They are very enthusiastic as to the work before them, but after taking water for both engines, they pulled out at a lively rate. All trains had to keep out of their way. It appears that this was the second battalion of the regiment a part of which was stationed there, consisting of 245 officers and privates, besides the regimental band. At the fort there was a great deal of enthusiasm and a few men left in charge of the fort got up a demonstration by firing a cannon. It was probably one of those old pieces that visitors see mounted on the grassy slopes, and pointing toward the Canadian shore—guns that are not in very good shape for business. And this one made a mistake and went off too soon, blowing off the arm of one man and severely injuring a hand for another soldier. The train drew out crowds of people all along the line.

For Mothers!

THE discomforts and dangers of child-birth can be almost entirely avoided. Wine of Cardui relieves expectant mothers. It gives tone to the genital organs, and puts them in condition to do their work perfectly. That makes pregnancy less painful, shortens labor and hastens recovery after child-birth. It helps a woman bear strong healthy children.

McELREE'S

has also brought happiness to thousands of homes barren for years. A few doses often brings joy to loving hearts that long for a darling baby. No woman should neglect to try it for this trouble. It cures nine cases out of ten. All druggists sell Wine of Cardui. $1.00 per bottle.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. LOUISA HALE, of Jefferson, Ga., says: "When I first took Wine of Cardui we had been married three years, but could not have any children. Nine months later I had a fine girl baby."

REMARKABLE CASE.

(Laporte Argus.)

An autopsy was held on the remains of the late Hon. John W. Stetler, of Kosciusko county, and it was discovered that he had a gall bladder five inches long and three inches in diameter, and it contained 775 gall stones up to the size of a hickory nut. The gall bladder became gangrenous and ruptured. The size of the gall bladder and the number of gall stanes was the largest that has come under the observation of the attending physicians.

—Wallace H. Failing and Clair Tappan, of Baldwinsville, Onondaga Co. New York, arrived over the Wabash at noon today. They are both law students an Ann Arbor, Mich., and came over to spend a few days with their uncle and cousin, T. J Saxton and other relatives hereabouts.

—Thousands of sufferers from grippe have been restored to health by One Minute Cough Cure. It quickly cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe, asthma, and all throat and lung diseases. At H.B. McCord's drugstore.

—L. E. Lane who has come home from a trip over in Ohio, met on the train, Rev. B. F. Tracy, an Evangelical minister and a former pupil of the COURIER editor. He was going to preach Sunday at Hicksville. We are pleased to hear from him and to know that we helped him into the right track.

—We see among the patents granted to Indiana Inventors that Geo. M. Beard gets a patent on a crank shaft for bicycles. George is an inveterate inventor. But his new device does not create that pleasurable ripple in the COURIER sanctum as does the man from Jeffersonville who has invented a new and superior waffle iron.

—J. L. Kiser and wife of Bethel Branch Co., Mich., have been in the county a few days visiting the family of G I. Patterson in Richland they being cousins. Yesterday both gentlemen and their wives went to Ft. Wayne. Mr. Kiser had not been there since before the war and was surprised to see what a city it had become.

—April 6 was the anniversary of the declaration of Greek independence, 78 years ago, and the begginning of that war to which Byron devoted some of his most illustrious poetic gifts as well as his life. The war ended in the establishment of Greece as an independent kingdom. And after all these years the question in the minds of those who have seen the exhibition the modern Greeks made of themselves in the late war with Turkey is, Were they worth the sacrifices made for them?

—Nothing further has been heard as to Mrs. Webb and the three children. It is known that they left here a few days before the flood at Shawneetown. Ill, and nothing further was heard of them. Mr. Webb says he has no idea as to the truthfulness or otherwise of the report that they were drowned in that flood. All that is known is that a Mrs. Webb and three children are among the list of those who perished.

—The clipping we publish about the "man with many dogs" at South Bend will remind many of our readers of Chris. Lugenbuhl, the half witted man who lived so long near the old Jackson station at Waterloo He always kept a swarm of little, scrubby dogs, at his bachelor home, and sometimes took the whole pack with him, when he went down town. But fortunately for Chris, the dog law was not strict then as now, and he got off with very light taxes.

Monday's Daily.

—WANTED:—A girl to do general housework Call on Charls Eckhart.

—Judge Powers and his little daughter Ruth were in town last Friday.

—Walter Penfield is home from Ann Arbor for a brief vacation.

—BORN:—Sunday morning to Newton DeWitt and wife a girl. Dr. Baxter was the attending physician.

—Two horses for sale cheap, for cash. Inquire of Dr. Adams, north Main-st., Auburn.

—Iowa will have no state fair this ear, as all her people want to attend he great Omaha Exposition.

—A veterinary surgeon of Hicksvill removed a 20-lb. tumor from a valuable cow, recently.

—Grafting done, either fruit or ornamental trees. All work warranted
C. ASHELMAN, Auburn.

—Supt. Coe was a caller today. He is chock full of business as the work always presses at this time of year.

—DeKalb county now has her full quota of six inmates in the school for the Feeble Minded at Ft. Wayne, and there are two more applications in that cannot at present be accepted:

—We somehow missed getting the name of W. A. Rose, on the list of candidates nominated at the prohibition convention He was nominated for county assessor.

—Two of our young friends from Jackson township called Saturday to take a look at the mysteries of a first-class printing office. They were Miss Daisy Walter, daughter of J. J. Walter, and Miss Helen Cool, daughter of Thomas Cool.

—It is a great leap from the old fashioned doses of blue-mass and nauseous physics to the pleasant little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure constipation, sick headache and biliousness. H. B. McCord's sells it.

—Mrs Michael Shoudel and daughter Delia were callers Saturday. Mrs. Shoudel is mother of Mrs. John Shunk a COURIER subscriber at Garrett, and all good friends of the Old Reliable.

Two of our Fairfield friends called today, Isaiah Sheneman and Edward Henney, son of Jacob Henney and brother of David Henney one of our subscribers at South Milford. Always glad to meet the boys.

—Eli Williamson, of Waterloo, was down here today. We presume he came to call on his son-in-law, H. B. McCord who is quite sick.

—D. N. Myres will keep his fine imported Cleveland Bay Stallion at his feed barn in Auburn every day in the week this season. All interested in good horses, are invited to call. tf

—Rev. W. L. Meese will commence a series of meetings to continue one week at St. John school house n Butler township Saturday, April 23. Everybody cordially invited.

—A movement is on foot to get at and utilize the extesive bed of marl said to underlie the mud in the lake at Cedar Beach. It is said this marl is several feet thick and of good quality. Marl consists largely of lime mixed more or less with fine clay and gravel. The lime is formed from decayed shells of minute shellfish of various kinds.

—We have received a nicely printed announcement of the wedding of Miss Flora Jones and Mr. Ora Knisely of Butler which says "at home after April 21." We had already announced the nuptials of this worthy young couple, and the wishes of many falends at Auburn, young and old are for their future happiness and substantial success.

—Sunday's Ft. Wayne Journal publishes a number of the old war songs once so familiar all over the country. It also gives several songs that had a national reputation years before the rebellion, and the latest one, that in regard to the Maine. The Journal shows commendable enterprise. It will pay to preserve these old patriotic songs.

—We have received a copy of the boom edition of the Martinsville Republican, sent we presume, by our friend John Sthair of, that place. It is a handsome edition, finely illustrated with artistic half tone pictures of buildings, streets, citizens etc. Noticeable among the buildings are the several fine ones erected and used as sanitariums, for Martinsville abounds in wells of flowing water of high mineral character. Like many other towns, they bored for gas and got mineral water. The city is in Morgan county, this state.

Township President.

COLUMBIA CITY POST:—Krauss & Apfelbaum have an order for 500 bags of cloverseed to be shipped to Scotland. The shipment will be made Tuesday and two cars will be used to carry it to the sea coast. These enterprising gentlemen found a better market abroad for the seed than they could find in this country and are to be congratulated upon the sale.

COLUMBIA CITY POST:—The management of the baby show to be given in this city Saturday, May 7th, inform us that all mothers who bring babies for exhibition will be admitted free, and no entrance fee will be charged for babies that are placed on exhibition.

—Call on J. Beuret for tin work.

Anyway, 1898, will probably add to the eventful battle record of the month. Fort Sumpter was fired upon April 12, 1861, and the civil war begun. The battle of Shiloh was fought April 6 and 7, 1862. Island No. 10 was taken April 8, 1862, The battle of Five Forks was fought April 1, 1865. Richmond was evacuated April 3, 1865. Lee surrendered April 9, 1865, and five days later Lincoln was assassinated.

Wednesday's Daily.

—W. H. McIntosh went to Waterloo to-day.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas of Ashley are visiting Mrs. C. M. Brown, Mr. Thomas is Mrs. Brown's brother.

—R. C. Baxter has been for some weeks working in the Recorder's office.

—Go to Beuret for hardware, tin, galvanized, granite and nickel plate ware.

—Daniel Thomas was down from Corunna to-day. He says Milo and both families are all right.

—The regiment that went through here last night, reported two deserters since starting.

—If you have property to sell at a bargain, Walter Hartman can find a buyer. He writes fire and accident insurance too.

—Ed. Ostrander and little daughter came down from Ashley yesterday. It looks familiar to see his face at the big Yesbera store again Of course he is going back to continue in charge of the store at Ashley.

—FOR RENT:—Rooms suitable for small family; pleasantly located. Inquire of Mrs. M. V. Mitchell, South Cedar-st.

—I have a buyer for a $500 or $600 house, in southwest part. Will pay $300 down. What have you to sell? Must be a bargain. d&wtf

Grampa's Farm.

O, you don't know the fun on grampa's farm!
For grampa says, "Let 'em; it ain't no harm;"
An' Cousin Bob leads us, and cries, "Here goes!"
An' mamma—she only says: "Such clothes!"

We've a Crusoe Island, an' Robber's Cave,
An' Tower of London, an'—don't you know,
When one of us wants to let on he's brave,
He crawls under the sawmill, scared an' slow?

O, you don't know half the fun out there!
For grampa—he never tells, us, "Take care!"
An' Cousin Bob laughs, an' says to "carouse;"
An' mamma, you see, is off in the house.

We fish in the brooks an' play in the sands,
An' try to catch tadpoles out of the springs;
We hide in the bushes, like Ingun bands,
An' fight with the hornets, an' get their stings.

O, there's plenty of fun on grampa's place!
For grampa—he says, "Now, scoot on a race!"
An' Cousin Bob grins an' says, "There she blows!"
An' mamma—she only just says: "Such clothes!"

Pictures Drawn Without Hands.

We are usually inclined to think that an artist without hands would be as absurd and useless as a watchman without eyes. But an Englishman named John Carter, who was a helpless paralytic, having only the use of his head, was an artist of world-wide reputation.

Fourteen years before his death Mr. Carter's neck was dislocated by a fall, and he retained only the use of his head and shoulders. During all the long years that he lay in this helpless condition Mr. Carter drew pictures with a pencil that he clasped between his lips, his sketching board being propped up close to his face. He finished many of his sketches in India ink, using a fine brush which he manipulated with his lips and tongue. John Carter died in June, 1850, leaving behind a number of pictures that ranked high as works of art.

Princes as Chimney Sweeps.

Every good American knows the story of little Ruth Cleveland, who remarked to the daughter of the White House grounds policeman: "So your father's a policeman! Oh, I wish mine were!" Their little royal highnesses of Saxony, Prince George and Prince Christian, hold somewhat similar views on the subject of rank. To them a chimney sweep is the most blessed of men. Consequently their favorite game is playing chimney sweep.

Saw a Charming Snake.

W. R. Mason of Bakersfield, Kern County, Cal., tells the following story of snake-charming to the Scientific American: "I was riding in California and had off-saddled to eat some lunch, when I saw a gopher snake stretched along the limb of a tree in which was a flock of excited small birds. About eighteen inches distant from the snake's head was a bird whose companions were making the noise. The bird was perfectly motionless, and, to all appearances, looked straight at the snake, which was gradually creeping toward it. When about eight inches away the snake struck and caught the bird by the breast. The captured bird and its companions struggled with the snake, but it lowered itself to the ground, carrying the bird in its mouth."

Have you ever seen anything like this?

Little Lights.

Sometimes children think they are too small to do any good; they must wait until they are grown, or at least until they are as big as the older brother or sister.

I read something the other day that made me think the smallest might be helpful.

Did you ever see a glow-worm? Perhaps not, but it is a little worm, about half an inch long, which shines with a light, as fire-flies do. I dare say you have seen fire-flies some evening when you have happened to be riding out. What I read the other day was about the good one of these little glow-worms did.

There had been a battle, and some of the men were fleeing from the enemy. Pretty soon they lost their way. They had with them a little instrument called a compass, which would have shown them the way, only it was so dark they could not see which way the needle pointed. They did not dare carry a light for fear the enemy would see it and follow them. Just then one of the men noticed a little glow-worm shining in the grass. He picked it up and put it on the compass, and there was just light enough to show which way the needle pointed. Then the men knew which way their home was. They were very glad, and went on until they got home.

Don't you think these men thought a little glow-worm could do good? And cannot a little child do as much as a glow-worm? Bright, sunny smiles, pleasant words, and helpful deeds are a child's way of shining, and they make all the household happy.—The Orphanage Record.

Sayings of Little Folks.

Mamie asked for some horseradish on her meat, and when it had been given her she looked at it a moment and exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, there's a hair in it off the horse!"

Tommy, aged 5, was teasing his mother for something to eat, but was told that he must wait until dinner was served. He was silent a few minutes and then said: "I jest honestly believe, mamma, that you are my stepmother."

An invitation to join a box party was given a little Chicago miss of 5 by a near neighbor. In her delight she ran home to announce that Bessie's mamma had invited her to go to the theater that afternoon in a box.

Little 4-year-old Fannie had been given a piece of bony shad for breakfast, but left it untouched upon her plate. "Why, Fannie," asked her mother, "what is the reason you don't eat your fish?" "Because," was the reply, "dis piece is all full of splinters."

Nettie, aged 4, was sitting on the floor crying. Suddenly she ceased and seemed lost in thought and a moment later she asked: "Mamma, what was I cwyin' about jus' now?" "Because I wouldn't give you any more candy," replied her mother. "Oh, yes, I 'member now!" she exclaimed; and the tears began to flow afresh.

Little 3-year-old Clara disliked very much to have her hair combed and one day when she was crying and fussing as her nurse performed the disagreeable task her mother said: "Why, Clara, you ought not to act that way. I never fuss and cry when my hair is combed." "Well, I dess 'ou would if 'ou hair was hitched on 'ou head wike mine is," replied the observing little miss.

TO SPREAD CRIME.

The Purpose of a Russian Organization Just Formed.

Russia, according to the latest advices received in this country, does not seem a particularly enviable place. Not only are religious fanatics at large in ever-increasing numbers, who are committing extraordinary havoc among the simple peasants, breaking up homes and causing people to commit suicide with the idea of escaping tyranny, but a gigantic criminal association is also growing and spreading and making eruptions between the peasants and nobles.

The association is in reality a society for perpetrating crime. Its avowed object is a reign of terror, but it is more fierce and more terrible in its purpose than the usual societies of anarchists. The ringleaders hope to make law and order futile by filling the land with criminals.

The doctrine is said to be spreading with almost incredible rapidity among the narrow-minded natives of Russia. The success of the society surpasses that of any fanatical institution ever before founded in the country. Already the members of the criminal association are numbered in thousands.

A short time ago the bodies of three workmen, good, honest, law-abiding peasants, were discovered by the police in a deep well near Palmero. The most stringent investigations brought to light no cause for the murders. The police at length arrived at the conclusion that the men had been murdered solely for the reason that they were well known as honest laborers, who feared the police and loved their Czar.

This set the minds of the astute Petersburg detectives upon a new track. They followed up every clew that might lead to the detection of a society whose object was the perpetration of crime. Their efforts were wholly successful.

The reason of some forty murders, for which hitherto no object had been discovered, and which seemed to be enveloped in an impenetrable mystery was brought to light; the murders were ascribed to the dangerous society which had risen. The authorities are now in possession of much useful information, and by means of this they hope to capture fully 100 malefactors, including the ringleaders.

The Society for the Perpetration of Crime, however, has already taken deep root among the peasants, although there is no doubt that in time the rising will be stamped out, as many hundreds of other Russian risings have been before. When the malefactors are punished as they deserve, the fear of the law will again assert itself in the minds of these mad revolutionists.

A New Orchestra Without Men.

Prof. J. B. Schalkenbach, formerly the organist of the Polytechnic Institute of London, has recently invented and constructed an electrical orchestra, which is very effective. An organ with two keyboards and a number of stops is connected by electric wires with a large number of musical instruments, which are distributed over the space usually given up to the orchestra, and kept in place by various stands. While a chair is located next to each instrument, the only man in the entire orchestra is Prof. Schalkenbach himself, who takes a seat at his organ, from where he conducts, so to speak, his mysterious musicians. Although it is advertised that the entire arrangement is mechanical, and that electricity is the agent doing all the work in this orchestra, a sensation of timidity, and even awe, is felt by many visitors. The electrical orchestra is now exhibited in a Vienna concert hall, and surprises even professional musicians through the extraordinary combinations of sound brought out by Prof. Schalkenbach.—Saturday Evening Post.

Depth of Lake Superior.

Lake Superior is 1,008 feet deep, 601 feet of this body of water being above sea level and 407 feet below it. The bottom of this great lake is about 378 feet deeper down than the channels giving admittance to New York harbor. Lake Erie's greatest depth is but 210 feet.

ODD METHODS OF PUNISHMENT.

The recent exhibition of objects relating to prisons and the safe keeping of prisoners, held in New York, revives interest in the various modes of punishing evil-doers in the early days. Among the methods in vogue in Massachusetts, when that stern State was a new settlement, were the bilboes, which orginated in Spain. This contrivance was a kind of stocks with a heavy iron bar and a sliding shackles. The stocks have become familiar to every one and went along with tongue-boring, ear-cropping and similar gentle reminders of sins committed. An iron frame gag was quite popular in the far-off days, and what with this barbaric machine and the ducking-stool talkative women did not enjoy the liberties of their latter-day sisters. The pillory was used on all occasions for all sorts of misdemeanors, though like other forms of punishment it had but little effect as a deterrent.

WONDERFUL, BUT USELESS.

Here's a Freak Bicycle Geared to 555 Inches.

The claim of having the highest geared wheel in the world belongs in Newark, according to the Cycling Gazette, where a dealer has constructed the freak bicycle. When it is said that the machine is geared so high that no one can ride it it will be conceded that he has accomplished his point. If an old ordinary were to be constructed of the same relative gear it would have a wheel 555 inches in diameter, in other words the front wheel would be 46½ feet in height. As it is on the Newark safety there are few men in the world who can reach from saddle to pedal, for the distance from the seat to the pedal at its lowest point is about 52 inches. If the freak cycle be ridden each revolution of the pedals would carry the rider 145.29 feet and it would require but thirty-six revolutions to cover a mile. As an advertisement, however, the affair is said to be proving its value.

Founder of Monte Carlo.

Monsieur Blanc, founder of the Casino at Monte Carlo, though immensely wealthy, was very close in small affairs. He never played but once. It was on a very hot day, and his wife demanded that he buy her a parasol. They went to a store, and she selected one that cost $16, which, with a disgusted gesture, he paid. That afternoon, when the Casino opened, M. Blanc appeared and placed $2 on the red at one of the trente et quarante tables. He won, pocketed his winnings and left the original stake on the table. For a second time he won and had got his $16 back. Not content he wagered again, but lost, then doubled his stake and won again, and then set about playing for the two louis he was behind. He played and lost, broke a thousand-franc note, then wrote a check, and finally, when the last deal was called, M. Blanc seized his yellow cane and started for home. There he found his wife playing "patience" with a pack of cards, the offending parasol lying on the table. "Madame," said the old gentleman, "do you know what that thing has cost me?" "Mais oui, mon ami. It cost you $16." "Madame," rejoined he, "you are mistaken, I have just paid the bill—$18,000. That is all."

Longest Continuous Speech.

A twelve-hour speech of Dr. Lecher in the Austrian Reichsrath beat all British records, speaking not merely like Lord Palmerston, from the dusk of one day to the dawn of the next, but for twelve mortal hours. He did not greet the rising sun, like Pitt or Gladstone, with a neat quotation from Virgil; perhaps it was foggy, perhaps he knew no Virgil. But he did very well, all things considered. They only gave him two pauses of ten minutes and one of five, and he only consumed three glasses of wine, two cups of black coffee and fifteen glasses of water. If that seems a lot to you, just put in your Saturday afternoon and evening at a twelve-hour speech and see. There was a little assistance. Toward the end his comrades sang "Long may he live," at intervals, and all through they cheered and banged their desk lids whenever he seemed to want breath. Also there was Herr Wolf, who did not understand the game at first, and spoke and desk-lidded simultaneously with Lecher for an hour. But Lecher did it, and played out the majority and all of the Presidents.

DEPUTY SHERIFF FERGUSON.

She Is an Accomplished and Charming Young Lady of Utah.

Miss Claire H. Ferguson, daughter of Dr. Ellen B. Ferguson, one of the distinguished women of Utah, is a deputy sheriff in Salt Lake City. Miss Ferguson was born in Utah and educated at the State university.

"I have served as deputy sheriff since last June," said Miss Ferguson, "although I was not legally qualified until last month, when I attained my majority. I am under $1,500 bonds. I have charge of the civil work."

Miss Ferguson says she cannot remember the time when she was not interested in politics and in law. When her term expires as deputy sheriff she will apply herself seriously to the study of law, and some years hence we may hear of "Judge Ferguson," with another name, doubtless, added.

DEPUTY SHERIFF FERGUSON.

The young lady is extremely prepossessing in appearance and is considered one of the belles of Salt Lake City society. She is musical, fond of athletics and rides, drives and cycles. Her father was a successful physician in Utah, and on his side she is related to the family of the late Gen. U. S. Grant.

KNUCKLE DOWN! Persistent Coughs

Around the maddy trampled ring
The eager jostling boys are grouped,
With quick reproval challenging
The lad who to the ground has stooped.
Careful he views the marbles nigh,
Steady he holds his shooter brown
But ere he lets it whirling fly
He hears the warning, "Knuckle down!"

With grim [illegible]
Careless [illegible]
The happy school-boy only sees
The "circy" ring. Nor trees nor birds
With springtime beauties catch his eye,
Above the "mibs", with anxious frown
He bends, and hears the eager cry
From jealous playmates, "Knuckle down!"

Play on, though maddy be the ring
Play on, while happy days remain!
Too soon stern duty's whispering
Will sound a solemn, dull refrain

For marble time is gone too soon,
Ere long the stern voice of the town
Will banish boyhood's sunlit noon
With the grim mandate, "Knuckle down!"

FRANK L. FINNEGAN.

HOW TO ENLIST IN THE ARMY.

Not One in Ten Can Come Up to Uncle Sam's Requirements.

Many are called, or think they are called, to serve Uncle Sam in the regular army, but few are chosen. The swaggering tough stands on the walk outside of the city recruiting office, and says, with a leer, "I guess dey'll take all dey kin git." Then he goes up stairs and finds that 95 out of 100 are rejected, including himself. The army varies from the navy in the fact that there is no ban to promotion from the ranks to the highest grade. General Nelson A. Miles, at the head of the United States army, is not a graduate of West Point, and there are many instances of private soldiers and even "outsiders" becoming commissioned officers.

The appointments to the war school of instruction at West Point, on the Hudson River, fifty miles above New York City, are made by Congressmen, each representative having the right to detail an eligible youth, between the ages of 18 and 21, from his district when it is not represented at the Military Academy. The President also has been given the authority to appoint ten, "at large," and usually grants the favor to the son of a former or present officer of either branch of the military (which includes navy and army) service.

Entrance examinations and annual reviews of book knowledge are the same as at the naval academy, and during the summer the cadets go into camp near West Point. The fact is that, aside from drills in seamanship, howitzer and boat practice, the course of instruction at both the academies, West Point and Annapolis, is very similar, for the naval cadets are exercised in infantry tactics, fencing and broadsword exercises, and on their daily evening parade present fully as imposing a presence and exactitude of martial stride as the military pupils.

The special difference between the two schools is in the age and pay of the students. The West-Pointers, as indicated in the age requirement for admission, are older men, and, while their annual stipend during the scholastic term of four years is about the same as that given at Annapolis, upon graduation they become second lieutenants, and receive a larger salary than that allotted to those completing the course at the naval academy.

Promotion with them to the grades of first lieutenant, captain, major, lieutenant colonel, colonel and brigadier general is fully as slow as it is in the naval service, but their compensation is always comparatively larger. For this one reason the army might be considered the more favorite branch of military service, yet there has never been any popular or privately determined feeling that it was so.

To those that wish to enlist as privates there are recruiting stations to be found in every large city of the United States, and the applicant may select either the cavalry, infantry or artillery. The applicant must necessarily fill the special requirements of age, stature and chest measure and be in good bodily condition. If so, he is very liable to be immediately enrolled and receive clothes, shelter, board, medicine, surgical attendance when necessary and the exorbitant sum of $13 a month. But, when the entire allotment is worth $45 or $50 a month, and there are some men who can't earn this sum.

The promotion of the private soldier may be very rapid in time of war. If he is an educated man and of any especial ability, he may be wearing a colonel's epaulets before he returns from the fields of battle. In the piping times of peace his advancement is to that of corporal and sergeant, technically termed noncommissioned officers, and then if he has influence or his own individuality dominates he may be allowed to attempt the examination for a first lieutenancy. If he succeeds in passing both the physical and mental demands, he is then a commissioned officer in the United States army, and his career is as free before him as if he had all the training and glories of a West Point course.

The signal corps of the army is also an excellent branch of the service, but the complement is limited, and admissions generally are rare. The men in it form a sort of independent corps and of a class relatively between a private and a minor commissioned officer.

If you desire to enlist, you must be between 21 and 30 years of age, of good character and habits, ablebodied, not less than 5 feet 4 inches in height and weigh between 128 and 190 pounds. If your height is above 5 feet 10 inches and your weight more than 165 pounds, you may join the artillery or infantry, but not the cavalry.

THEY MINED IN ALASKA.

Lost Only Their Labor and $10 Apiece in Six Months' Operations.

Every one who had ever been in Alaska of course began at the opening of the Klondike craze to relate personal experiences which in some way or other had connection with the subject of gold mining. Many of them had a chance to make a fortune, if they had only known, and others saw millions, more or less, taken out of the ground with a broken shovel, and the man whose only capital it was come back to the States and live happily ever afterward. But in spite of the ingenuity which has been put into the manufacture of these stories, there is an original flavor to one told by a soldier at present located in the United States army in this city.

It was in 1880, when he was in the navy, that he was stationed on a vessel near Sitka. There was considerable gold being taken out near there, and an enterprising speculator got hold of a party of marines on the ship and induced them to buy his mine. There were 100 of them who finally went into the scheme, and they paid $10 each for their new source of wealth. There was always a good deal of spare time on their hands, and they easily secured permission to use this in working their claim. For six months the soldiers dug quartz by day and dreamed of sudden wealth by night. All were confident of being able to retire from the service with comfortable riches, and looked sadly on the poor officers, who would have to keep on soldiering all their lives, not being in the scheme.

At the end of six months they had a large pile of quartz, and, loading it into all the old barrels, bags and provision cases they could find, they sent it by ship to the nearest crushing mill. Then followed weeks of waiting till the returns should come, and an air of subdued importance grew in each man who expected at any time to be informed that he was worth thousands of dollars. At last the ship came which brought the returns from the consignment, and the gallant hundred gathered around the treasurer of the company to hear how much each was now worth. That individual opened the message, and a grim smile froze on his face as he went through a short calculation on the back of the envelope.

"Gentlemen," he said, "you each owe the sum of ten cents to the steamship company that carried the quartz. The gold in it was just $10 short of the freight charges."

And then he passed his hat, while one of their number sought out the ship's chaplain to lead in a short service.—Springfield Republican.

ANECDOTES OF STANTON.

How the Great War Secretary Helped an Injured Man in Pittsburg.

The school children of Steubenville, O., have contributed the money for a memorial tablet to be placed on the house where the great war secretary was born, says the Boston Evening Transcript. One of the Steubenville people who knew him in his early manhood tells of an incident that occurred while he was practicing law in Pittsburg. His mother lived in Steubenville. Stanton was accustomed to return home frequently by boat on the Ohio. One evening when he came on board he saw a poor fellow lying on the forward deck. He investigated, and learned that the poor fellow had fallen through a hatchway and broken his leg.

The fracture remained unset and uncared for. The young lawyer went to the captain and asked what the neglect meant. The captain replied that the man lived in Pittsburg, and could be attended to when he got home. Making no comment on the inhumanity, Stanton went to the boat carpenter's chest and borrowed a saw and ax. He took a stick of wood, cut such a length as he wanted, then he whittled out a set of splints. Then he went to his stateroom, took a sheet from the bed, and tore it into bandages. He ordered three or four of the crew to assist him. The fracture was reduced, splints and bandages were applied. Stanton went to the cookroom and ordered prepared a jug of vinegar and water with which to steep the swollen parts. During the ninety miles of the trip from Steubenville he sat by the injured man applying the bath. When the boat reached Pittsburg he hired a hack and took his patient to his home.

Italian Marriage Brokers.

In Genoa there are regular marriage brokers who have lists of marriageable girls of the different classes with notes of their personal attractions, fortunes and circumstances. These brokers go about endeavoring to arrange connections in the same off-hand way that they would a merchandise transaction. Marriages there are more often a simple matter of business calculation, generally settled by the relatives, who often draw up the contract before the parties have seen each other. It is only when everything has been arranged and a few days previous to the marriage ceremony that the future husband is introduced to his intended wife. Should he find fault with her manners and apearance he may annul the contract on condition of defraying the brokerage and any other expenses incurred.

Wonderful Loom.

Recent improvements in the Millar loom will, it is claimed, revolutionize the weaving industry, as, with less attention than ordinary, it will turn out from 140 to 200 yards of worsted coatings in ten hours.

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Found in Bed with Her Head Crushed—Boy Ran Away to Join the Navy—Killed in a Runaway Accident—Acquitted Alonzo Barrett.

Mystery at Indianapolis.

The murder of Mrs. John A. Moore in the beautiful residence of her sister, Mrs. Dirk De Ruiter, in Meridian street, Indianapolis, is still unsolved. De Ruiter, ex-Councilman and wealthy contractor, and his wife had separated, and Mrs. Moore was temporarily in the home while Mrs. De Ruiter was being treated at a sanitarium. While she was alone some one entered the house and crushed her skull with a piece of iron. De Ruiter was called before the detectives, but proved to their satisfaction that he was not in the neighborhood at the hour when the killing was done. The husband of the murdered woman was then placed under arrest.

New Trial for Famous Case.

At Greenfield, Judge Offut granted a motion for a new trial in the case of Mrs. Macy Beaupre vs. the Citizens' Street Railway Company of Indianapolis. The plaintiff asked $50,000 damages for injuries received in an accident. The case has been tried four times. Three trials in Hendricks County on a change of venue resulted; first, disagreement; second, $3,500 for plaintiff; third, $15,000. In the fourth, in Hancock County a few days ago, plaintiff was awarded $2,500 damages.

Ran Away to Be a Bluejacket.

George A. Gordon, at Huntington, has received a letter from his brother, Paul Gordon, who disappeared from home about two years ago. It is now learned that in April, 1897, he enlisted in the navy at New York under the name of Paul Densmore, and was assigned to duty as a marine on the Iowa. He was the marine orderly who carried the report of the Maine board of inquiry when it was delivered by Lieutenant Commander Marix to Admiral Sicard at Key West.

Mrs. Redeker Killed in a Runaway.

As Mr. and Mrs. John F. Redeker of near New Point were going to Greensburg with their produce their horse ran away. Opposite the De Armond Hotel it ran the wagon on the curb and threw out the people. Mr. Redeker was injured, but not seriously. Mrs. Redeker fell on her head and received injuries from which she died three hours later.

Alonzo Barrett Acquitted.

The jury in the case against Alonzo Barrett at Shelbyville, charged with attempting to murder Edward Skotski, acquitted him on the ground of self-defense. The evidence disclosed that Skotski, a short time before the shooting, declared he would kill Barrett with a knife which he had in his hand.

Robbers Fire a House.

The farm residence of W. W. Thompson of Harrison township was plundered by robbers, who made way with all portable articles of value, then set fire to the house to conceal the crime. Neighbors put out the fire and the house was saved in a damaged condition. The house was empty at the time.

Within Our Borders.

Capt. John Horn committed suicide by shooting at New Albany.

Lafayette Freeman, aged 72, dropped dead of apoplexy at Greensburg.

A cable announces the death in Egypt of Mrs. Louis Reibold of Indianapolis.

At Jeffersonville, Lizzie Hardin was acquitted of the murder of Mary Rosebaum.

At Elwood, Michael Myers, aged 60, while sawing wood, expired of heart disease.

L. D. Brand's general store at Kingsbury was destroyed by fire. Loss, $10,000; insurance, $6,300.

John W. Stetler, the representative of Kosciusko County in the State Legislature, died at his home in Syracuse, aged 60.

The Democratic congressional convention of the Sixth Indiana district nominated Charles A. Robinson of Shelby County.

The body of the late F. M. Dowden of Greensburg was disinterred a few days ago for medical examination as to the peculiar disease that caused his death.

At Fortville, Frank Swords, aged 7, while cutting a string, stabbed himself in the left eye, destroying it. The boy is now totally blind, having lost his right eye through an accident two years previous.

A jury in the Porter Circuit Court awarded Nicholas Moulton of South Chicago judgment of $3,500 against the South Chicago City Railway Company for injuries received in a street car collision.

The collections of the Seventh internal revenue district for March amounted to $790,478.17. Of the total $760,253.67 was on spirits from the Indiana distillery, one of the American Distilling Company's houses at Terre Haute.

The spring term of the State Normal School has begun. It is thought the attendance this spring will number between 1,000 and 1,200. Last spring the attendance was more than 1,300, but the standard of admission has been raised.

Twenty years ago, when a child, Miss Florence Holliday of Needmore swallowed a needle. She suffered no inconvenience until quite recently. The other day she became afflicted with severe shooting pains in her right shouder. Physicians explained that she was suffering from neuralgia, but when a small lump appeared suddenly on her shoulder this disproved their theory. Miss Holliday happened to think of the needle and she concluded that possibly it had worked itself to the shoulder. An operation was performed and the needle extracted.

J. W. Lovett of Anderson has obtained a franchise for an electric road from Michigan City to La Porte to give northern Indiana cheap transportation into Chicago.

Indianapolis won a victory in its suit to deprive the contending street railroad companies of any rights in the streets Jan. 1, 1901. The action was for an interpretation in the law passed by the last Legislature ending all street railroad franchises there on the day mentioned. The Circuit Court holds that the City Railway Company will have no rights after 1901.

Two suicides occurred in North Vincennes the other day, both by morphine. Samuel Bowman was despondent because his wife had left him, and Kate Taylor was tired of life. She was the woman who was connected with a criminal operation scandal at New Albany last fall.

After deliberating twenty-eight hours the jury in the Knight murder case at Columbus has disagreed. William Knight was charged with killing his wife Feb. 23. The last vote stood six to six on whether Knight was guilty of involuntary manslaughter. The coroner's verdict was "accidentally shot," but the grand jury found an indictment of murder in the first degree.

Half Sick Half Well

Many persons have their good day and their bad day. Others are about half sick all the time. They have headache, backache, and are restless and nervous. Food does not taste good, and the digestion is poor; the skin is dry and sallow and disfigured with pimples or eruptions; sleep brings no rest and work is a burden.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood.

And the remedy?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It clears out the channels through which poisons are carried from the body. When all impurities are removed from the blood nature takes right hold and completes the cure.

If there is constipation, take Ayer's Pills. They awaken the drowsy action of the liver; they cure biliousness.

Inoculation from Stings.

The interesting observations recently recorded regarding the freedom from the effects of mosquito bites and bee stings which may be induced by previous injuries of this kind demand a word of notice. The idea implied by this immunity is that previous bites or stings inoculate the blood with some principle of "toxin" derived from the poison, which in its turn protects the body from fresh attack. An analogy can be seen between this naturally produced immunity and that which is presented by the treatment of diphtheria with the antitoxin of the disease. One writer told his experiences to the effect that, being a beekeeper, he had never suffered from stings after he had been once very severely stung by a swarm. Probably his system had become thoroughly inoculated by the big dose of poison he then received. Of mosquito bites the same experience has been related. But what will be of interest to biologists is the recital of yet another correspondent that such freedom from mosquito stings is not invariably met with as a consequence of frequent bites. It is an illustration of a law I have never been weary of pointing out when unreasonable people have argued that because a process or treatment did not act invariably and in all cases in the same way it was therefore of no value at all. The law I refer to is that which teaches us that when we are dealing with living beings we cannot expect to find mathematical certainty in our results. Life is a very different thing, in all its variability, from mathematical and exact calculations.—London Illustrated News.

THE CAUSE OF DYSPEPSIA.

From the Republican, Scranton, Penn.

The cause of dyspepsia is lack of vitality; the absence of nerve force; the loss of the life-sustaining elements of the blood. No organ can properly perform its function when the source of nutriment fails. When the stomach is robbed of the nourishment demanded by nature, assimilation ceases, unnatural gases are generated; the entire system responds to the discord.

A practical illustration is furnished by the case of Joseph T. Vandyke, 440 Hickory street, Scranton, Pa.

In telling his story, Mr. Vandyke says: "Five years ago I was afflicted with a trouble of the stomach, which was very aggravating. I had no appetite, could not enjoy myself at any time, and especially was the trouble severe when I awoke in the morning. I did not know what the ailment was, but it became steadily worse and I was in constant misery.

In Misery.

"I called in my family physician, and he diagnosed the case as catarrh of the stomach. He prescribed for me and I had his prescription filled. I took nearly all of the medicine, but still the trouble became worse, and I felt that my condition was hopeless. I tried several remedies, but without benefit. After I had been suffering several months, Thomas Campbell, of this city, urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"I finally decided to buy a box and began to use the pills according to directions. Before I had taken the second box I began to feel relieved, and after taking a few more boxes considered myself restored to health. The pills gave me new life, strength, ambition and happiness."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure dyspepsia by restoring to the blood the requisite constituents of life, by renewing the nerve force and enabling the stomach to promptly and properly assimilate the food. These pills are a specific for all diseases having their origination in impoverished blood or disordered nerves. They contain every element requisite to general nutrition, to restore strength and good health to the ailing.

Only One House in the Township.

The most extraordinary township in England is that of Skiddaw, in Cumberland. It contains but one house, the occupier of which is unable to exercise the privilege of voting, because there is no overseer to prepare a voters' list and no church or other place of worship or assembly in which to publish one.

"IRONING MADE EASY"

This starch is prepared on scientific principles by men who have had years of practical experience in fancy laundering. It restores old linen and summer dresses to their natural whiteness and imparts a beautiful and lasting finish. It is the only starch manufactured that is perfectly harmless, containing neither arsenic, alum or any other substance injurious to linen and can be used even for a baby powder.

Found It Out.

Bill—You know the gas companies always threaten to take out your meter if you don't pay your bills?

Jill—Yes; I've often heard that.

"I never knew whether to believe it or not."

"Well?"

"I didn't pay my bills last month."

"What's the result?"

"I'm still in the dark."—Yonkers Statesman.

And Fine Plays, Too.

He—What do you mean by saying that your friend's work is all play?

She—Lucy is a professional pianist.—Detroit Free Press.

Success.

"His success in a financial way has been something marvelous."

"Yes?"

"Yes, sir. I've often heard him tell how, when he came here fifteen years ago, all he owed in the world was a dollar and a quarter, and last week he failed for a million."—Detroit Journal.

So They Say.

Miss Adsley—For my part, I can't see why those people up at the Klondike should suffer from the cold at all.

Mr. Dilkers—You know that it is very far north, of course?

Miss Adsley—Yes, but it is generally supposed that everybody up there has money to burn.

Declined.

Lawyer—Now you must be confidential with me. Did you really rob the bank?

Ex-cashier—No, sir. I am an honest man!

Lawyer—Then I can't defend you. Where would my fees come from?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Why Go Back to the Dead.

Critic—Byron it was, I believe, who said he would rather have written the "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" than any other poem in the English language.

Versely—Yes, but Byron died more than forty years before we were born.

Information Wanted.

Bank President—Did I understand you to say that a change of climate had been recommended for you?

Cashier—Yes, sir. That is why I desire an earlier vacation than usual.

Bank President—Who recommended the change—your physician or your attorney?

He Wanted Too Much.

Patient—Well, doctor, do you think it's apendicitis?

Eminent Surgeon—I never think, my friend; I always know.

Patient—Yes, I know you always know after the operation, but can't you break over the rule and work up a little doubt now?

Getting On.

"How about Jeff Dyers?" asked the man who had returned to the scenes of his boyhood after a long absence; "is he getting on any in the world?"

"Gosh, I should say he was," replied Deacon Hayricks; "gits on a spree every chance he has."

As She Understood It.

He—I very seldom associate with any one that knows more than I do.

She—What a dreary, lonesome life you must lead.

But of Course They Don't Tell.

"A man is known by the company he keeps."

"And a woman by her dressmaker."

Another Name for It.

Hix—I wonder what drove Lushton to drink?

Dix—Trouble, I believe.

Hix—What kind of trouble?

Dix—His troublesome desire for whisky.

Suspicious.
